As life' slong tapestry we weave
And many a goodly ell achieve.
No need in sadness blind to grope,
But, faith for warp and weft of hope,
With steady hand let us portray

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER I.

"SIRE, a fresh dispatch."

"Whence?"

"From Tomsk."

"Is the wire cut beyond that city?"

"Yes, sire, since yesterday."

"Telegraph hourly to Tomsk, general, and let me be kept informed of all that occurs."

"Sire, it shall be done," answered General Kissoff.

These words were exchanged about two hours after midnight, at the moment when the fete given at the New palace was at the height of its splendor.

"Well?" asked the latter abruptly, as he had done the former time.

"Telegrams reach Tomsk no longer, sire."

The czar had not so suddenly left the ballroom of the New palace when the fete he was giving to the civil and military authorities and principal people of Moscow was at the height of its brilliancy without ample cause, for he had just received information that serious events were taking place beyond the frontiers of the Ural. It had become evident that a formidable rebellion threatened to wrest the Siberian provinces from the Russian crown.

Asiatic Russia, or Siberia, covers a superficial area of 1,790,208 square miles and contains nearly 2,000,000 of inhabitants. Extending from the Ural mountains, which separate it from Russia in Europe, to the shores of the Pacific ocean, it is bounded on the south by Turkestan and the Chinese empire, on the north by the Arctic ocean, from the sea of Kara to Bering strait. It is divided into several governments or provinces, those of Tobolsk, Yeniseisk, Irkutsk, Omsk and Yakutsk; contains two districts, Okhotsk and Kamchatka, and possesses two countries, now under the Muscovite dominion—that of the Kirghiz and that of the Tshowktshes.

Two governor generals represent the supreme authority of the czar over this vast country. One resided at Irkutsk, the capital of western Siberia. The river Tchonna, a tributary of the Yenisei, separates the two Siberias.

No rail yet furrows these wide plains, some of which are in reality extremely fertile. No iron ways lead from these precious mines which make the Siberian soil far richer below than above its surface. The traveler journeys in summer in a kibick or telga; in winter, in a sledge.

An electric telegraph, with a single wire more than 8,000 versts in length, alone affords communication between the western and eastern frontiers of Siberia. On issuing from the Ural it passes through Ekaterenburg, Kasimov, Tioumen, Ishim, Omsk, Elamsk, Kalyvan, Tomsk, Krasnoiarsk, Nijni Udinsk, Irkutsk, Verkne-Nertsckink, Strelink, Albazine, Blagowstenks, Radde, Orlomskaya, Alexandrewskoe and Nikolaevsk, and 6 rubles and 19 copecks are paid for every word sent from one end to the other. From Irkutsk there is a branch to Kiatka, on the Mongolian frontier, and from thence, for 20 copecks a word, the post conveys the dispatches to Peking in a fortnight.

It was this wire, extending from Ekaterenburg to Nikolaevsk, which had been cut, first beyond Tomsk and then between Tomsk and Kalyvan.

This was the reason why the czar, to the communication made to him for the second time by General Kissoff, had only answered by the words, "A courier this moment!"

The czar had remained motionless at the window for a few moments when the door was again opened. The chief of police appeared on the threshold.

"Enter, general," said the czar briefly, "and tell me all you know of Ivan Ogareff."

"He is an extremely dangerous man, sire," replied the chief of police.

"He ranked as colonel, did he not?"

"Yes, sire."

"Was he an intelligent officer?"

"Very intelligent, but a man whose spirit it was impossible to subdue and possessing an ambition which stopped at nothing. He soon became involved in secret intrigues, and it was then that he was degraded from his rank by his highness the grand duke and exiled to Siberia."

"How long ago was that?"

"Two years since. Pardoned after six months of exile by your majesty's favor, he returned to Russia."

"And since that time has he not revisited Siberia?"

"Yes, sire, but he voluntarily returned there," replied the chief of police, adding and slightly lowering his voice, "There was a time, sire, when none returned from Siberia."

"Well, while I live Siberia is and shall be a country whence men can return."

The czar had the right to utter these words with some pride, for often by his clemency he had shown that Russian justice knew how to pardon.

"Did not Ivan Ogareff," asked the czar, "return to Russia a second time after that journey through the Siberian provinces, the object of which remains unknown?"

"He did."

"And have the police lost trace of him since?"

"No, sire."

"Where was Ivan Ogareff last heard of?"

"In the province of Perm."

"In what town?"

"At Perm itself."

"What was he doing?"

"He appeared unoccupied, and there was nothing suspicious in his conduct."

"Then he was not under the surveillance of the secret police?"

"No, sire."

"When did he leave Perm?"

"About the month of March."

"To go"—

"Where is unknown."

"And since that time it is not known what has become of him?"

"No, sire, it is not known."

"Well, then, I myself know," answered the czar. "I have received anonymous communications which did not pass through the police department, and in the face of events now taking place beyond the frontier I have every reason to believe that they are correct."

"Do you mean, sire," cried the chief of police, "that Ivan Ogareff has a hand in this Tartar rebellion?"

"Indeed I do, and I will now tell you something which you are ignorant of. After leaving Perm Ivan Ogareff crossed the Ural mountains, entered Siberia and penetrated the Kirghiz steppes and there endeavored, not without success, to foment rebellion among their nomadic population. He then went so far south as free Turkestan. There in the provinces of Bokhara, Khokhand and Koondooz he found chiefs willing to pour their Tartar hordes into Siberia and execute a general rising in Asiatic Russia. The storm has been silently gathering, but it has at last burst like a thunderclap, and now all means of communication between eastern and western Siberia have been stopped. Moreover, Ivan Ogareff, thirsting for vengeance, aims at the life of my brother!"

The Courier of the Czar

By Jules Verne

The czar had become excited while speaking and now paced up and down with hurried steps. The chief of police said nothing, but he thought to himself that during the time when the emperor of Russia never pardoned an exile schemes such as those of Ivan Ogareff could never have been realized.

A few moments passed, during which he was silent, then, approaching the czar, who had thrown himself into an armchair, he said:

"Your majesty has of course given orders that this rebellion may be suppressed as soon as possible?"

"Yes," answered the czar. "The last telegram which was able to reach Nijni Udinsk would set in motion the troops in the governments of Yenisei, Irkutsk, Yatutsk, as well as those in the provinces of the Amur and Lake Baikal. At the same time the regiments from Perm and Nijni Novgorod, and the Cossacks from the frontier are advancing by forced marches toward the Ural mountains. But unfortunately some weeks must pass before they can attack the Tartars."

"And your majesty's brother, his highness the grand duke, is now isolated in the government of Irkutsk and is no longer in direct communication with Moscow?"

"That is so."

"But by the last dispatches he must know what measures have been taken by your majesty and what help he may expect from the governments nearest to that of Irkutsk?"

"He knows that," answered the czar, "but what he does not know is that Ivan Ogareff, as well as being a rebel, is also playing the part of a traitor and that in him he has a personal and bitter enemy. It is to the grand duke that Ivan Ogareff owes his first disgrace, and what is more serious is that this man is not known to him. Ivan Ogareff's plan, therefore, is to go to Irkutsk and under an assumed name offer his services to the grand duke. Then, after gaining his confidence, when the Tartars have invested Irkutsk, he will betray the town and with it my brother, whose life is directly threatened. This is what I have learned from my secret intelligence, this is what the grand duke does not know and this is what he must know!"

"Well, sire, an intelligent, courageous courier"—

"I momentarily expect one."

"And it is to be hoped he will be expeditious," added the chief of police, "for allow me to add, sire, that Siberia is a favorable land for rebellions."

All communication was interrupted. Had the wires between Kalyvan and Tomsk been cut by Tartar scouts, or had the emir himself arrived in the Yeniseisk provinces? Was all the lower part of western Siberia in a ferment? Had the rebellion already spread to the eastern regions? No one could say. The only agent which fears neither cold nor heat, which can neither be stopped by the rigors of winter nor the heat of summer and which flies with the rapidity of lightning—the electric current—was prevented from traversing the steppes, and it was no longer possible to warn the grand duke, shut up in Irkutsk, of the danger threatening him from the treason of Ivan Ogareff.

A courier only could supply the place of the interrupted electric current. It would take this man some time to traverse the 5,200 versts between Moscow and Irkutsk. To pass the ranks of the rebels and invaders he must display almost superhuman courage and intelligence. But with a clear head and a firm heart much can be done.

"Shall I be able to find this head and heart?" thought the czar.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Classifying a Mummy.

The story is told of a French savant returned from Egypt bringing a royal mummy with him, and the case was opened at Marseilles. Being told that it contained a pharaoh, the officer looked up pharaoh in the tariff, but no mention could he find of such an article. Then it occurred to him that a nice, high duty was on dried fish, and the savant had to pay as if for that commodity.

Alaric's Grave.

It is said that when Alaric, the conqueror of Rome, died "a river was turned aside to make a place in its bed for his grave, and when he was buried the water was again let into its former channel, and the prisoners who had helped to bury him were killed, so that no one might find out where the conqueror of Rome was buried."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic.—The joy of service.—Ps. cxxvi, 5, 6; Matt. xxv, 19-23.

The springs of the Christian's joy are many. He may rejoice that he has been redeemed and saved by Jesus Christ. "We joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the atonement." He may rejoice in the salvation of others. "There is joy among the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." If the angels rejoice for such a cause, may the redeemed do so! He may rejoice in his assurance of an inheritance in heaven. "In thy presence is fullness of joy. At thy right hand are pleasures forevermore." But one of the chief sources of the Christian's joy is in service. The child of God who has never learned to serve Him has not tasted of the sweetest of the Christian joys. Service and happiness go hand in hand in the Christian's life, and we are missing much in life if we have not learned this secret of happiness.

The joy of service is not inconsistent with hardships in service. This is taught in the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Psalm: "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. He that goeth forth and, weeping, bearing precious seed shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." Sowing is a difficulty, a hardship. How much more so in case of famine, when every seed may be of great value! But reaping follows sowing, and reaping is joyous. When the sown seeds have become sheaves, what cause for rejoicing! Who thinks then of the hardships of sowing? Those very hardships only make the joy of reaping surer and sweeter. Service without hardship is not near so joy producing as service that has been accomplished amid tears and sorrow. Sowing in sorrow produces reaping in joy. Let us not expect the joy before it is due, and then we will not be disappointed and discouraged.

The joy of service is not limited to the present life. The joy of the Jesus in returning to Palestine from Babylon is typical of the Christian joy in heaven. What a rapturous joy it was! It seemed too good to be true. They "were like them that dream." They laughed, they sang, they shouted for joy. Such will be our joy if we are saved, and it will be greatly increased if we have spent a life in service. Christ Himself teaches this doctrine. To the faithful servant He said, "Well done, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." The entrance into joy was the fruit of well doing. And how much sweeter that joy will be if the well doing has resulted in the salvation of others! If we not only enter into the joy of the Lord, but cause others to enter in, if we come bringing as our sheaves the saved souls of others, how great indeed our joy! Child of God, have you ever led a lost soul to the Lord Jesus Christ? If not, will you not begin this service for the Lord at once? It will mean joy here and joy hereafter. "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and forever."

The temptation to sacrifice the Christian's joy for the joy of the world is sometimes very great. But we should not yield to it. "The joy of the world worketh death, and death ends all its joy, but the Christian's joy only really begins when death comes. Some one has compared the joy of the sinner to lightning—a flash and it is gone—and the joy of the saint to light, lasting, healthful, healing and beautiful." Which we should chose is self evident.

BIBLE READINGS.

Neh. viii, 10; Ps. xvi, 11; xxx, 5; li, 12; Eccl. ii, 1-11; Isa. xxxv, 1-10; Matt. xiii, 44-46; Luke xv, 1-7; Acts viii, 5-8; Heb. xii, 1, 2; Jas. i, 1-4; I Pet. i, 1-9.

The Best Spiritual Guest.

Among all the spiritual guests that cross our threshold Jesus is not only incomparably the best by the excellence of His divinity, but also the most intimate by the presence of the same divinity. If any one receive Him into his soul, Jesus comes to have a place of His own that has no parallel in life and which has no proof save in experience. While the public come and go through the house in the busy daytime, this guest keeps His room, but in the quiet hours He sits with us. We make Him the confidant of our secrets, but in the end He tells us things about ourselves we have not known. We turn to Him for help, but find He has promised what we were about to ask. We declare a good intention, only to remember that it was His suggestion. His presence is an irresistible condemnation of wrongdoing, a perpetual inspiration of well doing.—Churchman.

Living For Self Alone.

The man who lives to himself bequeaths his own folly and poverty and meanness for his monument. He has benefited nobody, while he has dwarfed and warped his own powers, and senseless stone or marble, however lavishly supplied to mark his resting place, does him no honor. He has lived in himself, he has died in himself, and all that he leaves in memory of himself speaks no word of praise in his behalf, no word of justification. This is no true life. It is the worst of failures. There are glorious opportunities in this world for service. He who wisely uses them enriches both his race and himself and, dying, leaves a monument which outlasts granite and is brighter than polished brass.—Independent.

Life Again.

Out of the dusk a shadow,
Then a spark;
Out of the cloud a silence,
Then a lark;
Out of the heart a rapture,
Then a pain;
Out of the dead, cold ashes
Life again.

ZEB WHITE TREED.

TELLS OF AN OCCASION WHEN BRUIN ACTED AS RETRIBUTIVE AGENT.

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

"I'D heard they was gwine to hev a camp meetin' over at Snicker's grove," said old Zeb White, the possum hunter, "but I hadn't paid much heed to it, when one Sunday mawnin' my old woman says to me:

"'Zeb, we'll take a walk over to that camp meetin' as soon as I git the dishes washed up, and we won't come back till night.'

"'It's fo' miles over thar,' says I.

"'Yes, I know.'

"'And it's a hot day.'

"'Yes.'

"'And hard walkin'.'

"'Yes.'

"'And it would be time throwed away.'

"'But we's gwine right along jest the same,' she says. 'We's gwine to take front seats when we git thar, and we's gwine to mix in with other folks and let the Lawd know that we've got souls in our bosoms. Better be gittin' ready.'

"It was jest the season to watch wild bees and line 'em to a tree," explained Zeb, "and I'd figgered on puttin' in the day at that. I told the old woman so and asked her to go on alone, and she turned on me with:

"'Zeb White, if yo' reckon to cheat the Lawd and come out all right yo'll git left. Nobody ever did it in all this world. If yo' steal his day, sunthin will shorely happen to yo'.'

"'But we want honey in the fall, don't we?' says I.

"'What's the good of honey if yo' lose yo'r soul?'

"'Nobody's gwine to lose his soul on account of huntin' up a bee tree.'

"'Mebbe not. Mebbe he'll jest break his neck or a leg or wildcats will claw him or b'ars roll him about. The Bible tells about the fate of the stiff necked and obstinate, but yo' won't heed it. Jest go right along arter yo'r wild honey, Zeb White, and I'll go to camp meetin' by myself. I reckon yo'll find out the power of Providence befo' sundown.'

"She went away without another word to me, and fur half an hour I was a good mind to foller on. I didn't feel right about it 'tall, and my old dawg slunk away from me as if he was ashamed of his master. I didn't want to give in, however, and bimeby I shet the doah and strolled off to look fur bees. I was makin' fur a place about two miles away, but befo' I reached it I stopped to look at a big chestnut tree with a holler in it. That holler was big 'nuff fur fo' men to stand in, and I was lookin' in and wonderin' why I had never seen the tree befo' when I heard sunthin movin' behind me. I wheeled about, and thar was a whoppin' big b'ar sneakin' up on me. I could tell by the looks of his eye that he meant bizness, and it was no use to try to bluff him. One jump carried me into the holler, and he rushed and jest missed me. I had no gun, but I did hev my knife along, and when the b'ar tried to foller me into the tree I slashed him fo' or five times. He was no fool. He seen I had the advantage, and he jest backed off and sot down to wait. I kept purty quiet fur an hour, thinkin' he'd git discouraiged and go away, but he had other plans on hand. When I stuck my head out and waved my arms and yelled at him, he growled a few times, but he didn't cum a foot nigher.

"At fust I looked upon him jest as a common b'ar, but bimeby I begun to wonder if he hadn't bin sent to punish me fur dodgin' the camp meetin' and breakin' the Sabbath. The idea kinder scared me, but made me mad as well, and two hours had gone by befo' I made up my mind to anything. Then I thought to crawl out and make a fight fur it, but that varmint was on to me like a streak of lightnin'. He jest missed my head with a blow of his paw, and I was satisfied that he had me boxed up. It was 10 o'clock in the mawnin' when I jumped into that holler, and at 3 o'clock in the arternoon I was hungry and thirsty and feelin' mighty serious about things. At that hour a sheep and a calf cum wanderin' along together and clus behind 'em a hawg; but, though the b'ar licked his chops and looked arter them, he didn't move away.

"It was plain that I was in a bad way," continued the old hunter, "but I didn't see what I could do about it. I was in the holler, and the b'ar was outside, and thar was no show fur me to cum out till he went away. It cum sundown, and it cum night, and he was still thar. I saw I was in fur all night, and I went to sleep. I woke up once and saw his eyes shinin', but he let me alone. I was awake soon arter daylight, and he was right thar. Not to worry yo' with perticklers, I passed two nights and two days and a half in that holler tree, and at last I'd hev given my left arm fur a drink of spring water, to say nothin' about my hunger. I was no longer a match fur the b'ar. I was weak and flighty, and he'd hev a big advantage over me. However, I was tryin' to work up my courage to crawl out and do the best I could and hev it over with when Abe Holden, who was lookin' fur his lost mewl, cum that way, and the varmint made a sneak. My voice wasn't much stronger than a baby's, but I managed to make Abe hear, and he pulled me out and helped me home. The old woman sot on the doorstep singin' a hymn, and as we cum up she looks at Abe and says:

"'Fairly peart—fairly peart, Mrs. White,' he replied.

"'No, ma'am. It's Zeb, yo'r old man.'

"'Indeed! The last I saw of my old man he was gwine out to find a bee tree. Did he find it?'

"'He found a holler tree, ma'am.'

"'Yes?'

"'And a b'ar.'

"'Yes?'

"'And the b'ar has kept him in that tree since Sunday mawnin'.'

"'Shoo! Mr. Holden, would yo' mind askin' Zeb what he thinks about camp meetin's?'

"'He dun dotes on 'em, ma'am—dun dotes.'

"'And has he got a soul?'

"'He has. Yes, he's got a soul as big as a hoss blanket.'

"'And what does he think about cheatin' the Lawd outer his Sunday?'

"'He'll never do it ag'in, ma'am, and as I'm in a right smart hurry yo'll excuse me if I pass on.'

"He passed on," said Zeb, with a sorrowful smile, "and the old woman made me some chicken broth and tucked me into bed." M. QUAD.

DINNER AND SERENADE

Tendered Prince Henry by Germans at Washington

HORSEBACK RIDE IN RAIN

Followed a Visit to Naval Academy at Annapolis, Where He Saw Much That Interested Him—Starts on His Trip West and South

Washington, March 1.—Prince Henry enjoyed an event this afternoon which was not on his official itinerary. He and President Roosevelt went in a rainstorm on a horseback ride of an hour and a quarter through Rock Creek valley and the suburbs in the northwestern section of the city. The ride was arranged personally between the two men during one of their talks at an official function.

The prince returned from Annapolis in the afternoon and went direct to the White House to pay a farewell visit, the members of his suite accompanying him. The farewell call was entirely informal.

Prince Henry visited the naval academy at Annapolis yesterday and met the cadets under instruction there. He saw them at work and at play and at the close of his visit addressed them in a complimentary speech, expressing his confidence that they would do their duty if their country called upon them. He was accompanied to Annapolis by Secretary Long and a party of distinguished American officers. Every member of his staff was in attendance. The rain poured down in torrents, but the prince, to whom naval warfare has special interest, went through every formal feature of the program.

A national salute was fired as the party entered the grounds of the naval college and the prince at once reviewed the cadet corps. He stood under a canopy of canvas and the cadets marched in review before him. The parade ground was a bog and the rain splashed through the reviewing stand, but the middies marched in perfect order and the officers stood at attention.

After the parade the cadets changed to working clothes and hastened to the several working departments. While the students were preparing for inspection the prince was taken to the physical laboratory and shown the plans of the improvements projected at the academy. He discussed them with the enthusiasm of a naval man.

Next he was taken to the steam building where the machinery had been set in motion and the cadets had taken their places at the lathes and other machines. Then he was shown through the armory, where a number of cadets were in fencing suits, and after that through the gymnasium, where the sailor boys gave an exhibition of their physical training which interested him as much as anything else he saw during the day. A boxing class was lined up and put through the leading and blocking moves. There was an exhibition of vaulting and finally some spirited boxing and wrestling.

After the exhibition in the gymnasium, the visitors were entertained at luncheon. At the conclusion of the luncheon the cadet corps was drawn up in front of the house of the superintendent in preparation for the departure of the prince, and the latter thanked them for the way he had been received.

Prince Henry's visit to the national capital had a fitting culmination last night in a splendid official dinner given at the German embassy and later in a tremendous outburst of popular enthusiasm from the German residents of Washington, as the imperial visitor was about to start for his southern and western tour.

The dinner was given at the embassy at 8 o'clock, the prince being the guest of honor, while those invited to meet him were representative of highest official and diplomatic society. As the guests arrived they were met by Ambassador Von Holleben and escorted to the handsome drawingroom, where they were presented to Prince Henry.

Owing to the large number present the spacious ball room of the embassy was transformed into a banquet hall.

The walls were hung with garlands of smilax and decorated with the imperial colors and those of the various states of Germany. Palms, potted plants, roses, orchids, spring flowers figured in the decoration. Garlands of ferns, lilies of the valley and sweet peas were hung about the portraits of the emperor and empress.

An enormous crowd gathered about the embassy while the dinner was in progress. At 9:30 the long line of German marchers, who were to serenade the prince, made their appearance, bearing torches. At the head of the column moved the Stars and Stripes side by side with the German colors.

Following the torch-bearers came hundreds of strong-voiced German singers, who formed on the terrace immediately below the high balcony of the embassy entrance.

As the singers gathered Prince Henry stepped upon the balcony and amid a storm of cheers bowed his salutations to the throng. About him were ranged groups of ambassadors and officers in their brilliant uniforms, while at every window were the faces of ladies.

At 11 o'clock the prince, escorted by Ambassador Von Holleben, and by a squad of police, left the embassy for the Pennsylvania railroad station, where he boarded the special train, which departed at 11:30 o'clock for the western and southwestern trip. The prince's suite accompanied him.

BRINE COMPANY WINS

Temporary Injunction Against Union Men Is Made Permanent

Boston, March 1.—Judge Braley of the superior court rendered his decision yesterday upon the petition of the R. S. Brine Transportation company for an injunction restraining Team Drivers' International Union 25 and Oscar F. Cox, president of the International Allied Freight and Transportation council and its officers from interfering in any manner with its business. Several weeks ago Judge Braley granted a temporary injunction, and the decision yesterday continues in force the restraining order against the local union, but dissolves it so far as Cox is concerned.

Judge Braley finds that the "patrolling" of the Brine company's teams, the making or inciting of attacks upon its drivers, the cutting of harness and blocking of teams is unlawful intimidation, and, besides interfering with the plaintiff's business, becomes a private nuisance which the court enjoins.

The right of combinations of men to regulate their own conduct is recognized, as well as the right to solicit customers of the plaintiff not under contract to transfer their business to others; but the defendants are found to have gone beyond their rights and to have injured the plaintiff by illegal means.

In making his decision Judge Braley reviews the evidence presented at the hearing bearing upon the trouble between the Teamsters' union and the Brine company, and the acts of violence perpetrated against the company's teams and drivers during the early days of the strike.

A Victim of Thugs

Boston, March 1.—Patrolman Thomas Keefe of Everett, who was shot and wounded in the back on the night of Feb. 19, while attempting to arrest two men, died yesterday from the effects of his wounds. The charge against the two men, who were caught later, has been changed to that of murder. Patrolman Keefe was 44 years old and the father of eight children. The two men in custody charged with his murder are George Hughes and George H. Blake. The former, it is charged, did the shooting. They are held in $3000 for trial March 11.

Dr Cocke Alone to Blame

Boston, March 1.— By the decision of the full bench of the supreme court yesterday Mrs. Ellen T. Cocke cannot recover damages from Mrs. Carrie E. Cocke for being led into a bigamous marriage with the late Dr. James R. Cocke, the blind physician, who committed suicide in April, 1900. The court says that the conduct of Dr. Cocke in inducing the plaintiff to marry him constituted actionable fraud, but the defendant was rather a victim of Dr. Cocke than a conspirator with him, as was claimed, and is not liable.

Stole From Mail Carrier's Wagon

Boston, March 1.—Cornelius F. Sullivan was brought to Boston yesterday from Jersey City, having been held in $3000 by United States Commissioner Lindsay Rowe of New Jersey on a charge of having stolen 37 letters from the mails at Fall River. In default of bail he was taken to jail to await his appearance before the grand jury. Sullivan says he took the letters from a letter carrier's wagon. He was arrested at Jersey City, charged with disorderly conduct. When searched the letters were found on his person.

Smallpox Takes Fresh Start

Providence, March 1.—For several months the smallpox has spread to every portion of Woonsocket and it was thought to have been taken well in hand by the medical authorities when a few days ago about a dozen new cases were reported. This number was supplemented yesterday when Dr. Monroe ordered 10 additional victims placed under quarantine. Since the outbreak set in nearly the entire population of 28,000 has been vaccinated. There are now 94 persons under quarantine.

Harvard to Honor Prince Henry

Boston, March 1.—The Transcript says: It may be stated upon such authority as leaves practically no room for doubt that an honorary degree will be conferred upon Prince Henry by Harvard university during his visit here. This action on the part of the governing boards of the university is decidedly unusual.

Boston Increases Exports

Boston, March 1.—The annual report of the Boston Chamber of Commerce shows that the total foreign trade of Boston for the year 1901 was $197,005,218, and that Boston is the only port among the principal ones along the Atlantic seaboard to show an increase in its exports or in its total foreign trade during the year.

New Silk Making Plant

Valley Falls, R. I., March 1.—Looms were started in the new silk mills of Reiling, David & Schoen, a branch establishment of a large Hoboken, N. J., concern, in this village yesterday. The looms are being started as fast as installed. When running at its full capacity the mills will employ 250 hands.

Again In Good Standing

Medford, Mass., March 1.—After a conference with Dean Shipman of Tufts college yesterday, the 18 students of that college, 13 men and five women, who were suspended because of their failure to comply with the new rules of compulsory chapel service, were restored to regular standing.

Their Dory Capsized

Block Island, R. I., March 1.—The fishing schooner Mattie and Lena yesterday lost a dory in which were Thomas Smith and George Gaffit on the fishing banks 10 miles from here. There was a dense fog at the time. The dory capsized and both men were drowned.

WEAVERS' GRIEVANCES

Considered by the American Woolen Company.

LATTER MAKES PROPOSITION

Positively Refuses to Run Olneyville Mills on Any Other Basis Than Existed Before Strike, but Is Willing to Concede Minor Demands.

Boston, March 1.—Treasurer Wood of the American Woollen company had a long conference yesterday with the representatives of the weavers in its Rhode Island mills in which a strike is now on. The men submitted this list of grievances: The abolition of two-loom system on all fancies, colored work and double beam work; half-cent for all shuttles over four; 1 mill per harness on all harnesses over 12; all samples to be woven by the day at the rate of $11 per week; blanket weavers to receive the same wages as the dresser tenders; all wishing to return, to get their looms; the weavers shall not be fined for imperfections they are not responsible for; the weavers in the Manton mills protest against losing 1 cent per on looms running less than 100 picks per minute.

In reply the company submitted this proposition for the acceptance or rejection by the strikers: The American Woollen company will not continue running its Olneyville mill only on the basis that they are at present and were running previously to the strike, and positively under no other conditions; there will be no discrimination against any employe; all weavers now at work will be allowed to remain on the present looms; in all other instances weavers will be allowed to resume work on their own looms.

The above applies also to the Manton mills, excepting regarding the objection of the weavers to the speed of their looms now running less than 100 picks per minute. Orders were given six weeks ago by the agent of that mill for new looms. Meanwhile the speed of the present looms will be increased as desired.

The strikers will meet in Providence to act upon the company's proposition.

Manufacturers Seem Determined

Fall River, Mass., March 1.—The sentiment of the cotton manufacturers is crystallizing into a determination to adhere to their 6 percent advance and not follow the 10 percent granted by M. C. D. Borden. All of the leaders among them are of this opinion. They admit that the weavers' grievance concerning cuts is deep rooted and must be settled. They are willing to meet the weavers' committee and talk over the details of the length of cuts, with a view to arriving at a basis that will be satisfactory to both.

In Federation of Labor

Central Falls, R. I., March 1.—A branch of the United Textile Workers' of America, which organization is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, was formed here last night. The new organization has a membership of about 200 employes of cotton, woolen and silk mill operatives. The new branch is practically a transfer of a branch of the Socialist Trades and Labor Alliance to the Federation of Labor.

Double Murder and Suicide

Elgin, Ills., March 1.—Benjamin F. Ellsworth, an influential man of Woodstock and the owner of extensive machine shops, shot and killed Amos Anderson, Mrs. Ellsworth and himself yesterday. Ellsworth was jealous of Anderson's attentions to Mrs. Ellsworth. Ellsworth's 19-year-old son is held on the charge of having been in league with his father to kill Anderson.

Wisker Held Responsible

New York, March 1.—The grand jury concluded its investigation into the new York Central tunnel disaster of Jan. 8 yesterday and found an indictment for manslaughter against John M. Wisker, the engineer of the White Plains local which ran into the Norwalk local in the tunnel. A bench warrant was issued for Wisker's arrest.

No More Concessions on Boundary

London, March 1.—Important communications have recently passed between Canada and the British government with reference to the Alaskan boundary dispute, in which Canada intimates that it has made all the concessions to the United States possible, and wishes England to support its present demands.

Defective Boiler Killed Thirty

Detriot, March 1.—The coroner's jury which has been investigating the cause of the explosion of the boiler at the Penberthy Injector company's plant here on Nov. 26 last, which resulted in the loss of 30 lives, brought in a verdict yesterday that the boiler was defective, and censured its makers.

French Premier Shaken Up

Paris, March 1.—As Premier Waldeck-Rousseau and his nephew were returning from a banquet last night their carriage was overturned as a result of a collision with a street car. Both the premier and his nephew suffered severe contusions and were cut by broken glass.

Eighty Less Bolomen

Manila, March 1.—Two hundred uniformed bolomen in the island of Samar recently attacked a scouting party of friendly natives and a detachment of the First infantry. Eighty of the bolomen were killed and one of the friendly natives was boloed.

THE ROAD TO DYSPEPSIA.

It requires about five hours for the stomach to work on an ordinary meal and pass it out of itself, when it falls into a state of repose; hence if a man eats three times a day his stomach must work fifteen hours out of the twenty-four. After a night's sleep we wake up with a certain amount of bodily vigor which is faithfully portioned out to every muscle of the system and every set of muscles, each its rightful share, the stomach among others.

When the external body gets weary after a long day's work, the stomach bears its share of the fatigue, but if, when the body is weary with the day's toil, we put it to bed, giving the stomach meanwhile a five hours' task which must be performed, we impose upon the very best friend we have—the one that gives us one of the largest amounts of earthly enjoyment—and if this overtaxing is continued it must as certainly wear out prematurely as the body itself will if it is overworked every day.

And, if persons eat between meals, then the stomach has no rest from breakfast in the morning until 1, 2, 3 or 4 o'clock next day; hence it is that so many persons have dyspepsia. The stomach is worked so much and so constantly that it becomes too weak to work at all.—London Family Doctor.

Fattening For Marriage.

The marriageable girl in Tunis has a trying ordeal to go through after her betrothal to the man not of her choice, but whose choice she is. She has to be fattened to the required size before the ceremony can take place.

As soon as the betrothal takes place she is taken to a room and there cooped up till the fattening process is concluded. Silver shackles are fastened round her wrists and ankles, and the task of her parents and future husband is to increase her bulk till her wrists and ankles fill up the shackles. If the husband is a widower or has "discharged" his first wife, the girl has the shackles of the first spouse placed on her, and she must fill them out.

It takes a long time to do this, as a rule, and sometimes it cannot be accomplished in spite of all efforts. It is then open to the future husband to cry off the bargain or waive the condition. In the case of a bachelor he takes care to see that the bracelets and anklets are not too large—that is, if he is fond of the girl—but if he is being forced into the marriage by his parents he is a great stickler for custom. Stout girls are the more quickly snapped up in Tunis.

A Mark Twain Story.

Two Englishmen were discussing with Mark Twain the old topic of American humor as not appreciated by foreigners.

"But are the English really so obtuse?" asked one of them.

The questioner remained in solemn thought for a moment. Then he broke into a hearty laugh.

"Quite a delicious joke!" he exclaimed. "Though of course if you were to open the Englishman's skull you would kill him, would you not?"

Mark Twain turned to the second Englishman. "What did I tell you? He wants to know whether it wouldn't kill him!"

The countenance of the second Englishman was like a blank wall. "Wouldn't it?" he queried.—New York Times.

Beating the Customs.

A party of Englishmen staying in France went for a drive which extended beyond the Italian frontier, where they purchased a basket of fruit. Upon their return the revenue official stopped the carriage and said the tax must be paid for the fruit. The Englishmen at once told the driver to stand still for awhile. Then, with the disgusted official looking on, but unable to interfere, they calmly and deliberately ate the contents of the basket and went on their way untaxed and rejoicing.

Beetles' Music.

While the structure of the music of stridulating organs of beetles is extremely simple they sometimes possess contrivances for varying the pitch. The general structure of such an organ is a hard surface covered with striations, over which some other member of the body furnished with a rasping edge or area is rubbed. When the striated edge is divided into parts with finer and coarser markings, variations of pitch can be produced.

Bobby (in deep confusion)—Please, it's some tar, an' it won't come off."

Gowns and Their Wearers.

They all nodded, and presently one dear thing leaned over to another dear thing and remarked quite casually, "What an elaborate gown you have on, dear!"—Chicago Post.

Good Afternoon.

Those who play chess, and others as well, note with pleasure the high rank that Mr. Pillsbury of Boston is taking in the international tournament at Monte Carlo against the great masters. He is a good second.

The proposed building ordinance, which means the establishment of a new city department, promises a lively discussion for the next meeting of the City Council for the members are divided upon the wisdom of adopting the ordinance as drawn. The need of a building ordinance is generally admitted, but many do not see the necessity of a City of Boston ordinance, or one so cumbersome and in some cases contradictory. There is a question too, whether it will accomplish some of the objects sought the prevention of the erection of small cheap buildings for stores, like those on Water street near Franklin street and unsightly buildings in general. It is the same ordinance that was passed by the City Council of 1901 and vetoed by Mayor Hall.

Now that several cities are in the Metropolitan water district, one municipality is interested in the water revenue of the others. Many believe Boston gets the best end of it in assessments. While Quincy finds it necessary to raise part by taxation to pay water debt, the city of Somerville has enough not only for water maintenance maturing debt, interest, Metropolitan assessment extensions, and abatement, but also for maturing sewer debt and interest, maintenance of sewers and $22000 toward maintenance of fire departmen. Then there is a "balance" which is used to reduce the municipal debt. The following is from the budget of the Mayor of Somerville:

It is further recommended that the income received in the city of Somerville from the water works be appropriated and applied as follows:

First—To the payment of the expenses of maintenance and operation incurred by the water commissioner (he to furnish and maintain his team) $2,500, $35,000.

Second—To the payment of the interest on all bonds, notes, or scrip of the city issued on account of the water works $6,790. And to the payment of said bonds, notes, or scrip, as they may mature, $29,000.

Third—To the payment of the assessment of the city to be paid to the treasurer of the commonwealth, as provided in chapter 488 of the acts of 1895 the sum required (estimated) $74,100.

Fourth—To the payment of the expenses of the extension of the water works, $20,000

Fifth—To provide for the amount of the abatements made on water charges by authority of the water commissioner, $410.

Sixth—To the reduction of funded debt for the payment of sewer loan bonds, $9,000.

Seventh—To the payment of interest on sewer loan bonds, $6,622.

Eighth—To the payment of the expenses of sewer maintenance, $10,500.

Ninth—To the maintenance of the fire department, $22,000.

And the balance to the reduction of funded debt.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ There are newspapers in Germany just as there are men and newspapers in this country that are ridiculing and satirizing the visit of Prince Henry and the efforts of the American people to entertain him, but neither the one nor the other is representative of the sentiment of the people. Berlin newspapers published extra editions on Sunday to give the first announcement of the safe arrival of the prince, and elaborate preparations have been made for the reporting of the various events attending his journey through this conntry, in recognition of the great significance of the event. The prince is here not as the scion of royalty, to honor whom we must sacrifice our belief in and love for republican institutions, but as the representative of a great nation, to which we are bound by innumerable ties and with whom we are destined in the future to have still closer connection than in the past.—Haverhill Gazette.

GIVEN BLACK EYE.

Leave to Withdraw the Report on Greater Boston Bill.

The hearing on the "Greater Boston" bill, to have been held Friday morning before the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs, went by default as the petitioners were not able to present their case. In the afternoon in the Senate the Committee reported leave to withdraw.

A Social Evening.

Although the weather was rather unfavorable Thursday evening, it did not prevent the W. W. club from holding its regular meeting at the residence of Mr. and Mrs S. Troupe.

When all had assembled and greetings exchanged, a gypsy appeared and straightway proceeded to unfold the mysteries of the future for one and all. Then Miss Henrietta Malcolm and Miss Isabella S. Mitchell sang, and Daniel Ford of Milton gave a reading which were highly appreciated.

About half past nine Mr. Francis Morrison announced that Prof. Sam Tutton had made his appearance, after all hopes of his coming had been given up. He was welcomed by three rousing cheers, and no sooner was he divested of his coat and hat, than he was called upon to render his jovial songs. Mr. Houston charmed the hearts of many a Scot with some of Scotland's fine old tunes. Next were refreshments, daintily served by the hostess, which were highly appreciated.

After all had been bountifully served, the amusements of the evening were resumed. Mrs. Troup and daughter Helen rendered a Highland duet. Mr. Kelly sang a Scotch song, "The Old Arm Chair." Mr. Andrew Pirie struck up the famous old song, "Auld Lang Syne," and the company joined in the chorus.

Another Gas Hearing.

The Quincy gas bill will have another hearing by the Committee on Public Lighting of the Legislature as will be seen by one of the State House hearings advertised today. At the first hearing the Citizens Gas Company was not represented, and it is at the request of the company that the hearing will be reopened. They have secured Carver & Blodgett as their counsel. Petitioners as well as the company will be heard at the hearing on Tuesday morning, and those who want gas and are unable to get it, and those who want cheaper gas should be on hand.

ON A STRIKE.

The Quarrymen of Quincy Went Out Today.

An Eight-Hour Day the Demand.

An Early Settlement Greatly to be Desired.

The 350 quarrymen employed in the granite quarries in Quincy went out on a strike this morning. It was thought yesterday that the Quarrymen's Union would act favorably upon the proposition submitted by the committee of the Manufacturers' Association, but after a prolonged meeting of the quarrymen last night it was voted not to accept the proposition but to stand by their first demand.

The quarrymen have been preparing for this move for some time and last year rumors were rife that they intended to demand more pay this year.

The demand came the first of February when the quarrymen submitted a proposition to the manufacturers for an eight hour-day with nine hours' pay and weekly payments.

Several meetings between committees representing the two associations have been held in an effort to secure a peaceful adjustment. At the February meeting of the Manufacturers' Association, its committee was given full power to settle. The quarrymen's committee, however, was not vested with that power.

At the meeting of the two committees Thursday night the Manufacturers' committee submitted a proposition for settlement. This proposition was for an eight hour day for the three winter months and nine hours for the balance of the year, with nine hours pay for the entire year. The weekly payment was granted without question.

The quarrymen, however, refuse to accept anything but eight hours with nine hours pay for the entire year.

Should the strike be of long duration it would be very disastrous for Quincy.

Of the 350 estimated members of the Quarrymen's union, 300 are said to be employed in Quincy. Of this number the Quincy Quarries Co. employ 160 and the Granite Railway Co. 45. The balance are employed in remaining quarries in Quincy.

One of the Quarry owners seen this morning said that he did not know what the manufacturers' committee would do about the strike, but intimated that they would not grant the demand made by the quarrymen. When asked if any attempt would be made to operate the quarries with non-union men he replied that he could not say, but for the present the quarries would probably remain idle.

HOW IT RAINED.

Floods in All the Lowlands of City.

The Street Car Travel Blocked.

Not Equal to the Big Flood of the '80s.

Anyone who was out last night knew that it rained, and rained hard. Not only did the rain carry off the snow but it washed out streets and did a large amount of damage. Water rushed down hills in streams as large as barrels tearing everything before them. It also practically paralyzed the street railway system.

At the corner of Hancock and Squantum streets, sand was washed down by the cart load and left on the street railway tracks, which were covered for a number of feet with six inches of sand, completely blocking the line.

On Newport avenue, near where Butler's brook crosses under the street, the street was flooded to a depth of several feet, so that when a car went through, the water flowed in the car doors and passengers had to get upon the seats to keep from getting wet.

At Brewers' corner near Prout's store the water ran down from the hills tearing up the street and square making a pond several feet deep. Then the water rushed down Water street in a great river.

On Independence avenue near the residence of Chief Engineer Williams, the water collected in a pond that was several feet deep. It was impossible for the cars to get through and the passengers were transferred with difficulty.

Quincy avenue near Scammell's manufactory, there was another pond and the street car tracks were covered with sand.

On Sheppard's, hill, East Braintree, the tracks were covered a foot deep with sand and gravel.

On Coddington street the water also rushed down in a great stream tearing up the street.

Town brook overflowed at several points, notably near the canal. Cherry avenue for 400 feet and land of Dr. Everett and others were flooded. The brook became a dashing stream.

At South Quincy all the low lands adjoining the brook are flooded, almost equal to the big flood of the 80's. Beneath the Granite street bridge there were three or four feet of water. It was thought by some during the evening that a water main had burst.

Commissioner Knowlton was out all night with a gang of men trying to take care of the surface water, and Assistant Superintendent Conway of the street railway has a large gang of men out all night shovelling the sand and gravel from the tracks, so that all lines are open this morning.

At Wollaston the low lands were overflowed and not a few residents awoke this morning to find their cellars full of water.

The underground drains in the different parts of the city proved entirely inadequate to take care of the large body of water and in some cases the loose sand was washed into them so badly that they became choked.

As soon as Commissioner Knowlton became aware, Friday night, of the condition of things he sent word to the Electric Light company to keep the street lights burning all night. He also hustled his men together and they made a night of it. As a result the streets today are pretty free from ponds.

Appropriation Order.

The City Council Committee on Finance met last evening and considered the annual budget. The committee met at 7.45 and in two hours had gone through the whole budget and were ready to report. It is understood that the committee made some slight changes, but on the whole the budget will be reported as introduced. This is remarkably quick work. Usually it is March before the budget is forwarded to the Council and then the several departments have been summoned before the committee, on different evenings and asked to explain the needs of their departments.

MODERN CHARITIES.

One of the smallest attended meetings in the club's history was that of last night at the Unity club. However, under the circumstances there was a goodly number for the evening. The subject 'Modern Charities,'' was one of interest to everyone, and the able director, Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, to whom, witty remarks are a second nature rendered to the few that were present a most attractive program.

The meeting was called to order at 8.15 and after the minutes were read of last meeting, Mrs. Gurney read, as an introduction, a poem, by Sam Walter Foss which she selected as an example in which the strong spirit of modern charities was expressed. She introduced Dr. E. R. Johnson as the first reader of the evening, whose subject, "The tenement house'' was principally confined to the close quarters in New York city.

Dr. Johnson classified the tenements of New York (1) the old broken down dilipidated buildings and (2) those that are erected by tenement house builders who economize on space and material and obtain large returns in rent.

An example of the latter was a family holding four small rooms in that part of the building where there was little light and fresh air and paying a rent of $12.

Gotham court and Bowery are typical examples of ''double deckers'' a style of building in which space is limited, air is close, and little light available. In one of these buildings it is said that 449 rooms were without light and also that in one the board of health reported that at one time there were 600 infants one-third of them dying in a year from their close confinement.

Dr. Johnson said that if we look at the hospitals and dispensaries we may see ourselves what wretchedness and vice are doing to the poor. Thanks to present committee such degradation and misery is being checked.

The music came at this stage of the evening. As it was in charge of Miss Alice Prescott, a fine selection was made as was shown by the hearty applause which Miss Bertha Wetherbee Hockaday received after singing "Dreamland,'' C. W. Coombs; "Lullaby,'' Homer Morris; "Snowflakes,'' F. H. Cohen. The small audience was sufficient to call forth an encore. Miss Hockaday was accompanied by her sister Miss Grace May Hockaday.

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney spoke at this point on, College Settlements. She considered "Social Settlements,'' should be included in the subject.

College settlements have existed in this country only since 1887 and are said to have been founded from the English idea especially in the "Whitechapel,'' a locality in London where Oxford students did so much in their work for the poor. The "Dennison House'' a settlement in this country is named after the most energetic of these English students. Another established social settlement is Rimington house. Mrs. Gurney gave as the real aim of these organizations to make social centre among the lower classes to share with and help out the unfortunate one, and lastly to change the family life. This latter object has been made impossible by the existing conditions which are so unrighteous and unsatisfactory.

Mrs. Gurney told of the good work done by and variety of causes taken up in, these college settlements. In some there are Paul Revere clubs, gymnasiums, Sloyd, cooking departments, reading and even kindergartens and all the ennobling influence.

Intermission followed.

The last subject of the evening "Playgrounds, considered as most hopeful feature of modern charities'' was taken up by Mr. Arthur Hall of Quincy. Boston is well provided with this city luxury for children compared with London, New York, Chicago and others. In 1893, Philadelphia may be given credit for first starting a movement which furnished public playgrounds for the poor city children. The culture league in New York and Philadelphia did more than any society for securing these means. Mr. Hall stated that before school session the basement was usually the place for congregation while the street was resorted to after school work was over. To show what little progress the New York committee's made in selecting a desirable spot for such a playground was that of 1887 when it took them till 1894 before they could come to any New York schools playgrounds have been constructed in the rooms of the school. Mr. Hall showed how playgrounds was a protection against maliciouness and crime. Mr. Hall also spoke of the increase of this interest in western cities and especially he brought out as example of the typical playgrounds, the "Charles Bank'' in Boston the annual cost being only $5,000 for men and about half that amount for women. The club was proud to add to its membership ex-Mayor John O. Hall bringing it up to 144.

Mrs. Fay stated there were thirty present. The club adjourned at 9.50.

CALL ACCEPTED.

Rev. W. W. Dornan Going to Holbrook.

Rev. W.W. Dornan, who resigned his pastorate at the United Presbyterian church in January, to take effect April 1, has accepted a call to the Winthrop Congregational church at Holbrook, and will be installed Wednesday, April 2.

It was five years ago last November that Mr. Dornan became a pastor, so that he was one of the longest in point of service in the city, and he has been very successful in securing for the new society a fine church home. An effort has been made to get him to withdraw his resignation, but at a meeting Tuesday evening Mr. Dornan reached his decision to go. He will preach tomorrow and probably through March. The last pastor at the Holbrook church was Rev. Warren F. Low.

The Magazines.

Country Life in America, the new monthly of Doubleday Page & Co. of New York, beautifully illustrates nature, the March number opening with "The animals of the farm.'' Five pages are devoted to the New England garden home of Mrs. Jack Gardner, and some of the other illustrated papers are the sugar-bush, the black tail deer, the poultry-yard, life of the trapper, the greenhouse in the snow, and the flight of the osprey. In typographical appearance; Country Life is a leader, everything is so lifelike.

The March number of The Ladies' Home Journal is an admirable example of a real "home'' magazine. From the beautiful cover, by Mr. W. L. Taylor, to the very last page it is replete with delightful fiction and interesting articles. The number opens with the unique story of "The Sexton Who Ruled New York Society,'' by William Perrine, and then comes a real treat, another "Lady or the Tiger'' story, by Stockton. Mr. Bok's editorial is written under the title "She Dasn't,'' and deals fearlessly with the woman who is afraid to come out and do things as she thinks they should be done. Other valuable articles in the magazine, outside of the regular departments, are; "How to Have a Home Wedding,'' "Animated Silhouettes and other Games. The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia.

The March number of the Pilgrim is rich and varied in its subjects and illustrations. Its comments on men and matters of moment are always interesting, and reference is made to Miss Alice Roosevelt as "The Queen in the diplomatic game of chess being played by England and Germany.'' The floral festival of Pasadena is illustrated, also artistic American homes, leading men and women, "some authors I have known, and other features. Published at Battle Creek, Mich.

Wonderland for 1902 is equal to many of the magazines in size and illustrations. It is issued by the general passenger agent of the Northern Pacific railway, and is descriptive of the Northwest, telling of mining in Montana, Northern Cheyenne Indians, Yellowstone park, the Puget sound country, etc. Six cents in stamps sent to Charles S. Fee, St. Paul, Minn., will obtain a copy.

The Woman's Home Companion for March is very seasonable. A nature article on "The Coming of Spring'' opens the number. The fashions are especially intended to interest "The Easter Girl.'' Everybody will be interested and instructed by the papers on "Wireless Telegraphy.'' "The First President of the Cuban Republic,'' and on the new game Ping-pong. In "The New Men,'' by Will Payne; "The Elopment,'' by Clinton Ross, and "Gifts for the Bride.'' by Mary Tracy Earle, lovers of good fiction will find a treat. Two notable pictures by Burne-Jones form a great art feature, and a group of Washington society belles makes a fitting double-page feature for this beautiful spring number. Published by The Crowell & Kirkpatrick Co., Springfield, Ohio; sample copy free.

ALL RAIL ROUTE TO ASIA

Line Planned From New York to Paris.

NO ENGINEERING DIFFICULTIES.

Transalaskan Road Will Be Running In Five Years, Promoters Say. Thirty Miles Across Bering Strait the Only Break—Surveys Made. Work to Begin April 15.

From San Francisco to St. Petersburg by rail in twelve days! Around the world in parlor cars, with no more of a water voyage than a thirty mile transfer across Bering strait in enormous steel lighters.

This is the trip promised within five years, for there are in New York, Seattle, Denver and Washington capitalists, engineers and explorers who have completed the preliminary work and have arranged to start building the Transalaskan railroad on April 15, says the New York World. This line, which will be 850 miles in length, will open up one of the richest countries in the world, but more interesting and spectacular than that is the certainty of its making what will be practically an all rail route to Asia.

F. S. Granger, a Seattle capitalist, who was for many years connected with the Burlington road, and J. C. Cornforth of Denver and Skaguay have spent the past five years solving the preliminary problems of the project, and among some of the other men associated with them are Harry Josephs of Denver, J. K. Frye of Denver, formerly general manager of the Santa Fe railroad; General A. L. New of Washington, first vice president and general manager of the Continental and Pacific Wireless Telegraph and Telephone company, and S. L. Selden of Washington, general counsel of the new company.

"It would have sounded like a Jules Verne dream thirty years ago,'' said Mr. Granger the other day, "but it presents no engineering difficulties, not half the difficulties of building a subway in New York. The plan as adopted provides for a single track road from Iliamna bay, inside of Cook's inlet, to Port Clarence, on Bering strait, to connect on this side with steamers of the Transalaskan railway running from Seattle and on the other with steel ferries to make a direct connection with the Transsiberian railway.

"Feasible? Not only feasible, but practical and profitable. In 1907 one can go from San Francisco to St. Petersburg or Paris in twelve or thirteen days. The old world and the new will be brought together, and great mineral and agricultural lands will be thrown open, and greater wealth than one dreams of will be reaped by the nation.

"Our engineers have reported that the streams to be bridged offer no difficulties, and we set five years as the limit of time before the road will be in active operation, but we hope and rather expect to cut ten months from that estimate."

CURIOUS SUN BATH CLUB.

Features of a New Cult Practiced In Berlin.

Berlin is eloquent in preaching a new gospel of health. It is based on the sun bath, says the New York World. Sunshine, according to the new cult, is the real elixir of life, and the only way for civilized folk to get the benefit of it is to take generous baths in which sunshine rather than water is the purifying agent.

With this in view, many of the most prominent young men in Berlin have formed a club which holds its meetings in a house in the suburbs which has an exceptional exposure to the sun.

Here these sun bath enthusiasts congregate every few days and in modified indoor athletic costumes engage in all kinds of merry rough and tumble sports in full glare of the sunshine. Whatever statistics may ultimately prove as to the club members' increase in health, they at all events have a thoroughly good time out of these exercises of their own devising.

Machine For Painless Dentistry.

"Destined to prove one of the most wonderful inventions of the age'' is the way in which Thomas A. Edison speaks of a little electric machine invented by Thomas W. McCue of Akron, O. Mr. McCue took it to Edison's home, and the great electrician gave it a thorough study and test. The machine does away with all pain in dentistry, and while no attempt has been made to apply it to surgery Mr. McCue is confident of its ultimate success there, says the Chicago Chronicle. He describes its operation as "short circuiting'' the pain and preventing it from reaching the brain. It reduces the current to a hundred thousandth of a volt, a result which electricians have claimed could not be achieved.

Even Boer Babies Fight.

One of the most surprising incidents of the present war in South Africa is reported in the case of the death of Private Herbert Harold Hughes, First King's Dragoon guards, whose widow lives at Dover, says the London Times. The affair occurred at Orebyfontein, near Harrismith, Orange River Colony, on Nov. 9, 1901, Captain E. A. Williams, First King's Dragoon guards, being among those who lost their lives. The small force was skirmishing when a Boer boy, afterward found to be only six years of age, walked up to Private Hughes and when close to him deliberately shot him in the abdomen with a revolver he had concealed, the wound proving fatal on Nov. 10.

CANAL COMPANY WAITS

Cannot Enter Into Bargain With Us at Present

IS BLOCKED BY COLOMBIA

Her Consul General at Paris Says Panama People Cannot Transfer Concession Without Modifying Existing Agreement

Paris, March 1.—At an extraordinary meeting of the shareholders of the new Panama Canal company yesterday, President Bo read a message from the consul general of Colombia at Paris setting forth that the company could not transfer its concession to another nation without first, with the assent of Colombia, modifying the stipulations of articles 21 and 22 of the agreement.

After a discussion, during which it was urged that effort should be made to keep the concession for France, the meeting adopted a resolution expressing approval of the attitude of the board of directors and deciding, in view of the message of the Colombian consul general, to postpone entering into any engagement.

The dispatch of the Colombian government was a complete surprise to the shareholders of the Panama Canal company, who met in expectation of merely ratifying the action of the board of directors in offering the Panama Canal company's property to the United States for $40,000,000, which offer was to remain open until March 4, 1903, and authorizing the board to carry out all the measures for the transfer of the property, and fix and accept all modes and terms of payment if the United States accepted the offer.

The consternation, therefore, was general when President Bo read Colombia's telegram, and a heated discussion broke out. The majority of the speakers concluded that the telegram meant the utter collapse of the negotiations with America and childish resentment against the United States was expressed. Some of the speakers expressed the sudden conviction that if a proper appeal was made the money to complete the canal could be obtained in France.

One of the shareholders informed the meeting that he knew that President Loubet had personally taken steps to endeavor to have the canal built with French money.

Finally, M. Marquis, the official representative of the shareholders, called the meeting to its senses. The best course, he said, was to adjourn until explanations of Colombia's action were forthcoming. This proopsal was adopted and the meeting adjourned.

The secretary of the company, who was questioned after the adjournment, said that the telegram arrived at 6:30 Thursday evening. They were quite at a loss to explain it, for it was thought that the Colombian and the United States governments were in agreement regarding the cession of the concession.

The report later submitted to the meeting said: "Everyone who has followed the progress of the negotiations has noticed that the first anxiety of the American government was to bind it in the same treaty the liquidation of the old company as well as that of the new company. It was necessary to place ourselves in the position of giving the American government full security and enabling it to dissipate definitely the doubts spread by the adversaries of the Panama route regarding the integrity of our proprietary rights."

In reviewing the negotiations with the United States since the offer to sell the canal property for $40,000,000, the report said:

"It now belongs to the senate to pronounce on our propositions, which will reach it supported by the favorable isthmian report. We are persuaded that our propositions will be discussed by this high assembly with the calm and maturity befitting such a grave matter. We shall have to wait some time yet for a solution, and have been led to declare that our offers remain open until March 4, 1903, by consideration of the fact that the legislative session usually terminates on that date. The negotiations pending between Colombia and the United States, the duration of which is uncertain, have rendered it impossible to fix an earlier date. We have reason to believe, however, that a conclusion of the arrangements between Colombia and ourselves may take place in the course of the present year. These delays will not be unfavorable to us. They will enable public opinion to better appreciate the motives which dictated the decision of the isthmian commission."

Walker Gets the News

Washington, March 1.—Admiral Walker was shown the cablegram from Paris regarding the action of the Panama Canal company in deciding not to continue the negotiations for the sale of the canal to the United States. He had received no advice on the subject, but was inclined to think that the news from Paris was not such as to interfere seriously with the purchase of the canal property, should this government desire to acquire it.

The Florence Burns Case

New York, March 1.—Hearings of the case of Florence Burns, who is charged with the murder of Walter Brooks in the Glen Island hotel, was resumed yesterday. The questions put to Dr. Sweeney, the physician who was called to attend Brooks, indicated a purpose on the part of Mr. Backus, counsel for the Burns girl, to establish a defense that Brooks committed suicide.

MANY NINERS PERISHED

Snowslide Swept Them Down a Mountainside In Colorado

Telluride, Col., March 1.—The most terrible snowslide ever known in Colorado caused the deaths of from 30 to 75 men at the Liberty Bell mine on Smuggler mountain yesterday. Nearly all the buildings of the Liberty Bell mine were carried down by the avalanche, all the books which show the number and names of the men employed being lost, so that the death list may not be known until the rescuers shall have removed the immense quantity of snow, rocks and logs from the canyon where the victims lie buried.

The first avalanche occurred at 7:30 yesterday morning, while the men of the day shift were preparing for their day's work. About 200 men are employed in the mines and mills of the Liberty Bell company, and less than half these were at work at the time of the accident. The others were in the boarding house or in the bunk house nearby. Both these buildings were carried down the mountain side a distance of 2000 feet and crushed to bits by tons of snow.

It was 10 o'clock before news of the disaster reached Telluride. At once a number of men started for the scene. Meantime the surviving employes of the Liberty Bell began the work of rescuing the victims of the slide. Several were taken out alive. A dozen or more bodies were removed from the snow, which lay piled 25 feet deep in the bottom of the canyon.

A third slide occurred at 3 o'clock, about one mile below the Liberty Bell mines, and three men who were on their return from the scene of the catastrophe were swept away.

Kitchener's Belated Report

London, March 1.—In responce to an inquiry by the government as to the fate of the escort of a convoy of empty wagons (which Lord Kitchener cabled was attacked by the Boers on Feb. 24) Lord Kitchener has cabled the following message: "A report has just been received that 16 officers and 451 men were taken prisoners. Of these, one officer and 105 men have been released. Colonel Anderson, who commanded, is still a prisoner. Major Enderby was wounded. Hence the delay in obtaining definite information." Lord Kitchener says nothing in his response about the two guns that the Boers captured with the convoy.

Tug Struck a Rock

Salem, Mass., March 1.—The ocean tug Honey Brook, which was to call here for a tow of empty barges, struck on a rock in Salem harbor yesterday. A hole was stove in the tug's bottom and it filled rapidly. A portion of the crew took to a boat and started to row to Salem, but lost their bearings in a dense fog. They finally landed and reported the accident.

Seven Storm-Swept States

Atlanta, March 1.—Not in many years have the southeastern gulf states experienced damage so widespread by a storm as that which visited Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida. So far as known seven lives have been lost and several persons injured. The damage is enormous.

Rhody's Divorce Law Amended

Providence, March 1.—The divorce amendments which have occupied the attention of the general assembly for several weeks were yesterday passed by the senate. In future a residence of two years in this state is necessary before appication for divorce can be honored.

Riotous Students Punished

St. Petersburg, March 1.—Two hundred and fifty of the riotous students and others who have been arrested in Moscow have been condemned to various terms of imprisonment, ranging from one week to three months.

Pension Bills Rushed Through

Washington, March 1.—The house yesterday broke all its records in the matter of private pension legislation. It cleared the calendar, passing 159 bills in a little more than three hours.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The body of Mrs. Eva N. Thorndike, who apparently killed herself at North Weymouth, Mass., has been identified by Christian P. King of Hanover, N. H., as that of his sister, whom he had not seen for 12 years. He will claim the body.

Sampel Hirshberg, 4 years old, was killed instantly as the result of a fall of 40 feet from a window of the third story of his home at Boston.

The first written agreement between the representatives of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Boston and Maine railroad has been signed. It covers matters pertaining to hours of labor, rate of pay and general conditions of employment.

Having a Run on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Between the hours of eleven o'clock a. m. and closing time at night on Jan. 25th, 1901, A. F. Clark, druggist, Glade Springs, Va., sold twelve bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says, "I never handled a medicine that sold better or gave better satisfaction to my customers." This Remedy has been in general use in Virginia for many years, and the people there are well acquainted with its excellent qualities. Many of them have testified to the remarkable cures which it has effected. When you need a good, reliable medicine for a cough or cold, or attack of the grip, use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and you are certain to be more than pleased with the quick cure which it affords. For sale by all druggists.

BUILT HERE TO BEAT THE BRITISH

German Emperor's Reasons For Placing His Order In the United States Explained by Duncan Curry. Plenty of Room on Board For Royal Guests.

From a yachtsman's standpoint the kaiser's new yacht, recently launched at Shooter's island, near New York, is a wonder in her way and is the largest sailing yacht ever constructed in an American shipyard, writes Duncan Curry, the yachting expert, in the New York Journal. She is only exceeded in size by the English schooner Gleniffer, owned by James Coats of Scotland. Many people have wondered why the German emperor had his boat built in America, and many believe he had her built for political reasons.

While this may be true of Prince Henry's visit and the selection of the president's daughter to christen the boat, they had nothing to do with his original order to build the boat, which was simply due to the fact that he knew he could get a far better boat of this type built here than in either Germany or England.

In 1889 A. Cary Smith, one of the best of our naval architects, designed a steel keel schooner for Chester W. Chapin of New York city, which was called the Yampa. She was a wonderful boat in her way, and when she was afterward sold to R. Suydam Palmer he visited Germany in her at the opening of the Kiel canal. There she fell under the eye of the kaiser. He admired her beautiful lines and wonderful seaworthy qualities which, by the way, are features of all boats designed by Cary Smith and immediately opened negotiations for her purchase.

When the emperor finally purchased the yacht, he immediately renamed her the Iduna and presented her to the Empress Frederica, and she has been used as a sort of royal training ship for the imperial family.

Within the past two or three years there has been a big revival of schooner racing in England, where some big two stickers have been built, notably the Gleniffer and Rainbow, which, while of huge size, have not been able to get out of their own way when it came to racing.

The German emperor, who is a great believer in ocean races, last spring decided to build a schooner to meet the new English boats, and, with a view of finding out what was latest and best in the two sticker line, he sent the head naval constructor of the imperial German navy and two of his aids to America to look over the ground. After visiting Herreshoffs and all of the best naval architects in this country they decided that they could not do better than place an order with the designer of the Iduna. And so it came about that Cary Smith got the order to design the new royal yacht, which he in turn had built at Townsend & Downey's yard at Shooter's island.

The yacht is built of steel, with lead deck and bronze furnishings. The main saloon is amidship and occupies the entire width of the vessel. It is twenty feet long, and there will be broad divans along the sides, to say nothing of an open fireplace, a piano and a music room. The dining table will seat twenty-four persons. Aft of the saloon is the emperor's stateroom, which will be furnished with a silver bedstead, a desk and a wardrobe. Adjoining the kaiser's room there are a bath and his valet's room.

These rooms are on the starboard side. On the port side are three smaller staterooms for guests, and aft of these there are a vestibule and a stairway leading to a steel deckhouse, and in the extreme after portion of the yacht there is a woman's cabin, with a chartroom alongside of the steelhouse. Forward are the galley, forecastle and officers' quarters. The entire yacht is circled by a continuous air compartment. Captain Karpff and the Parker brothers, with a crew of twenty men, will take her to England as soon as she is rigged to have her interior fitted out. The new Meteor has an over all length of 160 feet, a waterline length of 120 feet; her beam is 27 feet, her draft 15 feet and her structural depth 18 feet. From the tip of her giant club topsail to her waterline she will tape 150 feet.

The following table will show the spar dimensions of the new yacht:

	Feet.
Length from end of boom to tip of bowsprit	195.5

Coffee Cigarettes Now.

The latest novelty in Paris is the coffee cigarette, made, not from the ground bean, but from the leaf of the tree. It affords a fragrant and, it is claimed, harmless smoke, completely weaning the palate from tobacco and thereby conferring a benefit on the race. The cigarettes are made in different degrees of strength.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Business In General Reported to Be Most Satisfactory

New York, March 1.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Athough the shortest month of the year was further curtailed by two holidays and handicapped by the most severe storms of the winter, industrial and trade results were most satisfactory. The closing week brought a general resumption of activity in lines that suffered from the weather, and preparations for an exceptionally heavy spring business was reported at many points, southern cities alone being backward. Voluntary advances in wages indicate the better position of many mills, while few new controversies were reported. Crop prospects are considered encouraging, insofar as anything can be learned at this time.

Footwear buyers are leaving New England without doing much more than a fair sample business outside special lines. The recent advance in prices proved sufficient to check operations and there is a disposition to await better terms.

Manufacturers are equally firm in their convictions, and there is a prospect of many closed shops after old orders are filled unless new business appears or the raw material weakens considerably.

Makers of cotton goods are very cautious about undertaking future deliveries owing to the uncertainty as to labor and raw material. The wage question will probably reach a settlement without much interruption to work, as the leading concern has offered an advance of 10 percent.

As a rule woolen goods are well maintained and in brisk demand, but new lines of heavy weights are not sought.

Cereals opened the week with a decided reaction. Speculative liquidation carried the decline too far and the customary recovery followed.

Interesting Will Contest

Jersey City, March 1.—The right of Dr. Joseph Muir to continue the contest commenced by his wife, who died recently, over the will of her mother, Mrs. McPherson, was argued yesterday before Judge Blair. Counsel for Yale university, the residuary legatee under the will of Mrs. McPherson, argued that Dr. Muir had no legal right in the action instituted by his wife, who only had a life interest in the estate. Judge Blair reserved decision.

Wrestled Two Hours

New York, March 1.—John Piening, the Graeco-Roman wrestling champion, was given the decision over Carl Norbeck, the champion of Norway, at the London lyceum last night after two hours of wrestling, in which Piening secured one fall. The contest was a magnificent exhibition of skill and endurance, especially on the part of Piening, who weighed 168 pounds to his opponent's 203. The one fall was secured with the bar and body hold.

Turkey Responsible For Christians

Contantinople, March 1.—The Russian ambassador here, I. A. Zinoveiff, has made vigorous representations to the porte concerning the belligerent situation in the neighborhood of Ipek, Albania, (where a tribal fight, during which two Turkish soldiers were killed, occurred Feb. 23), pointing out Turkey's responsibility for the safety of the Christians in Albania.

Two Cups Cut Out

London, March 1.—It is rumored that instead of continuing the practice of the late Queen Victoria of offering annually 100-guinea cups for the competition of the principal yacht clubs of the kingdom, King Edward intends to offer only one cup to the royal yacht squadron. The Field says this would mean a serious loss and remove a great incentive to yacht racing.

Tillman and McLaurin Censured

Washington, March 1.—Senators McLaurin and Tillman of South Carolina were severely censured by the senate yesterday for the sensational personal encounter between them on the floor of the senate last Saturday during the consideration of the Philippine tariff bill. The adoption of the resolution of censure cancels the recent contempt order.

Attempt at Train Wrecking

Cumberland, Md., March 1.—Two tramps were arrested at Deer Park last night, charged with having attempted to wreck a Baltimore and Ohio passenger train by placing a coupler on the track. Their explanation was that they were hungry and wanted to go to jail. The train was about due when the obstruction was discovered.

Celtic at Constantinople

Constantinople, March 1.—Steamer Celtic, having on board a party of American tourists, arrived here yesterday from Piraeus. The Turkish government waived the passport regulations as an act of courtesy to the visitors.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, March 2.
Sun rises—6:20; sets—3:35.
Moon rises—12:51 a. m.
High water—4:45 a. m.; 5:15 p. m.

The centre of the severe storm which struck the Pacific coast Tuesday has reached the upper lake region. The advance of this disturbance has been attended by an area of heavy rain which extended from the Pacific to the Atlantic coasts and from British America to the Mexican border and the Gulf of Mexico and by the lowest barometer readings noted in many years at stations in the interior of the country. This storm probably will drift slowly north of east with a rapid loss of strength. Flood conditions, due to heavy rains, melting snow and the breaking up of ice, prevail generally throughout the greater part of the Appalachian mountain system. Storm warnings are displayed from Hatteras to Eastport. Rain will continue in New England, clearing Sunday.

HANDICAPPED.

The man who started to run a race in chains and fetters would be visibly handicapped. No one would expect him to succeed. The man who runs the race of life when his digestive and nutritive organs are diseased is equally handicapped. In the one case his strength is overweighted, in the other it is undermined. Success demands above all else a sound stomach.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. When this is done food is perfectly digested and assimilated and the body receives strength in the only way in which strength can be given—by the nutrition derived from digested and assimilated food.

"The praise I would like to give your 'Golden Medical Discovery' I cannot utter in words or describe with pen," writes James B. Ambrose, Esq., of 1205½ Mifflin Street, Huntingdon, Pa. "I was taken with what our physicians here said was indigestion. I doctored with the best around here and found no relief. I wrote to you and you sent me a question blank to fill out, and I did so, and you then advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took three bottles and I felt so good that I stopped, being cured. I have no symptoms of gastric trouble or indigestion now."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, sent free on receipt of stamps to cover expense of mailing only. Twenty-one one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A HOIDEN'S VICTORY

[Original.]

In the far west is the little town of Nazareth. The inhabitants are one people. There is one church and one standard of morality. There is, or rather there was, one black sheep, Nellie Deane. Nellie lost her mother when she was ten and her father when she was fourteen. Fortunately for her, her parents were well to do people, and as Nellie was their only child she was provided for. After her father's death she lived with her aunt, a superannuated person, who permitted her to do very much as she pleased. What she pleased was to climb trees, ride a horse bareback and in other ways make a tomboy of herself. When she was eighteen, she was regarded such a blight upon the immaculate town of Nazareth that the deacons in the church directed her aunt to send her away to boarding school. This would have been a permanent relief to Nazareth had the girl stayed at boarding school forever, but unfortunately she returned at twenty, a very beautiful girl, still further removed by education and a mingling with the world from the cast iron morals of the Nazarenes. Before her departure she had acted naturally and unconsciously. After her return she seemed determined to shock the town with malice aforethought.

A meeting of deacons was held and one of their number appointed to confer with the sinner, secure if possible a pledge from her to behave better in future and bring it back to a meeting of the body to be held the next evening. Deacon Brown, a venerable brother, was asked to bear the message, but was obliged to be absent from town. Deacon Perry, the next oldest, was invited, but also declined. Next came Deacon Bradford, thirty-four years old. He was appointed and accepted.

That evening Deacon Bradford called upon Nellie and was shown into the little parlor, where she was sitting in the corner of a sofa, dressed very becomingly, the light arranged to cast a pink glow upon her cheeks, which by no means diminished her attractiveness. Deacon Bradford drew himself together as if for a contest with the archfiend himself.

"I come," said the deacon, "at the request of the deacons of the church to say to you that our community has been greatly shocked since your return to us with certain un-Christian acts on your part which have a tendency to drag down the standard of our morals."

"Be seated, deacon."

Now, the little witch had got wind of this mission and in order to be the better prepared to fight with her own weapons had removed every chair from the room. The deacon was either obliged to sit on the sofa or not at all. After some hesitation he sat down beside her.

"Now, deacon," continued Nellie, "tell me some of the wicked things I have been doing."

"First, on Sunday last, during the sermon on 'Eternal Damnation,' you were continually looking at a friend across the aisle with an expression of disapprobation."

"At the reading of the gospel, mention being made of Samson and Delilah, you irreverently moved your thumb and forefinger to imitate the use of a pair of scissors."

"That was in anticipation of Delilah's cutting off Samson's hair."

"Then on Saturday evening last, after choir meeting, you invited the choir to come to your house to spend the rest of the evening in the unholy occupation of dancing."

"Yes, and most of them came."

"I am required by the deacons to ask you to promise to avoid these sins in future and cease attempting to undermine the morals of our young people."

By this time a very pretty face was near his own, two snapping black eyes were looking into his, and a pair of rosy lips flanked by a dimple on each side were smiling at him.

"Well," said Nellie, "there is just one more way that I want to shock the deacons and that through one of their number."

"How is that?"

"I want to marry one of them."

"Which one?" asked Bradford, astonished.

"Deacon Brown. He's a widower, and I'm dying to be a mother to his children."

"Deacon Brown! He's three times your age!"

"That doesn't matter. I think if I could marry him the other deacons would be horrified, and I'm determined to be his wife."

"Why not select a younger deacon?" said Bradford, halting.

"They wouldn't any of them have me," replied the girl, casting down her eyes.

"Don't say that. Rather than see you married to an old man I would"—

"Oh, Deacon Bradford, how kind you are! But think how you would jeopardize your soul!"

Nellie's taper waist was too tempting to be longer resisted. The deacon's arm stole around it, and her head rested on his shoulder.

* * * * * * *

"Well, Brother Bradford," asked Deacon Jones at the meeting in the evening, "what kind of promise did you succeed in drawing from our erring sister?"

"She has promised to be my wife," replied the deacon sheepishly.

There was so much bitterness in Nazareth at the hoiden carrying off the prize bachelor of the town, for Bradford was considered a great catch, that the young couple removed to a neighboring city, where they lived in peace and very happily. Nellie cured her husband of cant, and the sturdy deacon adored his wife.

SUSAN CICILY SAYD.

FIRST LADY OF CUBA.

Interesting Facts About General Palma's Wife and Family.

A writer in the March Woman's Home Companion gives the following interesting facts about the wife and children of General Palma, the first president of Cuba:

The family of General Palma is an interesting one. He has six children, four boys and two girls. Senora Estrada has borne up remarkably under the strain that the wife of a fighting patriot is always under. She has no fads or fancies. Her world is the four story frame house in Central Valley, N. Y., that has sheltered the family for eighteen years and seen the birth of five of her children. Whether or not there is some sentimentality attached to this latter fact the truth is that Senora Estrada would rather remain in this unpretentious home than occupy the palatial palace in Havana and shine as the first lady of Cuba. She possesses to a great degree those Latin race characteristics devotion to husband and love of offspring. The great social responsibilities that will devolve upon her in the position she is to occupy after May 1 she fears may interfere with her share of bringing up her children as good men and women. The latter are good looking and sturdy children. Jose, the oldest, is nineteen years old. He was born in Honduras and came here when a year old. He is a law student at Columbia university. When at home, Jose acts as secretary for his father. Tomas, Jr., is seventeen and attends a school at Newburg, as does his sister Candelaria, who is fourteen. The three youngest are Carlos and Luz, twins of seven years, and Rafael, six, who the father refers to as his baby.

General Palma became acquainted with Senorita Guardiola, whose father had been president of the republic of Honduras twenty years ago. She was his prettiest daughter, courted and feted and with the proverbial thousand suitors at her feet. Senorita Guardiola was a sympathetic listener to the tales of hardships under the Spanish rule which the brave general narrated. Even today in talking of these tranquil days of his wooing following the years of conflict he quotes, "She loved me for the dangers I had passed, and I loved her that she did pity them."

MRS. R. E. FOSTER'S WORK

What the "Tombs Angel" Did For Women.

No one will know half that the late Mrs. Rebecca Elliott Foster, the "Tombs Angel," did for women. Hers was a work that carried with it many unpleasant experiences, yet she always felt she was amply repaid because of several homes she could point to in New York and other cities that never would have been had it not been for her kindly interest in the young girl who afterward became the respected wife, says the New York Press.

In three cases women desired to name girl babies after her. "Don't," she said. "I am too well known. Perhaps in some years to come the little one might wonder why she was named for me. Some one might associate the name. It might require explanations. It might some time cause the little one to think and ask questions which you couldn't answer truthfully without hurting both yourself and the little one." From her slender income Mrs. Foster gave many a dollar that went where there was no record of it save in the heart of the beneficiary and on the book of the recording angel.

PINGPONG DANCE IN VOGUE

Skill In Picking Up Balls at Silken Net Secures the Favored Partner.

A pingpong dance in which the ladies wear pingpong patches and powdered hair is the latest development of the present mania, according to a special cable dispatch from London to the New York Herald.

The ladies, carrying white balls, with a red number on each, and each gentleman a scarlet ball, with a corresponding figure in white, walk down the ballroom and meet at a silken net. Batting begins. As soon as each dancer secures a ball the numbers are called out, pairing off begins, and the couples glide down the room hand in hand in minuet style.

Australia May Have a Navy.

Australia wants to form an Australasian navy as an auxiliary to the British sea forces. A naval reserve will first be established.

To Prince Henry.

[When Frederick, the father of Henry, was on his deathbed, he wrote, being unable to speak, what may be freely translated as follows: "You have never given me a moment's sorrow. You will be a good husband, as you have been a good son." The remark was addressed to Prince Henry.]

Here's welcome to you, Henry dear,
A prince of noble gentlemen;
We'll drink your health in German beer,
And then we'll drink it back again.
Here's to your lady and your suite
And to the new aristocrat,
The Meteor, of all the fleet—
German-American at that.

Sure we have planned a time for you.
With noise enough to make you mad,
And if you live the revel through
You'll earn your welcome here, my lad.
We can't forget the loving praise
Your dying father gave you, sir,
And so we say, "Luck grace your days"
And then at last, "God save you, sir."

With banners flaunting far and free,
With cannon booming fit to kill,
We greet the friend from over sea
And cheer him with a merry will.
A prince of noble gentlemen,
Where can you find a better one?
Here's welcome to Prince Henry, then,
The man who was a model son!

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BEAR CUBS.

They Cause Mother Bruin a Great Deal of Trouble.

Many hunters of wild animals are great admirers of them and rarely if ever kill a mother save in self defense, though they often catch if they can the little ones and care for them. Bear cubs are a great deal of trouble for their mother, because they will insist on straying away into places where she must often risk her life for their sakes.

Recently a hunter while on a pleasure tour through the Sierra Nevada mountains of southern California, becoming weary from climbing over rocks and logs, sat down to rest in a grove of pine. He had not been sitting there more than a few minutes when a commotion began in the bushes a few yards in advance. Suddenly out came two cute little black bear cubs. Their shiny coats were rather disordered by their conduct, for they were racing and tussling and biting each other, rolling over and over. Having watched their antics for awhile, the hunter decided to change the game, so, picking up a small stick, with a whoop he flung it at them. Immediately they took to their heels, uttering sharp cries as they ran.

To the hunter's consternation, however, from the bushes to his right stepped Mother Bear, not in the best of humor, for she had heard her babes' cries. Advancing with mane up and mouth wide open, she came to the log lying between her and the hunter. Placing her front feet on the log, she did some very fierce growling. Not wishing to receive any harm and also not wishing to kill Mother Bear, the hunter raised his rifle to his shoulder and replied to the animal's growlings by telling her to advance no farther and he would do her no harm. Between her threats Mother Bear kept looking for the cubs. Seeing them no more, she uttered a fiercer growl than ever before and followed after them. She knew they would escape to safety in a short time, as she had probably taught them to do in case of danger.

Jumbo and I.

Jumbo and I have the greatest of fun—
We're together each day when it's hardly begun.
And we play and we play till the day is all done.

Dear Jumbo sits by me as quiet as "Hush!"
But when I have finished he makes a mad rush.

THE PLAYMATES.

And then there's no peace in the family at all
Till Jumbo and I have a mad game of ball.
And when we are through we're so tired we just fall.

Old Jumbo and I had our pictures drawn once
By a man who's an artist—I call him a dunce.
For who cares for backs; I always like fronts!

—Philadelphia Times.

The Guinea Pig.

A small boy who got a present of a guinea pig was boasting to his playmates about it, and they caught him with a "sell" about the little animal.

He felt so bad about it that he started in turn to "sell" some one else. His father was the victim.

"Did you know, papa, that if you hold a guinea pig by the tail its eyes will drop out?"

His father laughed outright.

"Why, who in wonder told you such stuff, Louis?"

"The boys all say that," answered Louis, sober as a judge, "and it's so; yes, sir."

"Oh, nonsense!" said his father, still laughing.

"Well, you go to the cage and hold one up, and you'll see."

Just to humor the boy the father went out. In a moment he came back looking—well, looking just like a man that's been badly sold.

"The little rascal got me that time," he remarked to a friend.

"But I don't see the point," said the friend.

"Don't you?"

"No."

"Well, guinea pigs have no tails."—Topeka Capital.

Flower In a Soap Bubble.

To make a flower inside a soap bubble pour a soap solution into a plate or tray until the bottom is covered with liquid to the depth of one-eighth of an inch. In the center of the tray place a water lily or other flower and over this a tin funnel.

Then blow gently through the funnel while you are slowly lifting it at the same time. Continue blowing until you make quite a large film and then proceed to disengage the funnel, after having first turned it at right angles.

Flowers, spinning tops and other objects may be enveloped in this way. This trick is one which always mystifies and delights.

DRESS SUITS IN GRAY.

Radical Departure In Evening Wear Promised Next Summer.

The America of the twentieth century has original ideas concerning the future of men's dress for evening wear. The coming summer is to see a striking innovation, according to the New York Times, which may lead to others still more radical. This is nothing more or less than the substitution of dark gray cassimere for the black material of the same texture which has been used exclusively hitherto in the making of men's suits for evening wear.

The leading New York makers of men's clothes have had this matter under consideration for some months, believing that the time was almost ripe and considering that the utility of a suit of some sober, dignified color other than black would appeal to the common sense of summer residents at the fashionable resorts particularly.

"Of course we do not expect every one will change from black to gray at once. We have had several orders for dinner suits in the new style, but many of our best customers in renewing their Tuxedo garments for the coming season have preferred to stick to the black of seasons past.

"It is probable that the gray suits will first be seen early in the Newport season, and we shall then be in a better position to judge whether the wearing of them is to be regarded as a fad or whether the innovation may be expected to become a permanent change in fashionable evening dress and steadily grow in popularity.

"The lines of the gray Tuxedo will follow those of the black for the present season, which remain unchanged from last year. The silk facings will extend clear to the edges, with a little binding of braid to match. The vest may be of gray, double breasted, or it may be of white, with white or gilt buttons, these being matters in which latitude is allowed for individual tastes, while the approval of fashion and correct style is given to each alike."

JEROME FEAZED THE DRIVER

District Attorney of New York Stopped a Truckman's Cruelty.

District Attorney Jerome of New York related with keen enjoyment an experience he had recently with a truck driver whom he saw beating his horse, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. The man was perched high up on his seat and was raining blows upon the animal that either could or would not try to budge the wagon.

"Horse is balky," replied the driver indifferently.

"Well, if you get down on the ground your horse won't have quite so big a weight to start," reasoned Mr. Jerome.

The man stopped using the whip and got down on the ground.

"Now, wait about five minutes, and your horse will pull all right," said Mr. Jerome, turning to continue on his way.

"Hold on!" said the driver. "Aren't you going to wait and see if your theory will work?"

Mr. Jerome laughed, and the man continued, "Say, what would you have done if I hadn't got down off me seat?"

"I'd have called a policeman and had you arrested," replied Mr. Jerome.

"Who are you?" demanded the truck driver, with a sneer.

"I am the district attorney of this county."

"Gee!" ejaculated the other, dropping his whip in the snow. "Are you Jerome?"

"That's my name."

As the district attorney walked off along the street an interested bystander joined him, with a grin.

"Say," he said, "that was a great bluff you chucked at that fellow."

"What bluff?" asked the district attorney.

"About you being Jerome. Say, he fell to it all right, didn't he?"

New Postal Cards.

A new one cent postal card is now being printed at the bureau of engraving and printing in Washington, and when the first issue of 4,000,000 has been counted and bundled the new card will be placed on sale, says the Philadelphia Press. Its distinctive feature is that the new card contains a vignette of President McKinley in lieu of President Jefferson's portrait.

Bacteria In Dust Storms.

From a gelatin plate exposed one second to a dust storm in the Pretoria valley, South Africa, thousands of colonies of bacteria were developed. It is believed that fevers are spread in this way, and the possible distribution of tropical epidemics is appalling.

"The Cry of the Children."

In our very dreams we're haunted by a net and whizzing ball,
And our backs are nearly breaking, and our youthful limbs are sore,
For we're playing, playing pingpong, which our parents both adore.

We can recollect our feelings (which of late have had such shocks)
When our father read the paper and our mother darned the socks,
But you can't respect your father when he's groveling on the floor
Or is glaring at your mother if she doesn't know the score!

Well we'll try to bear our burden, and we'll never talk of "fads"
Nor remark on "modern mothers" or "the latest thing in dads,"
But we'll never know what peace is till we land upon that shore

Castle Square Theatre.

The three act comedy "Sealed Instructions" makes the offering at the Castle Square Theatre the coming week, this being the first Boston production of the play. It was very successful at the Madison Square Theatre, New York, fifteen years ago, when its authoress Mrs. J. Campbell Verplanck was commended for having written the best comedy, by an American, in a generation. The sealed instructions, which gave the title to the piece, are sent by the English government to their representative in Paris. They concern the war in Egypt. Their disappearance from a safe, the detection of the thief and this man's atonement for his crime, are the leading incidents of this part of the plot. A worldly, spendthrift son and husband, a wife who is a coquette, an English father and a most charming ingenue daughter, a secretary who makes love to the wife, and a governess who loves the secretary and turns out to be a daughter of the old lord's older son, are the principal persons. The leading characters have been assigned as follows: Lord Dorchester, J. L. Seeley; Capt. Lionel Haughton, John Craig; Guy Dunbar, Charles Mackay; Gerald Dunbar, James A. Keane; Benton, John T. Craven; Mrs. Haughton, Eva Taylor; Ada Haughton, Mary Saunders; Katherine Ray, Marian A. Chapman, Suzanne, Maye Louise Aigen. "Sealed Instructions" will be given a single week and followed by a production of "Colleen Bawn." The usual distribution of chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

BRAINTREE.

Braintree's Board of Health are active and doing all in their power to guard against the spread of smallpox. Every pupil in the public schools except those whose health will not permit, is required to be vaccinated.

The smoke talk and entertainment given by the members of Nabanton Tribe I. O. R. M., in I. O. O. F. hall, Monday evening was a grand success. Great Sachem Friend from the Great Council of Massachusetts gave a long talk on the good of the order which was not only entertaining but instructive. Deputy Great Sachems Emerson and Cawthrae were present from Pequot Tribe of Brockton. The Dailey Brothers of Holbrook were present and rendered several of their choice selections, vocal and instrumental. Corn and venison were served at the 10th sun. During the banquet hour the gathering was highly entertained by the Levangie Brothers with their fine graphophone. It was voted by Nabanton tribe to hold another smoke talk the last of March.

On account of the rain and uncertain walking only twenty guests gathered in the South Congregational chapel Wednesday evening to enjoy the bountiful supper prepared by the ladies of the Good Will society.

Tuesday evening next Rebekah lodge will go to Brockton by special electric from South Braintree at 6.15.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Cole are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a little son.

The next meeting of the J. P. S. A. will be held with Mr. and Mrs. Doane, Tuesday evening.

There are two cases of smallpox on Factory hill, Mrs. John DeYoung and Mr. John DeCoste. All other cases mentioned up to last night were simply rumors.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hamblett of Lowell street, are rejoicing over a little daughter who came to them Wednesday night.

The All Souls' church social will be held Friday evening, March 14th, in Cochato hall. Mr. Anderson will talk about the Floating Hospital. Light refreshments will be served.

The Middle street schoolhouse, which has been used but little the past five year, has been moved to the rear of the almshouse by order of the Board of Selectmen. It will be made into a pest house at once. When the smallpox epidemic is over the dwelling will be used for wandering Willies.

Miss Helen M. Cole will give in Cochato hall next Sunday evening, March 2d, at eight o'clock "Selections from the Old and New Testaments, illustrating the growth of the idea of the Fatherhood of God, with explanatory comment." All are cordially invited to these services.

Mrs. Chas. F. Libbie, Jr., gave a lecture before the School Teachers association of Salem last Thursday at the Council rooms, City Hall. Over 100 teachers were present and expressed a desire for Mrs. Libbie to take charge of a class there in sight reading and singing. A trial lesson will be given this month.

OUR NEW WARSHIPS.

Heretofore the American naval constructors who have been responsible for the speed, the stanchness, the safety and the fighting power of our warships have been educated abroad, for the simple reason that there were no American schools to which they might go for a proper training. With this year, however, naval cadets intended for the construction corps are being sent from Annapolis to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in Boston.

The department of naval architecture at the institute has made a reputation for itself in the last few years, and the coming of the naval cadets has correspondingly broadened and strengthened it. Thus, by permission of the Danish government, a European naval officer of distinction, Commander William Hovgaard of the royal Danish navy, has joined the department as professor of naval design, with a special eye to the requirements of the Annapolis cadets. Moreover, Commander Hovgaard has been recently expressing himself very interestingly on American naval matters. In particular he has a good word to say for our new battleships and approves the present tendency in this country to make such vessels larger and more powerful.

But, he adds, "with the development of the battleship as a very costly and powerful unit there is an even greater demand for an auxiliary fleet of cruisers which shall keep in constant touch with an enemy and allow the heavyweight fighters to choose their battleground. The government that can afford to build first class seagoing battle ships can best afford to surround such expensive structures with a swarm of lighter vessels."

Commander Hovgaard's opinion of the submarine boat will be even more interesting to most readers.

"As the development of the battleship does not render the auxiliary craft unnecessary," he says, "so the development of an entirely new weapon, the submarine boat, does not make the battleship any less important. It is true that there has been a popular impression that it was useless to build costly battleships which could be completely destroyed by comparatively inexpensive submarine boats, but this opinion, it seems to me, is based on a lack of knowledge of the real limitations of the submarine boat. As far as we have learned, the best power for submarine propulsion is electricity, and with this power we are limited to a total radius of action of about fifty miles—that is, the submarine boat can do effective patrol service at a distance of ten to twenty miles from shore and still be able to return, which makes it a useful weapon in keeping a blockading squadron out of range. In twenty-five years no essential improvement as regards weight and bulk has been made in the storage of electric energy, and until an improvement is made in this respect or some radically new means of power is discovered submarine boats will be available only for the defense of ports and landlocked harbors and cannot at all affect the importance of the seagoing battleship."

GASTRONOMIC MARVEL.

Charles Schwab's Monster Pudding Will Take Twenty Hours to Boil.

The twenty-five hundred dollar beefsteak pudding which Charles M. Schwab ordered of the "Ancient Cheshire Cheese" in Fleet street, London, will be ready for shipment as soon as the confirmatory order has been received. The cost of the pudding includes Proprietor Moore's traveling expenses to the United States. The pudding will consist of 100 larks, 100 kidneys, 100 oysters, one for each of the hundred millionaires who, it is reported, Schwab has invited to dine, says the New York Journal. It takes twenty hours to boil the "Cheshire cheese" puddings. Mr. Schwab's will be boiled ten hours in London and another ten preparatory to being served in the United States.

Many visitors to the "Cheshire" are clamoring to see the famous millionaire's special pudding.

Novel Philippine Relic.

A unique relic of Lieutenant Gillmore's captivity and rescue in the Philippines was shown by General Eugene Griffin at the recent dinner of the officers of the First regiment of volunteer engineers, Spanish war veterans, says the New York Tribune. This was the American flag which was made by the sailors in Lieutenant Gillmore's party out of patches and strips of their clothing. The rescue party commanded by Colonel Hare made a brilliant march, lasting over five weeks, and surmounted difficult obstacles in their progress. They found Lieutenant Gillmore and his men abandoned, without food or arms, by the insurgents in the wildest part of Luzon, among the head hunters, where their fate would have been in doubt only for a few hours if the rescue party had not arrived so opportunely. In spite of the fact that all of them were half naked, they had sacrificed enough clothing to make up a fair substitute for the regular stars and stripes.

The Monogram Stocking.

The very latest in hosiery is the monogram stocking, says the March Woman's Home Companion. The stocking is preferably black, in lisle thread or silk. In the front just above the ankle is a diamond shaped inset of black net, and upon this the monogram is embroidered. The letters may be worked in black silk or in whatever color the wearer may choose. The rest of the stocking is perfectly plain.

OUR NATIONAL EMBLEM

Indian Corn Advocated as a Fitting Symbol.

STRONG CLAIMS PRESENTED.

Mrs. George Cabot Ward Suggests That the Federation of Women In America Should Work For Its Adoption—Says Some Action Should Be Taken Before Thanksgiving.

"The time is ripe, I think, for the United States to adopt a national emblem, and the history of our country points to the Indian corn, or maize, as entitled to that distinction," said Mrs. George Cabot Ward the other day to a reporter of the New York Tribune in discussing the claims of various flowers that have been mentioned in this connection.

"The reasons for choosing the corn are so final that it seems to me impossible that any one who has heard them should consider for a moment a proposition to adopt a flower, however beautiful," continued Mrs. Ward. "Corn formed the principal article of food for the early settlers, and but for it they would have died of starvation. It is a divine gift, for God never gave it to any other country, this being the only one to which it is indigenous. Although it will grow anywhere, it is distinctively of American origin and has doubtless grown here for ages."

Flowers, Mrs. Ward thought, might be beautiful and appropriate for state emblems in the localities where they have a special significance in connection with the history of the state, but no flower, she said, could bring forward claims that would entitle it to become national in its symbolism. One of the strongest points advanced in favor of the corn is that it can be grown with equal facility in all portions of the United States.

"It grows from ocean to ocean and from the lakes to the gulf," said Mrs. Ward in this connection. "It is said that only persons who have visited the south and the west can realize what a powerful factor it is in our civilization, nourishing as it does in both hot and cold climates. The harvests of the corn are the glory of our country.

"Another point in its favor as compared with any flower is that our great country should have a life sustaining emblem. People come here from every country in the world to earn their living, and think of the benefit it is to the poor, for as a food it is within the reach of all."

In Plymouth the people have a custom by which they commemorate the sufferings of the pilgrims and at the same time acknowledge their debt of gratitude to the corn. When Forefathers' day is observed, they hold a dinner, and each guest finds laid beside his plate a few grains of the parched corn to which the first settlers owed so much.

Advocates of the Indian corn feel assured that it will only be a matter of time before its claims are acknowledged. In nutriment it is ranked next to wheat and rice. The early settlers subsisted on it, with the occasional addition of salt pork. Mush and milk was considered a wholesome diet, and samp was looked upon as a delicacy. The coarse cornmeal required only the addition of water and salt to be baked into a light and sweet tasting bread.

A recent speaker before the National Society of New England Women referred with the greatest enthusiasm to the homely fare of those days, saying that samp cooked as our grandmothers used to prepare it was a dish which for fine flavor and delicacy could not be exceeded by the cooks of today.

The Pueblos esteemed corn as the most valuable gift from the gods, and quaint legends are connected with their history of its origin. Longfellow in "The Song of Hiawatha" refers to it as "this new gift of the Great Spirit." Whittier in "The Corn Song" extols its beauty and usefulness, and other poets have written in its praise.

To decoration on marble, bronze or any metal it is especially well adapted, say those who have seen it put to this use. It appears sculptured on several pillars of our national capitol, and its sharply defined outlines would, it is said, reproduce effectively on our currency.

Mrs. Ward expressed the conviction that if women would agitate its adoption Indian corn would in a short time become the national emblem.

"The matter has been allowed to drift too long," said Mrs. Ward. "The women of America should arouse to their duty in this matter and lend their influence to have some definite steps taken. The National Society of New England Women has given the Indian corn a conspicuous place on its badge, and I am glad to know that the organization appreciates its importance.

"I understand that at the biennial to be held in Los Angeles this spring clubwomen from all over the United States will be represented. There could be no better opportunity than that to bring the matter before women from every part of the United States, and any action they might take would attract widespread attention. Some steps should be taken before next Thanksgiving day, and when we give thanks for the blessings of the year the Indian corn should be acknowledged as one of the greatest of these."

Houseboat Hotel.

A company is about to open a houseboat hotel at Abbazia, on the Adriatic. The floating hotel, according to the Indianapolis News, will have accommodations for 100 guests. It is also to be seaworthy, so that the visitor can be treated to a trip on the Adriatic from time to time.

THE PRINCE IS PLEASED

At Hearty Reception He Gets From Southerners.

VISITS LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN

Where He Views Famous Battlefield and Hears the Story of the Campaign From the Lips of an Old Veteran—Presented With "Wet Goods"

Indianapolis, March 3.—Prince Henry went up Lookout Mountain yesterday and after viewing the ground where the Union and Confederate armies met in conflict and hearing afresh the story of the battles, resumed his journey to the north and west. Leaving Chattanooga his train ran through a corner of Alabama and then turning to the north hurried across Tennessee, with a short stop at Nashville, through Kentucky, with brief stays at Louisville and Bowling Green, and up into Indiana to another brief halt at Indianapolis, where the course was changed to the westward again, on the reach for St. Louis.

His reception in the south was hospitable and demonstrative. The negroes manifested great curiosity as to the prince and they interested and amused him. He had an opportunity to hear them sing in Nashville and was greatly pleased at the experience.

There was a great crowd at Chattanooga and the people presented the prince with a handsome souvenir of his visit. Nashville also made a demonstration of friendliness, as did Louisville and Indianapolis. At every station along the route the people gathered to salute him with cheers. There was much enthusiasm over Admiral Evans as well. Brief though it was, Prince Henry was delighted with his southern tour, and as he was leaving Nashville he said:

"The people have been very kind to me. Everywhere they have received me in the kindliest manner and I very deeply appreciate it. I wish they might all know how thankful I am.

When the prince reached the crest of Lookout Mountain the sun broke through the clouds and for a short time the view was excellent. General Boynton, who participated in the Chattanooga operations with Sherman's army, related to the prince the story of the campaign. While the party was at Rock Point, a snow squall blew up and the picture changed in a moment. Dark clouds of the storm rolled in around the peaks, the sky blackened and snow began falling. Through the storm the recital went on. The young prince and the grey-haired veteran who talked of a day nearly 40 years gone, surrounded by the uniformed staff, made an impressive group.

The prince had a day of sightseeing and when not otherwise engaged, kept up an animated line of questioning and comment with Admiral Evans and those around him. The reception that he got at Bowling Green pleased him fully as much as the larger ones. Judge Simms, a venerable citizen, mounted the rear platform of the Columbia and, in the name of Kentucky, presented the prince with some fine old peach brandy and some whisky. The prince gravely accepted the gift and faithfully promised the judge that he would drink some of it the first time he got thirsty. It was a sentiment that pleased the judge and his fellow citizens, and they cheered enthusiastically as the prince from the moving train waved them farewell.

Prince Henry traversed the states of Maryland, Pennsylvania and Ohio Saturday and at night his special train sped through Kentucky into Tennessee with the battlefields around Chattanooga as its final southern goal. He stopped for formal receptions at Altoona, Pittsburg, Columbus and Cincinnati, but the welcome extended to him was not limited to those places. Everywhere along the line after daylight came, and until long after darkness, the people gathered at the stations to cheer him as he travelled. The storm which swelled the rivers to the danger point had passed away and he saw three states in bright sunlight. He saw a stretch of 50 miles of the Allegheny mountains from the cab of an engine and most of it was down grade at a speed that thrilled him. The train had lost two hours at Portage by reason of a wreck to the westward of that place and when the special was afforded clear track again, an attempt was made to win back some of the time which had been lost. At times the swaying engine was running 60 miles an hour and when the prince left the cab he was as grimy as the engineer.

Mrs. C. E. VanDeusen, of Kilbourn, Wis., was afflicted with stomach trouble and constipation for a long time. She says, "I have tried many preparations but none have done me the good that Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have." These Tablets are for sale at all drug stores. Price, 25 cents.

MAN OF VICIOUS TEMPER

Commits Assault Upon an Old Man Which May Prove Fatal

Fall River, Mass., March 3.—At the Fall River hospital James Wallace, 70 years old, is lying in a critical condition, suffering from concussion of the brain, hemorrhage of the brain and numerous scalp and body injuries as the result of a vicious assault made upon him by William Hamilton, 35. Hamilton is under arrest.

Hamilton and Wallace were, until Saturday night close friends and neighbors. Saturday evening Wallace left his home to call upon Hamilton, and upon his arrival found that Hamilton was absent, but was invited by Mrs. Hamilton to wait. He had been seated but a short time when Hamilton burst into the room, swearing loudly. No sooner had he opened the door than he started to assault his wife by kicking her. This is said to have been a common occurrence, and Hamilton is now on probation for assault and battery on his wife. Mrs. Hamilton evaded his kicks, and, seizing her baby, she went to the home of Wallace and told the latter's wife of the trouble, but as both women thought that on account of the friendship between the two men they would not have much trouble, they took no steps to investigate.

After the departure of his wife, Hamilton turned on the old man, and the commotion attracting the attention of neighbors, the police were called. When they arrived Hamilton had gone, but they found Wallace on the floor covered with blood from his numerous wounds and unconscious. About three hours after the assault, while the police were still on the scene, Hamilton returned.

When accused of the assault, he replied: "I'm glad I did it; I wish I'd killed him." Hamilton was thereupon arrested. Hospital authorities state that the chances are very slight for Wallace's recovery.

Crew Had Three Days of Torture

Palm Beach, Fla., March 3.—A party of 10 shipwrecked sailors were landed at Palm Beach yesterday from the El Cid, which picked them up about 200 miles east of Savannah. They were from the schooner B. R. Woodside, bound from Fernandina to St. John, P. R., with a cargo of lumber. The officers and crew of the Woodside had lashed themselves to the after deckhouse and remained there with heavy seas breaking over them for three days, when their signals were seen by the El Cid. The schooner was going to pieces when the men were taken off.

Long Suffering Ended

Burlington, Vt., March 3.—Captain Francis Lowry died yesterday after long suffering from paralysis, due to an accident while he was serving in the navy in 1845. He was on a steam vessel at the time carbonic acid was generated while experiments were in progress, during which two men were killed and others injured. Carbonic gas affected Captain Lowry so that paralysis appeared in the throat and limbs. He was retired in 1855 after 25 years' service.

Wahabi Dynasty Active

Bombay, March 3.—Abdul Azib Ben Feysul, a descendant of the old Wahabi ameers, with an army of 2000 men, has captured the city of E'Riad, in Central Arabia. Feysul entered the city by strategem at night and killed the governor of E'Riad and 30 of his retainers. The garrison of the city then surrendered. It is believed that the Wahabi dynasty is endeavoring to regain its supremacy.

Creditors Will Lose Heavily

Omaha, March 3.—W. K. Potter, receiver of the Omaha Loan and Trust company, has filed his first report with the clerk of the district court. The report states that the liabilities are $4,190,335. The assets, as shown by the books, foot up the same figures, but it is conceded that the capital stock of $500,000 will be a total loss and that creditors will suffer a heavy shrinkage.

Rhodes In Poor Health

London, March 3.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Cape Town says that the health of Cecil Rhodes is causing uneasiness. Rhodes intends to take a few weeks of complete rest at his country estate.

Riotous Doings In Italy

Rome, March 3.—The inhabitants of Cassano yesterday attacked and burned the municipal buildings of their town. The troops re-established order. Several persons were wounded in the conflict.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER II.

THE door of the imperial cabinet was again opened, and General Kissoff was announced.

"The courier?" inquired the czar eagerly.

"He is here, sire," replied General Kissoff.

"Have you found a fitting man?"

"I will answer for him to your majesty."

"Has he been in the service of the palace?"

"Yes, sire."

"You know him?"

"Personally, and at various times he has fulfilled difficult missions with success."

"Abroad?"

"In Siberia itself."

"Where does he come from?"

"From Omsk. He is a Siberian."

"Has he coolness, intelligence, courage?"

"Yes, sire; he has all the qualities necessary to succeed even where others might possibly fail."

"What is his age?"

"Thirty."

"Is he strong and vigorous?"

"Sire, he can bear cold, hunger, thirst, fatigue, to the very last extremities."

"He must have a frame of iron."

"Sire, he has."

"And a heart?"

"A heart of gold."

"His name?"

"Michael Strogoff."

"Is he ready to set out?"

"He awaits your majesty's orders in the guardroom."

"Let him come in," said the czar.

Michael Strogoff was a tall, vigorous, broad shouldered, deep chested man. His powerful head possessed the fine features of the Caucasian race. His well knit frame seemed built for the performance of feats of strength. It would have been a difficult task to move such a man against his will, for when his feet were once planted on the ground it was as if they had taken root. As he doffed his Muscovite cap locks of thick curly hair fell over his broad, massive forehead. When his ordinarily pale face became at all flushed, it arose solely from a more rapid action of the heart, under the influence of a quicker circulation. His eyes of a deep blue looked with a clear, frank, firm gaze.

The slightly contracted eyebrows indicated lofty heroism—"the hero's cool courage," according to the definition of the physiologist. He possessed a fine nose, with large nostrils, and a well shaped mouth, with the slightly projecting lips which denote a generous and noble heart.

Michael Strogoff had the temperament of a man of action, who does not bite his nails or scratch his head in doubt and indecision. Sparing of gestures as of words, he always stood motionless like a soldier before his superior, but when he moved his step showed a firmness, a freedom of movement, which proved the confidence and vivacity of his mind.

Michael Strogoff wore a handsome military uniform, something resembling that of a light cavalry officer in the field—boots, spurs, half tightly fitting trousers, brown pelisse, trimmed with fur and ornamented with yellow braid. On his breast glittered a cross and medals.

Michael Strogoff belonged to the special corps of the czar's couriers, ranking as an officer among those picked men. His most discernible characteristic—particularly in his walk, his face, in the whole man, and which the czar perceived at a glance—was that he was a "fulfiller of orders." He therefore possessed one of the most serviceable qualities in Russia—one which the celebrated novelist Turgeneff says "will lead to the highest positions in the Muscovite empire."

In short, if any one could accomplish this journey from Moscow to Irkutsk across the rebellious country, surmount obstacles and brave perils of all sorts, Michael Strogoff was the man.

A circumstance especially favorable to the [illegible] his plans was that he was thoroughly acquainted with the country which he was about to traverse and understood its different dialects, not only from having traveled there before, but because he was of Siberian origin.

When he was fourteen, Michael Strogoff had killed his first bear quite alone. That was nothing. But after stripping it he dragged the gigantic animal's skin to his father's house, many versts distant, thus exhibiting remarkable strength in a boy so young.

Gifted with marvelous acuteness, when every object was hidden in mist or even in higher latitudes, where the polar night is prolonged for many days, he could find his way when others would have had no idea whither to direct their steps. He had learned to read almost imperceptible signs, the forms of icicles, the appearance of the small branches of trees, mists rising far away on the horizon, vague sounds in the air, distant reports, the flight of birds through the foggy atmosphere—a thousand circumstances which are so many words to those who can decipher them. Moreover, tempered by snow like a Damascus blade in the waters of Syria, he had a frame of iron, as General Kissoff had said, and, what was no less true, a heart of gold.

The only sentiment of love felt by Michael Strogoff was that which he entertained for his mother, the aged Marfa, who could never be induced to leave the house of the Strogoffs at Omsk, on the banks of the Istish, where the old huntsman and she had lived so long together. When her son left her, he went away with a full heart, but promising to come and see her whenever he could possibly do so, and this promise he had always religiously kept.

When Michael was twenty, it was decided that he should enter the personal service of the emperor of Russia, in the corps of the couriers of the czar. The hardy, intelligent, zealous, well conducted young Siberian first distinguished himself especially in a journey to the Caucasus, through the midst of a difficult country, ravaged by some restless successors of Schamyl; then, later, in an important mission to Petrepolowski, in Kamchatka, the extreme limit of Asiatic Russia. During these long journeys he displayed such marvelous coolness, prudence and courage as to gain him the approbation and protection of his chief, who rapidly advanced him in his profession.

The furloughs which were his due

Good Afternoon.

Evidently there is politics in the gas question at the State House as well as at Quincy.

The taxpayers of Quincy while regretting the fact that the parkway to the Blue Hills will not be built this year, appreciate the influence of Governor Crane against reckless expenditures and for economy in the administration of State affairs. Many would like to see it spread through the counties and cities of the State. All are living beyond their means, and accumulating debt which must be paid with interest, and which promises to seriously handicap the cities and the taxpayers. It is because of the excellent business administration of Gov. Crane that many would like to see him elected for a fourth term. This has been unusual of late, but John Hancock served from 1780 to 1785 and again from 1787 to 1793, and others have served nearly as long.

In the death of Col. Parker, the first superintendent of schools of Quincy, educators will feel a personal loss, for through life his energies have been devoted persistently to education in its fullest and highest sense, and he has been recognized as a master in the profession of "school teaching." Of bright cheery disposition, of high integrity and unfaltering patriotism, he made many friends everywhere. In Quincy, he was our first superintendent of schools and it is owing to him that Quincy schools became famous all over the country. The friends here that knew him best and loved him will sorrow deeply to know that he has passed on. He leaves no immediate family.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ There is no public demand for any Greater Boston scheme. It would merely raise Boston's standing in the list of the great cities of the land, and would give some of the professional politicians a little more swing, and a few more opportunities to make something. There would be no better government than is the case now, and the chances are it would not be so good. The nearer government is kept to the people governed, the better for the people. Government in Boston for towns ten miles away would be more or less of a farce, and the people of the real city would allow the suburbanites just as little as possible, and would exact as much as they could get in return.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ Chief Wadlin of the Massachusetts bureau of labor statistics told the Congregational ministers of Boston, Monday, that in his judgement it was inevitable that all workingmen would sooner or later come into the unions, but it is to be noted that his view of the labor union was not fixed upon the organization which exists solely for the purpose of antagonizing employing capital. He believes in the labor union as a means for representing labor in the settlement of the industrial problem jointly with the capital union representing the employing interest, and looks to the joint attempt, such has been made in the Civic Federation committee, as full of promise. The labor union of the future is destined to exert great power, but to accomplish its destiny it must do more in the direction of peace and less in the direction of war.—Haverhill Gazette.

COL. F. W. PARKER.

Quincy's First Superintendent Dead.

After a Three Weeks' Illness.

Was Here in 1875 and Gave Our Schools National Renown.

A dispatch from Chicago announces the death Sunday at Pass Christian, Miss., of Col. Francis W. Parker, M. A., LL. D., director of the School of Education, an institution affiliated with the Chicago University. Col. Parker has been in poor health for some time and three weeks ago left Chicago for the south.

Col. Parker was the first superintendent of the public schools of Quincy from April 1875 to April 1880, was the guest of honor at the 25th celebration of his coming, at Quincy in 1900.

Francis Wayland Parker was born in Bedford, N. H., Oct. 9, 1837, of good old Colonial stock, many of his ancestors having been ministers and teachers. Although he entered school at three years of age it is reported that he could read before he went to school. At the age of eight he was in the academy of his native village, but soon left school and was "bound out," and for five or six years worked on a farm, attending school only a few weeks each winter. His father, a cabinet maker, had died when he was six years of age. At 13 he entered the Mt. Vernon (N. H.) academy, and three years later the Hopkinton academy, and during that winter began teaching at Boscawon, now Webster.

He continued to attend school, work on the farm and teach in the neighborhood until 21 years old, and then accepted a principalship at Carrollton, Ill., where he met with success.

At the outbreak of the war he enlisted as a private but went to the front as a first lieutenant, and was a captain within a year. He was in several of the great battles and in 1864 while in command of a brigade was severely wounded. He recovered, and after a furlough returned and was at Greensburg, N. C., when Lee surrendered. He was afterward made brevet colonel.

He resumed teaching his chosen profession and was principal at Manchester, N. H., and Dayton, Ohio, and in 1871 he was assistant superintendent in the latter city, but resigned to go abroad for observation and study.

It was upon his return from Europe in 1875 that Col. Parker was elected as the first superintendent of the public schools of Quincy, and began work April 20. In those days superintendents were an exception, especially in towns, and largely an experiment. With the methods introduced by Col. Parker it was certainly an experiment, and there was comment pro and con. He always claimed he was introducing nothing new, but it was new to Quincy, to New England and to the country, and Quincy attracted educators from all parts of the United States. As was said in 1900, at the 25th anniversary, it was the renaissance of education.

From Quincy, in 1880, Col. Parker became a supervisor of the schools of Boston. Then he became in 1883 principal of the Cook County Normal school near Chicago, and after considerable opposition came out on top.

Last year he was selected as the head of Mrs. Emmons Blaine's endowed school of pedagogy, at Chicago and was busy in establishing the school.

Col. Parker was twice married. His first wife died in Minneapolis in 1871, before he came to Quincy. His second wife was Mrs. M. Frank Stuart, a leading exponent of the Delsarte system of expression, who died recently. Col. Parker, we believe, leaves no descendants. He was, however, the author of many works including "Talks on Teaching," "Practical Teacher," "How to Study Geography," "Outlines in Geography," "Talks on Pedagogies," etc., and will hold a place as an educator for many years.

Two step-daughters, Mrs. Rolfe of Cambridge and Mrs. Sheppard of Brookline, will mourn his death.

Mrs. L. M. Pratt.

Mrs. Nellie Davis, wife of Mr. Lester M. Pratt, one of Quincy's well known business men, passed away Sunday at her home on Franklin street after a brief illness. Mrs. Pratt was a lady of genial disposition whom it was a pleasure to meet and she possessed a large circle of friends who deeply mourn her death. She was 40 years of age, and leaves a son and daughter as well as a husband.

THE GAS PROBLEM.

Said to be "Between the Devil and Deep sea."

There are circumstances which give encouragement to the Quincy gas petitioners at the State House, and they are looking for a favorable report. However, the hearing will be reopened tomorrow morning and there may be new developments.

"Practical Politics" in its issue of March 1 contributed an interesting chapter under the caption "Between the devil and the deep sea," viz:

"The public lighting committee, which, as a whole, became very indignant, a little while ago, when it learned that Quincy people had waited 14 months for a finding from the board of gas commissioners on the price of gas in that municipality, has lost some of its ardor. Furthermore, it has reopened the hearing on the bill which Sen. Sprague had introduced against the company.

This sudden change of heart came about in a peculiar way, as did the reopening of the case.

"The inside facts are that when the committee began to cry about the delay which the commissioners had made, it was generally supposed that there were three men in the boat, and that the three were the commissioners.

"The ambitious minded who went downstairs to talk it over made a discovery, however. They found that the board some time ago reached an opinion on the case, but that it was a divided one. While Gen. Schaff believed that Quincy people had just cause for complaint, and that the price of gas should be lowered for them, the other two commissioners could not see how the company could reduce the price; so the matter hung fire.

"As the committeemen in the main early made up their minds that the reduction asked was fair, they felt that perhaps it was just as well not to cry too loudly against the commission, considering it was the two republican members who were mainly responsible for the delay.

"More than a week ago they were ready to report against the company, but now they are asking themselves what they can do about it. If they report as they believe, for a reduction, they will be supporting the democratic member of the board. If they do not report that way they will be going against their feelings.

"They have reopened the hearing with the hope of something being brought out by Richardson and Hill, the owners, which would help toward a compromise. Who could blame Gen. Schaff for smiling? As for Richardson and Hill, the bankers, who were originally told that it would be all right, they do not know what will happen."

March Forecast.

On Feb. 28, the Lynn Item which we have reason to believe is a reliable paper, made the following predictions:

"March will enter rather mild, and from all indications, promises to close in about the same manner. It is between these two extremes that we are likely to experience about as changeable and erratic a March as ever went on record, for there will be blinding snows, severe cold, rain and high, blustering winds. The temperature changes will be sharp and sudden. During the period there will probably be one week of good weather. The month will end bright, sunny and rather mild for the season.

"The heaviest snow storm of the winter is booked for March, but the exact date cannot now be determined. It will probably occur about the 15th to the 18th. In northern sections it will develop into a blizzard of huge proportions and a general blockade will result. In southern sections heavy rains and floods will probably occur. The storm will extend over considerable territory and be accompanied by severe gales and followed by extremely cold weather for the season. In the west and northwest there will be many days of snow."

Having a Run on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Between the hours of eleven o'clock a. m. and closing time at night on Jan. 25th, 1901, A. F. Clark, druggist, Glade Springs, Va., sold twelve bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says, "I never handled a medicine that sold better or gave better satisfaction to my customers." This Remedy has been in general use in Virginia for many years, and the people there are well acquainted with its excellent qualities. Many of them have testified to the remarkable cures which it has effected. When you need a good, reliable medicine for a cough or cold, or attack of the grip, use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and you are certain to be more than pleased with the quick cure which it affords. For sale by all druggists.

Two Officers Have Narrow Escape.

A Train Interferes with Their Plans for Rescue.

David Gustafson, who is said to belong in Quincy, came near costing a patrolman of station 11, Boston, his life Saturday night. Gustafson, who the police say had been drinking quite freely, started for home about 10 o'clock Saturday night by way of the railroad track. As he was passing over the railroad bride he missed his footing and fell into the Neponset river. His cries for help brought the station master, who notified the police and officers Hunter and Tomlinson responded, as did also a number of citizens.

A ladder was secured, which was fastened by a rope to one of the rails. Officer Hunter found Gustafson thoroughly chilled and clinging with the desperation of a drowning man to one of the slippery piles. The officer got a rope about Gustafson and drawing him out of the water proceeded to ascend, when a train came along and cut the rope and the rescued and rescuer were again in the water.

When the officers started to rescue the men the station master put his lantern on the track to stop the train. The train stopped all right, when someone picked up the lantern and held it under the bridge. The conductor, thinking the track clear started the train, which came near killing Officer Tomlinson.

This officer was standing between the tracks. He saw the train approaching, but supposed it would be stopped by the station master. He did not mind it, therefore, until the train was almost upon him. Realizing his danger, he dropped between the sleepers and clung to the slime covered pile while the train thundered over his head.

After the train had passed the citizens who had gathered rushed to the officer's assistance, and all three were with difficulty rescued from their perilous positions. Gustafson was locked up, and Officer Hunt released from duty.

A Losing Game.

The comments of the Boston Advertiser on the strike may be of interest:

"There is a strike of granite cutters at Quincy. About 400 are already out, and more may follow. Meanwhile, various substitutes for granite are coming into use, as the trick of making composite stone is being better understood, and natural, undressed stones are coming into more favor in the cemeteries. If the granite cutters try hard enough to embarrass the manufacturers, they can easily succeed in doing a good deal of harm to the granite trade. They can also lose their own jobs.

No Settlement.

There are no new developments, as far as Quincy is concerned in the strike of the quarrymen for an eight-hour day. There is a report, however, that the thirty men employed in the quarries at New State, Milton, returned to work this morning with the understanding that they should receive the same pay as the Quincy quarrymen when a settlement was reached there.

Five-Master Lost.

The large five-masted schooner, John B. Prescott, built at Camden, Me., in 1899, foundered at sea Feb. 23, and is a total loss. Capt. Harding and the crew of twelve were saved and were landed at Vineyard Haven on Saturday.

The Prescott was 300 feet long, 44.3 feet beam, 25 feet depth of hole; gross tonnage 2,454; net, 2,249. The cost of the Prescott was about $83,000. The vessel's five masts were each 112 feet in height. The topmasts were each 56 feet and the jibboom 77 feet, all being made from Oregon pine. The dimensions of her other spars were in proportion.

The wheel house was heated by steam, as were all other apartments on board. Among the other modern improvements on board were electric bells, which enabled the captain to communicate forward without going on deck. She also had an enormous Dean wrecking pump connected with her engine. The two large anchors weighed 6,000 pounds, and were attached by 180 fathoms of 2 5-16 inch chain. Captain J. G. Crowley of Taunton was the largest owner.

The Second Death.

There was another death Saturday afternoon from smallpox at smallpox hospital. The victim was Malcolm J. Kerr, who passed away about 4 o'clock. Mr. Kerr was a stone cutter and resided on Ashland street, West Quincy. It was discovered that he had the smallpox Saturday, Feb. 22, and that afternoon he was removed to the hospital. His case did not seem alarming until Saturday when it was reported that he was dangerously sick. That afternoon word was telephoned to the Board of Health that he was very low and would live but a short time.

Mr. Kerr left a widow and seven children.

It was reported Saturday afternoon that a child in the vicinity of Larry place was ill with the disease but the report proved to be false.

TODAY'S COURT.

Arthur Bedford was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Case continued until April 1

The liquors seized from Emilio Sonentini, Frank Dorrino, Giovanni Lippi, Pasvuala Di Monti, Henry Bastel and Frank Ferio at Quincy were forfeited.

Expressman Overhauled.

Inspector McKay and Officer Bradley overhauled Burke's Weymouth express team Saturday afternoon and seized twelve bottles of porter and twelve bottles of beer, under the illegal transportation law.

A BACHELOR'S ...COURTSHIP

[Original.]

Mark Winthrop was tired of bachelor life. Naturally a domestic man, he longed for a home to which he could go after a hard day's work at his office and find some one there in whom he could be interested instead of to a lonely apartment, where he changed his dress, and thence to his club. Sometimes he would dine with friends, but clubmen are not to be depended upon for dinner at clubs, as they often dine out, and he usually dined alone in the great dining room at a table by a window.

Winthrop resolved to end all this. He was not in love with any one, and he was no longer in the first flush of youth. He was thirty-four. He resolved to marry for convenience. Casting about among his acquaintances, he selected Miss Enderbury, aged thirty-five, and resolved to make her a proposition of marriage. He was wise enough to know that a bare domestic arrangement would not please a woman, and, not being in love, he would be unable to make love feelingly. He resolved, therefore, to propose by letter, for he was a fluent writer and in this form could counterfeit love admirably. Miss Enderbury was well spoken of by everybody. She needed a home and was old enough to know that opportunities for marriage would not be likely to come to her thereafter. Winthrop had met her in society only and made several calls upon her in the usual formal way. But, for the matter of that, he was intimate with no one but men.

Having made up his mind, he sat down in his room to write the letter, but threw down his pen, suddenly discovering that he did not remember the lady's Christian name. The matter must be deferred. The next day, meeting an acquaintance, a young man of twenty, hurrying along the street, he caught him by the sleeve and asked if he could tell him Miss Enderbury's Christian name. The man answered, "Adele." Winthrop made another effort that evening to write the letter and succeeded in producing a very delicate epistle, so charmingly expressed that it could not fail to touch the heart of any woman. He closed it by requesting that if Miss Enderbury would listen to his proposal he might be permitted to call the next evening and hear of his acceptance from her own sweet lips. After finishing the note he read it over, pronounced it a success, signed it and sent it to the Enderburys.

The next day he was rewarded with a little note, written in a feminine hand, acknowledging the receipt of his letter, the lady admitting that after his kindly attentions on the occasion of her debut in society she had gone home and dreamed of him. Winthrop tried to remember the meeting, which must have been some ten years before, but failed. The note was closed by an invitation to call in the evening.

"It is astonishing," he said to himself, "how long romance lasts in women and how sensitive they are to a little attention, especially when passing from girlhood to womanhood."

That evening Mark Winthrop walked up to the Enderburys' door as coolly as he would go to his office. His only dread was that he would not be able to talk as he had written. He was ushered into a small drawing room, where he sat waiting for Miss Enderbury. Presently he heard a rustle of skirts and an apparition stood in the doorway, a young girl of nineteen, covered with blushes and seemingly unable to cross the threshold from an intensity of feeling. Winthrop saw at once that there was some mistake, but had the presence of mind to await developments without showing embarrassment. Indeed, the sight of so much loveliness gave him a flutter about the heart. In her he recognized one whom a few months before he had met at her debut and had passed some time in her company. He had not caught her name on being introduced and, though he had met her several times since, was still ignorant of it. The explanation flashed upon him. This must be a younger sister of Miss Enderbury. The young man of whom he had asked the lady's Christian name doubtless thought only of one Miss Enderbury, about his own age. Winthrop remembered that the night after her debut he had dreamed of her and the next day regretted that he was too old to marry a rosebud.

Winthrop proved himself fully equal to the occasion. Advancing toward her, he took both her hands in his and gently drew her into the room.

"I am fully aware," he said feelingly, "of the presumption of an old fellow like myself aspiring to such loveliness, but I cannot help it. After that meeting when you made your entree into society I dreamed of you, and I am enchanted to know that you dreamed of me."

He dropped into lovemaking with astounding ease. It was no trouble whatever. His words came to him easily, and he was able to express himself with a delicacy suited to this tender flower.

"Oh, Mr. Winthrop," said the girl, "what can you, a mature man of the world, see to admire, to love, in a mere chit like myself?"

"Your modesty, little sweetheart, only renders you more lovely. From the moment I saw you on that evening"—

Why recount the lies Winthrop told? They were excusable, for he was so transported with rapture that he partly believed them. As in the case of the oath of Uncle Toby, the accusing angel must have blushed as he handed them in. By a mistake Winthrop had found a woman who could not only make a home, but who could throw over that home the enchantment of fairyland. Theirs was a love that grew with each succeeding year.

The Olneyville Strike

Providence, March 3.—A mass meeting of the force of striking weavers of the four big mills of the American Woollen company at Olneyville was held yesterday. Rejection of the proposition of the company refusing to single out double looms on fancy work was confirmed. The proposition to extend hostilities to other mills of the company was referred to the executive board with authority to proceed without further presentation of plan to the weavers as a body.

Brothers and Sisters Shut Out

Chelsea, Mass., March 3.—The estate of Rev. James McGlew, pastor of St. Rose's church, practically goes to charity. The specific bequests are $500 each to 11 prominent institutions and the residue of the estate is bequeathed to Rev. Michael Clark and Rev. Gerald Fagan, as executors, with the provision that they shall give it in charity as they shall deem proper. The brothers and sisters of the testator were given $1 apiece.

Verdict In Remarkable Case

Chicago, March 3.—The jury in the case of Dr. Orville S. Burnett, charged with the murder of Mrs. Charlotte S. Nichol, returned a verdict of guilty and recommended that Burnett be sent to the penitentiary for 15 years. Burnett's attorneys will ask for a new trial. The verdict was a surprise. The state endeavored to establish the point that Burnett and Mrs. Nicol agreed to commit suicide together and that the man weakened, allowing the woman to go to her death alone.

Millionaire Killed Himself

Warren, O., March 3.—Henry B. Perkins, one of Ohio's most prominent and philanthropic citizens, killed himself by hanging yesterday. Illness and the suicide of a favorite son a year ago is believed to have made Perkins temporarily insane. His fortune is said to amount to several millions of dollars.

HEAVY RAIN AND THAW

May Cause Shutdown of New England Mills

PATERSON IN BAD PLIGHT

Six Hundred Families Driven From Their Homes by Flood—Railroad Traffic In New York State Tied Up—Pennsylvania Towns Inundated

Boston, March 3.—Flood reports are general from every part of New England, although the conditions are not particularly alarming, for the rainstorm has passed and the thermometer is a little lower. The remarkably heavy rainfall of Friday night and the warm temperature since then has carried away most of the snow which fell during February. The volume of water thus thrown upon the frozen ground has swollen to great height all streams, large and small.

The indications in eatern New England are that the freshets will not do anything like the damage the high water in the early winter did, unless the thaw continues heavy and without a break over the water sheds of the Penobscot, Kennebec and Androscoggin rivers. In southern New England, and particularly in Masachuetts, the snow has gone entirely and the thaw is thus ended. The damage done and likely to come is along the streams which turn the wheels of mills employing, in the aggregate, 100,000 operatives or more. Scores of mills are likely to be idle for a few days.

Generally speaking, the conditions are the same as those reported each spring when winter's bonds are loosened quickly and effectively by a warm rain.

In New Jersey

Paterson, N. J., March 3.—This city, so recently swept by fire, is now overwhelmed by flood. The quarter occupied by the houses of the poorer class is inundated. Hundreds of families have been made homeless by the overflow of the Passaic river and the country for miles around the city is under water. So far but one death has been reported.

The district, for a mile along the river front and nearly half a mile in width, is covered with water which in many instances reaches to the second story of the dwellings. In this district are situated the Rogers Locomotive works and several silk mills and dye works. In the immediate vicinity fully 600 families have been driven from their tenements. Of those unfortunates several hundred were taken from their houses in boats and barges amid scenes of much excitement. More than 100 people are housed in the Fifth regiment armory. Several wagon loads of blankets, clothing and provisions were sent by citizens for the relief of the unfortunates.

The flood in the Wallington section of Passaic seems to be slowly rising and the whole low-lying quarter of the city is submerged. Fifty city blocks are under water, varying from a few inches to seven feet.

to seven feet. Two-thirds of all the mills are under water and the river, which is usually 300 feet wide, is now three quarters of a mile wide at Wallington. There have been several houses swept away in Wallington.

Railway Traffic Crippled

New York, March 3.—The floods along the line of the New York Central and Hudson River railroad are interfering extensively with traffic on that line. No through trains for the west were dispatched yesterday afternoon and evening. Bridges are down and tracks washed away between Hudson and Albany. The greatest trouble, however, is reported at points along the main line between Albany and Buffalo, where trains are stalled or have not been sent out on account of floods along the line.

A flood at Yonkers caused the wrecking of the steel and granite viaduct across the ravine in which runs Rawley's brook at the dividing line between that city and Hastings. The viaduct showed no signs of giving way and it was used all day by cars, carriages and foot passengers. Yesterday afternoon as a trolley car was passing over it, the structure began to sway. Passengers and pedestrians made a rush and just as all had cleared the bridge it slipped from place, owing to the sinking of one of the pillars, but it did not drop into the water. It rests in a position where seemingly a push would send it down.

River Towns Flooded

Philadelphia, March 3.—The destruction wrought by the storm was so great that many industrial establishments along the river banks in this state will be unable to resume work for several days. A number of buildings used for manufacturing purposes had their foundations weakened and machinery clogged with mud. All reports from river points carry the information that great damage was done. The various towns, now that the water has receded, are rapidly recovering their normal condition.

Twenty Thousand Men Idle

Wheeling W. Va., March 3.—Wheeling is in the grasp of the worst flood it has experienced since that of 1884, with but one exception. In Wheeling, Bellaire, Benwood, Martins Ferry, and Bridgeport scores of factories have been entered by the raging waters, fires extinguished and 20,000 men are out of work. Fully 700 families are occupying the upper floors of their homes.

THIS WEEK IN CONGRESS

Ship Subsidy Bill In Senate and Postal Affairs In House

Washington, March 3.—The senate will take up the ship subsidy bill today and it will continue to hold its place as the unfinished business until disposed of. There is, however, no disposition to press the matter to the exclusion of all other business, so that it probably will be laid aside temporarily at different times to permit the consideration of other matters, including the bill for the protection of the president against assault.

The legislative appropriation bill will be reported during the week and will take precedence of the ship bill in its own right if Senator Cullom, who will have it in charge, shall decide to ask the senate to take it up, as he probably will. The subsidy bill will not be debated for so great a length of time as was the measure of the last congress. There will be a number of speeches on it, however, before it shall be allowed to go to a vote.

The house will give most of its time during the present week to postal affairs, beginning today with the bill placing the rural free delivery system on the contract basis and following later with the postoffice appropriation bill. The rural free delivery measure has aroused much controversy and there promises to be an active debate, with considerable doubt as to the passage of the bill.

Considerable important business was disposed of by the senate Saturday. What is known as the omnibus claims bill and the measure providing for the irrigation of public lands were passed, the conference report on the Philippine tariff was agreed to and the shipping bill was made the unfinished business.

American Sympathizer In Danger

Manila, March 3.—While Governor Flores of the province of Rizal was chasing Felizardo and his band of ladrones over the hills of Cavite province, Felizardo, at the head of 25 men, entered the town of Cainta, in Morong province, and captured President Ampil, and a majority of the police of the town. Ampil is an enthusiastic American sympathizer and it is feared that he may be killed by the enraged ladrones. A strong force of constabulary has been sent to effect his release.

Spain Pinched For Cash

Madrid, March 3.—The newspapers this morning refer to the rise in exchange on Paris and the meagre results from the payment of customs duties on goods entering Spain in gold, as likely to compel the government to have recourse to the Bank of Spain for the payment of the next coupon of the exterior debt. There are persistent rumors of the approaching omission of a new interior loan of 125,000,000 pesetas, and of financial difficulties which may cause a cabinet crisis.

England Yielded a Point

London, March 3.—Wiring from Brussels, the correspondent of The Times says the international sugar conference has obtained from Great Britain a promise not to adopt a preferential tariff in favor of any of her colonies producing cane sugar. The delegates from Great Britain, not wishing to run the risk of wrecking the conference, finally made this concession.

Workmen and Police In Mixup

Paris, March 3.—Following an exciting meeting of the unemployed held here yesterday at the labor exchange, the agitators attempted to hold an outdoor meeting. A fight with the police ensued, in which 11 policemen were severely injured and a score more sustained bruises. A number of the rioters were injured and 20 were placed under arrest.

More Trouble For China

Pekin, March 3.—The Chinese foreign office admits that the rebellion in the vicinity of the city of Nan-Ning is very grave. Over 1000 former soldiers are engaged in pillaging. An edict has been issued commanding the Chinese authorities to afford protection to the missionaries and other foreigners.

Cebu's President Suspended

Manila, March 3.—A violent assault has been committed by the municipal police of Cebu upon the person of the Spanish consul at that port. The governor says the assault was instigated by President Reyes of Cebu, who has been suspended pending an investigation.

Two More Snowslides

Telluride, Col., March 3.—Two snowslides came down the mountain near the Bob Tail mine yesterday, the second burying several men at work clearing away the debris from the first. One man is missing. Several were rescued with slight injuries.

The Public Debt

Washington, March 3.—The treasury statement of the public debt shows that at the close of business Feb. 28, 1902, the debt, less cash in the treasury, amounted to $1,004,556,052, a decrease for the month of $1,370,846.

Colombian Insurgents Routed

Colon, March 3.—Liberal forces appeared at Rio Frio on Feb. 21. After an engagement with the government troops, which lasted four hours, the rebels were routed with 50 men killed or wounded.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Tuesday, March 4.
Sun rises—6:16; sets—5:37.
Moon rises—2:28 a. m.
High water—6:30 a. m.; 7 p. m.

During Saturday night a storm developed rapidly on the South Atlantic coast and during Snuday moved to Vermont with greatly increased energy. It caused general rains in the coast states, but no gales except on the New England coast. Temperatures have fallen considerably. It will rain in New England. On the coast the winds will be high south to west. Storm warnings are displayed.

MORPHINE'S SLAVE

Excessive Use of the Drug Led Ikey to Commit Murder

Rutland, Vt., March 3.—The mystery surrounding the murder in the little village of Wells, Thursday afternoon, when Alexander Ikey, a prosperous farmer, took his axe and without any apparent provocation, split his wife's head almost in two, was cleared when Ikey, who had not previously uttered a single word since his arrest, broke the silence and talked freely concerning the crime.

The murderer stated voluntarily that he had eaten morphine every day for 20 years. He began taking it one summer to allay the pain of severe headaches, caused by exposure to the sun, while haying, and the habit grew on him until he could not break it.

During several days previous to the crime, the murderer said, his wife had been putting arsenic in his morphine, in order to get him out of the way. For that reason he decided to kill her.

From a son of the murdered woman it was learned that Mrs. Ikey, several weeks ago, seeing that the morphine habit was deranging her husband's mind, decided to try to break it. She, accordingly, began mixing flour with the drug, to reduce its strength, and it was this which Ikey thought was arsenic.

Won't Strike Just Yet

Boston, March 3.—There was no strike today of the freight handlers and freight clerks employed by the Boston and Albany division of the New York Central railroad as has been threatened on account of the discharge of James Sheehan, a freight handler, who had served as a member of the strike committee in the recent trouble between the Teamsters' union and the R. S. Brine Transportation company. The state board of arbitration, the master teamsters and others will use their best efforts to secure Sheehan's reinstatement, and the strike order is held in abeyance pending the result of their conference.

Forty-Three Years a Postmaster

Boston, March 3.—James L. Chapin, postmaster of the town of Lincoln for over 43 years without a break, is dead. John Wanamaker, when postmaster general, wrote to Mr. Chapin to tell him he was the oldest postmaster in the United States. Mr. Chapin had the additional distinction of opening the first store in Lincoln in 1858, the year he was appointed postmaster by President Buchanan, and he was proprietor of the store when he died on Saturday. Mr. Chapin was born in Sturbridge, Mass.

Advance In Insurance Rates

Boston, March 3.—An advance of 25 percent and upward in fire insurance rates on a large class of risks has been agreed upon by the New England Insurance Exchange. The advance is to go into effect immediately and continue until certain risks can be specially rated under proper revised and approved schedules.

A Mysterious Disappearance

Dover, N. H., March 3.—The local police are unable to account for the sudden disappearance of Miss Fannie Lucas, the 23-year-old daughter of John Lucas, a farmer. While her face was deformed, she was an unusually bright young woman and had never shown any signs of despondency.

Father and Son Drowned

Boston, March 3.—Henry Riddell and his son left in an old flat-bottomed boat on Saturday to collect driftwood in Dorchester bay. They did not return, and yesterday the overturned boat and the father's body were found.

Old-Timer Won

Bath, Me., March 3.—John Allen, the veteran Portland pedestrian, won the 27-hour go-as-you-please race at the Alameda which closed at 11 o'clock Saturday night, having covered 96 miles.

Prescott Palmer In Harbor

Wilmington, N. C., March 3.—The five-masted schooner Prescott Palmer, from Bath, Me., for Baltimore, has arrived at Southport for harbor, having been blown out of her course. The vessel is uninjured, but her captain had his right arm broken on Feb. 9.

CURING CONSUMPTION.

Exactly what goes on inside to make the consumptive gain weight when taking Scott's Emulsion is still a mystery.

Scott's Emulsion does something to the lungs, too, that reduces the cough and the inflammation.

More weight and less cough always mean that consumption is losing its influence over the system.

For all stages of the disease Scott's Emulsion is a reliable help.

OPERATIONS OF TROOPS

Increased Suffering of Miss Stone and Mrs Tsilka

STORY OF THEIR CAPTIVITY

Brigands Had Sympathy of Bulgarians—Disclosure of Their Whereabouts by Dickinson Almost Proved Disastrous—Tsilka Baby a Handicap

Constantinople, March 3.—The following account of the captivity of Miss Stone has been obtained by The Associated Press from reliable sources, some of the information having been secured from accomplices of the brigands.

After the capture of the missionaries near Bansko, Sept. 3 last, the brigands hastened across the boundary and established themselves on the mountain of Gueltepe, in the Elledere district, Bulgaria, where the whole population was in sympathy with the enterprise, this fact enabling the band to live comfortably and safely and to keep in touch with the outside world. While awaiting the result of their efforts to secure the ransom the brigands drew their supplies from the adjacent village of Ledjuma. Feeling perfectly secure, the members of the band used to show themselves openly in Kamenica and neighboring villages until they were warned by their local adherents to be more careful. The prisoners, however, were jealously secluded.

When C. M. Dickinson, United States consul general at Constantinople, arrived in Sofia early in October last and disclosed to the authorities the whereabouts of Miss Stone's captors, the result was nearly disastrous to the prisoners. The Bulgarian government ill-advisedly pushed troops to the vicinity of Gueltepe, forcing the brigands to break off negotiations, and the band changed its quarters to Kilo. The cold weather made travel in the mountains a dreadful ordeal for Miss Stone and Mrs. Tsilka, encumbered as they were with the latter's infant. Every change of camp occurred at night. The mountain roads were frequently impassable, being often deep in snow. The brigands treated their captives as kindly as the circumstances would permit, but the food supply was necessarily precarious, though the women were given the best the inhospitable region afforded.

The strain and suspense equalled the physical hardships. The captives at no time knew their whereabouts, for the brigands always told them that they were not in Bulgaria, and they were in constant fear of an attack by the troops, whom the friendship of the natives was not always to prevent from coming close upon the trail of the band. An equal cause of anxiety was the baby which, it was frequently feared, would die from exposure.

Not until Nov. 2 did the American emissaries come in touch with the band, which was then established in a cave near Dubnitza, but fear of the troops forced the brigands to another flight. This was made in a blinding snowstorm, which covered the tracks of the outlaws, but caused bitter suffering to the captives. After this the brigands succeeded in completely eluding the authorities and toward the end of November, by a long circuit, they succeeded in returning to their old haunts in the Elledere district. They then caused a report to be circulated that the captives were dead, and from that time managed to keep Miss Stone and Mrs. Tsilka safely under cover until the actual release of the captives occurred.

Not at Constantinople

Constantinople, March 3.—The reported arrival here of Miss Ellen M. Stone is untrue. Miss Stone is still at Salonica.

Thirty-Six Years In War Department

New York, March 3.—Charles W. Julius, 59 years old, chief clerk in the engineers' department of the United States army, was found dead in his office in the army building last night. He had gone to his office early in the afternoon to finish up some work on reports of the engineers' department which are to be sent to Washington before the adjournment of congress. He had been connected with the war department for 36 years.

Botha Inclined to Surrender

London, March 3.—On the best informed opinion, The Pall Mall Gazette prophesies the end of all serious hostilities in South Africa by September and this is rather a pessimistic than an optimistic view. Judging from Lord Kitchener's progress and the well founded rumors of General Botha's personal inclination to surrender, the practical end of the struggle may considerably antedate September.

Held For Alleged Forgery

Northampton, Mass., March 3.—Willard B. Morton of this city, about 25 years old, was held for the grand jury in $5000 bonds, upon the charge of forging endorsements to three notes and obtaining $2500 thereon. He was married about a year ago and since that time has driven fast horses, spent much time at hotels and has been liberal toward his friends.

Tillman's Action Endorsed

Boston, March 3.—George Fred Williams, the political leader whose reputation goes beyond the borders of Massachusetts, in a letter to The Post today defends in vigorous language the recent action of Senator Tillman in the senate, for which that body voted censure.

The Courier of the Czar
By Jules Verne

after these distant missions, although he might be separated from her by thousands of versts and winter had rendered the roads almost impassable, he had never failed to devote to his old mother. Having been much employed in the south of the empire, he had not seen old Marfa for three years—three ages—the first time in his life he had been so long absent from her. Now, however, in a few days he would obtain his furlough, and he had accordingly already made preparations for departure for Omsk when the events which have been related occurred. Michael Strogoff was therefore introduced into the czar's presence in complete ignorance of what the emperor expected from him.

The czar, apparently satisfied with his scrutiny, went to his bureau and, motioning to the chief of police to seat himself, dictated in a low voice a letter of not more than a few lines. The letter penned, the czar reread it attentively and then signed it, preceding his name with these words, "Byt posemon," which, signifying "so be it," constitutes the decisive formula of the Russian emperors.

The letter was placed in an envelope, which was sealed with the imperial arms.

The czar, rising, told Michael Strogoff to draw near.

The czar again looked him full in the face, and their eyes met. Then in an abrupt tone:

"Thy name?" he asked.

"Michael Strogoff, sire."

"Thy rank?"

"Captain in the corps of couriers of the czar."

"Thou dost know Siberia?"

"I am a Siberian."

"A native of"—

"Omsk, sire."

"Hast thou relations there?"

"Yes, sire."

"What relations?"

"My old mother."

The czar suspended his questions for a moment, then, pointing to the letter which he held in his hand, he said:

"Here is a letter which I charge thee, Michael Strogoff, to deliver into the hands of the grand duke and to no other but him."

"I will deliver it, sire."

"The grand duke is at Irkutsk."

"I will go to Irkutsk."

"Thou wilt have to traverse a rebellious country, invaded by Tartars, whose interest it will be to intercept this letter."

"I will traverse it."

"I will beware of him."

"Wilt thou pass through Omsk?"

"Sire, that is my route."

"If thou dost see thy mother, there will be the risk of being recognized. Thou must not see her!"

Michael Strogoff hesitated a moment.

"I will not see her," said he.

"Swear to me that nothing will make thee acknowledge who thou art nor whither thou art going."

"I swear it."

"Michael Strogoff," continued the czar, giving the letter to the young courier, "take this letter. On it depends the safety of all Siberia and perhaps the life of my brother, the grand duke."

"Thou wilt pass whatever happens?"

"I shall pass, or they shall kill me."

"I want thee to live."

"I shall live, and I shall pass," answered Michael Strogoff.

The czar appeared satisfied with Strogoff's calm and simple answer.

"Go, then, Michael Strogoff," said he, "go for God, for Russia, for my brother and for myself."

The courier, having saluted his sovereign, immediately left the imperial cabinet and in a few minutes the New palace.

"You made a good choice there, general," said the czar.

"I think so, sire," replied General Kissoff, "and your majesty may be sure that Michael Strogoff will do all that a man can do."

"He is indeed a man," said the czar.

Stabbing In a Polish Quarrel

Lawrence, Mass., March 3.—In a stabbing affray late Saturday night, Jacob Veloski and his sister-in-law, Annie Vrazinski, were badly cut, but it is believed both will recover. Paul Stenoski is in jail on the charge of being concerned in the affair. It is said that a quarrel over race questions occurred between Stenoski, who is a Russian Pole, and others, who are Austrian Poles, and a mixup followed.

A Printer Greatly Surprised.

"I never was so much surprised in my life, as I was with the results of using Chamberlain's Pain Balm," says Henry T. Crook, pressman of the Asheville (N. C.) Gazette. "I contracted a severe case of rheumatism early last winter by getting my feet wet. I tried several things for it without benefit. One day while looking over the Gazette, I noticed that Pain Balm was positively guaranteed to cure rheumatism, so bought a bottle of it and before using two-thirds of it my rheumatism had taken its flight and I have not had a rheumatic pain since." Sold by all druggists.

A GREAT SURPRISE

Is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. Would you believe that it is sold on its merits and any druggist is authorized by the proprietor of this wonderful remedy to give you a sample bottle free? It never fails to cure acute or chronic coughs. All druggists sell Kemp's Balsam. Price 25c. and 50c.

PRINCE'S CHICAGO VISIT

Brings Forth Grand Demonstrations of Welcome

STREETS DENSELY PACKED

With People Who Kept Royalty Bowing In Response to Greetings—Banquet and Musical Festival Followed by a Grand Ball In His Honor

Chicago, March 4.—A glare of red fire which could be seen for miles, the blaze of hundreds of torches, the sparkle of myriads of electric lights, and the cheers of thousands of people made up the first taste of Chicago's hospitality towards Prince Henry upon his arrival in this city last evening.

His train arrived here at 6:30 o'clock, and after he had been formally welcomed by Mayor Harrison and the members of the reception committee, he was driven through streets packed with a dense multitude, whose cheers compelled him to bow continually. Every building along the line of his route from the depot to the Auditorium hotel was gayly decorated. Many of the buildings had upon their fronts elaborate devices made up of hundreds of electric lights.

A feature of the procession from the depot to the Auditorium hotel was the great number of German veterans who lined the streets provided with torches and who went fairly wild in their efforts to show their devotion to the prince.

The first banquet to the prince was set for 7 o'clock and shortly after that time it was begun in the main hall of the Auditorium. The prince seemed greatly pleased with the warmth of his welcome.

The prince lingered for a short time after the banquet in informal conversation with the members of the entertainment committee and then retired to his room to prepare for the next feature of the program, which was a visit to the armory of the First infantry, where the German citizens of Chicago had arranged a choral festival in his honor.

For the entire distance the sidewalks were lined as closely as the people could be packed and from the time he left the hotel until he passed within the doors of the armory, there was one continuous shout. In the armory were 6000 people, most of them born in the fatherland or descendants of such persons.

As the prince entered the hall the great orchestra of more than 100 pieces burst forth in the national anthem of Germany. Under the box occupied by the prince was a platform upon which were seated the members of the great chorus and directly in front of the chorus was the orchestra. The women members of the chorus were in the gallery above the male singers. Surrounding the women were 900 ex-members of the German army, all of whom are now American citizens.

The chorus first sang "The True German Heart. At the conclusion of this Chairman Lefens read an address of welcome to Prince Henry. At the conclusion of the address there was a renewal of cheers and then a pause to await the reply of Prince Henry.

The chorus then rendered "The Prayer Before the Battle" and an original poem was then read by E. F. L. Gauss. The orchestra then struck up the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," which was sung by the members of the Ladies' Choral society. The music finally swung into "The Star Spangled Banner," which was greeted with tremendous enthusiasm.

It was shortly after 10 o'clock when the prince and the members of his suite rose from their seats and left the balcony for their carriages. A crowd numbering at least 50,000 persons cheered the prince upon his exit from the armory. He was driven to the Auditorium hotel to take part in the ball arranged in his honor.

The chief event of the stay of the prince in Chicago was the grand ball held in the auditorium. It was perhaps the most magnificent social event ever witnessed in this city. The decorations went beyond anything ever before attempted in the Auditorium. In the general scheme the German and American colors were freely mingled and formed the basis of the principal designs.

For nearly an hour 2000 men and women had been waiting for the entry of Prince Henry. At the head of the ball committee was the wife of Mayor Harrison, and assisting her were the wife of Governor Yates and many other ladies prominent in the state and city.

The members of this committee had been in their places about 15 minutes when, with a glitter of gold lace and the flash of decorations, the prince and the members of his suite with their escort came forward.

The prince entered his box, escorting Mrs. Harrison to the seat of honor beside him, and watched the dancing with interest. He remained in his box

Prince Henry stopped in St. Louis nearly four hours yesterday morning, and during that time he was kept busy following out the program laid out for his entertainment by the local committee. From the time he entered the union station until his departure for Chicago the prince received a constant ovation. He made a splendid impression and his remarks and bearing showed that he was pleased with all he saw, as well as the reception accorded him.

British Lost Heavily

London, March 4.—In a dispatch from Pretoria Lord Kitchener sends details of the disaster to the escort of the convoy of empty wagons southwest of Klerksdorp, Transvaal colony. The British casualties, in killed, wounded and men made prisoners, reach the total of 632. In addition the Boers captured two guns. The fighting lasted for two hours. A detachment of 200 mounted infantry from Klerksdorp attempted to re-enforce the British, but were held in check by the Boers.

Hostilities to Continue

London, March 4.—The Brussels correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says in a dispatch that Mr. Kruger has received a long report from General Botha affirming that the Boer government is fully determined to continue hostilities, and outlining the proposed midsummer compaign.

Taft Still Testifying

Washington, March 4.—Governor Taft was examined by members of the insular committee of the house yesterday on various phases of the Philippine question. The governor estimated that the United States military force could be reduced to 15,000 men in one year from this time. The governor presented letters urging the need of Chinese skilled labor.

Too Strong For Constabulary

Manila, March 4.—Twenty-five members of the constabulary of Morong, 10 miles from Manila, encountered 80 insurgents yesterday. The former, after expending all their ammunition, fled. Eleven of the constabulary are missing. The same band of insurgents turned back a commissary wagon, but did not molest the escort, consisting of three men.

The Paterson Flood

Paterson, N. J., March 4.—The work of getting those imprisoned in the upper stories of houses in the flooded district goes on. Those who refuse to be taken out in boats are supplied with food and other needful articles. At the armory where the refugees are, the scene resembles that on the day after the fire. The water is falling 3-4 of an inch an hour.

Middle-Roaders Hold Out

Memphis, March 4.—Joseph Parker, chairman of the national convention, middle-of-the-road Populists, is in the city. He says: "There will be no more fusion between the Democratic and Populist parties. Each must work independently of the other hereafter. We mean to get back to our first ideas as rapidly as possible."

Ten Canal Boats Damaged

Whitehall, N. Y., March 4.—Ten loaded canal boats are ashore on Lake Champlain and are badly damaged. Bridges have been chained and barely escaped being carried away.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Bishop Spalding of the diocese of Peoria, Ills., emphatically denies that he is a candidate for the rectorship of the Catholic university at Washington.

The condition of Representative O. H. P. Belmont of New York, who is sick with pneumonia at Washington, is a trifle better. The primary complaint is complicated with stomach trouble. He is very seriously ill.

Harry LeMoyne of Brookline, Mass., made a new world's swimming record at the Sportsman's show, Boston. He clipped 2-5 seconds off the world's record, and covered the 60 yards in 35 1-5 seconds. The American record he broke by 4-5 seconds.

Dr. William S. Lyman, president of the University of Alabama, has tendered his resignation on account of advanced age. No action has been taken.

Dr. Elvin A. Tucker, prominent in the medical world as a specialist in obstetrics, died at New York of pneumonia. He was connected with the Sloane hospital. He was born in Attleboo, Mass., 41 years ago.

Benny Yanger and Kid Broad fought six rounds to a draw at Chicago. Yanger was in trouble during the last round and Referee Hogan's decision was hissed.

Wage Agitation at New Bedford

New Bedford, Mass., March 4.—At an executive committee meeting of the Spinners' union last night it was decided to start an agitation in the different mill centres for a uniform advance.

TEN OF TWELVE CITIES

Carried by Republicans In the Municipal Elections

A MAJORITY OF TWO VOTES

In Favor of Republican Nominee For Mayor of Westbrook—But Six Majority For Republicans In Saco—Democrat For Mayor of Lewiston

Portland, Me., March 4.—Republican candidates for mayor were successful in 10 of the 12 Maine cities where the annual elections were held yesterday. The weather conditions were nearly perfect, and with hard contests on in several cities, heavy voting was the rule.

In the closest and hardest contested election in the history of Saco, William O. Freeman was elected mayor by a majority of 6 out of a total of 1609 votes. The Citizens' ticket was victorious in four wards, the Republican in two and in one there was a tie.

Rockland Republicans elected Edwin K. Gould for mayor, carried five of the seven wards in the city with a tie in one of the remaining two, and elected 17 of the 21 members of the common council.

Arthur W. Greeley was re-elected mayor of Ellsworth for his fourth term and the new city government stands three Democrats to one Republican.

Martin Blaisdell (Rep.) was re-elected mayor of Waterville. The Republicans elected tickets in six of the seven wards. The result is a complete surprise to everybody.

The Lewiston election resulted in a decisive victory for the Democrats, they having elected D. J. McGillicuddy mayor and carried four out of the seven wards.

In Auburn the entire city went Republican, E. C. Eveleth being elected mayor. The Republicans surprised many of the party leaders.

Charles M. Buxton (Rep.) was re-elected mayor of Eastport by a majority of 127 votes. The Republicans elected their candidates in three of the four wards.

South Portland Republicans re-elected Mayor Trefethen and carried four of the seven wards in the city.

Mayor Frederic Danforth and the straight Republican ticket carried Gardiner without opposition.

The Hallowell election resulted in a victory for the Republican candidates. James E. Lunt being elected mayor. The Democrats made no nominations.

Joseph A. Warren (Rep.) was elected mayor of Westbrook by two votes. A Republican city clerk, eight Republican and five Democratic aldermen were elected, the majority for each being about 75. There will be a recount of the vote for mayor.

Meets Executive Disapproval

Washington, March 4.—In a conference with members of congress yesterday, President Roosevelt expressed his severe disapproval of the civil service provision of the bill creating a permanent census bureau, which has passed both houses and is now before him. The bill extends the provisions of the civil service law to all clerks at present employed in the census office, numbering about 1700.

REMOUNTS FOR BRITISH

Still Going to South Africa at the Rate of 13,000 a Month

London, March 4.—A parliamentary paper was issued last night, containing dispatches and reports regarding the remount department in South Africa. It refers to the American mules as being the "best received from any source, magnificent workers and kept in condition under the most adverse circumstances." The American horses, the report says, varied greatly, but the majority were excellent.

The paper on the remount department in South Africa is considered the strongest indictment of its own incapacity yet issued by the war office, and it will go far to explain to the public the reasons why the war in South Africa has been so unduly protracted. This paper shows continual conflict throughout the war between the generals at the front, appealing for horses, and the officials of the war office, who were endeavoring to limit the number of horses sent out.

The parliamentary paper set forth complaints from the war office of the wastage of horses through the inefficiency of the remount department, and Mr. Brodrick wired in November: "We cannot continue indefinitely to send 10,000 to 12,000 remounts a month to be used up by column commanders in a few days."

In parliament yesterday Mr. Brodrick announced that the government was still dispatching 13,000 remounts monthly, and, according to the Pretoria correspondent of The Times, remounts are still badly wanted in South Africa.

China Acquiring Some Pluck

London, March 4.—Cabling from Pekin, the correspondent of The Times reiterates his previous statement that Germany is seeking fresh concessions in Shantung province, but that China has been stiffenede by the Anglo-Japanese agreement and is unlikely to accede to Germany' sdemands. China is also showing a more resolute front in opposing the Russian claims in Manchuria.

Population of Newfoundland

St. Johns, March 4.—In the legislature yesterday Premier Bond placed upon the table the statement of the census returns for the colony for 1901. The total population is 220,249, of which Newfoundland has 216,615 and Labrador 3634. Denominationally, the chief creeds are Catholics, 76,259; Angelicans, 72,650; Methodists, 60,812.

Wealthy Sheep Stealers

Glendive, Mont., March 4.—J. Donaldson and W. Broadbent, two of the best known wool growers of eastern Montana, have been found guilty of stealing sheep and sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary. The case attracted much attention throughout Montana, owing to the prominence and wealth of the men involved.

Won by Leander and Rutz

Atlanta, March 4.—The 12-hour championship of America was won here last night by Leander and Rutz, who finished first in the bicycle race, winningby two lengths from Lake and Turville, who rode a lap ahead of the other five teams. The score of the two teams for the 12 hours was a little over 276 miles.

Flood Has Receded

Philadelphia, March 4.—Work was resumed yesterday in 13 of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company's 42 collieries in the Schuylkill region, the majority of which were rendered idle by the flood.

Barns Guarded by Soldiers

Norfolk, March 4.—The street car strike is still on and the strikers are determined not to go back to work under present conditions. Three companies of infantry guard the car barns.

Headache often results from a disordered condition of the stomach and constipation of the bowels. A dose or two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will correct these disorders and cure the headache. Sold by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

We are having good March weather. The snow is gone, the floods have come, and the farmers are preparing to plant their early peas.

Ellen M. Stone, the missionary, is expected home in May, and she has contracted to lecture for the Chautauqua societies during the summer.

Now there is a movement by the Mayor of Cambridge to extend the time of the payments of the Metropolitan park assessments. Cambridge should stand up and take its medicine, or it may get a worse dose.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ What we want to do hereafter is to place ourselves socially and morally and mannerly on a par with the position our men occupy in finance and science; to strive to be leaders as admirable wives, mothers and women, as our men are leaders in the world of achievement; to compel the Old World to acknowledge that we possess the very highest qualities of noble womanhood, just as it has been compelled to acknowledge the forceful and efficient mentality of our men in the great progressive movements of the hour.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox in the March Woman's Home Companion.

☞ Truth to say, and speaking with a full sense of responsibility that lies in the utterances of a medical journal upon so important a matter, plum pudding is not to be denied save by weakest of stomachs. The mere fact of the prolonged boiling that is part and parcel of the solemn rites of the kitchen carries the pudding far on the road to the digestion that is the ultimate goal and end of its existence. Christmas pudding, in a word, is digestible enough to suit all mankind, except, perhaps, in the extremes of infancy and old age. But, and here comes the saving clause, it must ever be borne in mind that the harmfulness of good cheer lies more in quantity than in quality. To our mind little harm, we repeat, is done by good, sound, solid, well-made, well-boiled and well-served English plum pudding. When the king of dishes is thrust away pell mell on top of a vast medley of meats and drinks, then there can be little wonder if Nature resents the outrage on her arrangements as Minister of the Interior of mankind.—Roman Medical Press and Circular of London.

TODAY'S COURT.

Thomas Phelan was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Case continued two weeks.

Antonio Gualantine and Daniel Lunguist were arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. They were fined $3 each.

A Printer Greatly Surprised.

"I never was so much surprised in my life, as I was with the results of using Chamberlain's Pain Balm," says Henry T. Crook, pressman of the Asheville (N. C.) Gazette. "I contracted a severe case of rheumatism early last winter by getting my feet wet. I tried several things for it without benefit. One day while looking over the Gazette, I noticed that Pain Balm was positively guaranteed to cure rheumatism, so bought a bottle of it and before using two-thirds of it my rheumatism had taken its flight and I have not had a rheumatic pain since." Sold by all druggists.

DOUBLE TRACKING

Important Petition from Old Colony Street Railway.

The Whole of City Square Included.

Annual Appropriation Order Reported to City Council.

PETITIONS.

W. R. Lofgren asked that his sidewalk assessment on Bigelow street be apportioned. Laid on the table until later when an order was offered.

Annie L. Bates petitioned for damages to her property on Dimmock street caused by a change in grade. To Committee on Finance.

The New England Telephone Co. petitioned for a location for three poles on Putnam street. To Committee on Streets.

Petitions for State Aid and minor licenses were received.

DOUBLE TRACKS.

The Old Colony Street railway petitioned for a change of its location of tracks in City Square and additional tracks. The changes desired are briefly as follows:

An additional track from a point near the fountain to a point near the Ledger office. An additional track on Washington street between Temple and Hancock streets and an additional track on Saville street. The petition also revokes the location on Temple street and the tracks leading to the present car barn.

The company also petitioned for an additional track on Washington street between the Quincy Point bridge and a point just west of Wharf street. Both petitions referred to Committee on Streets.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Streets reported favorable on the order granting the street railway a change of location of its tracks leading to the new car barn. Rules suspended and order passed.

The Committee on Streets reported favorable on the resolution of Councilman Adams that the Mayor and bridge trustees provide rules for the draw bridge at Quincy Point. Adopted.

The joint Committee on Streets and Legislative Matters reported no legislation necessary on the communication relative to bills before the Legislature relative to underground conduits.

The Committee on Licenses reported an order granting Andrew Johnson a license to hold a wrestling match and fixing the fee at $5. Passed.

OLD BILLS.

The Committee on Finance reported an order authorizing the City Auditor to charge bills of Dr. Sheahan and Dr. Adams of 1899 and 1900 amounting to $42 to Miscellaneous City Expenses of 1901. Adopted

The Committee on Finance reported an order instructing the City Auditor not to approve bills for clerical services in 1900 and 1901 in excess of appropriations. Adopted.

The Committee on Finance reported an order transfering $487.04 from Miscellaneous Highways 1901 to repairs of Public Buildings 1901. Rules suspended and order passed.

MORE POLICE.

The Committee on Finance reported favorable on the ordinance increasing the permanent police force from 10 to 14 men. Rules suspended and order passed.

SEWER APPROPRIATION.

The Committee on Finance reported an order appropriating the $27,984.46 received from sale of the sewer pumping station to extending the sewerage system.

ANNUAL APPROPRIATIONS.

Councilman Freeman offered an order for the annual budget. His order was practically the same as that sent in by the Mayor at the last meeting the only changes being as follows: Pay of men in Fire Department $19,857 instead of $20,657, street watering $6,600 instead of $6,000. For school department $109,100. Read once.

Councilman Piper offered an order for an incandescant light on Summer street near School street. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Hadlock offered an order for $800 for grading and draining Edwin street. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Langelier offered an order for $10,000 for remodelling the basement and first floor of City Hall. To Committee on Public Buildings.

Councilman Newcomb offered an order revoking so much of the order changing the name of New Road to Scammel street as relates to that part between South and Summer streets. Adopted.

BUILDING ORDINANCE.

Upon motion of Councilman Langelier the order establishing the office of Inspector of Buildings and defining his duties, was taken from the table.

The several minor amendments were then adopted.

Councilman Freeman said there was some question whether a recent decision of the supreme court did not effect section 24 and he moved the matter be referred to the City Solicitor.

Upon request of Councilman Langelier City Solicitor Blackmur appeared before the Council and stated the question was too important to give an opinion if off hand. Councilman Langelier moved that section be laid on the table.

Motion ruled out of order.

Councilman Langelier thought it would be advisable to strike that section out rather than delay the order, as it could be added at any time.

Councilman Nichols thought the matter of two weeks would not matter much.

Councilman Bass moved the whole order be referred to the City Solicitor. Voted.

Councilman Meyer moved to reconsider, as he desired to offer an amendment.

Motion lost by a vote of 10 in favor and 12 against.

Adjourned at 8.35.

Adams Chapter.

Monday was a day of meetings for Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. The first one was a meeting of the council at two o'clock, which was followed at quarter past two by a meeting of the flag committee. This committee is composed of thirteen and Mrs. F. E. Dyer, Mrs. C. A. Thayer and Miss Harriet B. Pierce were elected members to fill vacancies. The following resolutions were passed a copy to be sent to Mr. McCaffrey and to the American Flag House association:

It having been brought to the attention of the Adams Chapter of Quincy, of the Society of Daughters of the Revolution, that the patriotic action of Mr. George H. McCaffrey, patrolman attached to Station 1, Boston, in preventing the desecration of the American flag on February 13, 1902, when he arrested a man who was using the flag for a rag-bag, it is hereby unanimously

Resolved, —That the Flag committee of Adams Chapter, of Quincy, of the Society of the Daughters of the Revolution hereby tender to Mr. George H. McCaffrey their thanks and the committee desire to place on record their appreciation of his patriotic act.

Resolved, — That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mr. McCaffrey and also to the American Flag Association, New York.

Resolved,—That these resolutions be presented to Adams Chapter of Quincy, Daughters of the Revolution, at its annual meeting.

The annual meeting of Adams Chapter was called at quarter of three. The records of the February meeting were read, followed by the annual reports of the secretary, treasurer and historian. The old board of officers were elected with some slight changes. Delegates to represent the chapter at the annual meeting of the national society at Denver in April are Mrs. N. V. Titus, Mrs. Frank Granger and Mrs. E. G. Pratt.

The Chapter impowered Mrs. Titus to buy a silk flag and standard, which the Chapter would present to Patrolman McCaffrey.

At the close of the business meeting Mrs. W. T. Babcock read from Thackeray's Virginians, and also a paper on Traces of the Revolution, written by her mother, Mrs. Breckenridge. A social hour followed during which dainty refreshments were served.

The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Brewer, Bigelow street and she was assisted by Mrs. E. G. Pratt and Mrs. J. J. Crawford.

Personal.

The Springfield Union records the success of a Quincy young man who is located in that city:

Nelson Wright of 31 Grosvenor street who was accidently shot in the arm Thursday, was removed from his home last evening to the Emergency Hospital. Dr. Everett V. Hardwick of the hospital staff, with the aid of the Xray located the bullet in the bone at the elbow of the left arm and extracted it. The bullet was considerably flattened and the bone was slightly shattered where the ball entered. Young Wright was sent home Saturday.

After the accident the boy was sent to the "Mercy Hospital" where an effort was made to locate the bullet but without success. The conclusion was finally reached that the ball had not lodged in the arm but had simply made a grooved flesh wound. He was discharged that evening. The boy complained of such excruciating pain that the parents decided to consult the surgeons in the Emergency Hospital where the bullet was extracted this morning.

The towns to vote for license were the exception. They include Duxbury, Athol, Framingham, Natick, Revere, Milford, Hudson, Gardner.

CITY BREVITIES.

A Local Budget with the News in a Nut Shell.

Mr. and Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard entertain the whist club this evening.

The flags on the school building are at half mast out of respect to Col. Parker.

Camp 27, S. of V., has taken a new lease of life and some interesting meetings are promised.

The cold and blustering weather today is what may be expected during the greater part of the month.

Albert Keating and Elijah G. Hall were appointed on the "Greater Boston" committee at the meeting at the Revere House, Boston, Monday evening.

While in Chicago last week Supt. Parlin visited the school of Col. Parker and then learned of his serious illness. While in the city he visited 43 school rooms.

Mr. John Barbour of Wollaston entertained his Sunday school class of young men Saturday evening at his home. His class is very large and they all spent an enjoyable evening together playing games.

Dance at Braintree.

The subscription dance held at the Cochato club hall, Braintree, Saturday evening from eight until eleven was as great a success socially as it was financially. It was given by Messrs. Nathaniel B. Wales, Alva W. Dow and Joseph G. Morrison and they are to be congratulated for managing such an undertaking so successfully. Those present were mostly Thayer Academy students, while several came from all the neighboring towns in the vicinity of Braintree. The gowns of the young ladies were very striking and the music of Cuff's orchestra exceptionally fine. The matrons were Mrs. George O. Wales, Mrs. Willard E. Dow, and Mrs. R. Elmer Morrison. There were about thirty couples.

Funeral of Mrs. Mowry.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Orcutt, widow of Mr. Elbridge S. Mowry, was held this afternoon from her late residence on Hancock street. The services were conducted by Rev. E. N. Hardy.

Spring Medicine

There is no other season when good medicine is so much needed as in the Spring.

The blood is impure, weak and impoverished—a condition indicated by pimples and other eruptions on the face and body, by deficient vitality, loss of appetite, lack of strength, and want of animation.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Make the blood pure, vigorous and rich, create appetite, give vitality, strength and animation, and cure all eruptions. Have the whole family begin to take them today.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has been used in our family for some time, and always with good results. Last spring I was all run down and got a bottle of it, and as usual received great benefit." MISS BEULAH BOYCE, Stowe, Vt.

George B. Jones.

The funeral services over the remains of George B. Jones, a member of Paul Revere Post of this city, was held at his late residence in South Braintree, yesterday afternoon at three o'clock. A goodly number of the Post, and of relatives and friends were present. Mr. Jones was a member of the 23d Mass. Regiment. He was 72 years of age, and leaves a widow and two sons.

Services at the house were conducted by Rev. C. F. H. Crathern. After the services the remains were escorted to Plain street cemetery where Paul Revere Post fired the salute.

BOATS BEFORE THE ARK.

Paintings In Egypt Show That Noah Did Not Invent Ships.

It is popularly supposed that Noah's ark is the first ship of which we have any record, but Egypt, that land of mysteries and surprises, shows paintings of boats that were built and navigated at a far earlier period than 2840 B. C., which is the date usually assigned to the flood. It may have been one of her boats thus pictured that provided Noah and his three sons with a proper model for the ark, though the proportions must have been different or fewer animals can't have existed.

J. de Morgan, the French Egyptologist, several years ago discovered in brick vaults near Cairo a number of boats that are certainly as old as the date at which the ark was built and perhaps a bit older. They are, it is true, but small craft, measuring 33 feet long, 7 or 8 wide and 30 to 36 inches deep. They resemble in general form the pictures painted by early Egyptian artists, which show what boats were used seventy and even eighty centuries ago. And today when the fellah steps aboard his small oar propelled skiff he uses a vessel the shape of which has been little imporved during the ages that have passed since the shepherd kings ruled the valley of the Nile.—Philadelphia North American.

Shoddy Boots.

Boots and shoes in England have been subject to a very considerable fall in prices of late years. Partly this is owing to the use of machinery, partly to the employment of lads where men used to do the work, partly to the use of what was formerly waste material and partly to sheer dodgery and trickery. Men's lace boots are now to be bought for 2s. 11d. They are made of leather, too, and to look at them you might think it genuine enough.

The truth is, however, the uppers are made of what are known as "center splits," and the soles are an artificial compound of leather waste. The "center splits" are very ingenious forms of shoddy. Good, honest skins are cunningly split into three thicknesses. The center sheet is soft and spongy and has no natural grain upon it. But this defect in its appearance is supplied by a process of printing which produces a surface "grain" and makes it, to the inexperienced eye, just like ordinary leather. It is then made up into boots that give every promise of good service, a promise to the eye, to parody Macbeth—pretty certainly destined to be broken to the hope.—Chambers' Journal.

Thunderstorms at Sea.

An electric storm at sea is one of the alarming experiences to which a mariner is exposed, but as a matter of record it is one that is least fruitful in disastrous results. As a rule few precautions are taken to guard against a stroke of lightning, especially in the merchant service. Ships of war are usually fitted with lightning conductors, a precaution made necessary by the explosives stored away in their magazines. But these safeguards are seldom seen on a merchant vessel, and, judging by the extreme rarity of the cases where they have been struck, Jack's claim that he is safer on the ocean than on shore during an electrical disturbance must be admitted.

It is a well established theory that one caught in a thunderstorm should not take shelter under a tall tree, especially if it stands in a clearing. Why lightning should strike an isolated piece of timber on shore and spare it after it has been converted into a vessel's mast is yet to be satisfactorily explained.

GAS HEARING.

Officials of Citizens' Company Heard.

A Very Unsatisfactory Showing.

Company Paying Interest on Mysterious Debt.

Another day will be necessary for Quincy gas hearing at the State House, for the Committee on Public Lighting found it necessary at 12.30 today to continue the hearing until Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

Time will admit of only a brief synopsis of the testimony which was wholly by officials of the Citizens' Gas Light Company.

A. C. Burnham, Esq., appeared for Carter, Blodgett & Co., and requested a continuance.

When this was denied he gave the history of the company, which was rather uncomplimentary to Quincy as a progressive municipality. The present owners had taken control after others had failed to make it a success, and had been forced into it.

Calvin Austin, the treasurer, was the first witness. Had run the Company to the best of his ability for profit. Had yield $14,000 gross per year. Saw little hope of profits from extensions of mains. Would sell at fair value.

Questioned by committee, he placed the value of plant at about $100,000. Original costs had been $38,000. Could not explain how $100,000 was made up. Had 14 miles of mains, and manufactured 10,000,000 feet of gas per year. There was a very large leakage of gas.

John Lennon, the superintendent, explained the works. Was surprised to hear leakage was so large. Knew that the laying of sewer pipes had caused leakages. The gas furnished was as good a coal gas as any manufactured in state. Had made practically no extensions while superintendent the past six years.

Henry N. Greely, the auditor since 1891, said that when he first examined the books he found they had been falsified. Purchasers had been surprised to learn of notes against company. Had paid no dividends. Had paid interest on note, debt and earnings of $2,000 to $3,000.

A more extended report tomorrow.

Rights of Chinese Parents.

The law and custom of China still give the parents supreme control over their children. As far as it is possible for an outsider to get to know this people, whose "ways are dark," it does appear that this power of life and death is not often exercised unless in the case of infants. Now and again, however, instances occur which prove that this barbarous right is still claimed and exercised.

A man in the Nam Hoi district has just put his son to death in a most cruel fashion, and the law takes no cognizance of the murder, for surely it cannot be called by any other name. The boy had been often reproved for associating with gamblers and robbers, and his record was a bad one. This much may be said in extenuation of the father's diabolical act. For a long time the father was unable to lay hands on his son. This he succeeded in doing by offering a reward to any one who could bring him home. During the day of his return the father gave no evidence of his wicked designs. This put the lad off his guard. But when night came the father threw off his mask, seized his son, bound him hand and foot and then proceeded leisurely to strangle him.—China Mail.

The Nose Indicates Character.

A large nose is always an unfailing sign of a decided character. It belongs to the man of action, quick to see and to seize opportunity. A small nose indicates a passive nature, one less apt to act, although he may feel as deeply. He will have many theories, while the possessor of a large nose will have deeds to show. Persons with small noses are most loving and sympathizing, but their friendship is not the active kind.

A nose with the tip slightly tilted is the sign of the heartless flirt. A long nose shows dignity and repose, a short nose pugnacity and a love of gayety. An arched nose—one projecting at the bridge—shows thought. A straight nose shows an inclination toward serious subjects. A nose turning up slightly indicates eloquence, wit and imagination. If turned up much it shows egotism and love of luxury. A nose that slopes out directly from the forehead, that shows no indenting between the eyes, indicates power. If the nose is indented deeply at the root the subject will be weak and vacillating. A nose that turns down signifies that the possessor is miserly and sarcastic.—Ladies' Home Journal.

COL. F. W. PARKER.

"I can, however bear my testimony now after the lapse of a quarter of a century, both to the work Col. Parker then did, and to the skill, zeal, and energy with which he did it. Twenty-five years is no small space of time. Their passage clears the vision, and, through their prospective matters are apt to bear an aspect very different from that which they bore at the time of their occurrence. They are subjected to the test of sober retrospect. Yet looking back thus, under wholly different conditions, I can fairly say of Col. Parker's work in Quincy, that I see no reason for modifying the judgment of it I have heretofore expressed, and long since put on record. It was a genuine educational, new departure, I might almost say creation. I never have seen—do not now see any occasion to revise my opinion concerning it, or to think, were the experience to be gone over again, that my own part in it would be otherwise than what it was. It is to me a very great satisfaction to feel that I was in some degree instrumental in the accomplishment of such good work, and work of such permanent character."—Charles Francis Adams of Quincy School Committee of 1875.

"You want to know how it seemed to the pupils when Col. Parker was here among us, whether we realized that we were specimens in a pedagogical labratory or not, and what we learned? It is a pleasant task you assign. The memory of those days is very vivid. Three years of unmitigated monotony under the old regime made me keenly appreciative of the new.

"If any one word can accurately describe a pupil's life in the Quincy schools from 1875 to 1880, that word is happy all the time. School was one long joy. It was the alertness of the life that made it so joyful. Every moment was full of doing and thinking.

"Col. Parker himself was very closely related to our whole school life. He knew us all by name, and just what each of us could do best. Sometimes, into the orderly strife and the happy excitement of a lesson, he suddenly entered, and his entrance was always the signal for the sharpening of wits, for questions which set us thinking, often for days, were sure to follow. We always had a sense that everything we were doing was done for him. Often we wrote in answer to his special request, and often he spoke to us about papers of ours which he had seen."—Miss Mabel E. Adams, a pupil of 1875-80, and member of present School Board.

It was an account of Col. Parker's work in Quincy which I read many years ago that brought me to an appreciation of the defects and the needs of the public school system in this country and particularly in the cities. Ever since that time, I have watched Col. Parker's course very carefully. He has been a great source of inspiration and encouragement to me, as I know he has been to teachers all over this land. He has stood fearlessly for what he believed to be right. His example and his words have been of everlasting service to this country.—William H. Maxwell, superintendent New York city.

"To my mind, all that is considered best in or worth while in the teaching of today, was Col. Parker's ideal a quarter of a century ago, and was being worked out by him as conditions allowed. And, not the least significant testimonial to the truth and value of his work is the fact that what in it was most severely criticised then, is now approved everywhere even by those who fought the valiant Colonel most vehemently. That he met with bitter opposition is true; but war is action; and action is life."—Miss Mary E. Dearborn, principal Coddington school, Quincy.

"But not alone was Quincy affected; the "new departure" had the sympathy of every progressive teacher in the State and more or less affected every school for good. As I look back through this period of twenty-five years, I believe it is not too much to say that it caused throughout the entire country, a more liberal spirit to prevail in all that pertains to school administration, in school government, in courses of study and in methods of teaching. Of this, I am sure, the success of the Quincy experiment went far towards making school supervision by superintendents universal in Massachusetts."—George A. Walton.

Proposed Improvement.

Plans have been made for a one story addition to the front of the Tirrell block on Hancock street. The width of the addition will be about seven feet at the corner occupied by Williams, the jeweller, and it will run to nothing. The front will be remodelled so as to conform with the modern ideas. The addition will give Mr. Williams quite a material addition to his store and will be a great improvement. The plans also call for the cutting off of the front of the room occupied by the New York & Boston express to back of the bow window.

MILTON.

Felix Rackerman was moderator at Milton's town meeting Monday, Albert A. Brackett and Jacob A. Turner were re-elected as Selectman with Maurice A. Duffy who succeeds Hiram Tuell.

Dr. Charles R. Gilchrist defeated Thomas K. Cummins, Jr., for Board of Health.

Several articles brought out spirited debates especially that to see if the town would instruct the Selectmen to take such action as necessary to procure the passage of bills before the Legislature relating to the Milton water supply. The vote was passed and $1,000 appropriated for that purpose.

Dr. Leslie explained the bills providing for a pure water supply and the repeal of the Water Company's charter.

Charles S. Rackerman counsel for the Water Company said this was not the place for a hearing.

Dr. Charles Minot charged the citizens' committee with not having been fair with the Board of Health and that the excitment in regard to the water was unnecessary.

J. Malcom Forbes spoke in defense of the Water Company, and J. Walter Bradlee spoke in favor of the bills before the Legislature.

The sum of $50,000 was appropriated for a new public library on the site donated. The article relative to pensioning members of the police department was postponed.

The license vote was yes, 198; No 439.

The principal appropriations were as follows: Appropriation — Schools, $60,800; streets, $44,000; cemetery, $2,000; public library, $6,650 and dog tax; support of poor, $10,000; soldiers' relief, $1,000; fire department, 20,550; police department, $23,265; street lighting, $13,380; salaries of town officers, $8950; town hall and lot, $2,400; state aid, $1,420; printing, $1,650; miscellaneous expenses, $19,500; health department, $1,500; hydrant rental, $9,000; Huntington F. Wolcott post 102, G. A. R., for Memorial day, $200; insurance on town buildings, $2,000; transportation of scholars, $2,500; plans and clerk hire for board of assessors, $475; general uses board of park commissioners $100; use of tree warden, $1,000; collection of ashes, $1,500; separation of street surface drainage from sewerage system in Lower Mills section, $1,800; sewer department, $1,000; placing town wires in village and on Randolph avenue underground, $1,300.

Statistics state that seven hundred and fifty babies were born in Quincy during the year 1901.

Our records show that we sold twice as many preambulators during the season as in any previous year.

Our 1902 styles of Go Carts and Carriages have just arrived. Handsomer, nattier or more attractive baby chariots never have been seen.

Our low prices make them all the more interesting—$3.98 to $25.00.

Parsley Honey.

It is very seldom that we come across honey that is not fit for human consumption, but it is just possible that you may have that experience. Bees gather honey for themselves, not for us, and they naturally study themselves only. It generally happens, fortunately for us, that what suits them is also good for man, but there are exceptions.

The honey that bees gather from parsley is likely to make man feel very ill indeed. Probably that honey does not disagree with the collector, or it may occasionally be gathered and placed with the rest by mistake. There is just the chance that it is done for purposes of revenge by one member of the community who considers himself aggrieved and vents his spite on his fellows.

Hemlock honey may be innocuous to the bee, but it is likely to poison man and give him a decidedly bad time if not kill him.

The plant known as green fly will yield honey with a taste that will make a human being lose all desire for the treasures of the beehive.

Steamer and Crew Missing

Halifax, March 4.—The British steamer Tiber, from Louisburg, C. B., for Halifax, with a cargo of coal, is missing, and it is feared that she has foundered with her captain and crew of 20 men. The steamer left Louisburg last Wednesday afternoon and should have arrived here on Thursday night. Dispatches received here confirm the theory that the steamer and crew have been lost.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER III.

THE distance between Moscow and Irkutsk, about to be traversed by Michael Strogoff, was 5,200 versts. Before the telegraph wire extended from the Ural mountains to the eastern frontier of Siberia the dispatch service was performed by couriers, those who traveled the most rapidly taking eighteen days to get from Moscow to Irkutsk.

In the first place, however, he must not travel as a courier of the czar usually would. No one must even suspect what he really was. Spies swarm in a rebellious country. Let him be recognized, and his mission would be in danger. Also, while supplying him with a large sum of money, which was sufficient for his journey and would facilitate it in some measure, General Kissoff had no. given him any document specifying that he was in the emperor's service, which is the sesame par excellence. He contented himself with furnishing him with a podorojna.

The podorojna was made out in the name of Nicholas Korpanoff, merchant, living at Irkutsk. It authorized Nicholas Korpanoff to be accompanied, if requisite, by one or more persons, and, moreover, it was by special notification made available in the event of the Muscovite government forbidding natives of any other countries to leave Russia.

The podorojna is simply a permission to take post horses, but Michael Strogoff was not to use it unless he was sure that by so doing he would not excite suspicion as to his mission—that is to say, while he was on European territory. The consequence was that in Siberia, while traversing the insurgent provinces, he would have no power over the relays either in the choice of horses in preference to others or in demanding conveyances for his personal use. Neither was Michael Strogoff to forget that he was no longer a courier, but a plain merchant, Nicholas Korpanoff, traveling from Moscow to Irkutsk, and as such exposed to all the impediments of an ordinary journey.

To pass unknown more or less rapidly, but to pass somehow or other—such were the directions he had received.

Thirty years previously the escort of a traveler of rank consisted of not less than 200 mounted Cossacks, 200 foot soldiers, 25 Baskir horsemen, 300 camels, 400 horses, 25 wagons, 2 portable boats and 2 pieces of cannon. All this was requisite for a journey in Siberia.

Michael Strogoff, however, had neither cannon nor horsemen nor foot soldiers nor beasts of burden. He would travel in a carriage or on horseback when he could, on foot when he could not.

There would be no difficulty in getting over the first 1,500 versts, the distance between Moscow and the Russian frontier. Railroads, post carriages, steamboats, relays of horses, were at every one's disposal and consequently at the disposal of the courier of the czar.

Accordingly on the morning of the 16th of July, having doffed his uniform, with a knapsack on his back, dressed in the simple Russian costume, tightly fitting tunic, the traditional belt of the moujik, wide trousers, gartered at the knees, and high boots, Michael Strogoff arrived at the station in time for the first train. He carried no arms, openly at least, but under his belt was hidden a revolver and in his pocket one of those large knives with which a Siberian hunter can so neatly disembowel a bear without injuring its precious fur.

A crowd of travelers had collected at the Moscow station. The stations on the Russian railroads are much used as places for meeting not only by those who are about to proceed by the train, but by friends who come to see them off. It indeed resembles from the variety of characters assembled a small news exchange.

The train in which Michael took his place was to set him down at Nijni Novgorod. There terminated at that time the iron road which, uniting Moscow and St. Petersburg, will eventually continue to the Russian frontier. It was a journey of about 400 versts, and the train would accomplish it in ten hours. Once arrived at Nijni Novgorod, Strogoff would, according to circumstances, either take the land route or the steamer on the Volga, so as to reach the Ural mountains as soon as possible.

Michael Strogoff ensconsed himself in his corner like a worthy citizen whose affairs go well with him and who endeavors to kill time by sleep.

Nevertheless, as he was not alone in his compartment, he slept with one eye open and listened with both his ears.

In fact, the rumor of the rising of the Kirghiz hordes and of the Tartar invasion had transpired in some degree. The occupants of the carriage, whom chance had made his traveling companions, discussed the subject, though with that caution which has become habitual among Russians, who know that spies are ever on the watch for any treasonable expressions which may be uttered.

A vacant place was found opposite the courier of the czar. The young girl took it after placing by her side a modest traveling bag of red leather which seemed to constitute her luggage. Then, seating herself with downcast eyes, she prepared for a journey which was still to last several hours.

Michael Strogoff could not help looking attentively at his newly arrived fellow traveler. As she was so placed as to travel with her back to the engine, he even offered her his seat, which she might prefer to her own, but she thanked him with a slight bend of her graceful neck.

The young girl appeared to be about sixteen or seventeen years of age. Her head, truly charming, was of the purest Slavonic type—slightly severe, and which would when a few summers had passed over her unfold into beauty rather than mere prettiness. From beneath a sort of kerchief which she wore on her head escaped in profusion light golden hair. Her eyes were brown, soft and expressive of much sweetness of temper. The nose was straight and attached to her pale and somewhat thin cheeks by delicate mobile nostrils. The lips were finely cut, but it seemed as if they had long since forgotten how to smile.

The young traveler was tall and upright, as well as could be judged of her figure from the very simple and ample pelisse that covered her. Although she was still a very young girl in the literal sense of the term, the development of her high forehead and clearly cut features gave the idea that she was the possessor of a great moral energy, a point which did not escape Michael Strogoff. Evidently this young girl had already suffered in the past, and the future doubtless did not present itself to her in glowing colors. But it was none the less certain that she had known how to struggle and that she had resolved to struggle still with the trials of life. Her energy was evidently prompt and persistent and her calmness unalterable even under circumstances in which a man would be likely to give way or lose his self command.

Such was the impression which she produced at first sight. Michael Strogoff, being himself of an energetic temperament, was naturally struck by the character of her physiognomy, and, while taking care not to cause her annoyance by a too persistent gaze, he observed his neighbor with no small interest. The costume of the young traveler was both extremely simple and appropriate. She was not rich—that could easily be seen—but not the slightest mark of negligence was to be discerned in her dress. All her luggage was contained in a leather bag under lock and key, and which, for want of room, she held on her lap.

She wore a long, dark pelisse, which was gracefully adjusted at the neck by a blue tie. Under this pelisse a short skirt, also dark, fell over a robe which reached to her ankles and of which the lower edge was ornamented with some simple embroidery. Half boots of worked leather and thickly soled, as if chosen in the anticipation of a long journey, covered her small feet.

Michael Strogoff fancied that he recognized by certain details the fashion of the costume of Livonia, and he thought that his neighbor must be a native of the Baltic provinces.

But whither was this young girl going alone at an age when the fostering care of a father or the protection of a brother is considered a matter of necessity? Had she now come after an already long journey from the provinces of western Russia? Was she merely going to Nijni Novgorod, or was the end of her travels beyond the eastern frontier of the empire? Would some relation, some friend, await her arrival by the train, or was it not more probable, on the contrary, that she would find herself as much isolated in the town as she was in this compartment, where no one, she must think, appeared to care for her? It was probable.

Michael Strogoff observed her with interest, but, himself reserved, he sought no opportunity of accosting her, although several hours must elapse before the arrival of the train at Nijni Novgorod.

Having a Run on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Between the hours of eleven o'clock a. m. and closing time at night on Jan. 25th, 1901, A. F. Clark, druggist, Glade Springs, Va., sold twelve bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says, "I never handled a medicine that sold better or gave better satisfaction to my customers." This Remedy has been in general use in Virginia for many years, and the people there are well acquainted with its excellent qualities. Many of them have testified to the remarkable cures which it has effected. When you need a good, reliable medicine for a cough or cold, or attack of the grip, use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and you are certain to be more than pleased with the quick cure which it affords. For sale by all druggists.

THE SHIPPING INDUSTRY

Frye Does Not Think It Has Had the Protection It Deserves

Washington, March 4.—Yesterday the senate began consideration of what is popularly known as the shipping bill, a measure to provide for ocean mail service between the United States and foreign ports and for the common defense; to promote commerce and to encourage deep sea fisheries. Mr. Frye, chairman of the committee on commerce, made the opening statements in support of the bill. He occupied the floor for nearly two hours. The policy of protection, which has been applied to American industries with such beneficial results, he said, had not been applied to the shipping industry. The result of this short-sighted policy had been the decadence of the American merchant marine and the consequent humiliation of Americans engaged in the shipping industry. Mr Frye's address was largely technical, but his argument was listened to with close attention. Prior to the consideration of the shipping bill many minor measures were passed.

The house yesterday began consideration of the bill to classify the rural free delivery service and to place the carriers under the contract system. The debate was interrupted by the presentation of the conference report on the Philippine tariff bill. Mr. Payne declined to allow the minority more than 30 minutes in which to discuss the report and this offer was rejected. A filibuster followed and the house adjourned after the previous question on the adoption of the report had been ordered.

Funston Says There Is No War

New York, March 4.—Brigadier General Funston, who is in this city en route to Washington to learn if he is to go back to the Philippines when his furlough expires in April, had a talk last night with a Herald reporter and is quoted as saying: "There is no more war in the Philippines than there is in Kentucky. Assassins lurk in the cane and shoot down men who are at their mercy, but there are no soldiers in the field to battle with the United States troops. Even respectable guerilla warfare has ceased. There has been no fighting in any of the Philippine provinces for nearly six months. In my opinion, one half of our troops might be brought home now, and at the end of a year one half of these remaining might be returned.

Friends of Beet Interests

Washington, March 4.—The Republican members of the house, who met in conference last night to consider the Cuban relief question, after three hours of fruitless discussion adjourned until Thursday without action. Messrs. Fordney and Morris of Minnesota held the floor throughout the evening. Much feeling was manifested. Political disaster to the Republican party in the beet sugar states was predicted if the tariff on sugar was lowered for the benefit of the Cubans when another solution was opened.

Miss Stone to Lecture

Indianapolis, March 4.—Ellen M. Stone, the missionary, has contracted to lecture for the Chautauqua societies of the country during the summer and it is under this contract that she will visit Indianapolis. S. C. Dickey, secretary of the International Chautauqua society, received a telegram yesterday from G. C. Cregan, secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions, to the effect that Miss Stone has cabled her acceptance of the offer of the Chautauqua alliance.

Barge Grounded and Burned

New York, March 4.—The barge Carbon, from Philadelphia for New Bedford, loaded with coal, was burned at sea yesterday, 10 miles off Cape May. The crew was rescued by the tug Sea King and brought here. The barge grounded, which caused a stove to overturn and set fire to the vessel.

Bad News From India

London, March 4.—The Viceroy of India telegraphs that the rainfall has been light and scattered, and of no benefit to the affected districts. About 359,000 persons are now receiving relief. A dispatch from Lahore says 3,000,000 acres of wheat in the Punjab are suffering from total drought.

Wife Murder and Suicide

Newark, N. J., March 4.—Charles Andrews, a negro, killed his wife, set fire to her room and cut his own throat and died here last evening. Andrews was shiftless and his wife supported him. When he was discharged from a job a week ago she told him to shift for himself.

Bridge and Men Carried Away

Passaic, N. J., March 4.—The old Outwater bridge, connecting Passaic and Outwater's Lane, went out, carrying with it six unknown men. They were standing on the bridge watching the flood when the structure parted in the middle and went down stream in fragments.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Wednesday, March 5.
Sun rises—6:15; sets—5:38.
Moon rises—3.10 a. m.
High water—7:15 a. m.; 7:45 p. m.

The flood situation continues to improve, the Ohio, Tennessee and the rivers of southern South Carolina alone remaining at flood stages. Snow has been quite general from the upper Mississippi valley and upper lake region eastward. It is somewhat colder in the Atlantic states. Reports from the Pacific coast states are again missing. A storm of decided energy is central over Texas. It has an apparent eastward movement. It will be attended by rain extending into the south portion of the middle Atlantic states. In New England it will be fair and colder. On the coast the winds will be fresh west.

GERMANY AND AMERICA

Have Every Reason For Mutual Esteem

VISIT OF PRINCE HENRY

Has No Political Object Save Upholding Traditional Good Relations—Complete Reciprocity of Interests Will Exist In the Remote Future

Berlin, March 4.—In the reichstag yesterday Herr Hasse (Liberal), in referring to the visit of Prince Henry to the United States, said he was glad to see that it had frustrated the designs of Great Britain against a German-American understanding, but he thought that the German element in the United States was a power which would not and should not build up a state within a state.

Herr Gradnauer (Social Democrat) ridiculed the idea that any advantage would arise from Prince Henry's visit. He said that it was very ingenuous to expect any improvement in the relations between Germany and the United States as the result from such a journey.

In replying to Herr Gradnauer, Count Von Buelow said that he deeply regretted the remarks of the last speaker, especially in view of the splendid welcome that Prince Henry was receiving from the American people. This remark of Count Von Buelow was greeted with applause from all sections of the house.

The imperial chancellor went on to say that the journey of the emperor's brother had no political object save the natural one of upholding the traditional good relations between Prussia, Germany and the United States, which had existed since the days of the great Frederick and the great Washington.

"Both nations," said Count Von Buelow, "have every reason for mutual esteem. They have no occasion whatever to besmirch one another or dispute with one another. They have every interest for living in peace and friendship, based upon complete reciprocity, even in the most remote future. My eye perceives no point where the political ways of the German and American peoples cross. I made this statement in this house some three years ago. I was then under the impression that I was in sympathy with the great majority of this house. Of this I am now convinced. I am not saying this for Germany alone, but also for abroad. I am further convinced that I also agree with the great majority of this house when I recognize that the German people have viewed with lively satisfaction the hospitable, chivalrous and brilliant reception which the American nation has accorded the brother of the German emperor."

The imperial chancellor concluded his remarks amid the applause of the house.

Count Von Buelow also assured the reichstag that there was not the slightest likelihood nor desirability of Germany taking any steps to interfere in the course of affairs in South Africa. Such a course, the speaker said, was not in accordance with German interests and policy.

Deputy Sheriff Killed

Easton, Md., March 4.—Thomas J. Thompson, a deputy sheriff, was shot and instantly killed while attempting to rearrest Lewis Green, a negro murderer, who had escaped with five other prisoners from the Easton jail. Green and his two brothers are locked up, pending an investigation which may terminate in a lynching. It is not known whether Lewis Green or one of his brothers fired the shot which killed Thompson.

EYES SPEAK

Volumes, at times, of woman's happiness or misery. The dull, sunken eye, with its dark circles almost surely speaks of womanly ill-health, and its attendant suffering. With the dull eye goes usually the sallow, sunken cheek, the drawn mouth, the shrunken form—the whole glory of woman's beauty marred by the effects of disease.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the diseases which undermine the health and mar the beauty of women. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free, and so obtain the advice of a specialist upon their disease. All correspondence is strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"With pleasure I send a few lines to let you know that I feel much better than for eight years before taking your medicine," writes Mrs. Pierce Geise, of 522 West Phila. Street, York, Pa. "Will recommend Dr. Pierce's medicine to every person who may inquire as to what it has done for me. I was troubled with female weakness, and began to think I would never be well. If I had continued the treatment prescribed by my doctor I don't know what would have become of me. When your treatment was commenced my weight was 108 pounds, at present it is 130. Have healthy color and my friends say I look well. My best thanks to you and my best wishes, too, for what you have done for me."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the clogged system from accumulated impurities.

THE LICENSE QUESTION

The Principal Feature of Town Meeting Day In Massachusetts

Boston, March 4.—The town meeting held full sway in a great many towns of Massachusetts yesterday. The farmers from the rugged hills, the mill hands and the leisure class all met on common ground and elected a new town government, voting supplies and appropriations, and finally deciding the important question as to whether or not licenses to sell intoxicating liquors should be granted during the coming year.

There were many warm contests and there were some changes in the attitude toward liquor selling. Rockland, after trying license for a year, went back to prohibition in a contest which shook up the town so vigorously that it interested nearly the whole of Plymouth county. Hull, as usual, voted strongly for license, and is the only town in Plymouth county in which liquor will be sold this year. Wrachendon, in the northern tier of towns, also voted to return to a no license community. Three adjacent towns—Natick, Framingham and Ashland—all favored liquor selling after being dry for a year. Dracut, which became famous not long ago as affording relief to the thirsty inhabitants of the city of Lowell during a dry year there, again decided to permit liquor selling after abstaining for a year.

Special Jury Session Necessary

Cambridge, Mass., March 4.—District Attorney Sanderson is taking steps to have J. W. Blondin, the suspected wife murderer, immediately indicted in Middlesex county because of the fact that Mrs. Blondin's body was found in Middlesex county. It will be necessary to call a special session of the Middlesex jury in order to procure the indictment, as the next regular term does not begin until next summer.

Judge Draws Fine Lines

Dover, N. H., March 4.—A decision which staggered the opponents of liquor selling was given by Justice Nason in the municipal court here yesterday, who decided that the word "beer" signified nothing within the meaning of the statutes prohibiting the sale of liquor in New Hampshire. Two defendants were ordered discharged because, the judge said, it had not been proved that beer contained malt.

May Have to Share Burdens

Providence, March 4.—Present indications point to the probability that Rhode Island manufacturers may be forced to follow the course of Fall River concerns and grant their operatives an advance of 10 percent. Rhode Island mill owners have been endeavoring to break away from the influence of Massachusetts concerns, but have been striving to compete with the product of Massachusetts mills.

Mill Undermined by Flood

Brookfield, Mass., March 4.—A large pulp factory of James Ermage at Monroe Bridge, on the Deerfield river, was undermined yesterday and practically destroyed. The loss is estimated at $40,000. The mill was three stories high and 100 feet long, and has been built only a little over a year. It had a capacity of 20 tons of pulp a day.

Induction and Resignation

Fall River, Mass., March 4.—City Clerk Warren S. Barker, who was inducted into office yesterday, handed his resignation to the mayor last night. Barker stated that he accepted the nomination with great reluctance, owing to a press of private business. He will hold the position, however, until his successor is elected.

Inquest Developed Nothing New

Keene, N. H., March 4.—The inquest on the body of Mrs. Jennie C. Jennings, who died on Feb. 20 last under circumstances which led the authorities to have the body disinterred last week, began yesterday. Three witnesses were examined, but no important facts were developed. The inquest will be continued.

Corbin Killed Himself

Haverhill, Mass., March 4.—The body of Driver Timothy Corbin of hose wagon No. 2, whose mysterious disappearance on Nov. 21 caused searching parties to be out two weeks, was picked up yesterday by some clam diggers in Newburyport harbor. The finding of the body supports the theory of suicide.

Many Exposed to Smallpox

West Acton, Mass., March 4.—There was great alarm and excitement here yesterday, when it was learned that three members of the family of A. T. Goding are very sick with the smallpox. They have been circulating freely about the town and several hundred persons have been exposed to the disease.

Ikey Held For Grand Jury

Rutland, Vt., March 4.—Alexander Ikey, who killed his wife with an axe at Wells, last Thursday afternoon, was arraigned before Justice Farnsworth yesterday and bound over to await the action of the grand jury, without bail. His attorney entered a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity.

Will Hunt Up Derelicts

Newport, R. I., March 4.—United States cruiser Cincinnati is here for a supply of torpedoes for the destruction of derelicts. The ship will cruise along the coast and over the regular routes followed by ocean liners and destroy such floating wrecks as may be found.

Legal Complications Too Great

Washington, March 4.—The sub-committee on inter-oceanic canals yesterday agreed to recommend to the full committee that the legal complications surrounding the Panama offer are such that the United States should not accept it. This sub-committee consists of Senators Morgan, Mitchell, Kittridge, Pritchard, Foster and Turner.

All Milwaukee Turned Out to See Prince Henry

MANY FROM FATHERLAND

Participated In the Public Reception—Interesting Night Run by Fire Department—Banquet and Electrical Display Wound Up the Day

Milwaukee, March 5.—Milwaukee was host to Prince Henry for six hours last evening. It gave him a reception that was highly enthusiastic and entertainment that was unique. His special train arrived at 4 o'clock and at 10 o'clock it was away again on the long run to Niagara and New England. The intervening time was all given over to the pleasure of the royal visitor.

It began with a drive through business and residential districts before a crowd which numbered 200,000. Then there was a public reception at which Governor La Follette and Mayor Rose voiced the official welcome, and the United singing societies sang in chorus. There was also a splendid illumination and a night run by the Milwaukee fire department. Later there was a banquet at which the prince met the leading citizens of the city and the state.

Just outside of the depot 1000 veterans of the German wars were drawn up when Prince Henry arrived. They had come here from different points in the state and they gave the prince a volley of cheers as he passed them. The business streets were blockaded with people and the police had to fight to keep a driveway clear.

Prince Henry was given the honor of riding in the first carriage to cross the new Grand Avenue-Wisconsin street bridge and, as this point was reached, Battery A fired a salute of 21 guns.

The reception of the prince as he drove through the streets was wildly enthusiastic and there was an ovation when he entered the exposition building for the public reception. As he appeared on the stage, escorted by his staff and the reception committee, the chorus of 600 voices sang "Des Deutsch Lied." There were 10,000 persons packed in the exposition building. Chairman Johnson briefly introduced Mayor Rose, who formally welcomed the prince. The mayor gave way to P. V. Deuster, who spoke on behalf of the German residents and in their tongue. Governor La Follette then welcomed the prince to Milwaukee on behalf of the state. Captain Court, who also spoke in German, was the last speaker. The great chorus sang again and the prince left the hall amid cheers.

The fire run followed the public reception, and it made a spectacle that was both novel and exciting. Thirty-two pieces of apparatus were raced for a mile at high speed. They ran two abreast and 200 feet apart. Darkness had come and the engine lights made the picture all the more inspiring.

The prince was then driven through illuminated streets to the Hotel Pfister, where the banquet was served. The illumination was very pretty, being made by hundreds of strings of electric lights. Hundreds of buildings were outlined in light and high upon the tower of the city hall in incandescent lights were the words: "Welcome to H. R. H. Prince Henry."

Especially pretty was the lighting of the Court of Honor on Grand avenue. When the prince was driven through the court the chimes in the tower of St. James Episcopal church played the national airs of the United States and Germany and Luther's hymn. Crowds thronged the streets during the evening with the hotel Pfister as the common objective.

$10,000 Gift For Prince

Boston, March 5.—Prince Henry will be presented a Masonic emblem during the banquet at the Hotel Somerset in this city. The donor is Mrs. P. C. Goodwin, who wishes as a "typical American woman" to present the gift as an expression of American goodwill to Germany. The emblem is in the form of a square and compass. It was made in California. The gold alone and the diamonds with which it is studded are said to be valued at $10,000. The gold for the emblem came from a nugget found by Mrs. Goodwin's husband while a "forty-niner." Mr. Goodwin was for 53 years a Mason and for 15 years grand treasurer of Connecticut. Mrs. Goodwwin has made the fraternity many valuable gifts from time to time.

Leniency Shown Wakefield

Cambridge, Mass., March 5.—William C. Wakefield, convicted of the charge of larceny and perjury, was yesterday sentenced to the reformatory at Concord. Judge Bond said that the circumstances in this case were such that he felt that the young man was not the principal offender.

VALUE OF X-RAY

Demonstrated In Case of a Child Who Had Swallowed a Safety Pin

Fall River, Mass., March 5.—Sadie F. Williams, the 3½-year-old daughter of George E. Williams, is recovering from a surgical operation the attendant circumstances of which are so unusual as to excite comment in this section of the state. Some weeks ago the child sucked a safety pin into her throat, it lodging just under the vocal cord. It remained in that position about a week and local surgeons were unable to devise any means of extracting it.

Finally the X-Ray machine was taken into the case and the pin was located in the trachea. By nausea and the use of a probe an attempt was made to get the pin, but it was dislodged and fell into the branch of the bronchial tube, where it remained three weeks. Another surgeon applied the X-Ray and located the pin in the bronchial tube, at the lower end of the third rib.

Several surgeons were called into the case and, using the X-Ray photograph as a basis for their operations, a cut was made into the windpipe at its lowest extremity. After five attempts the pin was drawn out with forceps. At the time the pin was taken out it had lodged point up, and in its removal it was completely straightened out. The operation lasted for 25 minutes and the child is rapidly recovering.

Rutland's First Democratic Mayor

Rutland, Vt., March 5.—David W. Temple, Democrat, was chosen mayor yesterday by a margin of 10 votes over Mayor Hollister. The remarkable incident is that Rutland never before chose a Democrat mayor.

Mrs Munsey to Be Extradited

Concord, N. H., March 5.—After a protracted and hard fought hearing Governor Jordan yesterday granted the request of Massachusetts authorities for the extradition of Mrs. Martha S. Munsey of Pittsfield, who is wanted in Cambridge, Mass., for the alleged forgery of the will or wills of her uncle, Samuel Welch. She is now in jail in this city. It is understood that Mrs. Munsey's removal from this state will be further resisted by her counsel through habeas corpus proceedings.

Railroad Wreck In Vermont

Cambridge, Vt., March 5.—A mail train on the Central Vermont railroad was wrecked near here last evening. One passenger coach and a combination mail and express car went down a 15-foot embankment. An 8-year-old child received injuries which will cause its death. Several other passengers were injured, but not seriously. The train was running slowly, which undoubtedly saved a considerabe loss of life.

Salem, Mass., March 5.—The ocean tug Honey Brook, owned by the Central railroad of New Jersey, now ashore in Salem harbor, will probably be abandoned. The tug's back is broken, there is a big hole in its bottom and the plates are ripped from the starboard side. The vessel, which was valued at $70,000, has been stripped of everything possible to remove.

Ayer Company Bars Cigarets

Lowell, Mass., March 5.—The following notice has been posted at the works of the J. C. Ayer Company: "Believing that the smoking of cigarets is injurious to both mind and body, thereby unfitting young men for their best work; therefore after this date we will not employ any young man under 21 years of age who smokes cigarets."

Requests of Railway Employes

Providence, March 5.—The street railway employes of Providence, Pawtucket and those employed on the lines converging in this city have asked a reduction of the hours of labor from 12 to 10 daily, and a schedule of wages slightly higher than that now in force. The directors of the railroad company will return an answer within a week.

Think Six Percent Enough

Fall River, Mass., March 5.—It is not now expected that any formal meeting of the signers of the agreement to advance wages 6 percent in the local mills will be held. The signers have expressed themselves as favoring power to a committee to make the best terms possible, but in no event to advance wages more than 6 percent.

Assignment of Woolen Company

Providence, March 5.—The Greenville Woollen company, a 40-loom plant engaged in the manufacture of woollen and worsted goods, has made an assignment. No statement of assets or liabilities has been made.

OVER 250,000 SLAVES

On the Southern Islands of the Philippines

ADVANTAGES OF LIBERTY

Not Understood by Them, and They Would Probably Turn Guns Against Us If Attempts Were Made to Free Them—Whipping Is Not Unknown

Washington, March 5.—The extent of slavery in the Philippines was discussed by Governor Taft before the house insular committee yesterday in response to questions by members. He said slavery was confined to the southern Moro islands. The investigation made by Governor Taft and his associates had brought out that the slaves included men, women and children who were slaves for debt, according to the statements made by the datos. The slaves could buy their liberty, but until this was done the condition ran from generation to generation. The slaves were members of the family and the relation was comparatively mild, if it was possible to consider any form of slavery as mild.

Governor Taft said Dato Mundi had already abolished slavery by decree. How effective this was could not be stated. "It indicates," said Governor Taft, "how willing they are to consider our desires and the possibilities of eradicating the system."

The civil authorities had never recognized slavery in any way, he said, and the military had always released slaves. But the slaves did not understand the advantage of liberty, and Governor Taft said that if we attempted to end slavery by force, we would probably find the slaves turning their guns against us. The influence of the United States was, however, growing stronger and stronger for the eradication of slavery. Although our wishes had been made known, neither the civil or military authorities had said slavery must cease or war would be made.

Representative Patterson asked the number of slaves. Governor Taft replied that he and his assistants had sought to learn the number, with the idea that the nation might buy them and avert an exercise of force, but when the natives learned this they all represented themselves to be slaves. The governor estimated that about one-fourth of the southern population are slaves, or from 250,000 to 300,000, in a population of 1,000,000 to 1,500,000.

When asked how many sultans there were, Governor Taft answered that sultans and datos were as numerous as barons in Germany or justices of the peace in the United States.

In reply to a question by Mr. Patterson, Governor Taft said that the slaves were punished by their masters and whipping was not unknown to them, although there was little severity. The slaves were subject to sale, but he did not know of any separation of mothers from their children.

Chairman Cooper asked whether American women should go to the Philippines, to which Governor Taft said that they would be helpful as teachers, but he did not encourage the idea that they go in large numbers.

Being asked what annual charge on the United States would be made for the maintenance of the Philippines, Governor Taft answered that there was no reason why the United States should be called upon to pay anything toward the expenses of the insular government except for military operations. There are now $5,000,000 in gold on hand and only $2,000,000 of debt in sight. The outlook was good for a considerable income from customs, etc. He looked for a large increase of American trade in canned goods, cotton and machinery.

To Bring Ecuadorians to Time

Washington, March 5.—The navy department is informed of the departure of the cruiser Philadelphia yesterday from Panama for Guayaquil, Ecuador, where she will show the United States flag for the first time in several years. This event resident Americans have recommended as likely to have a beneficial effect upon their status in Ecuador.

An Over-Sensitive Attorney

Casper, Wyo., March 5.—County Attorney Battler has sued 175 citizens of this city for amounts which aggregate $100,000 for damage to personal reputation, which, he alleges, was caused by a petition circulated and signed by the citizens, asking that he employ an assistant in a murder trial.

Signs of a Wreck

Halifax, March 5.—A dispatch from lower Whitehead says that people there heard a steamer's bell ringing on Sunday morning at 1 o'clock. Part of a ship's boat with the name "Montreal" on it was picked up yesterday. Part of a gunwale of a boat also drifted ashore.

Boers to See Hay

Washington, March 5.—Messrs. Wessels and Wolmarans, accompanied by Montague White, have arranged for a reception by Secretary Hay. This reception will be purely unofficial. The Boer delegates are reserved when questioned as to their mission.

Wind Eighty Miles an Hour

Austin, March 5.—Texas was wind swept yesterday from the Pan-Handle to the gulf. At times the wind attained a speed of 80 miles an hour. Several trains were very late. In many places the winds piled sand high on the tracks.

A Son's Unhappy Reception

Mount Pleasant, Pa., March 5.—Three miners employed at the Standard mine were on a cage which was conveying them to the top when one of the three lost his hold. In an endeavor to save himself he pulled down the other two with him and all were instantly killed. Alex Srebe was one of the victims. A son of his came to the Standard last evening from Europe, and arrived about the time of the death of his father.

Moody For Naval Secretary

Washington, March 5.—Prominent in the list of possible successors to Secretary Long when he shall have retired from the cabinet is the name of William H. Moody, a Republican representative from Massachusetts and a connection of Senator Lodge by marriage, it is said. Mr. Moody is 49 years old, a graduate of Harvard, a lawyer by profession, and has served three consecutive terms in congress.

Russia and France Hobnobbing

Paris, March 5.—The Figaro says this morning that President Loubet received an autograph letter from the czar yesterday inviting him to visit St. Petersburg. This letter will be submitted to the cabinet. The end of May may be decided upon as the time for the visit, and M. Loubet will stay in Russia four days.

Abandoned at Sea

Halifax, March 5.—The American schooner Laura, lumber laden, from Savannah, Ga., for New York, was abandoned in a sinking condition on Feb. 16. The captain and crew of six men were rescued by the Norwegian bark Fortune and landed at Chester. They arrived here last night and later left for Boston.

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. Among the tens of thousands who have used it for the grip, not one case has ever been reported that did not recover. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

It would not be a New England March without snow storms and rough weather, and Prince Henry is likely to be greeted with one tomorrow.

Quincy did not wait until the death of Col. Parker, to pronounce an eulogy. The twenty-fifth anniversary of his coming to this city, celebrated in April, 1900, was the occasion of many complimentary things of the Colonel and also of the "Quincy method." It will long be remembered in educational circles.

It would be interesting to know how many houses there are in Quincy off the gas mains, which are piped for gas. Certainly there are a great many. The counsel and officials of the Citizens Gas Company at the hearing claimed that there had been no development in Quincy, but this was a gross libel on the city, and not calculated to make friends among her citizens. The Assessors figures for 1901 show that there were on May 1 of that year 4527 houses in the city, and that the increase has been over 100 each year since 1885, and in one year 236. That the number of houses increased from 1753 in 1880 to 4527 in 1901. That 2774 houses have been built in 21 years, or over 60 per cent. of all the houses now in the city. Half the houses in Quincy have been built since 1886, and a large percentage of these have modern improvments, and a great many are piped for gas, but are unable to use gas because the streets are not piped and the price per foot is exorbitant.

By any comparison, Quincy will show rapid and almost marvelous growth. In 1860, when the Gas Company was organized, the population was 16,778; now it is four times that. The valuation then was $3,716,850; now it is about six times as large.

People of Quincy today demand modern improvements in their houses; those without them do not rent easily. Being unable to get gas, many light by electricity, showing that they are able to pay for the conveniencies if they can get them; and not as the counsel of the Gas Company argued, laboring men who cannot afford to light with gas.

The development of Quincy has not been largely by the laboring men, so called, as claimed, but even the laboring men of Quincy, are well paid, compared with mill hands and workers in other cities.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The American of history is yet to be born, of course. As the case stands, the materials for his composition are just being gathered into the alembic of evolution. There is much stewing and boiling over to follow, but in the end the fit and destined elements will unite, and we shall have the real American, holding in himself the best of all the races. It is barely possible that he will not be as white as the dapper cavalier who landed at Jamestown 300 years ago. Miscegenation, so-called, is one of evolution's favorite tricks.—Life.

☞ "Brockton is fortunate," says the Haverhill Gazette. "There is nothing the average town needs half as much as just that faith in its own future." Well, that's nice. And its true. Here is a city that believes in itself all the way along the line. You may get Brocktonian fighting among themselves, but you cannot get them to fighting their city. They may not have faith in all the individuals in their city, but in the place itself and its general ability to go ahead at all times they have the faith that moves mountains.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ Those who bring in dutiable articles when they return from a foreign visit are too apt to find fault with the customs regulation that restricts their importation to $100 in value. There can be no good reason for obliging tradesmen to pay duties and allowing their customers to bring in the same class of goods free. Protection for the merchants is a proper principle, and a policy that has a long established custom to sustain it. The people who buy abroad for their own use do so because the prices are low, and government adds the same duty that it imposes on the regular imported. If there is any hardship it is caused by the individual. Mrs. Huntington, who paid duties on $75,000 worth of purchases, made no complaint.—Lynn Item.

☞ The public lighting committee has its hands full in more ways than one. The Qnincy people are close on the heels of the members, demanding a reduction in the price of gas, and there is also an old bill against the Haverhill gas company. Regarding the Quincy matter, the hearing was closed some time ago, and the finding, it is said, would have been against the gas company. Such a possibility was hardly appreciated as possible by the owners, and so a reopening of the hearing was asked for and granted—Record.

QUARRY STRIKE.

There is practically no change in the quarrymen's strike, and from appearances they are no nearer a settlement than they were Saturday morning. The quarrymen refuse to compromise but insist on being granted what they demanded, namely eight hours' work and nine hours' pay.

Monday the quarry firms at New State, East Milton, signed the bill of prices. These firms employ in the aggregate fifty men. When it was announced that they had signed the bill, the quarrymen felt elated and all started to return to work, but were somewhat taken back when the firms although they had signed the bill refused to hire any of their former employes who had struck. The result was that all the quarrymen refused to work, and the quarries are idle. These quarries do not produce monumental stock.

It is hardly early enough yet for the cutting firms to feel the effect of the strike in the quarries, although it will be but a matter of a time before they will.

Granite City Ladies.

While the members of the Granite City club were participating in their annual banquet Tuesday evening, the members, ladies and their friends were in possession of the club room enjoying progressive whist. Enough were present for ten tables. At the conclusion of two hours' play, ice cream and cake were served, and prizes for the best scores were awarded as follows:

Half dozen china plates, to Mrs. Benjamin Johnson, Jr.; silver roll tray, to Mrs. W. W. Ewell; silver spoons, to Mrs. C. F. Pettengill and Mrs. C. C. Hearn; silver bon-bon dish to Miss Ada M. Nightingale; half dozen cut glass tumblers, Mrs. James Nightingale; jardiniere, to Mrs. Frank Perkins. The affair was in charge of Mrs. James H. Penniman and Mrs. W. W. Ewell.

Liquor Seized.

Inspector McKay and Officer Bradley overhauled the express team of Antonio Capodilupo at West Quincy, Tuesday afternoon, and seized one-half barrel of beer, two cases of beer, four gallons of wine and two quarts of whiskey under the illegal transportation law.

Town Meetings.

Weymouth went against license 810 to 626.

Hingham mustered but 17 votes for license.

Nelson W. Gardner, for several years a member of the Weymouth board of Selectmen, received the smallest vote at the town meeting on Monday, and the following were elected in the order named: Newton, Hawes, Hunt, Bates and McIntosh. Mr. Dwyer fell 28 below, and Mr. Gardner 126 below the low man. The reform candidate for the school committee, T. J. Evans, won, —Charles L. Tiffany, the jeweller, who left a fortune of $2,000,000, in a codicil to his will after providing for all his children in a most liberal manner, practically cut off his son, Burnett Y. Tiffany, with $3,000 a year. In the codicil Mr. Tiffany expressly limits the income of his son, saying that he does so because he does not think Burnett Y. should have an income much larger than is necessary for his support. The bulk of the estate goes to the widow and children.

GRANITE CITY CLUB.

Banquet at Hotel Brunswick, Boston.

Then Witness "King Dodo."

Grand Menu. Good Music and Enjoyable Evening.

Once a year the members of the Granite City club, who almost nightly gather about the card and billiard tables at the club rooms forsake these pleasures and gather about the festive board at their annual banquet.

The affair this year was held Tuesday evening and was most pleasing from beginning to end. Not a thing occurred to mar the pleasure of the evening, and the seventy-three who participated pronounced it the most successful as well as the most enjoyable banquet the club has ever held.

The arrangements were in charge of the entertainment committee and so perfectly had their plans been completed that everything moved like clockwork. Not a thing that would add to the pleasure of the evening was forgotten and they are deserving of great credit.

The banquet was served at 6 o'clock at the Hotel Brunswick. The 5.12 inward train carried most of the members, but others joined them at the South Terminal where a special car was in waiting to take them to the hotel.

The banquet opened with the asking of the blessing by ex-mayor Hall, and for the next hour or more strict attention was paid to the menu.

The menu served was an excellent one, and was as follows:

Radishes — Olives
Bluepoints
Cream of Celery, Aux Croutons, Consomme Royal
Broiled Shad, Maitre D'Hotel
Potato Croquettes
Saddle of Southdown Mutton, Quince Jelly
Roast Young Turkey
Delmonico Potatoes — Lima Beans
Sorbet Au Frais
Bouchees of Sweetbreads, A La Parisienne
Pineapple Fritters, Rhine Wine Sauce
Bisque Glace — Wine Jelly
Assorted Cake — Harlequin Ice Cream
Fruit
Cheese — Toasted Crackers
Coffee

A special car at 7.45 took the party to the Tremont theatre, where "King Dodo" kept the party in constant good humor. The two front rows of the first balcony were the seats occupied by the club and there were doubtless some queries as to who the party were. Their identity, however, was disclosed by King Dodo, who, fixing his eye in their direction made an illusion in one of his songs to "Handsome Jim Penniman of the Granite City club."

When the party arrived at the South Terminal on the last stage of their evening's journey, they found a private car for their use attached to the train, and in this they journeyed home.

Much in Little.

Preliminary to the Gas hearing at the State House Tuesday morning, the monotony of the waiting was relieved by Representative Hancock of Brockton, who propounded a puzzler to those present. Laying his hand on Henry H. Faxon, he said, there isn't a man in the room who can guess within 20 pounds of his weight. The first estimate came from a representative who weighs over 200 himself. He said Mr. Faxon weighed 210. The next man put it at 145 and another guessed 150, and so on down to 125. When all were done Mr. Faxon almost took the breath of everyone, when he said he weighed but 101 and a half. A considerable energy for a hundred pounds.

THE ATLANTIC CLUB.

Interesting Papers and Good Music Monday Evening.

The beauties in the life and character of George Macdonald and in his poetry were presented to the delight and satisfaction of the Atlantic Monday Evening club at its last meeting on Monday evening, by Mr. Charles E. Finch of Wollaston. Those of the club who are not familiar with Macdonald's poems will desire to know all proceeding from the pen of one whose character, portraiture and exquisite poetic divination the speaker so ably brought out.

The hearts of all his hearers will go out with renewed love to the clergyman, poet and novelist of fourscore years who so early in his career and amid the surroundings of narrowness and bigotry recognized the true spirit of Christianity in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man and at his lovely Italian home always practically illustrates that spirit which has made of his life a success in its truest sense.

Miss Helen Bemis of Atlantic, a student at the Boston University, gave a picturesque description of the personal appearance of the "Micawber" of Dickens' David Copperfield, of his amusing characteristics, always "waiting for something to turn up," the devotion of Mrs. Micawber who so persistently declared her intention "never to desert" him, and of the deeper and nobler traits of Micawber's character developed by regret at the misleading influence of Uriah Heep, and many wise reflections of her own, in a paper on "Mr. Micawber" which was bright, original and of unusual merit.

Miss Belden of the Emerson School of Oratory recited "Cousin Agatha's Baby" and "The Lost Word" with dramatic power, and responded to an encore.

The Club was pleased to greet again Miss May Belle G. Dadmun of Ashmont who accompanied by Miss Whiton sang with her usual fine effect "Sing, Smile, Slumber," by Gounod, "A Pastoral" by Veracini, and in response to an encore, "Snow-Flake," by Owen.

Mr. Boardman of Cambridge accompanied by Miss Frost of Allston sang two fine bass solos "The Sword of Ferrara" by Bullard, "Thy Sentinel Am I" by Watson and responded to encores. Mr. Charles A. Hanlwick announced the programme

The committee for the evening were Miss Alice G. Coe, Miss Lillian Hammond and Mr. Charles E. Hardwick.

The next meeting of the club will be Mar. 17, when Rev. William S. Jones of Randolph will speak of Emerson and the Transcendental Movement.

Oscar Olsen Surprised.

About forty of the friends and relatives, together with several members of the Clerks' Association tendered a surprise to Mr. Oscar Olsen on Monday evening at his residence on Parker street, the date being his forty-first birthday. Shortly before nine o'clock, Oscar was awakened from a dreamy reverie by the sound of approaching footsteps and before he was aware what "was doin'" he was pounced on and his ears pulled 41 times to remind him that he had arrived at that age. As soon as he had recovered somewhat from his surprise, he welcomed his guests in his usual happy manner. Mr. Fred Prout, in behalf of those assembled, then presented Oscar with a fine Morris chair and a table, to which he responded thanking all for the gift.

The evening was pleasantly spent in song and story and all departed at a late hour well satisfied that they had spent a most enjoyable evening. Refreshments were served the entire evening.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gullickson, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gullickson, Mr. and Mrs. John Wedderburn, Mr. and Mrs. R. Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. A. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Olsen, Mr. and Mrs. E. Hedman, Mr. and Mrs. O. Alinquist, Mr. and Mrs. W. Nightingale, Mr. and Mrs. William Rothwell, Miss Katie Gillis, Miss Ada Carlson, Miss Signe Lindquist, Miss Alma Helberg, Miss Theresa Helberg, Miss Agnes Lundquist, Mr. Oscar Weedans, Mr. Archie Rogers, Mr. Fred Prout, Mr. Frank Scannell, Mr. John H. Guman, Mr. A. I. Dixon, Mr. James F. Allen, Mr. L. G. Murray, Mr. Augus Martin, Mr. Charles Martin, Mr. Louis Smith, Mr. George McNaughton.

Burglars.

The new unoccupied house at 964 Hancock street, owned by Julius Johnson, was entered by burglars Monday night, who carried off the hot water copper boiler. This is not the first time the house has been entered, as theives had already carried off the brass faucets.

The Looker-On in the Record speaking of Col. Parker says: the death of Col. Francis Parker at Chicago is a distinct loss to education throughout the country. His work in Quincy as superintendent of schools was a notable instance of how a man of his character and convictions can make his influence felt over an entire section. Since he went west from here, his work has reached even a wider circle. He was a born teacher of teachers.

☞ Many persons in this town think that shrunken garments must always remain shrunken and cannot be made good and comfortable again—that's because they don't know. Other people believe that such garments can be restored and made nice—that's because they do know and have tried "Nevershrink" to prove it. This wonderful washing preparation is sold at the Star Grocery—opposite Fountain. It is used by them and recommended by them. Just try it on your flannels.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. The Claim of Citizens Gas Light Company.

Development of Town Has Been Slow.

After the officials of the company present at the gas hearing at the State House, Tuesday, had given their testimony, their counsel asked a continuance to hear others. At this point Senator Sprague addressed the committee. He said he hoped the Citizens' Gas Light Company would be allowed to present all the witnesses they wanted to. If they present two or three more it will not be necessary for the petitioners to present any.

Others in attendance Tuesday were of the same opinion, the company making a very poor showing.

The chairman said the hearing was reopened because the Gas Company, the remonstrants, claimed that they had not received notice.

A. C. Burnham, Esq., at the outset asked a continuance as his senior partner, Mr. Carter, was in court and unable to be present.

The chairman said the remonstrants had been negligent in not appearing at the first hearing, as they had received all the notice that was usually given for legislative hearings. Thought counsel was asking too much in requesting a continuance. It was decided the hearing should go on.

E. F. DeNormandie, the petitioner, had previously been notified of the intention to ask a continuance, and supposing it would be granted, was not in attendance. He was notified by telephone, however, and responded in remarkably quick time. He said others in favor of the petition were absent for the same reason.

Lawyer Burnham in opening for the remonstrants said the company had been established in the 60s, by prominent citizens of the town. He claimed that Quincy was an old town and had shown but little development since. That the incorporators were unable to make a success of their enterprise because the houses were not piped for gas. The plant changed hands, but the purchasers also were unable to make a profit, and the present owner took it for debt. Richardson, Hill & Co. now had the controlling interest. It was not their purpose to milk the town, but to supply good gas; to run the works economically without salaries. They were able only to pay the interest on the notes.

The petitioners had first gone to the Gas Commissioners who had given a full hearing, and reached a fair decision that there was no good ground to secure a reduction in the price of gas. The revenue might be increased by extension, but they were of doubtful expediency. If anyone thought they could run the plant for a profit, they might have an opportunity, as it could be purchased at a fair value.

He claimed that the town had grown but little since 1860, and that the parts developed were mainly by laboring men who could not afford gas Again Quincy was in villages, and expensive to pipe.

Calvin Austin, the treasurer and manager, was the first witness. Had been in control since October, 1891. Present owners had taken stock as collateral on mutual agreement. Williams and Ruggles were then the owners. They were gas people and had several plants. They were in control about four years. Mr. Austin said he was now vice president and general treasurer of the New England Steamship Co., and had a business experience of 27 years in Boston. Had run the Gas Company to the best of his ability for a profit. Had declared no dividends since 1891. Williams & Ruggles had kept the accounts in such shape that no reliable data could be obtained from them.

At present the average gross earnings of the plant were $14,000 per year. This paid interest on notes and all maintenance accounts. Have considered extensions each year, but saw little chance for profit. Would sell out at fair value. Submitted table of comparison with other cities.

Questioned by members of the committee he said that the price of gas was $2. That Richardson & Hill had advanced the money to Williams & Ruggles to purchase plant. That debt of company was about $29,000, when it came into our hands. Considered plant worth now about $100,000. Asked how he reached these figures he could give no satisfactory answer. Said at different times plant cost $33,000 and $38,000. That debts at time of purchase were unknown, but amounted to $29,000. No interest had been paid on stock for 12 years. Expenses of company were above average because coal cost $1 per ton for carting. Wages at office and works amounted to $34 per week, and salaries $2,000 per year. Average revenue $14,000 per year. Had 14 miles of mains, and made 10,000,000 feet of gas per year. Was large leakage. Lowest price for gas, $1.50

The chairman said it was a "question of load" and made another unsuccessful attempt to ascertain the value of plant. He asked Mr. Austin if the plant could be duplicated for less than $38,000. Mr. Austin would want time to figure.

John Lennon, the superintendent, was the next witness, and explained the works and piping. Thought the supply of gas to consumers was equal to demand. Was surprised that it was in some cases as some pipe was only three quarters inch.

Relative to applications for gas off the mains, he said he had received but one application at Atlantic, and that was the depot. Had no pipe at Atlantic. But a few applications from Norfolk Downs, and he thought those were largely to use at this hearing. Applications had been received from Wollaston, some of which had been met, but had not proved profitable. Up to the establishment of the shipyard at Quincy Point he had no applications from that section beyond the mains, which were laid about half way to bridge. Had no pipes or applications at West Quincy. Was little encouragement for extensions.

Did not realize the leakage was larger than other cities until report came out. Appeared to be 27 per cent. of total manufactured. Introduction of sewer had disturbed gas pipes and caused considerable leakage. Questioned as to value of works, etc., he said it was out of his line and he could not tell. Mr. Austin, the manager, visited Quincy about once a month. Believed he furnished as good a coal gas as is made in Massachusetts. Did not know of any leakage from pipes. Was positive he would if much escaped. Candle power was 18.7. When sales were compared with amount made about one-fifth was unaccounted for. However, street lights were estimated. I have but one assistant. Generally successful in getting appropriations for necessary repairs. Practically no extensions during the six years I have been superintendent. In doubt as to increase in population of city. Could not tell expense of laying of mains. Depended on size and nature of soil. Might cost 50 cents per foot to lay four inch pipe.

Henry N. Greeley, auditor of the company since Oct., 1891, said that upon the first examination he found the books had been faslsified. That sums had been charged up for extensions which had never been made. That there was a false cash book. That of the debt of $29,000, all but about $5,000 was on notes. Some were old, but probably not over ten per cent. went into Quincy works. No dividends had been paid on stock. Net earnings of operating plant were $2,000 to $3,000 which paid all interest. Balance went to profit or loss. Nothing allowed for depreciation. Amount of notes had not been reduced. Believed they now amounted to $38,500. Didn't know who held them. Richardson & Hill had discounted some. Said he was a professional auditor. Asked if the only solution was to go into insolvency, he could not say. Admitted company appeared to be getting worse and worse off. Attempts to get him to estimate the value of the plant were unsuccessful. Said he would include in valuation only the notes that went into the Quincy plant.

The company had no other witnesses, but in view of what had been opened up, the counsel said he desired to have others heard at a later date.

E. F. De Normandie, the petitioner, was ready to go on, but the committee decided to continue the hearing until Friday at 10 A. M., when the time will be divided and the hearing closed.

SAVING FUTURE RIGHTS

Leishman Has Not Demanded Action In the Case of Miss Stone

Washington, March 5.—It is learned at the state department that the attitude of Mr. Leishman, the United States minister to Turkey, may be misunderstood owing to the brevity of the cable report that he has preferred a demand upon Turkey in the case of Miss Stone. The understanding is that any action in that line that Mr. Leishman may have taken is rather in the line of saving all future rights than the submission of an unqualified demand for the punishment of the brigands and a repayment of the indemnity given to the brigands. The same sort of a caveat either has or will be filed with the Bulgarian government.

The legal effect of this action is simply to save all rights against either of these governments or against both of them, pending the conclusion of the exhaustive inquiry which the state department is making through its minister and other agents into Miss Stone's case. When that inquiry is concluded it is expected that the department will be in a position to squarely place the responsibility for the kidnapping, and when that has been done no time will be lost in pressing the claim both for punishment of the perpetrators of the outrage and for the repayment of the ransom.

Meanwhile, acting under instructions of the state department, Mr. Leishman will prefer no specific claim against either Turkey or Bulgaria.

Missionaries Killed by Chinese

Victoria, B. C., March 5.—Reports of two massacres of missionaries in China were received by the steamer Empress of India, which arrived from the Orient yesterday. Fathers Van Mirhaeghe and Bougerts were murdered in Ksnu by a band of Chinese, including soldiers, who attacked their mission. The first named priest was killed instantly by a sword thrust, but the latter lingered for five days suffering from terrible wounds. It is said that the attack was made in revenge for the deposition of the son of Prince Tuan by the empress dowager at the request of the foreign ministers.

Lively Times at Norfolk

Norfolk, March 5.—A mob of 5000 strike sympathizers thronged the streets here yesterday on which runs the main line of the Norfolk Railway and Light company and from noon until after dark the mob had things its own way. Cars were repeatedly derailed, wagon loads of stones were piled on the tracks and free fights occurred at frequent intervals. Several soldiers were hit by bricks and other missiles. The police force of 100 is unable to meet the emergency. No settlement of the strike is in sight.

Sister Suspects Foul Play

Boston, March 5.—The body of William Garrity was found in the water at Cambridge yesterday, and his sister, with whom he boarded in this city, believes he was the victim of foul play. She says Garrity had quite a sum of money with him when he went to attend the wedding of a shopmate, but when the body was taken from the water no money was found upon his person, although an empty pay envelope was in his pocket.

The Bicycle Industry

Washington, March 5.—The census bureau issued a preliminary report today on bicyces and tricycles, exclusive of repair shops, which shows that the products of the industry increased almost $30,000,000 between 1890 and 1900. The report makes the following showing for 1900 as compared with 1890. Number of establishments, 312; increase, 285; capital, $29,783,659; increase, $27,725,587.

Love's Young Dream

New York, March 5.—Lemuel Meeking of Fairview, N. J., who is about to enlist in the army with a view to going to the Philippines, and Miss Laura Morgensen, appeared before a justice of the peace in Hoboken yesterday and signed affidavits agreeing to marry at the end of Meekin's period of enlistment. The agreement on each side is extremely binding.

FROCKS AND FRILLS.

WOMAN'S BEST GOWN A THING OF FRAGILE AND DAINTY BEAUTY.

A very complex thing is a fashionable woman's best gown. Airy fragility, the daintiest workmanship possible, great beauty of material and much originality of design characterize all the best models, and never was dress more extravagant, because from its very lightness it demands such constant renovation.

An ivory satin cloak spreads out over the flounces of an evening gown in most alluring manner, and this swirl of the skirts is, by the way, most essential to an up to date toilet. The best models are fourreau in contour, spreading out amply round the ankles, at the sides of the skirt, as well as at the front and back.

Evening gowns are becoming more and more complicated in their fashioning. A good example will suggest the monetary requirements of a really modish gown. First, a silk foundation is necessary; then a covering of gauze, striped with inch wide lines of gold, the stripes placed very close together at the waist. The whole is veiled with an exquisitely light and fine black lace spangled with gold; tiny plaits mold the material to the knees and give an immense amplitude to the bottom, which is rendered still more generous by innumerable volants in black illusion. The gown is a princess, surmounted by a bolero of black lace over gold tissue, on which are worked exquisite pompadour roses in the pale shaded ribbons that give chic to the best evening models.

Smart Paris cloth gowns evince the reigning popularity of the long basque to coats, but it is a remarkably pretty length and cut to show a very becoming outline to the hips, displaying to advantage a pretty figure. Invariably the revers collar and cuffs are of a bright colored velvet, embroidered. This gives a certain dressiness to an otherwise somewhat plain costume. The combination of the colors is exceedingly artistic and conducive to effective dressing, if details such as the choice of a good relieving color for the revers, etc., are carefully considered. This is especially the case when two shades are used for the double revers on a coat, one overlapping the other, the ton sur ton being certainly an occasion to display the beautiful effect of perfect harmony in color.

Strappings of the same cloth are much used on skirts; a darker tone of similarly colored velvet composes the collar and revers of coats, and small straps of the velvet decorating the front are finished by gold buttons and small tassels.

The elaborate toilette de visite of the first cut is carried out in mauve cloth, with Louis XV. embroidery, a lace

For the early part of the year there is also a great feeling for very light cloth, biscuit or white or gray being undoubtedly the favorites.

KILLING A LION.

A Shot at Short Range Upon Which Much Depended.

An Englishman who lived many years in Africa relates a thrilling experience which befell his family there. His home at the time was in the edge of the Transvaal wilderness, and it was there that the event occurred.

One evening about dusk my wife and child were sitting on the veranda of the bungalow. I was engaged a few rods away putting the finishing touches to a bit of wagon repairing. The servants were at the rear of the house. It was one of those peculiarly quiet evenings when nothing seems to break the stillness.

Suddenly I felt, rather than saw, something moving near the veranda. I looked more closely and to my horror perceived an enormous lion stealing along the ground in the direction of my wife and child. My wife saw the creature at the same instant and, despite her terror, fortunately remained perfectly motionless and silent.

Scarcely knowing what to do, I hastily crept toward the side of the bungalow to the open window of my room, where I knew a loaded rifle was leaning against the wall. I climbed in at the window, seized the rifle and leaped by another window upon the veranda.

There was no time to think. The lion was within a few feet of my dear ones and crouching for a spring. I called softly to my wife not to move and then fired.

The ball passed directly over my boy's head and lodged in the forehead of the lion immediately above the eyes and stretched him on the ground.

There was an instant of fearful suspense. Then I fired again, but the second bullet was not necessary, for the lion had been killed at the first shot.

Do You Know Your Letters?

Any man who can read would probably resent such an imputation of ignorance as this question conveys. "Do you know your letters?" is what is asked the little tot when he or she first sets foot in school. But grownup men and women may be pardoned for believing they are speaking the truth when they answer "yes" to the question. The chances are, however, that they don't know their letters. Why has "A" its present shape? Stumped the first time! Every A-merican ought to know that. A takes its shape from a picture of an eagle. B was once the picture of an Egyptian bird. D represented a man's hand. F was the horned viper. The two upper strokes are the remains of the horns and the perpendicular line the upright body of the viper. H was once the semblance of a sieve.

We got our letters from the Phœnician alphabet, which in turn came from the hieroglyphic picture writing of Egypt. So don't be so sure of your knowledge next time you are asked a simple question.

An Ancient Billiard Table.

There is a billiard table in London that can boast of a lifetime of two centuries and a long acquaintance with men who have made history. It belonged originally to Louis XIV., passed into the possession of Napoleon I. and now in its old age is on exhibition in Soho square. This celebrated table is smaller than an English table. The body of the table is a block of oak weighing ten hundredweight, covered with a cloth of electric blue. The frame of the table is of rosewood, and the six pockets—perhaps the most striking feature of the table—are reproductions in bronze of queer, hideous old gargoyles. When the ball falls into the pocket, the lower jaw of the gargoyle drops, and the ball is found in its mouth. It is a clever piece of old mechanism.—Liverpool Post.

An Indignant Poet.

Beranger, the famous French poet, whose greatest gift lay in writing little poems which he called songs, was particularly dependent upon the chance visits of the muse.

He was once visited by the author and academician Viennet, who said to him:

"You must have written several songs since I saw you last."

"I have only begun one," answered Beranger.

"Only one! I am astonished!" exclaimed Viennet.

Beranger became indignant.

"Humph!" he shouted. "Do you think one can turn off a song as one turns off a tragedy?"

Keeping Him In Tune.

Herr Meyer Lutz tells the following little story in Mainly About People: "Conducting once in Bradford, I noticed that the clarinet player, a young but clever and steady lad, jumped up a good deal during the progress of the opera. I found that his father, who played the trombone, sat just behind him, and every now and then he gave his son a kick, with the remark: 'Look out, Sammy! There be a flat a-comin'.'"

She Vetoed the Plan.

"Shall we take in Yellowstone park on our bridal tour?" asked the masculine half of the proposed combination.

"No; we'll cut that out," replied the fair bride in prospective. "Yellow is so awfully trying on my complexion."—Chicago News.

Keith's Theatre.

Nothing more promising in the way of a novelty act has been offered at Keith's Boston theatre this season than the troupe of educated seals and sea lions, which are announced as the leading feature for the week of March 3. These wonderful amphibian performers are said to excel any others ever exhibited in New England, and will particularly interest the juveniles. A special stage setting of great beauty has been prepared for Prof. Woodward's novel troupe. Eddie Ladell and Emma Abbott, in acrobatic comedy, dancing and singing specialties; Charles E. Grapewin and Anna Chance, in a new farcical sketch, "The Awakening of Pipp;" Carroll Johnsan, the Beau Brummel of minstrelsy; Parres brothers, head and hand balancers, and John Healy, the favorite blackface entertainer, are others on the big bill. Mlle. Marsella's trained birds, and the three French musical grotesques, the Dumonds, will hold over.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

Offer of $80,000,000 For Canal

Colon, March 5.—According to advices received here from Paris, an Anglo-French syndicate has offered to pay $80,000,000 (twice the American offer) for the Panama canal. Though it is the purpose of this syndicate to complete the canal with English money principally, the enterprise will remain French.

Twenty Lives Lost With Tiber

Halifax, March 5.—Steamer Tiber, Captain Boulanger, which sailed from Louisburg Wednesday for Halifax, with coal, is lost with all on board. She carried 20 men. At Canso, Port Felix and Goldboro wreckage has been found which establishes beyond reasonable doubt the loss of the Tiber.

King Edward Changes His Mind

London, March 5.—It is reported that the projected visit of King Edward to Ireland has been abandoned on account of, it is understood, the aggressive action of the United Irish league.

Paterson In Sorry Plight

Paterson, N. J., March 5.—The health authorities have forbidden any one to move back into the flooded district. The authorities desire that the buildings shall be wholly cleaned and dried out before they are used again. Four hundred persons are still sheltered in the armory. Donations of clothing for women are badly needed. Sickness is feared.

Lighthouses Knocked Out

Catskill, N. Y., March 5.—A large ice gorge which had formed in the Hudson river gave way yesterday and, sweeping down the stream, demolished the Kinderhook lighthouse and partially wrecked the large Coxsackie lighthouse. Both of these houses were of solid masonry and the largest on the river.

No Sunday Games, Says Mayor

Indianapolis, March 5.—Mayor Bookwalter says that he will not permit Sunday baseball here, because it will be in violation of the state law. This will disarrange the American association schedule and Manager Watkins says that it is Sunday ball or no ball at all.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

Michael Strogoff showed his podorojna made out in the name of Nicholas Korpanoff. He had consequently no difficulty.

As to the other travelers in the compartment, all bound for Nijni Novgorod, their appearance, happily for them, was in nowise suspicious.

The young girl in her turn exhibited not a pass ort, since passports are no longer required in Russia, but a permit indorsed with a private seal and which seemed to be of a special character. The inspector read the permit with attention. Then, having attentively examined the person whose description it contained, he said:

"You are from Riga?"

"Yes," replied the young girl.

"You are going to Irkutsk?"

"Yes."

"By what route?"

"By Perm."

"Good!" replied the inspector. "Take care to have your permit vised at the police station of Nijni Novgorod." The young girl bent her head in token of assent.

Hearing the questions and replies, Michael Strogoff experienced a mingled sentiment both of surprise and pity. What, this young girl alone journeying to that faroff Siberia and at a time when to its ordinary dangers were added all the perils of an invaded country and one in a state of insurrection? How would she reach it? What would become of her?

The inspection ended, the doors of the carriages were opened, but before Michael Strogoff could move toward her the young Livonian, who had been the first to descend, had disappeared in the crowd which thronged the platforms of the railway station.

Nijni Novgorod, Lower Novgorod, situated at the junction of the Volga and the Oka, is the chief town in the district of the same name. It was here that Michael Strogoff was obliged to leave the railway, which at the time did not go beyond this town. Thus as he advanced his traveling would become first less speedy and then less safe.

Nijni Novgorod, the fixed population of which is only from 30,000 to 35,000 inhabitants, contained at that time more than 300,000—that is to say, the population was increased tenfold. This addition was in consequence of the celebrated fair which was held within the walls for three weeks. Formerly Makariew had the benefit of this concourse of traders, but since 1817 the fair had been removed to Nijni Novgorod.

The town, dreary enough at most times, then presented a truly animated scene. Six different races of merchants, European and Asiatic, were fraternizing under the congenial influence of trade.

Michael Strogoff strolled through the town quietly, looking out for some inn. He was looking for supper rather than a bed, but he found both at the sign of the City of Constantinople.

His supper finished, Michael Strogoff instead of going up to his bedroom again strolled out into the town.

Why did not Michael Strogoff go quietly to bed, as would have seemed more seasonable after a long railway journey? Was he thinking of the young Livonian girl who had for so many hours been his traveling companion? Having nothing better to do, he was thinking of her.

"Alone," he said to himself; "alone in the midst of these wandering tribes! And yet the present dangers are nothing to those she must undergo. Siberia! Irkutsk! I am about to dare all risks for Russia, for the czar, while she is about to do so for whom? For what? She is authorized to cross the frontier! And the country beyond is in revolt! The steppes beyond are full of Tartar bands!"

"Without doubt," thought he, "she must have determined on undertaking her journey before the invasion. Perhaps she is even now ignorant of what is happening. But, no; that cannot be, for the merchants discussed before her the disturbances in Siberia, and she did not seem even surprised. She did not even ask for an explanation. She must have known it then, and, though knowing it, she is still resolute. Poor girl! Her motive for the journey must be urgent indeed! But, though she may be brave—and she certainly is so—her strength must fail her, and, to say nothing of dangers and obstacles, she will be unable to endure the fatigue of such a journey. Never can she pass Irkutsk!"

Indulging in such reflections, Michael Strogoff wandered on as chance led him; but, being well acquainted with the town, he knew that he could without difficulty retrace his steps.

Having strolled on for about an hour, he seated himself on a bench against the wall of a large wooden cottage which stood, with others, on a vast open space.

He had scarcely been there five minutes when a hand was laid heavily on his shoulder.

"What are you doing here?" roughly demanded a large and powerful man who had approached unperceived.

"I am resting," replied Michael Strogoff.

"Do you mean to stay all night on the bench?" asked the man.

"Yes, if I feel inclined to do so," answered Michael Strogoff in a tone somewhat too sharp for the simple merchant he wished to personate.

"Come forward, then, that I may see you," said the man.

"It is not necessary," he replied, and he calmly stepped back ten paces or so.

The man seemed, as Michael observed him well, to have the look of a Bohemian, such as are met at fairs and with whom contact, either physical or moral, is unpleasant. Then, as he looked more attentively through the dusk which was coming on, he perceived near the cottage a large caravan, the usual traveling dwelling of the gypsies who swarm in Russia wherever a few copecks can be obtained.

As the gypsy took two or three steps forward and was about to interrogate Michael Strogoff more closely the door of the cottage was opened. He could just see a woman, who advanced quickly and in a language which Michael Strogoff knew to be a mixture of the Mongol and Siberian she said: "Another spy! Let him alone and come to supper. It is waiting for you."

But in the same dialect, although his accent was very different, the Bohemian replied in words which signify:

"Tomorrow!" repeated the woman in surprise.

"Yes, Sangarre," replied the Bohemian, "tomorrow, and the Father himself sends us—where we are going."

Thereupon the man and woman entered the cottage and carefully closed the door.

"Good!" said Michael Strogoff to himself. "If these gypsies do not wish to be understood when they speak before me, they had better use some other language."

From his Siberian origin and because he had passed his childhood in the steppes Michael Strogoff, it has been said, understood almost all the languages in usage from Tartary to the Sea of Ice. As to the exact signification of the words exchanged between the gypsy and his companion he did not trouble his head. For why should it interest him?

An hour after Michael Strogoff was sleeping soundly on one of those Russian beds which always seem so hard to strangers, and on the morrow, the 17th of July, he awoke at break of day.

He had still five hours to pass at Nijni Novgorod. It seemed to him an age. How was he to spend the morning unless in wandering, as he had done the evening before, through the streets? By the time he had finished his breakfast, strapped up his bag, had his podorojna inspected at the police office, he would have nothing to do but start. But he was not a man to lie in bed after the sun had risen, so he rose, dressed himself and placed the letter with the imperial arms on it carefully at the bottom of its usual pocket within the lining of his coat, over which he fastened his belt. He then closed his bag and threw it over his shoulder.

This done, he had no wish to return to the City of Constantinople, and, intending to breakfast on the bank of the Volga near the wharf, he settled his bill and left the inn. By the way of precaution Michael Strogoff went first to the office of the steam packet company and there made sure that the Caucasus would start at the appointed hour. As he did so the thought for the first time struck him that since the young Livonian girl was going to Perm it was very possible that her intention was also to embark in the Caucasus, in which case he should accompany her.

Michael Strogoff found himself in the central square when the report spread that the head of police had been summoned by a courier to the palace of the governor general. An important dispatch from Moscow, it was said, was the cause of it.

"The fair is to be closed," said one.

"The regiment of Nijni Novgorod has received the route," declared another.

"They say that the Tartars menace Tomsk!"

"Here is the head of police!" was shouted on every side. A loud clapping of hands was suddenly raised, which subsided by degrees and finally was succeeded by absolute silence. The head of police arrived in the middle of the central square, and it was seen by all that he held in his hand a dispatch.

Then in a loud voice he read the following announcements:

"By order of the governor of Nijni Novgorod:

"All Russian subjects are forbidden to quit the province upon any pretext whatsoever.

"All strangers of Asiatic origin are commanded to leave the province within twenty-four hours."

THE EMPEROR PLEASED

With Prince Henry's Reception In America

GERMAN EDITORS HOPEFUL

That Press Relations With Government Will Reach Status Enjoyed by Americans—Comment on Probable Results of Prince's Visit

Berlin, March 5.—The correspondent of The Associated Press has been officially informed of Emperor William's satisfaction over the reception accorded to Prince Henry. The informant of the correspondent had seen all Emperor William's marginal notes on the reports of Prince Henry's trip. He said:

"His majesty is in the highest degree pleased with Prince Henry's reception from his arrival in America until now, and especially with that accorded to him by President Roosevelt and his family. The emperor has also expressed himself as delighted with the enthusiasm of the welcome to his brother."

During an audience with Professor Francke of Harvard university Emperor William expressed himself as heartily satisfied with Prince Henry's reception and said he looked forward with particular interest to the prince's visit to Cambridge. Emperor William sent for Professor Francke as a compliment to Harvard university.

The German newspaper men are immensely impressed with Prince Henry's bearing toward the newspaper men of the United States, and believe that Emperor William's perception of the influence of the press on national opinion in the United States will favorably affect the relations of the crown to the home press. Editor Bachem of the Cologne Volks Zeitung, in an article in which he intimates the previous conclusion, contrasts the social and political positions of editors here and in the United States, where newspaper men are selected to serve as cabinet ministers and ambassadors not because they are better educated or more able, but, Bachem says, because they receive higher salaries.

Herr Bachem is of the opinion that the journey of Prince Henry will not modify the aspirations of the United States which, it is conceived, are, first to break into European markets while excluding Europe from its own markets and second, to divide the mastery of the seas with Great Britain. Germany's political relations will certainly be improved as a result of the visit of the prince and mutual good feeling will be increased. But Germany must expect the United States to pursue its own economic aims, and Germany must do likewise.

Herr Leiberman Von Sonnenberg, (Radical anti-Semite), who made a violent outburst against Mr. Chamberlain, the British colonial secretary, last January, said in the reichstag yesterday that the visit of Prince Henry would lead to a friendly rapprochement between the United States and Germany.

The Kreuz Zeitung, one of whose favorite topics is American hatred for Germany, says that it believes that the visit of the prince has already initiated the transformation for the better. The paper says: "The visit is calculated permanently to enlighten American public opinion to the fact that neither hostile nor even unfriendly sentiments are manifested or cherished by the German empire against the American republic."

The Kreuz Zeitung devotes two columns to advocating the establishment of a direct news service between Germany and the United States, avoiding English channels, where, the paper assumes, intelligence is given a political bias.

—The city of Fitchburg is the latest to feel the need of a new charter and the issue between the dual and single City Council is the chief bone of contention.

THE ODD PENNIES.

For the sake of saving odd pennies do not buy an inferior emulsion of cod-liver oil when you really need Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion costs more to buy because it costs more to make.

The difference in price is pennies. The difference in results is pounds—pounds of flesh—and days of new strength and comfort.

The consumptive and others who have lost flesh get more cod-liver oil into their systems by means of Scott's Emulsion than in any other way.

The House Adopts Conference Report on the Philippine Bill

Washington, March 5.—When the house met yesterday the pending question was on the adoption of the conference report on the Philippine tariff bill. On a rising division the votes stood, ayes, 66; noes, 65. Messrs. McCall of Massachusetts, Heatwole of Minnesota, and Littlefield of Maine, Republicans, voted with the Democrats against the adoption of the report. Mr. Payne, the majority leader, then demanded the ayes and noes, and the roll was called. The bill now goes to the president.

The house spent the remainder of the day in discussing the bill to classify the rural free delivery service and place the carriers under the contract system. No vote was reached and it is doubtful whether one will be had today, as the list of speakers is still large. The fate of the bill is in doubt, although the impression prevailing is that it will be defeated.

The ship subsidy bill was further discussed in the senate yesterday by Mr. Frye. He gave further expression of his views that the subsidy bill was a logical response to the demands and principles of the Republican party. He declared that in its preparation he had obviated the objections entertained by senators friendly to the measure. As no other senator desired to speak yesterday, the bill was laid aside and a number of other bills were passed.

Scandal Disclosed Check Frauds

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 5.—Ex-City Attorney L. K. Salsbury and S. V. MacLeod pleaded guilty yesterday to the charge of having violated the United States banking law. It was alleged that they ordered something more than $10,000 from the Old National bank upon fraudulent checks. The money was afterward paid back. MacLeod was formerly teller of the bank and manager of the local clearing house. The discovery of the crime was an outcome of the municipal water supply scandal.

To Protect American Interests

Washington, March 5.—The navy department is informed of the departure of Rear Admiral Higginson aboard his flagship, the Kearsarge, accompanied by the battleships Alabama, Massachusetts and Indiana, from Cienfuegos, Cuba, for Colon. This move is not an outcome of the fresh revolutionary outbreak in Colombia.

Missing Treasurer Located

Alpena, Mich., March 5.—F. W. Haden, the missing city treasurer, has been located in Mexico, 70 miles from the Texas frontier. His alleged shorage amounts to $9000. A warrant has been issued for his arrest and suit has been brought against the company which was on his bond.

Schwab Still at the Head

New York, March 5.—The directors of the United States Steel corporation met yesterday and re-elected President Schwab and all the other officers whose terms expired. Otherwise only routine business was transacted.

Rise In Price of Yarn

Charlotte, N. C., March 5.—Yarn men from six southern states, representing 225,000 spindles, met here yesterday and decided to advance prices 1 cent on all numbers of yarns. They say that the present conditions of the market justify this action.

Mother and Son Perished

Dunnville, Ont., March 5.—Mrs. George Brook and her young son were drowned in a creek at Conhare yesterday. The boy had fallen into the water and his mother endeavored to rescue him.

Robbers Took All In Sight

Oxford, O., March 5.—Robbers looted the postoffice here of $1500 in stamps and $100 in cash last night. The safe was forced open and the combination was knocked off. Everything of value was taken.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The will of the late John B. Sherman, founder of the Union Stock yards, Chicago, disposes of personal property valued at $2,000,000. There are no public bequests.

Firemen of Attleboro, Mass., checked a bad fire in a dangerous locality. It started in the cellar of the Boston branch grocery and the flames were playing about an oil tank containing 300 gallons of kerosene when the firemen arrived. Loss about $3500.

The Indianapolis fire inspection bureau has issued an order for an advance of $5 on every $1000 in fire insurance rates in certain portions of the city. It is estimated that $3,000,000 of insurance is affected.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis, who has been ill at New Orleans, is much improved.

A resolution urging the establishing of a political and business alliance between the east and south was adopted by the Mississippi house of representatives.

Delegates from eight of the leading motor vehicle organizations of the country met at Chicago and completed the formation of a national body to be called the American Automobile association.

Rev. A. Mandalari, S. J., professor of philosophy at Gonzago college, Washington, and who has held similar chairs in other places, died of pneumonia. He was 60 years old.

Half a block of buildings in the heart of Marshalltown, Ia., were destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $75,000. Several guests and employes of the Tremont hotel were injured.

The secretary of war has received a cable message from Judge Ide of the Philippine commission, who recently went to Japan for the benefit of his health, saying that he is still ill and will not be able to return to Manila for the present.

VISIT TO NIAGARA FALLS

Brief Stop In Canadian Territory—Rochester, Syracuse and Other Cities Turn Out Big and Enthusiastic Crowds at Railway Stations

Rochester, March 6.—Prince Henry traveled from Chicago to Niagara Falls yesterday, crossed the Canadian frontier for a brief stay, to which he was officially welcomed by the Dominion, and last night resumed his journey to Boston over the New York Central line. His longest stop in almost 30 hours of continuous travelling was at Niagara Falls, which he saw bridged in with the ice of winter. He viewed the Horseshoe falls from Table Rock the American falls from the ledge over the whirlpool on the Canadian shore, rode down the gorge to a point below the lower whirlpool, and then inspected the plant of the Niagara Power company, which converts the force of nature to the purposes of commerce. He was much impressed by the falls and the swirling rapids down in the gorge.

The special train had covered the distance between Milwaukee and Chicago, crossed Indiana, and was well on its way over Ohio before Prince Henry arose. He was worn out when he left Milwaukee and did not respond to the demonstration made by the people of Toledo and Sandusky. He did not get notice of the intentions of the citizens of Toledo to formally receive him and his first knowledge of their plan was conveyed to him by their band playing "Die Wacht Am Rhein." It was too late to then get up and Toledo did not see him. At Cleveland there was a friendly demonstration, and Peter Karpp, formerly a bugler in the German army, climbed into the car for a reunion which was pleasant on both sides. Karpp had been a sailor with Prince Henry back in 1877, and they were shipmates for more than two years. The prince recognized Peter at once and, taking him by the hand, led him into the car. They talked over the old days and an admiring crowd looked on.

At Erie, Pa., was a crowd which made the most dangerous jam of the entire journey. Several women fainted and anybody anywhere near the centre of the crowd was submitted to dangerous pressure. Mrs. Harriett Gridley and Miss Gridley, widow and daughter of Captain Gridley, the man who fought on the Olympia at Manila bay, were received on the train by Admiral Evans and were presented to the prince.

All through the morning as the train ran through a corner of Pennsylvania and out into the state of New York there were crowds at the stations anxious to see the prince and tender assurances of friendship. Dunkirk had its band out and at Buffalo Mayor Knight welcomed the prince and the local German singing societies sang.

Fully 20,000 people crowded the train shed and depot of the New York Central and additional thousands lined the tracks for blocks east and west of the station, or took up positions of vantage on roofs and in windows of tall buildings, when the arrival of Prince Henry's special train at the city line of Rochester was announced by the firing of a bomb at the end of the trainhouse. Immediately red fire on the tops of hundreds of buildings burst forth, searchlights pointed out the American and German flags suspended from kites in mid air, and five minutes later, amidst a grand pyrotechnic display, the train bearing the royal visitor drew slowly into the crowded trainshed.

As the train pulled into the station a band played and a salute of 21 guns was fired, but the balance of the program was not carried out as had been planned. Soldiers had been stationed at both ends of the trainshed in order to hold the crowds in check, but as the last car of the prince's train passed into the roped-off area, the surging throng outside, with thunderous cheers, brushed the militiamen aside and 30 seconds later had packed to suffocation every inch of space in the trainhouse and depot.

In the meantime the vast assemblage was cheering and shouting as if mad. After several fruitless efforts had been made to check the enthusiastic outburst, the reception committee gave up that portion of the program which called for singing by the German societies, music by the bands, etc., and boarding the prince's car were introduced to Prince Henry by the German ambassador, Von Holleben.

Mayor Rodenbeck, in his cordial manner, addressed the prince bidding him hail and godspeed.

President Brewster of the Chamber of Commerce, in behalf of the commercial interests of the city, addressed Prince Henry and presented him with a handsomely embossed and inscribed album containing 24 beautiful views of the city. The album is wholly a Rochester product. The paper, pictures, binding, etc., were all made here. A handsome pocket kodak manufactured in Rochester was also presented to Prince Henry on which was a gold plate bearing the following inscription: "To Her Royal Highness Princess Irene of Prussia, Rochester, N. Y., March 6, 1902."

Nine Rochester young ladies stepped forward and were introduced and presented the royal visitor with baskets of flowers and fruits. Among other gifts were two barrels of beer from the vaults of two local breweries. Prince Henry very briefly replied to the addresses and presentations.

As the train moved away for Syracuse "The Star Spangled Banner" was played by the Fifty-fourth Regiment band and another pyrotechnic display was given as a parting salute.

The prince Henry train arrived at Syracuse at 10:55. The home city of Ambassador White prepared a rousing welcome for the kaiser's brother. An immense throng of enthusiastic people cheered him lustily. The train was stopped at City Hall square. Mayor Kline greeted the prince and presented him with a gold seal of the city in a solid silver box. Charles Andrews presented the engrossed address and Mrs. Johannes Schoefer and Mrs. G. F. E. Weistering, for the German women, presented two albums, one for the kaiserin and the other for Princess Irene. The prince responded gracefully and then from the platform bowed his thanks and appreciation to the cheering thousands. Syracuse university students with torches and a band enlivened the occasion and gave the prince a yell prepared for the occasion. At 11:07 the train departed for the east.

The special train bearing Prince Henry and party passed through Utica without a stop at 12:30 this morning—schedule time.

Honors In Store For Prince

Berlin, March 6.—Relief is felt here that the flight of Prince Henry through the United States is now drawing to a close without any untoward incident, for, notwithstanding Emperor William's entire confidence as to the safety of the prince, others in authority have had misgivings that some Polish fanatic in Chicago, wrought up over the conflicts and national feeling in Polish Prussia, might attempt something violent. The prestige of Prince Henry has been immensely increased in Germany by the impression he has made upon the Americans. After his return home the prince will probably be entrusted with a larger share in public affairs, the impression being that Emperor William will find something else of first importance for him to do.

MORONG IN A FERMENT

Inhabitants Fear They Will Become Victims of Insurgents

Manila, March 6.—President Ampil of the town of Cainta, who is well known as an American sympathizer and who was recently captured by the insurgents, together with some of the native constabulary, has escaped from his captors and returned to Cainta. Ampil says that the insurgent force which took him prisoner is an entirely new organization in the province of Rizal. It consists of 45 uniformed men, armed with rifles, all of whom wear police badges. Since the capture of Ampil and the engagement of the constabulary March 3 the province of Morong has been in a ferment. The unrest has grown with the spreading of Ampil's reports of new organizations of insurgents. The excitement is now intense and many of the inhabitants of the province who have been friendly to the United States authorities are leaving their houses and crops and emigrating in the hope of saving their lives.

Fowls Feasted on Gold

Chicago, March 6.—Nuggets of gold were found in the crops of chickens and ducks in the South Water street market yesterday. The fowls were shipped from Fiefield, Wis. The discovery of the precious metal was made by a commission merchant's helpers when they slaughtered the fowls. There were three dozen fowls in the lot and in every one of these one or more particles of gold was discovered. The aggregate weight of the nuggets is 6½ ounces.

Wouldn't Forsake Dead

Boise, Idaho, March 6.—A party of prospectors reached here yesterday after a terrible 14 days' journey through the snow from the Thunder mountain district, bringing with them the bodies of three men who were the victims of a snowslide. The bodies, frozen and wrapped in hides, were drawn over the snow of the mountain passes, the prospectors undergoing almost incredible hardships to bring out the bodies of their dead friends.

THE HITCH IN CUBA

No Sign of Early Agreement as to Reciprocity

AN "INHERITED PROBLEM"

With Which the President Is Disinclined to Interfere—Thinks Congress Should Deal With the Subject According to Its Best Lights

Washington, March 6.—Speaker Henderson and Representative Cannon of Illinois called at the White House yesterday and discussed with President Roosevelt the subject of Cuban reciprocity and the sentiment thereon in the house.

Active canvassing continued among Republican members, preliminary to the third caucus on Cuban reciprocity, to be held tonight. The most positive claims were made by those opposed to Representative Payne's 20 percent reciprocity plan that there was a clear majority against it.

Mr. Payne and his associates did not concede this, however, and expressed the belief that a concession to Cuba ultimately will be granted. It was said in this connection that Speaker Henderson is now favorable to the position taken by the majority on the ways and means committee, and that this would exert much influence in shaping the final outcome.

During the day several members of the cabinet called on Messrs. Tawney of the ways and means committee, who has proposed the rebate plan as a substitute for Chairman Payne's 20 percent reciprocity plan and Mr. Morris of Minnesota, who also has proposed a plan differing from that of Mr. Payne. As an outcome of these calls it was asserted that three members of the cabinet, namely, Postmaster General Payne, Secretary Shaw and Secretary Wilson, were hopeful of seeing a solution of the problem which would not endanger any American industry. This was construed in some quarters to show a division in the cabinet, but it was stated by those conversant with the situation that the attitude of the cabinet did not warrant any such construction.

Later in the day Representative Tawney called at the White House and had a long conference. It developed that Mr. Tawney had told the president there was little or no possibility of adoption of the Payne plan by the Republican conference and that, if it was adopted, some 40 Republican members would not consider themselves bound and would carry the question to the floor of the house.

The president is understood to have made his position quite clear and in so doing is said to have removed several misapprehensions which have been afloat of late. He said he had no intention at present of sending a special message to congress on the subject. The president expressed the most earnest solicitude that a satisfactory adjustment be reached by congress, saying that this was an "inherited problem," meaning that it had come to him from the McKinley administration. Furthermore the president, it is asserted, indicated no positive determination in favor of any particular idea, but rather a desire that congress shoud deal with the subject according to its best lights.

After hearing from Mr. Tawney his assistants expressed the belief that the president would accept the rebate proposition if congress sent it to him.

While these conferences were going on at the White House Chairman Payne and members of the ways and means committee supporting him were in conference. Later one of the members reciprocity emfwyp emf emfwyp emy said that he was confident that Payne's reciprocity proposition commanded a majority of the Republican members, but that the minority was so large and was so disposed to carry the contest into the house that Mr. Payne and his friends recognized the seriousness of the situation. However, there was no disposition, he said, to accept the rebate plan, as it was stated that this was merely a repetition of the plan proposed by the head of the beet sugar organization two months ago.

Members of the house were informed that several members of the cabinet would confer with the president on the Cuban question, but so far as could be learned at the Capitol the only members of the cabinet to call were Postmaster General Payne and Secretary Root and the nature of their conference were not divulged.

In Congress

Washington, March 6.—It appears likely now that the senate will reach a vote on the pending shipping bill one week from next Monday. Mr. Clay addressed the senate yesterday in opposition to the bill and had not concluded when the senate adjourned. Early in the sesion the senate passed the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, the second of the big supply measures to be acted on at this session.

The house continued the debate on the bill to classify the rural free delivery service, but without action adjourned out of respect to the memory of Representative Polk of Pennsylvania.

Rathbone Followed Army Officers

Havana, March 6.—At the trial of the Cuban postal fraud cases yesterday, Mr. Lanuza, counsel for Rathbone, quoted a host of expenditures by army officers in Cuba as an argument to justify the expenditures of his client in the matters of carriages, coachman, house rent, furnishings, etc.

Citizens Ready For Mob

Marian, Ala., March 6.—As a result of a report that a mob of negroes is marching toward this town with the intention of attacking the county jail and releasing two negro murderers 50 citizens are under arms prepared to meet the negroes. Pickets have been thrown out on very road leading into the town, and if the mob appears a serious conflict is feared.

Citizens Saw Bank Robbed

Washington, Ind., March 6.—Burglars looted the First National bank at Montgomery yesterday and escaped with $3500 in money and $3600 worth of government bonds, payable to bearer. Two citizens watched the burglars from across the street, but gave no alarm for fear of being shot down.

Dan Patch Sold For $20,000

Oxford, Ind., March 6.—Dan Patch, 2:04½, who made a phenomenal record last season, was sold yesterday by Daniel A. Messer, Jr., to M. E. Sturgess of New York city for $20,000. The great son of Joe Patchen won every race in which he was entered last year.

Boer Leaders In Conference

London, March 6.—In a dispatch, dated Pretoria, the correspondent of The Standard says that Mr. Steyn and General DeWet have passed the Natal line and are reported to be conferring with General Botha in the Utrecht district.

World's Greatest Steamships

Liverpool, March 6.—The Daily Post understands that the Cunard line is to build two passenger steamers to eclipse in size anything afloat. They are to be over 700 feet long and of 48,000 horse power each.

Good Afternoon.

The earnings of the Citizens' Gas Light Company appear to be about $1,000 per mile. It was testified by officials that the company has fourteen miles of mains and that the gross receipts (almost wholly from gas) average $14,000 per year. Some of these streets like Newport avenue, are sparsely settled, and it is not a fact that most of the populous streets are piped, so it would appear as though the revenue might be easily increased at a small outlay. Quincy has about 100 miles of streets; over 85 miles of water mains; 30 to 40 miles of sewer mains which are being rapidly extended; over 17 miles of street railway tracks, and only 14 miles (perhaps less) of gas mains. Again more gas would be used by present takers if it was supplied, but the facts are that some mains are so small and filled or clogged that the supply is not adequate.

The business men of City Square do not take very kindly to the plans of the Old Colony street railway for the discontinuance of the tracks on Temple street, while others object to double tracks on Saville street.

If all the travel from Washington street, Quincy Point and Weymouth is diverted from Temple street they argue that Quincy may lose the trade entirely. That the passengers will be taken to the depot via Saville street or else whisked through the city without seeing the business houses, and that they will trade in Boston.

Otherwise the double tracking of Washington and Hancock streets meets with favor, and will result in better service. This, together with the permit already obtained, will give double tracks on Hancock street from the new car barn near Merrymount park to the Ledger office; also from the junction of Hancock and Washington streets along the latter street beyond Temple street, and also into Coddington street; from Washington street there will also be an additional track up Saville street to the depot.

Along Hancock street between Dr. Gordon's and City Hall it is proposed to place the tracks nearer the centre of the street, and also to straighten them near the corner of Granite street. The turnout near Music hall will then be in sight of the double tracks which come together near the Ledger office, and for awhile the street railway can get along without double tracking that narrow portion of Hancock street between Granite and School streets.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Prince Henry is having a gorgeous time, but the full felicity of an American winter he will not experience. For that he would have to come to New Hampshire and coast down a long hill on a double runner between two pretty girls, each making believe that she was afraid she should fall off.—Concord Monitor.

☞ All great authorities agree that general over-production is an impossibility, though many admit that over production in one or more articles frequently occurs. I take issue with all who make this admission. I claim that three exceptions are not cases of "over-production," but simply cases of temporary surplus production—and that temporary surplus production is not only natural but that it is necessary man's comfort and welfare. Man long ago discovered that the earth yields its food products during short annual periods which we now call harvest; and that if he would enjoy these products continuously, he must gather and store up of the surplus during these periods, sufficient to satisfy his wants until the next harvest. This was man's first lesson; that temporary surplus production was a necessity to his comfort and welfare, and was not "over-production." Over-production is a term which should never be applied to the production of any useful or desirable commodity, which can be preserved or carried to a place or time when it will be needed.—George H. Hull, in The Engineering Magazine for March.

☞ Rockland is to be congratulated. So are all the people of peaceful instincts who use the street cars running to the eastward of Brockton. They have had their troubles, especially of late. The fighting and the general vileness on night cars have at times reached depths which only those who have seen it can believe. After May 1st it is to be hoped that this will be largely done away with. It is certainly a fact that the people around this city do not as a rule know how to use liquor. There was the year of license in Brockton to prove it, when the twelvemouth was one long orgy. Here is the Rockland experience, and we all recall before that the days when Abington was "wide open," and years ago when Randolph supplied the thirsty. It is always the same experience, rows and fighting and trouble and dirt of all kinds. The peaceful Cincinnati or Milwaukee Germans would behold with wide-eyed astonishment and disgust the lengths to which liquor carries some of the "sports" of this district. But the Germans, after tasting some of the compounds used hereabout, might be charitable and lay it to the quality of the vitrol used.—Brockton Enterprise.

Whist at Atlantic.

In spite of the severe storm Wednesday evening, the smart Set held its meeting with Miss May Melzard of Botolph street. The costumes of the young women as they severally arrived, were unique and masculine in the extreme, and it was plainly apparent that the male members of more than one family would be confined to the house for lack of out-door apparel. Whist began at 8.30; partners were chosen by small Chinese images hidden away in a bed of colored paper and tied with different colored ribbons. At the close of the game the first prize was awarded to Miss Sadie Melzard; the second to Miss Maud Gray, and the consolation prize to Miss Evelyn Bassett. The guests retired to the dining-room where a very inviting collation and a merry crowd whiled away the hours until 11.30. The next meeting will be with Miss Warren of Billings street.

PRINCE IN BOSTON

Crowds at South Station on His Arrival.

Visits State House and Public Library.

Guest of Harvard University This Afternoon.

A clear sky and thousands of people greeted Prince Henry of Prussia, the brother of the German Emperor upon his arrival in Boston at 9.45 this morning. The crowd at the South Terminal station even exceeded in numbers the assemblages when President McKinley and Admiral Dewey visited Boston, and the ovation was a hearty one.

Arrangements were excellent for keeping the crowd back, and many were disappointed because they scarcely obtained a glimpse of the prince.

Mayor Collins was the first to greet Prince Henry in his car upon the arrival of the train. The prince and suite found carriages in waiting at the train gates, and with an escort of mounted police and cavalry the procession moved through the midway and left the station by the main exit at the corner of Summer street and Atlantic avenue into Dewey square.

The demonstration which commenced in the station on the arrival of the train continued all along the route up summer street into Tremont, Boylston and Arlington streets and to the Somerset Hotel on Commonwealth avenue.

At the Somerset Gov. Crane and Mayor Collins were received. About 11 Prince Henry arrived at the State House and visited the Governor and Legislature, and before 12 was a guest of the City of Boston at the Public Library, but soon left for the Somerset.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon he left for Cambridge, where he will visit the City Hall and Harvard university. He will receive a degree from Harvard, lunch with President Eliot and others, and attend a reception by Harvard students, and later a reception of the Germanic Museum Association at residence of Prof. Munsterberg.

At six o'clock this evening Prince Henry gives a reception to German women at Hotel Somerset, at 7.30 attends the banquet of the City of Boston, at 11 goes to reception of Thursday Evening club at residence of J. Montgomery Sears. At 12.30 A. M. he boards his train at Exeter street, and at 2 A. M. will leave Boston for Albany, N. Y.

February Court Business.

Probation Officer Francis A. Spear reports the total number of criminal cases before the District court during the month of February to have been 87, one less then the previous month. Of these cases 48 were for drunkenness; 11 search warrants; 6 for violation of the liquor law; 5 neglected children; 4 for assault; 3 for larceny; 2 each for disturbing a religious meeting and non-support, and one each for bastardy, concealing mortgaged property, carrying concealed weapons, lewdness, peddling without a license and truancy.

On the first of March there were 31 unfinished February cases and 18 January cases.

Stolen by His Son.

The horse of Simon Rogers, which was reported as stolen from his stable on School street, was recovered Wednesday by Officer Bradley in Harris' sale stable in Boston. It afterward came out that the horse was stolen by the 12-year-old son of Mr. Rogers, who was this morning sent to the truant school for two years.

TODAY'S COURT.

John J. Cunniff was fined $10 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

Joseph Rogers, for truancy at Quincy, was sent to the truant school for two years.

John Esson and Roger Kenner were arraigned for malicious mischief at Quincy. Case continued one week.

The Magazines.

Besides the usual departments—"Affairs at Washington," "Studies of Books and Their Makers," "The Stage," etc., the March "National" has several features of large and pointed interest to Americans. Judge Andrew J. Harlan, last survivor of the famous Thirty-First Congress, contributes a chapter of fascinating reminiscences of the celebrated men who figured in that body. Grace H. Tower tells the pretty story, and gives two full page photographs of Pasadena's recent Rose Tournament. Leonora Beck Ellis of Atlanta gives a vivid account of the South's new crusade for the technical education of the poor white children of that section.

Annual Church Meeting.

The annual meeting and supper of the Memorial Congregational church of Atlantic was held in the church Wednesday evening. The supper was a great success, and the tables were prettily decorated with garlands of pink ribbon and carnation pinks. A vote of thanks was given the supper committee for their efficient service. The committee were Mrs. Theodore Parker, Mrs. T. D. Borst, Miss Agnes McKenzie and Mr. Walter F. Blake.

Encouraging reports were read from the various church societies; enthusiasm and hopefulness were the keynotes of each report.

The following officers were elected: Moderator, Mr. George E. Todd; clerk, Mrs. Edmund R. Wade; treasurer, Mr. Frank Jenkins; auditor, Mr. Theodore Parker; Deacon for two years, Mr. George E. Todd; member of the standing committee, Mr. George Gill.

Brief addresses, some humorous, some serious, were made by Rev. J. H. Whitaker and various members. The occasion was marked by the brightness of the outlook, and by the earnest appreciation of the opportunities for Christian service. At 10 o'clock the company united heartily in the Doxology and then dispersed.

Appreciated.

Mention should be made of Mr. Dennis O'Neal's untiring efforts to keep the sidewalks of Atlantic in good condition. Last Friday evening when the water threatened to cover Sagamore street, Mr. O'Neal worked until past 3 o'clock in the morning and consequently no damage was done. Wednesday in the midst of the snow and gale, he kept the streets in excellent order which was appreciated by Ward Six, as its male representatives straggled up from the late trains. Mr. O'Neal is very popular in the ward, and well deserves his reputation as one of the best road overseers in the city of Quincy.

Funeral of Mrs. Pratt.

The funeral of Mrs. Nellie Davis, wife of Mr. Lester M. Pratt, was held Wednesday afternoon from her late residence on Franklin street. The services were conducted by Rev. Ellery Channing Butler of the First church, and the music was by the First church quartette. The services were very largely attended, and there was a profusion of beautiful flowers which expressed the love of friends left behind. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston.

"Ought to Pass."

The Committee on Federal Relations of the Legislature reported, Wednesday, ought to pass, on resolutions requesting the Masssachusetts senators and representatives to promote the building of a canal between Weymouth Fore river and Taunton river by way of Brockton.

The Great Headache Cure.

Quick--Safe--Sure.

Dr. Miles' Pain Pills

Cure all kinds of Pains and Aches.

8 Shinzaka Machi, Akasaka, Tokyo, Japan.

With this I am ordering more of the Pain Pills. Both our Japanese and foreign friends have used the Pills and they all tell me I cannot write too much in their favor. We have here what is called "Japanese Headache," which is supposed to be incurable while we remain in this country, but the Pain Pills always cure the severest attacks.

Sincerely, MAY S. HOWARD.

"During many years I could not ride in a street car, or steam car, or even take a buggy ride without suffering with sick headache. I tried many different remedies with but little help; for, if one medicine relieved me once or twice, it soon lost the power to help. Dr. Miles' Pain Pills not only relieves an attack every time, but if I take one in my mouth before starting out it will prevent even a slight attack."

MRS. J. S. SPAULDING,
1229 Day Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

In my intense suffering from chronic neuralgia, I found Dr. Miles' Pain Pills better than the gold of Ophir.

Gen. Charles Dick, of Ohio, the eminent Congressman from the Garfield district, believes there is no remedy so efficient for headache as Dr. Miles' Pain Pills.

Wm. M. Bell, Gen'l Sec'y Home, Frontier and Foreign Missionary Society of the United Brethren in Christ, Dayton, Ohio, writes as follows: "During my recent trip abroad I was subject to the most severe strain upon the nervous system. Fortunately, I was never without a supply of Dr. Miles' Pain Pills and received most excellent results from their use. This remedy is standard in our home and have been specially helpful during the past season. It is a pleasure to recommend to suffering humanity these most meritorious medicines."

Quincy people who were in Boston Wednesday afternoon had a hard time getting home. The big train shed of the South Terminal was in bad shape. The damp snow packed down heavily and it was impossible to work the block system of switches. This delayed all trains more or less.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a seyere attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

SEVERE STORM.

Trains on the Railroad Late in the Evening.

The storm of Wednesday afternoon and evening was one of the severest this winter. It was also perhaps the only storm of the winter that came near paralyzing the steam railroad service. Nearly all the afternoon trains were late, some being fully two hours behind time. The inward trains were not so badly off, although the 7.12 P. M. theatre train was nearly an hour late. The trouble was largely on account of the blocking of the switches at the South Terminal station.

The storm was accompanied by a high wind and the snow was drifted quite badly in places. At night it turned to rain which with the high wind made it most disagreeable for those who were out.

A large four-horse team was abandoned on Quincy avenue late in the afternoon, as the horses were completely tired out and had all they could do to reach the stable by themselves.

The street railway had its big snow plows working all night. While not much attempt was made to run cars on schedule time during the evening, the tracks were kept open so that this morning all lines are open and regular trips are being made.

Commissioner Knowlton had his snow plows out late last night and at 3 o'clock this morning. The result was that the sidewalks were in fairly good condition by the time most people were about.

Swedish Titles.

One of the old customs is for people to indicate their business upon their visiting cards. You will receive the card of Lawyer Jones or Banker Smith or Notary Johnson or Music Professor Brown or Grosserer (which means wholesale merchant) Furgeson or Geologist Thompson, and if a man ever held an office it is customary to indicate that fact upon his card. A burgomaster is always a burgomaster, a consul is always a consul and an alderman always an alderman. The prefixes "Hon." and "Mr." are seldom used, and the title, whether commercial or professional, is observed in conversation in the same way. It would sound rather queer for any one in the United States to ask, "Wholesale Merchant MacVeagh, will you kindly pass the butter?" or "Banker Hutchinson, will you escort Frau Board of Trade Operator Jones to the table?" or "Director of Music Ziegfeld, I wish you good day?" but that is the custom in Sweden, and it is observed by children as well as grown people. A lisping child will approach a guest, make a pretty little bob courtesy and say, "Good morning, Chief Justice of Supreme Court Smith," or "Good night, Representative In Congress Brown."

It is customary also for ladies to print their maiden names upon their visiting cards in smaller type under their married names, particularly if they have a pride of family and want people to know their ancestry.—Chicago Record.

Where London Drinks.

Originality was evidently not one of the strong points of the godfathers of public houses, as the majority of names are borne by any number from two to a dozen or more premises. Where, however, they have determined to get something fresh they have undoubtedly done so. The Antigallican, Bag of Nails, Blade Bone, Bombay Grab, David and Harp, Experienced Fowler, Frying Pan, Grave Maurice, Greenland Fishery, Rent Day, Sash and Cocoa Tree, Old Blind Beggar and Ticket Porter are all names to be found within the metropolis, as well as the inexplicable combinations of Cock and Harp, Five Bells and Blackbone, French Horn and Artichoke, Crown and Can, Bell and Mackerel, Cock and Neptune, Jolly Sailors and Little Billet, Ship and Blue Ball, Ship and Shovel, Sun and Thirteen Cantons and the King's Head and Eight Bells. Lastly, there are three North Poles, two World's Ends, a Finish and a Final.—London Mail.

The Lacebark Tree.

The lacebark tree grows in the West Indies. It is a lofty tree, with ovate, entire, smooth leaves and white flowers. It is remarkable for the tenacity of its inner bark and the readiness with which the inner bark may be separated—after maceration in water—into layers resembling lace. A governor of Jamaica is said to have presented to Charles II. a cravat, frill and ruffles made of it.

Razor Edged.

"Is Miss Caustique still sharp in her manner toward you?"

"I should say so. Why, she's grown so sharp that now she cuts me whenever we meet."—New York World.

Ready For the "Yes."

Madge—Have you given Jack your final answer yet?

Mabel—Not yet—but I have given him my final "No."—Brooklyn Life.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

CITY BREVITIES.

The City Council Committee on Streets will meet Friday evening.

Through street car service to Brockton was resumed this morning for the first time for nearly a week, owing to the washouts caused by the storm of last week Friday.

Great attraction at Music hall tonight. Refined Vaudeville and Bicycle Race, as will be noticed by an advertisement in another column. A large attendance is expected.

Hotel Shelton at Adams shore has changed hands. The purchaser is Mary Flagler of New Yoak city, who will improve and occupy. The valuation with about 21,000 feet of land is set at about $9,500.

Several dates have been published as to the closing of the present term of school. The correct date is that recently published by the Ledger. The schools close Wednesday, March 19, and open Monday, March 31.

Master Ralph Merritt was tendered a surprise party at his home on Elm place, Tuesday evening, the occasion being his thirteenth birthday. The evening was passed in a pleasant manner with games, etc. Refreshments were served, and Ralph was presented with a blood stone ring.

"REVOLT" CRUSHED

Leader Who Attempted to Invade Servia Is Shot and Killed

Belgrade, March 6.—An extraordinary attempt to start a revolution was made yesterdiy at the frontier town of Shabats, 70 miles west of Belof Alavantics, a relative of Prince Karageorgevich, the pretender to the Servian throne. The only result was that Alavantics was killed and his adherents were arrested.

Alavantics, with a handful of followers, arrived at Shabats from Mitrowiez (on the Austrian bank of the Save) wearing the uniform of a general in the Servian army, and called to the frontier guard to follow him. The latter, not suspecting that anything was wrong, accompanied the supposed general to the town hall, where Alavantics ordered the men of the fire department to join him. This motley procession proceeded to the gendarmery barracks, where Alavantics paraded the gendarmes. Two of the latter, however, escaped and apprised their commander, Captain Nikolics. The latter, when he arrived on the scene, called on Alavantics to produce some documents as authority for his actions, whereupon the would-be revolutionist leader fired a revolver at Captain Nikolics and slightly wounded the latter. Nikolics promptly shot and killed Alavantics, whose followers were then arrested.

Geneva, March 6.—Prince Karagorgevich, the Servian pretender, specifically disclaims any connection with the revolutionary attempt made at Shabats or relationship with Alavantics.

Milan's Offspring a Pretender

London, March 6.—The Vienna correspondent of The Standard learns that another pretender to the Servian throne has appeared in the person of Obren, the 14-year-old illegitimate son of ex-King Milan. Obren is now living in Constantinople with his mother.

Manhattan Full of Holes.

Manhattan Island is like an enormous coal mine, with intricate galleries and apartments underground. A large group of curious subterranean rooms and passages is to be found at the foot of Broadway, extending out laterally to the east and west. An almost continuous line of them follows Broadway. Several of the banks and trust companies have offices fitted up below the crowded sidewalks, where rows of clerks work silently, unmindful of the rush and turmoil above their heads. In the safe deposit vaults built below the pavements of Broadway, Wall, Nassau and Broad streets are stored millions of dollars' worth of securities, over which the crowds hurry all day heedlessly.

A COUNTRY HOUSE.

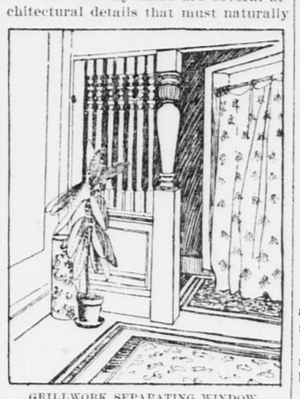

INTERIOR ARRANGEMENT OF A SMALL BUT VERY DESIRABLE COTTAGE.

Interest in housebuilding has never been so popular as it is at this time nor the desire for original expression in homes so marked.

A small but very desirable country house or cottage containing some strikingly good points is a subject of consideration by The Delineator, which, as to interior features, has the following to say, among other things:

In the hallway there are several architectural details that must naturally be named in precedence to the furnishings. The stairs in their lower portion are left without a railing, affording a pretty shelf for foliage plants. The wide tread of the steps and their good width are noteworthy. A coat closet is at the back, fitted into the space under the stairs.

At this point the hall could have been left without any lack observable in its plan, but the architect has introduced a pleasant scheme for making it more delightful—a seat under a window, with its separating grillwork.

The white painted woodwork strikes the attention in the hall, and from there it is carried entirely through the house. This makes the uniform adoption of white shades and muslin curtains a simple solution of the often complex question of window treatment. The walls of the halls are tinted a deep colonial red. The floor coverings are the fine mixed colorings of the orient. A Japanese holder for umbrellas occupies one corner of the hall, and a mirror and chair are opposite.

Perfect taste in the dining room requires an absence of the superfluous. Although applicable all over the house, this rule is particularly insistent in this room. We may accumulate things in our bedrooms and parlors, adding here and there as the fancy comes to us, but in the dining room the utilitarian office should never be submerged in the ornamental. To those of us who do not realize this adequately this dining room will offer an admirable lesson. A corner closet for china keeps the line of the floor even and displays behind the diamond panes of glass the decorated tableware. The long drawers are well adapted for the table linen and especially for the tea cloths that the housekeeper finds difficult to keep in unfolded condition. The table, chairs and sideboard are of oak, in plain, good style. The sideboard is equipped with teakettle and chafing dish, making an unexpected point of interest after entering the room. A fireplace with bricks around the opening is opposite the entrance. A large Turkish carpet is laid under the table, and a Turkish portiere is hung at the hall entrance.

The parlor is so perfectly composed that the conventional room the word parlor conjures up makes it in this case a misnomer. It is a delightful room at whichever point the eye rests. The fireplace is situated directly facing the doorway so that on entering one is insensibly drawn toward the ingle nook. The mantel is a beautiful conception of simple ornaments, graceful and generous proportion—three characteristics that are not always found in company.

The walls of the parlor are finished with green water color paint, and on this surface the pictures stand forth vividly. In an opposite corner of the room, to the left of the entrance, is a low bookcase built against the wall, and this is painted like the woodwork.

The housekeeping details of this small country house are managed with fully as much skill as the other parts of the house. The butler's pantry is well lighted and ventilated, and the kitchen shows a sensible disposition of range and sink.

MENDING BAG BASKET.

Ready For Every Need and Convenient to Carry In a Trunk.

Let the mending bag basket be ready for every need. Let there be plenty of tapes. The selvage edge of tape is more easily applied over a rent than a strip of muslin that must be folded in; the tape is flat, less noticeable and irons well. Overlay a worn seam with narrow tape.

If the placket of petticoat or nightgown inclines to tear apart, rip it open, darn or stay with crosspiece of tape, then face the placket with wide tape, an all around facing that will never tear crosswise.

Colored tapes, black tapes of different widths for skirt strings or loops for hanging garments, white tapes, linen and cotton, broad and narrow—let there be a generous supply.

Colored spool cottons should be in variety to repair colored garments or gloves. White and black cottons of the useful numbers and at least one spool of black linen and one of black silk should be assured.

Darning cottons should be in carefully selected harmony with the colors of the stockings of the family.

Darning flosses for silk stockings and assorted spools may have a bag to themselves.

With the foregoing advice The New Idea Woman's Magazine introduces the description and illustration of a flat bag basket which can be conveniently placed in the tray of a trunk and go with the family to mountain or shore.

Dimensions may vary, but a good sized bag is made from a yard of brown furniture linen.

Cut three pieces, circular, sixteen inches in diameter. Cut a piece of box board, hexagonal, four inches in diameter, to be basted between two of the circular pieces of linen.

slanted down the sides, for the pockets. Gather these, top and bottom; bind all the way around with the tape, basting tape carefully, afterward stitching on the machine. Each pocket should be at bottom the width of side of hexagonal cards; at the top a little wider, to admit of putting in and taking out the contents.

When the six pieces which are to form the pockets are neatly stitched, they must be arranged about the hexagonal center bit of board. Baste the bottom of the pieces close to the card, so that one straight stitching around the base holds the pockets and board in place to begin with.

The pockets will flare, conveniently shaping themselves, but must be evenly basted and firmly stitched upon the two linens.

Next sew at the upper corner of each pocket a brass ring; then baste on the third circular piece of linen, which gives stiffness and also conceals the pocket stitching, which is far from ornamental when the bag is made of two circular pieces.

Now baste all around the binding, careful to cover the triple edge. It will be well to press with a hot iron to finish neatly.

Then draw the tape through the rings, leaving length to tie in an ample bowknot after the tape is pulled, to draw the mending bag into shape as a basket. Each basket should be plainly lettered with embroidery stitch in color of binding or with pen and ink to tell the contents—darning cottons, colored threads, button box, tapes, black and white, and odds and ends.

When bags are filled, somewhere between them attach a long needle cushion or needlebook, and opposite suspend an emery strawberry.

The household supplied with this helpful "kit of tools" has no excuse for untidiness of wardrobe.

A Time For Odd Carpentry Jobs.

Did you know that this is a very good time of year in which to have odd jobs of carpentry and painting done? (Inside the house, of course.) A carpenter who is so busy in spurts that he is nearly worked to death offered to make bookcases in the late winter months for almost nothing, and a painter also did a set of furniture—the woodwork, etc., of a room—for less than half the warm weather prices. He had no shop, he said, and no rent to pay and nothing to do, so he had a room given him entirely to work his will upon, and beyond a gently permeating smell of paint that only strayed when the children were careless about the doors, the whole job was accomplished cheaply, satisfactorily and with far less interruption than is experienced at the rush time.

Taft's Testimony

Washington, March 6.—Governor Taft was questioned further concerning slavery in the Philippines, by members of the house insular committee yesterday. He said the commission had undertaken no legislation as to slavery and the action taken by the military had been first, to release Christian slaves, and, second, to prevent slave raiding parties from capturing slaves. Governor Taft said that the datos' authority extended to the death penalty against slaves after a trial.

Idle Since Last May

San Francisco, March 6.—After continuing for 9½ months, the strike of the iron workers of this city to enforce a demand for a nine-hour day came to a formal end yesterday. Within the next week between 2000 and 3000 men will be employed. The men will accept slight concessions and complete a temporary settlement on condition that the National Federation will soon adjust the working conditions in the iron trades generally throughout the country.

Unique Political Campaign

Louisville, March 6.—Miss Lota Greenup of Paducah has taken to the stump with her father in his campaign for the Democratic nomination for member of congress from this district. Miss Lota is an accomplished musician. During her father's tour of the district she plays the violin and sings before the audiences which he addresses. The double bill is drawing big crowds everywhere.

Big Sugar Combination

Salt Lake, March 6.—Secretary Whitney of the Utah Sugar Refining company received a telegram yesterday from New York stating that a deal for the sale of a half interest in the company had been closed. The amount involved is said to be about $1,300,000. The advent of the eastern capital in the western sugar industry, it is reported, will be followed by the development of the beet sugar industry on a large scale.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER IV.

JUST as the reading of the proclamation by the head of the police came to an end an idea darted instinctively into the mind of Michael Strogoff.

"What a singular coincidence," thought he, "between this proclamation expelling all foreigners of Asiatic origin and the words exchanged last evening between those two gypsies of the Zingari race! 'The Father himself sends us where we wish to go,' that old man said. But 'the Father' is the emperor. He is never called anything else among the people. How could those gypsies have foreseen the measure taken against them? How could they have known it beforehand, and where do they wish to go? Those are suspicious people, and it seems to me that to them the government proclamation must be more useful than injurious."

But these reflections, though certainly correct, were completely dispelled by another, which drove every other thought out of Michael's mind. He forgot the Zingaris, their suspicious words, the strange coincidence which resulted from the proclamation. The remembrance of the young Livonian girl suddenly rushed into his mind.

"Poor child!" he thought to himself. "She cannot now cross the frontier."

In truth the young girl was from Riga. She was Livonian, consequently Russian, and now could not leave Russian territory. The permit which had been given her before the new measures had been promulgated was evidently no longer available. All routes to Siberia had just been pitilessly closed to her, and whatever was the motive which was taking her to Irkutsk, she was now forbidden to go there.

This thought greatly occupied Michael Strogoff. He said to himself, vaguely at first, that without neglecting anything of what was due to his important mission it would perhaps be possible for him to be of some use to this brave girl, and this idea pleased him. Knowing how serious were the dangers which he, an energetic and vigorous man, would have personally to encounter through a country of which, however, the roads were familiar, he could not conceal from himself how infinitely greater they would prove to a young, unprotected girl. As she was going to Irkutsk, she would be obliged to follow the same road as himself; she would have to pass through the bands of invaders, as he was about to attempt doing himself. If, moreover, and according to all probability, she had at her disposal only the resources necessary for a journey taken under ordinary circumstances, how could she manage to accomplish it under conditions which late events would render not only perilous, but expensive?

"Well," said he, "if she takes the route to Perm it is nearly impossible but that I shall fall in with her. Then I will watch over her without her suspecting it, and as she appears to be as anxious as myself to reach Irkutsk she will cause me no delay."

But one thought leads to another. Michael Strogoff had till now reasoned on the supposition of doing a kind action, of rendering a service, but now another idea flashed into his brain, and the question presented itself under quite a new aspect.

"The fact is," said he to himself, "that I have much more need of her than she can have of me. Her presence will be useful in drawing off suspicion from me. A man traveling alone across the steppes may be easily guessed to be a courier to the czar. If, on the contrary, this young girl accompanies me, I shall appear in the eyes of all the Nicholas Korpanoff of my podorojna. Therefore she must accompany me. Therefore I must find her again at any cost. It is not probable that since yesterday evening she has been able to get a carriage and leave Nijni Novgorod. I must look for her. And may God guide me!"

Michael left the great square of Nijni Novgorod, where the tumult produced by the carrying out of the prescribed measures had now reached its height. Recriminations from the banished strangers, shouts from the agents and Cossacks who were using them so brutally, all together made an indescribable uproar. The girl for whom he searched could not be there. It was now 9 o'clock in the morning. The steamboat did not start till 12. Michael Strogoff had therefore nearly three hours to employ in searching for her whom he wished to make his traveling companion.

He crossed the Volga again and hunted through the quarters on the other side, where the crowd was much less considerable. He visited every road, both in the high and low towns. He entered the churches, the natural refuge for all who weep, for all who suffer. Nowhere did he meet with the young Livonian.

Michael wandered about thus for two hours. He went on without stopping, feeling no fatigue, but obeying the potent instinct which allowed him no room for thought. All was in vain.

It then occurred to him that perhaps the girl had not heard of the order, though this was improbable enough, for such a thunderclap could not have burst without being heard by all. Evidently interested in knowing the smallest news from Siberia, how could she be ignorant of the measures taken by the governor—measures which concerned her so directly? But if she was ignorant of it she would come in an hour to the quay, and there some merciless agent would brutally refuse her a passage. At any cost he must see her beforehand and do what he could to enable her to avoid such a repulse.

But all his endeavors were in vain, and he at length almost despaired of finding her again.

It was now 11 o'clock, and Michael, though under any other circumstances it would have been useless, thought of presenting his podorojna at the office of the head of police. The proclamation evidently did not concern him, since the emergency had been foreseen for him, but he wished to make sure that nothing would hinder his departure from the town.

Michael then returned to the other side of the Volga, to the quarter in which was the office of the head of police.

Every one was in a hurry, for the means of transport would be much sought after among this crowd of banished people, and those who did not set about it soon ran a great risk of not being able to leave the town in the prescribed time, which would expose them to some brutal treatment from the governor's agents.

Owing to the strength of his elbows, Michael Strogoff was able to cross the court. But to get into the office and up to the clerk's little window was a much more difficult business. However, a word into an inspector's ear and a few judiciously given rubles were powerful enough to gain him a passage. The man, after taking him into the waiting room, went to call the proper clerk.

Michael Strogoff would not be long in making everything right with the police and being free in his movements.

While waiting he looked about him, and what did he see? There, fallen rather than seated on a bench, was a girl, a prey to silent despair, although her face could scarcely be seen, the profile alone being visible against the wall.

Not knowing the governor's orders, she had come to the police office to get her pass signed. They had refused to sign it. No doubt she was authorized to go to Irkutsk, but the order was peremptory; it annulled all previous authorizations, and the routes to Siberia were closed to her. Michael, delighted at having found her again, approached the girl.

She looked up for a moment, and her face brightened on recognizing her traveling companion. She instinctively rose, and, like a drowning man who clutches at a spar, she was about to ask his help. At that moment the agent touched Michael on the shoulder.

"The head of police will see you," he said.

"Good!" returned Michael, and without saying a word to her for whom he had been searching all day, without reassuring her by even a gesture which might compromise either her or himself, he followed the man through the crowd.

The young Livonian, seeing the only being to whom she could look for help disappear, fell back again on her bench.

Three minutes had not passed before Michael Strogoff reappeared, accompanied by the agent. In his hand he held his podorojna, which threw open the roads to Siberia for him. He again approached the young Livonian, and, holding out his hand, "Sister," said he.

She understood. She rose as if some sudden inspiration prevented her from hesitating a moment.

"Sister," repeated Michael Strogoff, "we are authorized to continue our journey to Irkutsk. Will you come?"

"I will follow you, brother," replied the girl, putting her hand into that of Michael Strogoff, and together they left the police station.

Michael Strogoff and the young Livonian had taken passage on board the Caucasus. Their embarkation was made without any difficulty. As is known, the podorojna, drawn up in the name of Nicholas Korpanoff, authorized this merchant to be accompanied on his journey to Siberia. They appeared, therefore, to be a brother and sister traveling under the protection of the imperial police. Both, seated together at the stern, gazed at the receding town so disturbed by the governor's order. Michael had as yet said nothing to the girl. He had not even questioned her. He waited until she should speak to him whenever that was necessary. She had been anxious to leave that town, in which but for the providential intervention of this unexpected protector she would have remained imprisoned. She said nothing, but her looks spoke her thanks.

The Caucasus had been steaming on for about two hours when the young Livonian, addressing herself to Michael Strogoff, said:

"Are you going to Irkutsk, brother?"

"Yes, sister," answered the young man. "We are both going the same way. Consequently wherever I go you shall go."

"Tomorrow, brother, you shall know why I left the shores of the Baltic to go beyond the Ural mountains."

"I ask you nothing, sister."

"You shall know all," replied the girl, with a faint smile. "A sister should hide nothing from her brother. But I cannot today. Fatigue and sorrow have broken me down."

"Will you go and rest in your cabin?" asked Michael.

"Yes—yes, and tomorrow"—

"Come, then"—

He hesitated to finish his sentence as if he had wished to end it by the name of his companion, of which he was still ignorant.

"Nadia," said she, holding out her hand.

"Come, Nadia," answered Michael, "and make what use you like of your brother Nicholas Korpanoff." And he led the girl to the cabin engaged for her off the saloon.

Michael Strogoff returned on deck, and, eager for any news which might bear on his journey, he mingled in the groups of passengers, though without taking any part in the conversation. Should he by any chance be questioned and obliged to reply he would announce himself as the merchant Nicholas Korpanoff, going back to the frontier in the Caucasus, for he did not wish it to be suspected that a special permission authorized him to travel to Siberia.

The young Livonian did not come to dinner. She was asleep in her cabin, and Michael did not like to awaken her.

Between 11 and 2, the moon being new, it was almost dark. Nearly all the passengers were then asleep on the deck, and the silence was disturbed only by the noise of the paddles striking the water at regular intervals. Anxiety kept Michael Strogoff awake. He walked up and down, but always in the stern of the steamer. Once, however, he happened to pass the engine room. He then found himself in the part reserved for second and third class passengers.

He stopped. Voices appeared to come from a group of passengers enveloped in cloaks and wraps, so that it was impossible to recognize them in the dark. But it sometimes happened that when the steamer's chimney sent forth a plume of ruddy flames among the volumes of smoke the sparks seemed to fall among the group as though thousands of spangles had been suddenly illuminated. Michael was about to step up the ladder when a few words reached his ear, distinctly uttered in that strange tongue which he had heard during the night at the fair.

Instinctively he stopped to listen. Protected by the shadow of the forecastle, he could not be perceived himself. As to seeing the passengers who were talking, that was impossible. He was obliged to confine himself to listening.

The first words exchanged were of no importance—to him at least—but they allowed him to recognize the voices of the man and woman whom he had heard at Nijni Novgorod. This, of course, made him redouble his attention. It was, indeed, not at all impossible that the gypsies, a scrap of whose conversation he had overheard, now banished with all their fellows, should be on board the Caucasus.

And it was well for him that he listened, for he distinctly heard this question and answer made in the Tartar idiom:

"It is said that a courier has set out from Moscow for Irkutsk."

"It is so said, Sangarre, but either this courier will arrive too late, or he will not arrive at all."

Michael Strogoff started involuntarily at this reply which concerned him so directly. He tried to see if the man and woman who had just spoken were really those whom he suspected, but the shadow was too deep, and he could not succeed.

In a few moments Michael Strogoff had regained the stern of the vessel without having been perceived, and, taking a seat by himself, he buried his face in his hands. It might have been supposed that he was asleep.

He was not asleep, however, and did not even think of sleeping. He was reflecting on this, not without a lively apprehension: "Who is it knows of my departure and who can have any interest in knowing it?"

NEW MOVE OF COLOMBIA

May Cause Delay In Way of a Canal Bargain

ANGLO-FRENCH SYNDICATE

Receives No Official Notice at Washington Spooner's Proposition Relative to Panama Project Considered the One Most Likely to Be Passed

Washington, March 6.—The action of the senate sub-committee on interoceanic canals in voting that the legal complications in the way of a transfer of the title and property of the Panama Canal company to the United States are insurmountable will, it is said, have no practical effect upon the canal question in the senate. It is learned that this report was decided upon by the sub-committee in the most perfunctory way and without investigation into the merits of the case.

The testimony of General Abbott, U. S. A., retired, formerly chief of engineers, and a member of the international board that met in Paris and passed upon the question of the practicability of the Panama canal at the time De Lesseps was at the head of the company, was taken in connection with the report of the Paris board. General Abbott said that he still believed the Panama route to be the most feasible and practicable of any, and thinks the United States should accept the offer of the Panama company to sell its property for $40,000,000.

What gives the friends of the Panama route more concern than the opposition of the senate committee is the report from Paris that the Colombian government announces that it must be dealt with before any transfer of title to the United States is made. The friends of the canal project think that this new feature of the controversy may cause some trouble and delay, and lead the people of the United States generally and persons in congress particularly, to exaggerate the difficulties that stand in the way of a bargain between the United States and the Panama Canal company.

Apparently no official notice has been taken of the dispatch from Colon that an Anglo-French syndicate has offered the Panama Canal company $80,000,000 for what the United States has been asked to buy for $40,000,000, and the Colombian minister and the counsel for the Panama Canal company in this city do not believe it. At any rate, the United States has an option for one year.

The report has been in circulation for some time to the effect that Senator Hanna and other leading senators are advocating the Panama route, merely for the purpose of befogging the situation, and making it certain that no canal bill will become a law at this session. All of these senators deny this, however, and say that they think a bill ought to be passed, and that it will be passed. They confess that they are at sea as to the particular route that should be chosen, but are almost unanimous in the opinion that it would be to the interest of the United States to accept the offer of the Panama company, provided a perfect title can be transferred.

If this cannot be done, then the senators as a rule favor the adoption of the Spooner amendment to the bill passed by the house and known as the Hepburn bill, which he offered in the senate on Jan. 28. This amendment provides for the acceptance of the canal company's offer, "provided a satisfactory title to said property can be obtained," and the construction of the canal by the Panama route at a cost not to exceed $135,000,000, otherwise the president shall be authorized to direct the secretary of war to construct a canal by the Nicaraguan route at an expenditure not to exceed $180,000,000.

This proposition of Senator Spooner is the one that all of the senators, except those who are irrevocably committed to the Nicaragua route, are expected to advocate and vote for, and is, therefore, one most likely to be passed.

Funston to Command In Colorado

Chicago, March 6.—The Record Herald says that when General Otis retires from command of the department of the lakes, March 24, he will be succeeded by General MacArthur, now in command of department of Colorado. The vacancy caused by the latter's transfer to Chicago will be filled by General Funston, who has recently returned from the Philippines.

Hohenzollern's Men Entertained

New York, March 6.—Captain Von Holleben and the officers of the imperial yacht Hohenzollern were feasted last night by the Deutscher-Verein at its club house. There were 150 members of the verein at the banquet besides the guests. The German emperor and the President of the United States were toasted. Later there was a vaudeville entertainment.

Hundreds of Painters Idle

Pittsburg, March 6.—The painters of Pittsburg and Allegheny struck yesterday for an eight-hour day and 45 cents an hour, 10 cents more than the old scale. It is estimated that not more than 50 men are at work out of 1800 in the Pittsburg district.

Pasha Killed by Albanians

London, March 6.—Wiring from Constantinople, the correspondent of The Times says that Abraham Pasha, the military commander in North Albania, has been shot by Albanians for endeavoring to restrain violence.

SETTLEMENT FAR AWAY

American Woollen Company Will Not Abolish Two-Loom System

Providence, March 6.—The strike of 1200 weavers in the mills of the American Woollen company at Olneyville has now been in force upward of a month and apparently a solution of difficulties, chief among which is the double-loom system, is as far away as ever.

Two conferences between officials of the American Woollen company and representatives of the weavers have been held, but the result has tended further to aggravate the situation in that the former, in both instances, reaffirmed their position and announced that the double-loom plan would not be abolished.

The Textile Union officials are endeavoring to carry the tight to the mills of the company in other cities, particularly at Lawrence, Mass., where repeated attempts to induce the weavers to strike have been made, thus far, without success.

The Barncliffe worsted mills at Olneyville, an independent concern, yesterday instituted the three-shift plan, whereby the mills will operate continuously, Sundays excepted. Under this plan 70 extra weavers were called in. This action was found necessary because of the diversion of orders on certain qualities of material ordinarily filled by the American Woollen company to some few of the independent mills.

An Old-Fashioned Storm

Boston, March 6.—The first real old-fashioned snowstorm this season began at noon yesterday and continued through the night. The wind blew fiercely from the northeast, but the temperature was scarcely below freezing. Late in the day the heavy snow began to impede traffic somewhat, but there have been other storms this winter which gave the electric and steam railroads more trouble. The storm apparently is general over southern New England.

Country Roads Blocked

New Haven, March 6.—An average of about 12 inches of snow has fallen throughout Connecticut and street car traffic is delayed in all sections. Western Connecticut is suffering the most. Trains are about two hours late. Owing to the high wind the snow is drifting badly and many of the country roads are becoming blocked.

Coasters In Danger

Highand Light, Mass., March 6.—An easterly storm began at noon yesterday, accompanied by snow and hail. When it shut in thick, 10 coasters were off the cape, crowding all sail for shelter. Most of them have a good chance to reach Provincetown, but should they keep on across the bay, some of them are liable to meet disaster.

Providence Harbor Crowded

Providence, March 6.—Over 50 vessels arrived here during Tuesday night, and the harbor is now crowded with craft of all kinds. The tonnage they carry is the largest which has arrived within a space of 24 hours in the history of the port. Very few of the craft report having suffered from the recent storms.

Boy's Life Valued at $750

Providence, March 6.—A jury yesterday returned a verdict for $750 in favor of Samuel Schnable in his suit against the Providence public market. Schnable sued for damages for the death of his young son, Isidor, who was crushed beneath a falling box which employes of the defendant were handling.

Swimming Record Broken

Boston, March 6.—Harry LeMoyne, at the Sportsman's show last night, won another American swimming championship with ease, taking the 100 yards event in 1 4-4, which is 1 1-5 seconds less than E. C. Schaffer's time. Last night's record is expected to stand.

Against Mrs Rathbun

Hartford, March 6.—The supreme court of errors has handed down a decision in the appeal of Mrs. Ann M. Rathbun of New Haven, convicted of murder in the second degree, for poisoning her husband. No error was found and the finding of the superior court was confirmed.

Want Ten Percent Advance

Lowell, Mass., March 6.—The Textile Council last night voted to recommend to the various local unions that they ask for a 10 percent advance in wages. It is recommended also that the demand be made that this advance take effect March 24.

Old Resolution Resurrected

Providence, March 6.—In the lower branch of the general assembly yesterday the resolution appropriating $100,000 for an armory in this city was recommended by the finance committee after it had been shelved for five years.

Struck Barge and Capsized

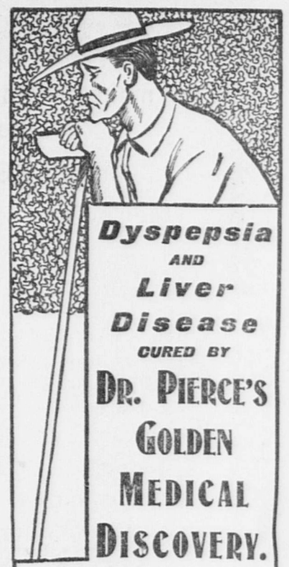

New York, March 6.—A two-masted schooner ran on to the sunken barge Litchtenfels Brothers near the southwest spit yesterday and shortly after capsized. The navy yard tug Pontiac ran out from Sandy Hook and rescued the crew and brought them to the Brooklyn navy yard.

Cashier Blew His Brains Out

Springfield, Ills., March 6.—Another scene in the drama of the closing of the state bank of Elkhart was enacted yesterday when Frank W. Cottle, cashier, whose alleged shortage of $32,000 caused the closing of the bank, blew out his brains.

Steamer Huronian Missing

St. John, March 6.—There has been no word of the steamer Huronian, which sailed from Glasgow Feb. 4 for this port. She is several days overdue.

"I was weak, nervous and dizzy, with a fainting sensation when walking," writes Jesse Childress, Esq., of Samuel, Sullivan Co., Tenn. "Could not walk any distance; always felt bad after eating; felt as though something was sticking in my throat, always uneasiness in stomach. Doctored with three physicians but they did not relieve me. I grew worse and used everything I could think of; was nearly ready to give up and then some one told me that Dr. Pierce's medicine was good, so I began taking his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I have taken seven bottles of that now and am as stout as ever, and enjoying health as much as ever before. I worked all summer and this winter as much as any one. My case was liver disease and nervous dyspepsia of which your medicine has cured me. In September 1898 my weight was about 95 pounds, now it is 195. Please accept my sincere thanks."

CORDIAL AND DIGNIFIED

Honors Paid to Prince Henry at the Hub

MADE A DOCTOR OF LAWS

And Thus Becomes an Honorary Harvard Alumnus—Kaiser Congratulates Him on the Honor Bestowed—Visit to State House and Library

Boston, March 7.—Prince Henry of Prussia was the guest of Boston yesterday and his welcome to the city was stately and cordial. Governor Crane and Mayor Collins, acting for state and city, extended the official courtesies, and, when the prince had ceremoniously returned their calls, he went to Cambridge to deliver to the Germanic museum the gifts of his brother, the emperor, and to receive from Harvard the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Harvard's honor to the prince made a precedent, for never before was a degree conferred under like circumstances. A significant passage in the speech of President Eliot, who conferred the degree, was a reference to the prince as the grandson of Queen Victoria.

Prince Henry's first act as a Harvard man, at the Harvard union shortly after he received the degree, was to propose and lead three cheers for President Roosevelt, who is a Harvard alumnus. The prince received a cablegram from his brother, the emperor, offering congratulation on the new honor bestowed.

Last night the prince was given a dinner by the city of Boston and sat at a table with more than 200 of the representative citizens of the commonwealth. He resumed his way early this morning and today will visit Albany and the United States military academy at West Point, en route to New York, which he reaches this evening.

Bright sunlight favored the day, after storm had dressed the city in snow, and the entry of the prince to the decorated city, the call of the governor at Hotel Somerset, the visits to the state house and public library, and the drive through Cambridge, with streets and avenues thronged with crowds, made a series of spectacles strong in life and color. The entire reception was dignified rather than demonstrative, but it lacked none of the cordiality that has characterized the tour of the prince.

The special train which carried the prince across the country was not delayed by flood or storm and crossed the line between New York and Massachusetts on the time planned for it by the railroad men. It halted for a few moments at Springfield, but passed through Worcester, where the plan to hold a reception was abandoned owing to the earliness of the hour. Boston was reached at 9:35 o'clock, and as soon as the special halted in South station, Mayor Collins and a delegation of city officials boarded the car Columbia and were introduced to the prince by Ambassador Von Holleben. There was an exchange of greetings and the prince, his staff and the members of the American escort entered carriages waiting at the driveway of the depot.

Once they were seated, lines of cavalrymen formed around them and, accompanied by the naval militiamen, and through streets held open by the police, they commenced the drive to Hotel Somerset. Most of the population centered in the downtown district. The people were packed in behind the police lines and every building was a crowded gallery. Flags and streamers hung over the heads of the thousands who called and waved a cheery welcome to the prince as he rode past with Mayor Collins, Admiral Evans, and John Wilkie, chief of the United States secret service.

The prince wore his naval uniform and acknowledged the greetings with his characteristic salute. When the carriage reached the Common, a battery sounded the royal salute. The gunshy horses jumped into a quick pace and at a sharp trot the procession rounded the Common. The crowds extended into Commonwealth avenue, to where the police lines checked them at the Somerset, and the appearance of the prince started cheering that was taken up in relays for the full length of the thoroughfare.

At the Somerset the prince, surrounded by his staff, received Governor Crane, who came with an equally brilliant staff, and when the call ended the prince started at once for the state house, to return the courtesy. He drove to the capitol by way of Beacon street and there was another demonstration along that avenue. Naval reserves, formed in two lines that extended from the street to the portals, made way for the entrance of the prince. After he had paid his respects to Governor Crane he entered the house of representatives, where the legislature was in session, and was presented from the forum by President Soule of the senate. Leaving the chamber he was shown the battleflags carried by the regiments of the state in the Civil war.

The prince was then driven to the public library, where he returned the call of Mayor Collins. Thirty-five veterans who fought with the grandfather of the prince in the Franco-Prussian war were presented at the library, and the prince shook hands with them all and asked as to their old regiments and the character of their service.

The ceremony at the library over, the prince returned to the Somerset and after a short wait there started for Cambridge. Mayor McNamee gave him the freedom of the city of Cambridge and the schoolchildren sang for him at the city hall. At the university he was first taken to memorial hall, where he met the corporation of the college, and then to Sander's theatre, where the degree was conferred. President Eliot, who appeared in the scholars' gown, addressed the prince.

The prince did not respond in speech to the address of the president, but simply bowed an acknowledgement. He was next escorted to the faculty room where he met the faculty and with his staff lunched with them.

Professor Munsterberg's reception for the Germanic Museum association at his house on Ware street ended the prince's afternoon at Harvard by giving him a chance to meet many distinguished people who are interested in emphasizing whatever is Germanic in Harvard university.

The prince returned to Boston in time to reach Hotel Somerset at 6 o'clock, when in passing through empire room he paused to receive the greetings of a score or more of the German women of Boston, and thereafter had a short period of rest before going down stairs to the great banquet given for him by the city. From his seat at the table at one end of the banquet room he faced the most representative men of the city and state, invited from organizations either financial, commercial, educational or social. The speeches given at this time were from men known for their oratory, and to their sentiments the prince made a formal response.

The last event of the day was the reception by the Thursday Evening club, consisting of college presidents and professors, doctors, scientists and men of letters, at the house of J. M. Sears at 11 p. m. From that reception the prince was driven direct to his special train, which was drawn up in the railroad yard just in the rear of Hotel Lenox. The train pulled out of the yard at 2 a. m.

Fears of Chinese Rebellion

Pekin, March 7.—The actions of General Tung Fu Hsiang are causing much apprehension at the imperial court. Tung Fu Hsiang has a considerable body of troops. The dowager empress recently offered to maintain the general comfortably if he would disband his followers. This Tung Fu Hsiang refused to do. The court fears that when his resources fail Tung Fu Hsiang may be compelled to resort to pillage in order to support his followers and that this would eventually lead to rebellion.

Russian Revolutionists Active

Copenhagen, March 7.—Authentic reports have reached here from St. Petersburg saying that the revolutionary movement is spreading in all directions. The unrest has reached many parts of Siberia. The governor of Tomsk has issued an order prohibiting meetings of citizens in the towns and villages throughout the province. Troubles are reported at many places in Siberia.

Taft's Testimony Ended

Washington, March 7.—Governor Taft, having concluded his testimony before the congressional committees, left yesterday afternoon for a visit to his home in Cincinnati. While there he will undergo an operation for the ailment which compelled his return from the Philippines. His health has very much improved since his return to this country.

Pension For Railway Employes

New York, March 7.—President Vreeland of the Metropolitan Street Railway company last night announced to all employes the establishment of a pension system for the superannuated employes of the company. This is the final step in the plan inaugurated by him for steadying and elevating the status of its 15,000 employes.

Modest Boer Delegates

Washington, March 7.—The mission of the Boer delegates to the United States government is ended, so far as officials know. They presented no credentials and made no effort to embarrass the administration by formal applications for relief. Their future movements are not known to the officials.

OUR MERCHANT MARINE

Should Become an Auxiliary For Our Navy

A HAND-TO-HAND CONTEST

With Foreign Nations to Secure the Commerce of the Orient Would Result In Our Favor If Our Shipping Industry Received Care Due It

Washington, March 7.—A notable speech was made in the senate yesterday by Mr. Hanna on the pending shipping bill, which he discussed from the standpoint of an American business man. His arguments were carefully arranged, he was always forceful and earnest and at times became eloquent. He commanded the undivided attention of the senate and of the galleries and when he closed he received the congratulations of many of his colleagues.

Mr. Hanna's remarks were principally in answer to Mr. Clay's speech of Wednesday. He said that when Mr. Clay quoted from Mr. Frye's remarks, that all there was in this question which required legislation was embraced in the one question of labor, he was correct.

"I stand by that proposition, but I go further. The ore in the ground is worth about 25 cents a ton. After it was touched by the hand of man, it was labor. Ninety-five percent of the cost of a ship built in American shipyards or in any shipyard, is purely labor. The cost of the construction of a ship in the United States as against that in either England, Germany or France, simply measures the difference of wages and the efficiency of American labor."

Mr. Hanna declared that the merchant marine was the only industry in the United States which has not received the fostering care of this government. "Will anybody deny," he said, "the importance, the absolute necessity of having an auxiliary for our navy in the form of a merchant marine, shaped under the direction of the navy department, and, in time of war, absolutely in the hands and under the control of the President of the United States to use it in the most effective manner?"

Senator Hanna said that if the United States failed to profit by the experience of the older countries of Europe, who have adopted a policy in reference to maritime matters, it would make a most serious mistake. Every merchant ship constructed in foreign countries was meant to be a ship of war in time of need. Mr. Hanna cited the feeling of uneasiness along the Atlantic coast at the beginning of hostilities with Spain and the relief which was experienced when the four steamers of the American line were called on by the secretary of the navy, under the conditions of the law passed by congress, to perform picket service.

He insisted that it was as important a national question as an economic policy to carry with the expenditure for building up the navy, the expenditure for an auxiliary navy and a merchant marine.

There is something more in this transportation question, he said, than merely carrying mail letter bags; there is more in it than dollars and cents to the United States. He would like it, he said, to be discussed above party considerations, because every one felt a like pride in our country's advancement and development, and whatever is best for the interests and safety and the perpetuity of our institutions is best for all of us.

Mr. Hanna declared that not an American shipyard had a contract for another merchant vessel after the nine or ten vessels now under contract were finished. Everybody knows, continued Mr. Hanna, that the United States is now engaged in a hand-to-hand contest with foreign nations to secure the commerce of the Orient and that the United States had been foremost and steadfast in its policy to secure the markets of China and hold them as an open door. The Philippine archipelago was the key to the Orient, said he, and when it had become a naval station, surrounded by all the protection that a maritime fleet would need, it would become a factor in our commercial conditions in the Orient. Mr. Hanna then said it was the purpose of the bill, under the postal system, to establish a line on the Atlantic coast to South America.

England had gained her supremacy in the markets of the world by pursuing the policy of establishing direct communication. "Personal contact," he said, "is what brings results, and England, Germany and France are now energetically at work to put in the connecting link between the Pacific and the Orient."

He spoke of the benefit the passage of the bill would bring as a result of increased trade with South American countries, saying that the trade now went by the way of Liverpool and Hamburg in foreign ships, and thence was transshipped to South American ports. By carrying American goods in American ships there would be an increase of American trade.

In closing, Mr. Hanna again adverted to the question of the cost of labor, maintaining that wages in this country averaged 50 percent higher than in European countries. The cost of ships built in the United States was from 25 to 30 percent higher than those built in Great Britain, the difference in price of labor making the difference in cost. The difference between the cost of operating American and foreign ships was about 27 percent, the higher rate being paid on American vessels.

Loss of Coal Barges

Providence, March 7.—The loss of the barges Ringleader and P. J. Carleton, bound from Newport News to this port with coal, was reported yesterday to H. F. Anthony, to whom the shipment was consigned. The dispatch does not state whether the crews were lost or saved.

Bridge Declared Safe

Northampton, Mass., March 7.—Experts have examined the pier of the Connecticut river bridge, which was damaged by the flood, and found it to be safe. Trains over it were resumed last night for the first time since Sunday.

Wants to Return to Congress

Boston, March 7.—A special to The Journal from Washington says: Congressman Greene announces that he will be a candidate for re-election to congress, in spite of the declared candidacy of David F. Slade of Fall River.

Exeter's First Smallpox Case

Exeter, N. H., March 7.—The first case of smallpox to be reported in this place this winter came to light yesterday when Mary J. Prescott, aged 60, was found to be ill with the disease. The case is serious.

Conferees Fail to Agree

Washington, March 7.—The third conference of Republican members of the house of representatives to consider the question of Cuban tariff concessions was held last night. About 125 members were present and great interest was manifested, owing to the sharp division which has occurred between the supporters of the ways and means proposition for 20 percent reciprocity and the rebate plan. No conclusion was reached.

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. Among the tens of thousands who have used it for the grip, not one case has ever been reported that did not recover. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

Senator Hoar of Massachusetts received word the other day that a friend of his who had supposed himself suffering from appendicitis, was ill with only a mere acute indigestion. The Senator rejoiced at the good news, saying that he was glad the "trouble was with the table of contents rather than in the appendix."

General Miles and the President do not ride together as before the late reprimand, but the Assistant Secretary of War and the President take frequent pedestrian exercise. The Assistant Secretary, speaking to Gen. Miles said something about being out with the President. Miles said: "Well, can you keep up with him?" "Yes, very well when he is walking, but every once in a while he says, 'Now let's take a little run,' and that just about kills me."

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Mr. Carnegie may consider himself fortunate if part of his library benefactions turn out well. Occasionally, one will look as if it ought not to have been made, as in the case of McKeesport, Pa., where the enterprise is in a funny state. McKeesport is the place which figured conspicuously and not altogether creditably in a recent strike, because of it's mayor's refusal to protect peaceable workmen. Among the recipients of Mr. Carnegie's gifts was McKeesport, which had $50,000 with which to build a library. The building is done, but the city council, while willing to appropriate money for its maintenance, will not give a cent toward buying books. So that McKeesport will be famous, until a wave of sense strikes on, for a bookless library. Probably, however, the town will come to the knowledge that it is making itself ridiculous.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ The sin of drunkenness has many causes and many phases; but if a drunkard still has within him sufficient manhood to be the basis of moral reform, commonly the treatment that will do him good will be an emphatic assertion of the sin and shame of his degradation. A lawyer had fallen into open disgrace through convivial habits, and wanted to reform, but without success. At last a friend told him the plain truth. He said: "Now, James, the reason you do not reform is simply because you do not want to reform. You do not dislike the habit of drinking, and you are not ashamed of being drunk. You are afraid of exposure, and you do not like the consequences of your evil deeds. You will never reform until you see that drunkenness is in itself shameful and degrading, no matter whether other people know it or not. So long as you are merely trying to get away from the consequences of your indulgence, you will be tempted to drink every time you think you can do it without paying the penalty." Although the man was stunned by the frankness of his friend, he felt the force of the assault upon his conscience, and had left in him enough manhood to admit the charge and apply the remedy. He said: "Nobody ever talked to me in that way before. People have always talked about the consequences, and not about the thing itself. After stumbling two or three times, the lawyer got on his feet, and died a sober man, respected by a large community.—Christian Register.

☞ The significance of the prince here as our guest and of his coming with his distinguished companions to the United States, marks what is almost the best phase in modern civilization—the friendly mutual relations of the nations of the world, which make them neighbors and friends instead of aliens and enemies. As in our own country, there are sharp and intense rivalries and competitions which are necessary to secure the largest results, but under them, also, is a common national patriotism which makes us all stand together as one man. So among the nations at large, while it is better for the world's progress that there should be competition in trade, and rivalry in growth and power, underneath these is the recognition of a common humanity, resting on great fundamental principles of peace and general welfare—the uplifting of the oppressed, the education of the ignorant, the bettering of human conditions, the steadily rising ethical standard of all and for all. The presence of our guest tonight means international generosity in the place of international jealousy; closer relations instead of estrangement; arbitration before war.—Secretary Long at City of Boston banquet.

Mr. Badger's Bill.

Representative Badger proposes to make a fight on his bill to regulate and extend the hours during which polls shall be kept open at elections. When the adverse report of the Committee on Election Laws came in on Thursday, he had it laid on the table.

Mr. Badger's bill does not make it mandatory that the polls shall be open until 10 P. M. or after 4 P. M. but provides that they may. Section 1 of his bill reads:

Section 1. Section two hundred and thirteen of chapter eleven of the Revised Laws is hereby amended by striking out the eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh lines, and inserting in place thereof the following:—In cities the polls shall be open not earlier than six A. M. nor later than ten A. M., and shall be closed not earlier than four P. M. nor later than eight P. M.; and by striking out all after and including the twelfth line to and including the seventeenth line and the first five words in the eighteenth line, and inserting in place thereof the following:—In towns at the election of state and town officers, the polls shall be open not later than twelve A. M., and shall be closed not earlier than four P. M. nor later than eight P. M.

At Walla Walla.

Miss S. H. Hussey is in receipt of papers from Walla Walla, Wash., with reports of a receptions given them by her niece, who is the wife of Rev. A. D. Gantz, and is known in Quincy. One report says: Washington's birthday was celebrated yesterday afternoon by a pretty birthday party at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Albert Dole Gontz, given to the children of the primary and intermediate department at the First Presbyterian church. A reception committee composed of the children in colonial costume assisted George and Martha to receive. Among them were Abigail Adams, Dorothy Madison and Betsy Ross. Patriotic songs and recitations, parlor games and refreshments all contributed to make enjoyable to the little ones their celebration of the day, while the quaint costumes and manners of a century ago, were pleasing pictures for parents and children alike. At Walla Walla, Mrs. Gantz writes, the weather is delightful; can have windows and doors wide open all day after sunrise.

—In Russia no meetings of private citizens for any purpose are permitted; the privilege of holding private meetings is granted only to chartered corporations or associations. All crowds except in places of amusement or worship, are dispersed by the police. No premises can be hired for the purpose of holding a meeting without a permit from the police.

—Rev. Dr. Edward Robie, of Greenland, N. H., on February 25, rounded out a ministery of 50 years over the Congregational church in that city. He is the seventh minister of the congregation which was organized in 1706. Its first pastor served for 53 years and its second for 48 years.

AT THE CRADLE.

Prince Henry's Tribute to Boston and Vicinity.

Prince Henry has made but few speeches during his triumphal tour of America, and his utterances in Boston are therefore of special interest. He said at the banquet of the city:

"Mr. Mayor, Gentlemen: In giving expression to my thanks for the cordiality of the reception tendered me, I beg to say that I shall endeavor to realize that I am the guest of a city, the pardonable pride of whose inhabitants, I am informed, makes them look upon it as the hub of the universe. (Laughter and applause.) Seriously spoken, I should have considered my tour through this country incomplete without a visit to the principal city in the commonwealth which has played so important a part in the history of the United States, and whose influence is felt at large.

"A state which gave to literature an Emerson, a Hawthorn and a Longfellow, to science such men as Agassiz and Thoreau and to historical research the services of a Bancroft, Motley and Prescott, must certainly be reckoned with as an important factor in the progress and development of the whole land. It was in and about your city that was produced an era which witnessed the growth of a nation and a standard of universal patriotism very rarely equalled.

"In some respect then, my visit is of particular interest to me. I seem to stand here at the cradle, as it were, of American civilization. Let us also hope that the bonds of friendship which for so many years have united our two peoples may still further be strengthened by mutual rivalry in the fields of literature, art and science. (Applause.) Should this be the result of my visit to your friendly and hospitable shores, I will gladly have have put up with having submitted to the simultaneous interview of over 1,000 American press men, as well as having, and I frankly admit it, been inconvenienced by the ever ready click of the numberless photographers (Laughter.)

"Believe me, I enjoyed my trip, and should it be my good fortune to return to the United States, I know it will be no more as an entire stranger." (Cries of "Good, good," and applause.)

MILTON.

There is quite a contest for chairmanship of the Board of Selectmen. The Board is composed of Albert A. Brackett, Joseph Turner and Maurice A. Duffy, the new member. Mr. Brackett was chairman of the board last year and it would be supposed that he would be this year. The town, however, at the recent meeting jumped the salary of the chairman of the Board of selectmen to $1000. This is quite a tempting bait, and as a result all three of the board feel that they are called to fill the position of chairman of the board, and it will be quite an interesting contest to see who will win.

The rooms of the Thursday Evening club on Mechanics street have become too small to accommodate the club and they will move to larger quarters in the Ellsworth block the first of April.

Christopher Graham has purchased another horse to take the place of one he lost last week.

There is a well founded rumor that Dr. Kyte and Dr. Minot, the two old members of the Board of Health, have resigned, leaving Dr. Gilchrist the new member in charge. One rumor says they were dissatisfied with the way they were used at the town meeting, and another that they do not like the new member of the board.

A lecture on the Passion play was given in Associates hall Wednesday evening. The storm prevented a large attendance.

Mrs. T. L. Pearce, postmistress at at East Milton, is convalescent.

A subscription dance was held in Ellsworth hall, Tuesday evening.

The lecture to have been given before the Unquity club Wednesday evening by Rev. A. H. Mulnix was postponed on account of the storm. It will probably be given next week.

Boston Ideal Club.

The closing entertainment in the very successful course of the Quincy teachers' association was given in High School hall, Thursday evening, before a crowded house. The Boston Ideal Club is too well known to need any endorsement, and its concert was as usual first class. The club gave selections on banjos, mandolins and guitars and other instruments, and there were solos and duets, making a varied and interesting program.

The Megantic Club.

Dr. W. G. Kendall of Atlantic was elected First Vice President of the Megantic Fish and Game club at its annual meeting this week. The Megantic club is the largest sportsman's organization in the world, having 300 members and controlling 250 square miles of the best stocked preserve in Maine and Canada.

CITY BREVITIES.

A Local Budget with the News in a Nut Shell.

The Brotherhood of Bethany church will entertain the King's Daughters at the chapel next Wednesday evening.

Frederick G. Thayer of Willow street entertained a whist party on Thursday evening.

Ernest M. Gourd of Chestnut street has been confined to the house two weeks by illness.

Thomas Reed of Quincy Point has returned from a three weeks' visit to friends in Worcester.

The streets of Wollaston Park are plowed out early and good by John Meaney, and the people appreciate it.

There will be a hearing at the State House next Tuesday on a bill for retiring and pensioning certain justices of municipal, district and police courts.

The Norfolk County Commissioners ask for proposals for a small loan for the new bridge over the Weymouth Fore River, to meet the preliminary expenses.

Walter E. Burke has resigned his position as cashier in one of the Boston offices of the New York Life Insurance company and opened offices for himself at Quincy and Boston.

Mr. William Davenport, one of Quincy's long residents, died Thursday afternoon at his residence on Greenleaf street aged 71 years. Mr. Davenport has been in poor health for some time. He leaves a widow and one son, the latter, Thomas B. Davenport.

John Hancock lodge, I. O. O. F., initiated three caididates Wednesday evening before Grand Instructor Webber, who made the lodge a semi-official visit. Next Wednesday evening Neponset will confer the first degree at Wollaston, and all brothers of the order are cordially invited to be present.

President Alden President.

The Parish society of the Atlantic Memorial Congregational church held its annual business meeting in the church, Thursday evening, Mr. Charles E. Cherrington presiding. The year has been one of marked prosperity. The church mortgage has been raised and there is not a dollar of indebtedness of any sort. The following officers were elected: President, Charles Alden; secretary, Miss Lillian Waterhouse; treasurer, George E. Todd; auditor, W. F. Blake; collector, Theodore Parker. Roger Wilde was reelected on the board of trustees for a term of three years. The other trustees are Dr. Maria E. Drew and Mr. Charles A. Hall.

Strike Endorsed.

The Central Labor Union of Quincy, including twelve trades, voted on Thursday evening at Doble's hall to endorse the Quarrymen's strike, and to extend financial aid. The Quarrymen's union was received into the Central union at this meeting.

The Canal Resolve.

The Massachusetts house adopted on Thursday the resolve requesting Congress to make an investigation as to the feasibility of a canal from Fall River to Boston via Brockton and Weymouth Fore river.

TODAY'S COURT.

Five Quincy cases were before Jude Avery this morning.

William H. Cox of Wollaston was arraigned for assault on his wife. Case continued for two months, and Cox was ordered to recognize in $100 surety.

Allen Robinson was fined $3 for being drunk, the drunk case of Eaton was continued, and the case of Francis Moore for drunk was placed on file. Charles Carlson was defaulted.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

The Great Headache Cure.

Quick--Safe--Sure.

Dr. Miles' Pain Pills

Cure all kinds of Pains and Aches.

8 Shinzaka Machi, Akasaka, Tokyo, Japan.
With this I am ordering more of the Pain Pills. Both our Japanese and foreign friends have used the Pills and they all tell me I cannot write too much in their favor. We have here what is called "Japanese Headache," which is supposed to be incurable while we remain in this country, but the Pain Pills always cure the severest attacks. Sincerely, MAY S. HOWARD.

"During many years I could not ride in a street car, or steam car, or even take a buggy ride without suffering with sick headache. I tried many different remedies with but little help; for, it one medicine relieved me once or twice, it soon lost the power to help. Dr. Miles' Pain Pills not only relieves an attack every time, but if I take one in my mouth before starting out it will prevent even a slight attack." MRS. J. S. SPAULDING, 1229 Day Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

In my intense suffering from chronic neuralgia, I found Dr. Miles' Pain Pills better than the gold of Ophir. EVERETT WAGNER, Vice Pres. G. H. Wagner & Co., Plow Mfgrs., Indiapolis.

Gen. Charles Dick, of Ohio, the eminent Congressman from the Garfield district, believes there is no remedy so efficient for headache as Dr. Miles' Pain Pills.

Wm. M. Bell, Gen'l Sec'y Home, Frontier and Foreign Missionary Society of the United Brethren in Christ, Dayton, Ohio, writes as follows: "During my recent trip abroad I was subject to the most severe strain upon the nervous system. Fortunately, I was never without a supply of Dr. Miles' Pain Pills and received most excellent results from their use. This remedy is standard in our home and have been specially helpful during the past season. It is a pleasure to recommend to suffering humanity these most meritorious medicines."

Dr. Miles' Pain Pills

Are a Quick Safe and Sure Relief and Speedy Cure for Pain or Irritation of any kind. They are far superior to any remedy ever before used for Headache, Irritability, Backache, Nervousness, Sciatica, Sleeplessness, Neuralgia, Seasickness, Rheumatism, Blues, Stomachache, Dizziness, Periodic, Breaking Down and Ovarian Pains, Etc., Etc.

CAS HEARING.

Both Sides Heard Today at State House.

All the Evidence Is Now In.

Speculation As to the Report of Committee.

The adjourned hearing before the Committee on Public Lighting of the Legislature, on the petition of Eugene F. DeNormandie was held this morning.

The hearing was called for 10 o'clock but it was nearly half an hour later before the hearing was opened.

The chairman announced that he would divide the time. The Gas Co. occupied the first half of the time. Mr. Carver, counsel for the company, in opening, said the company had voluntarily made two reductions in price. That the leakage or unaccounted for gas compared favorably with other places situated like Quincy. We have paid in all about $100,000 into the plant.

He then put George H. Field, Charles A. Howland, Theophilus King and ex-Mayor Porter on the stand. These gentlemen testified that the quantity of gas was good, and that they had heard no general complaint.

Mr. DeNormandie was practically the only witness for the petition, and he occupied nearly all the remaining time. His testimony was made up wholly from reports of the Gas. Co. from 1883 to 1901 to the Gas Commissioner and the Commissioners of Corporations. He claimed these reports contradicted each other and showed a peculiar state of affairs.

He had little to say as to the extension of mains or as to the price paid for gas.

A full report of the hearing will be published in Saturday's Ledger.

Building Ordinance.

The section of the proposed building ordinance which has been referred to the City Solicitor reads as follows:

"No person shall within one hundred feet of any other buildings erect or use any building for a planing mill, woodworking establishment, hotel or public hall, or for any manufacturing or other hazardous business, without first obtaining a permit in writing from the City Council, and no such permit shall be granted until after such notice to owners of adjoining property as the City Council shall order, and after a hearing pursuant to such notice." There are several other sections which require careful thought and deliberate action. There should be no attempt to cut off amendments and debate, but rather a full discussion for several meetings if necessary.

Quincy Music Hall.

The entertainment furnished at Music hall Thursday night, deserved a crowded house. The bicycle act alone was worth the price of admission. The program was given by Moosh's Vaudeville and Comedy Company, and included: Overture, Faith Collins; Maude Thornton, soubrette; The Deltinos, singers and dancers; Jack Sutter, Hebrew comedian; Cogan and Bacon, comedy sketch and roller skaters; Julia Crosby, female baritone; Reiff Brothers, enough said; Walthour & Van Bill, champion cyclists; and the farce, "Razor Jim." Encores were frequent.

Bicyclists Organize.

President,—F. Steimbrenner.
Vice President,—John J. Barry.
Financial Secretary,—R. W. Badger.
Recording Secretary,—David Palmers.
Treasurer,—G. W. Ripley.
House Officers,—Charles Wentzel, Albert Clark, F. Farrell, P. J. Geddes.
Road Officers,—Capt. Charles Wemtzel; 1st Lieut. G. W. Ripley; 2d Lieut. P. J. Geddes; Bugler, F. Steimbrenner; Assistant Bugler, G. Pierce; Ensign, F. W. Bent.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

GAMBLING BY CONGRESSMEN

Very Little Now Compared With Olden Times.

As a matter of fact, there is little or no gambling now in the capitol compared with the conditions of years ago. There used to be a time when certain committee rooms were the rendezvous for poker players, and the games were generally without limit.

Many senators and representatives do not object to a little game now, but they play in the evening and not at the capitol. There were poker stories galore around the capitol in the olden days. One incident became a classic. There was a party in the room of a southern congressman, and the game ran high. A western member opened a jack pot, and the southerner, who was upon his left, came in, together with two other congressmen. The westerner stood pat, whereupon the southerner discarded two cards. The betting began and soon became so swift that only the southerner and the westerner remained. Finally the latter called his colleague, and the hands were shown.

The westerner had opened the pot on four kings. As soon as he stood pat the southerner broke a pair of sixes and held the four, five and six of spades in his hand, hoping against hope to make a spade flush. He was dealt the seven and eight of spades, making a straight flush.

The western member didn't say a word when he learned what had happened, but it was noticeable that he didn't touch a card again during that session.—Washington Post.

A Kitten's Intelligence.

A hungry kitten was put into a cage, the door of which would fall open when a loop of wire that hung in front of the cage was pulled down an inch. The kitten tried to squeeze between the bars, clawed and bit at them, thrust its paws out between the bars and clawed at various loose objects in the cage. It clawed the loop several times, but not with enough force to pull it down. After 160 seconds of such activity, it happened to claw the loop hard enough, and so escaped.

After it had eaten the food outside, it was put into the box again. There was a repetition of the same activities, but the successful movement came this time after thirty seconds. On the next trial, general activity for ninety seconds was required before the kitten escaped. With repeated trials the association between the interior of the box and the act of clawing at the loop became fixed, so that finally the kitten would do it in a few seconds—that is, as soon as put into the box.

This progress is shown in the times taken in the different trials. They were 160, 30, 90, 60, 15, 28, 20, 30, 22, 11, 15, 20, 12, 10, 14, 10, 8, 8, 5, 10 8, 6, 6 and 7 seconds.—Professor E. L. Thorndike in International Monthly.

A Scotch Antigolf Law.

Scotland, as everybody knows, is the land where golf originated and the land where it most flourishes. But if the law were strictly enforced north of the Tweed it would go hard with the players of the royal game in "Bonnie Scotland." Golf players there may not know it, but they are liable to a sentence of death for their indulgence in their favorite sport. Technically, this is literally a fact. In ancient times, when Scotland always had work for her soldiers to do, all young men were required to perfect themselves in archery. They preferred to play golf, and so serious a rival did the game become that it was for a time suppressed and made a capital offense. That curious law never has been repealed and may still be found on the statute book. There seems to be no record, however, of the law ever having been enforced.

Browning's Care For Health.

Browning never passed a day without taking one or more long walks. Indeed, his panacea for most ills was exercise, and the exercise he chiefly advocated was walking. He wrote:

"I get as nearly angry as it is in me to become with people I love when they trifle with their health—that is, with their life—like children playing with jewels over a bridge side, jewels which once in the water how can we, the poor lookers on, hope to recover? You don't know how absolutely well I am after my walking, not on the mountains merely, but on the beloved Lido. Go there, if only to stand and be blown about by the sea wind."—Century Magazine.

His Momentary Surprise.

"Your vote in favor of this measure," said the lobbyist, "would be worth millions to you"—

"Hardly so much as that!" gasped Senator Graphter, his fingers working convulsively.

The eager light died out of the senator's eyes, and he relapsed into his former apathy.—Chicago Tribune.

RULING SUSTAINED.

Judge Avery's Law Stands Test of Supreme Court.

An interesting question arising under the poor debtors laws was passed upon by Mr. Justice Morton of the Supreme Judicial court of East Norfolk, on the issuing of a citation under the poor debtor process.

The name of the case was Badger vs. Mahoney. George H. Brown, Esq., appeared for the creditor and Edward J. Parker, Esq., for the debtor.

It appeared that a citation was issued against the debtor after the return day of the execution. Thereupon Judge Avery of the District Court, ordered the proceedings to be dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Subsequently another execution was taken out, and upon this execution a new notice was issued citing the debtor into court for examination as to his property. The debtor thereupon claimed that the first proceedings having been dismissed, no new process should be instituted until after three years had elapsed.

Judge Avery of the District Court declined to entertain this view of the law, and ordered the examination to proceed. The Debtor then brought a petition in the Supreme Judicial Court, seeking to prohibit the District Court from taking jurisdiction, and after a hearing in the Supreme Court, on that petition, Justice Morton ordered that the petition be dismissed, and sustained the ruling of Judge Avery of the District Court, in the following language:

"The first citation issued after the return day of the execution and proceedings under it were wholly ineffectual and void. I do not see therefore, how they can operate as a bar to the subsequent proceedings under the alias execution."

A Strange Flower.

A strange flower has been borne by a Malmaison rosebush growing in a garden at Violet Hill, Stowmarket, England. The bush was close to an apple tree, and on one of the largest buds bursting into bloom five perfect apple blossoms, each on separate stalks, were seen growing in the center. As the petals of the rose developed the apple blossoms opened, the two forming a curious contrast.

TIMELY FOOD.

What to Eat In March and April, Including Hints For Lent.

The last month of winter and the opening month of spring are the most difficult months of all the year to cater for the table. The heavy, rich food of winter begins to pall upon the appetite and meat of all kinds becomes distasteful. In view of this the New York Tribune offers these hints:

At this season, when meat is sometimes forbidden, except in a limited amount, the cattle and poultry have been shut in for months in the stalls and barnyards and are in the poorest possible condition for food. Beef and mutton are hardly fit to eat after a long confinement of this kind. Veal and lamb are not old enough at this season nor as good as the flesh of animals which will be born later and fattened in the open air and sunshine. Poultry of all kinds is so inferior now that it is far better to buy the refrigerated poultry packed away in the fall when poultry was fat and in its best condition than to use fresh killed stock. Eggs are usually abundant this season. Oysters are better in March and April than in any other months of the year.

Spring is the season for fish. The shoals of fish that appear in the spring waters are full of spawn and their flesh at that time is firm and excellent. After they drop their spawn they are unfit for food. In some cases they are actually poisonous.

While Lent is usually too early for the market to be supplied with all the varieties of fish found in the spring months, there is, however, an excellent variety of fish to be had in Lent. Among them is always an abundance of excellent live cod, haddock and halibut. Among fresh water fish winter pickerel are especially excellent and are considered among the best.

The housemother will find her family is better in health if she introduces fish and green salads freely on her table in February and March. Sweet and sour pickles and acid fruits should now be substituted for sweet preserves.

In February desserts should be composed of light batter and other easily digested compounds, with enough acid fruit juice or pulp to correct the effect of the cloying sweet desserts of December and January. Canned and dried fruits are more valuable at this season and at the beginning of spring than at any other time.

JEWELED HAIR NETS.

The Society Woman's Very Latest Whim In Hairdressing.

That the society woman is growing fonder and fonder of fancy headdresses is proved by her latest fad in this line. She is wearing her hair done up in a pretty little net of gold or pearls, with just enough of the unique about it to make it extremely fascinating, says the New York Herald.

Another variety of the net is the cap-like affair, and this is usually made of pearls, though a few of golden threads have been seen. This arrangement is worn with the hair dressed moderately high, after the modish style, and the flat knot is covered with the cap of jewels. Sometimes, too, with the very low knot the pearl beret in this round cap shape is worn in quite the old fashioned, quaint style.

Sometimes two kinds of beads are used, combining two sizes of pearls, gold and pearl, turquoise and pearl or, in fact, any pretty and effective combination that one finds becoming.

Usually pearls will be found more effective and becoming than other gems, yet on one fascinating head was noticed a more than merely pretty turquoise and pearl novelty.

The diagonal strings of pearls crossed each other to form the mesh of the net, and they were held together with cabochon turquoises just a trifle larger than the pearls.

Silver Table Appointments.

Among table appointments are many novelties, as instance the serving spoon for Saratoga chips—the bowl fluted and deep, the handle heavy and ornamented in raised flowers.

The macaroni server is popular—the broad, gracefully shaped blade pointed at the end and one side finished with deep points that the utensil may cut as well as lift, the handle flat and the ornamentation in a twisted pattern.

The new asparagus tray is a thing of beauty, oval in shape, with removable drain in the bottom. Little claws raise the dish above the damask and without the perforated inner dish may be used for ice cream, frozen puddings or even fruit.

The sliced tomato server is another attractive novelty, showing also in its round ended bowl a very beautiful perforated design. It may be used for serving cucumbers also.—Table Talk.

FISHERMEN ASTRAY

Seven Who Were Out In Dories During Snowstorm Are Missing

Boston, March 7.—Fishing schooner Louis and Rosie arrived yesterday with her flag at halfmast for four men who became lost from the vessel in their dories on Middle Bank in a snowstorm. Three of the men, it was learned later, were picked up by another vessel and landed at Gloucester, but the fourth man has not yet been heard from. His broken dory has been washed ashore at Scituate. Schooner Mary Cabral brought four of the crew of fishing schooner Almeda, who became separated from their vessel on Middle Bank during Wednesday's snowstorm. Six others of the crew were out in dories at the time and their fate is unknown.

Bark and Cargo at Auction

Rockland, Me., March 7.—The Italian barge Adele and cargo, taken posession of by creditors after being towed here following a mishap, was sold at public auction yesterday by United States Marshal Saunders. J. P. McKay & Co., the Portland wrecking firm, bid the highest for both vessel and cargo, paying $750 for the former and $120 for the latter. When the Adele loaded the cargo the lumber was valued at $7000.

Didn't Reach Agreement

Boston, March 7.—Twenty-five persons were present yesterday at a conference here between the directors of the New England milk producers and contractors, which was held to reach, if possible, an agreement on the price of milk for the next six months. The subject was thoroughly discussed, but no agreement was reached, and the meeting adjourned until March 17.

Doors Closed by Sheriff

Derby, Conn., March 7.—The Driggs-Seabury Gun and Ammunition company had its plant closed up by the sheriff last night and 100 men are thrown out of work. Laflin & Rand, powder manufacturers, attached the plant for $30,000 to satisfy a claim of $22,000. The company has not settled the account and the action yesterday resulted.

An Uncommon Sight

Calais, Me., March 7.—What appeared to the inhabitants of this place to be a comet, but which was probably a slight nebular formation, passed within vision through the heavens at 7 o'clock last evening. Great interest throughout this section was caused by the flight of the luminous body, which was visible to the naked eye as long as 35 minutes.

NEWS IN BRIEF

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER V.

THE next day, the 18th of July, at twenty minutes to 7 in the morning, the Caucasus reached the Kasan quay, seven versts from the town.

Michael did not even think of landing. He was unwilling to leave the young Livonian girl alone on board, as she had not yet reappeared on deck.

There was a report along all the eastern frontier of Russia that the insurrection and invasion had reached considerable proportions. Communication between Siberia and the empire was already extremely difficult. All this Michael Strogoff heard without leaving the deck of the Caucasus from the new arrivals.

This information could not but cause him great uneasiness and increase his wish of being beyond the Ural mountains, so as to judge for himself of the truth of these rumors and enable him to guard against any possible contingency. He was thinking of seeking more direct intelligence from some native of Kasan when his attention was diverted.

Among the passengers who were leaving the Caucasus Michael recognized the troop of gypsies who the day before had appeared in the Nijni Novgorod fair. There on the deck of the steamboat were the old Bohemian and the woman who had played the spy on him. With them and no doubt under their direction landed about twenty dancers and singers from fifteen to twenty years of age, wrapped in old cloaks, which covered their spangled dresses. These dresses, just then glancing in the first rays of the sun, reminded Michael of the curious appearance which he had observed during the night. It must have been the glitter of those spangles in the bright flames issuing suddenly from the steamboat's funnel which had attracted his attention.

"Evidently," said Michael to himself, "this troop of Zingari, after remaining below all day, crouched under the forecastle during the night. Were these gypsies trying to show themselves as little as possible? Such is not according to the usual custom of their race."

Michael Strogoff no longer doubted that the expressions he had heard which so clearly referred to him had proceeded from this tawny group and had been exchanged between the old gypsy and the woman named Sangarre.

Michael involuntarily moved toward the gangway as the Bohemian troop was leaving the steamboat, not to return to it again.

The old Bohemian was there in a humble attitude, little conformable with the effrontery natural to his race. One would have said that he was endeavoring rather to avoid attention than to attract it. His battered hat, browned by the suns of every clime, was pulled forward over his wrinkled face. His arched back was bent under an old cloak, wrapped closely round him notwithstanding the heat. It would have been difficult in this miserable dress to judge of either his size or face. Near him was the gypsy Sangarre, a woman about thirty years old. She was tall and well made, with olive complexion, magnificent eyes and golden hair, and carried herself to perfection.

Sangarre was regarding him with a peculiar gaze, as if she wished to fix his features indelibly in her memory.

It was but for a few moments when Sangarre herself followed the old man and his troop, who had already left the vessel.

"That's a bold gypsy," said Michael to himself. "Could she have recognized me as the man whom she saw at Nijni Novgorod? These confounded Zingaris have the eyes of a cat! They can see in the dark, and that woman there might well know"—

Michael Strogoff was on the point of following Sangarre and the gypsy band, but he stopped.

"No," thought he; "no unguarded proceedings. If I were to stop that old fortune teller and his companions, my incognito would run a risk of being discovered. Besides, now they have landed, before they can pass the frontier I shall be already beyond the Ural. I know that they may take the route from Kasan to Ichim, but that affords no resources to travelers, and, besides, a tarantass drawn by four good Siberian horses will always go faster than a gypsy cart."

By this time the old man and Sangarre had disappeared in the crowd.

An hour afterward the bell rang on board the Caucasus, calling the new passengers and recalling the former ones. It was now 7 o'clock in the morning. The requisite fuel had been received on board, and about 10 o'clock in the morning the young Livonian, leaving her cabin, appeared on deck. Michael Strogoff went forward and took her hand.

"Look, sister!" said he, leading her to the bows of the Caucasus.

The view was indeed well worth examining.

The Caucasus had just then reached the confluence of the Volga and the Kama. There she would leave the former river after having descended it for more than 400 versts to ascend the latter for 460 versts.

The Kama was here very wide, and its wooded banks were lovely. A few white sails enlivened the sparkling water. The horizon was closed by a line of hills covered with aspens, alders and sometimes large oaks.

But these beauties of nature could not distract the thoughts of the young Livonian even for an instant. She had left her hand in that of her companion and soon, turning to him, said:

"At what distance are we from Moscow?"

"Nine hundred versts," answered Michael.

"Nine hundred out of seven thousand!"

The bell now announced the breakfast hour. Nadia followed Michael Strogoff to the restaurant. She ate little, as a poor girl whose means are small would do. Michael Strogoff thought it best to content himself with the fare which satisfied his companion, and in less than twenty minutes Michael Strogoff and Nadia returned on deck. There they seated themselves in the stern, and without other preamble Nadia, lowering her voice so as to be heard by him alone, began:

"Brother, I am the daughter of an exile. My name is Nadia Fedor. My mother died at Riga scarcely a month ago, and I am going to Irkutsk to rejoin my father and share his exile."

"I, too, am going to Irkutsk," answered Michael, "and I shall thank heaven if it enables me to give Nadia Fedor safe into her father's hands."

"Thank you, brother," replied Nadia.

Michael Strogoff then added that he had obtained a special podorojna for Siberia and that the Russian authorities could in no way hinder him.

Nadia asked nothing more. She saw in this fortunate meeting with Michael a means only of accelerating her journey to her father.

"I had," said she, "a permit which authorized me to go to Irkutsk, but the order of the governor of Nijni Novgorod annulled that, and but for you, brother, I should have been unable to leave the town, and without doubt I should have perished."

"And dared you alone, Nadia," said Michael, "attempt to cross the steppes of Siberia?"

"The Tartar invasion was not known when I left Riga," replied the young girl. "It was only at Moscow that I learned that news."

"And notwithstanding that you continued your journey?"

"It was my duty."

She then spoke of her father, Wassili Fedor. He was a much esteemed physician at Riga, but his connection with some secret society having been asserted he received orders to start for Irkutsk, and the police who brought the order conducted him without delay beyond the frontier. Wassili Fedor had but time to embrace his sick wife and his daughter, so soon to be left alone, when, shedding bitter tears, he was led away.

THE MAINE CLAIMS

Over $2,000,000 Thrown Out by the Spanish Treaty Commission

Washington, March 7.—The Spanish treaty claims commission yesterday handed down a decision against the claimants for deaths and injuries received by officers and seamen in the wreck of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor.

Of the upwards of $58,000,000 worth of claims filed with the Spanish treaty commission the present decision throws out claims amounting to a little in excess of $2,000,000. Had the decision been favorable to the claimants the aggregate might have been increased to $5,000,000. The finding is of more than proportionate interest, however, not only because of the great national disaster which these claims recall, but because of the fact that in resisting these claims the United States seemed to be put in the peculiar position of assenting that Spain was not responsible for the destruction of the Maine. Under the treaty of Paris each party to the Spanish-American war assumed responsibility for the claims of its citizens. Among these presented were claims aggregating $1,890,000 for deaths, $135,000 for injuries and $30,000 for injuries and deaths, caused by the Maine disaster. These are now disallowed, but the commission evades the question of Spanish responsibility for the disaster by founding its decision upon the fact that the injuries were sustained in the line of duty while in the national service, and that redress is to be sought from the United States government in its proper person instead of from it as representative of Spain.

To Get Practical War Ideas

Washington March 7.—A new feature to be introduced into the course of instruction at West Point. The first class of cadets, composed of 54 members, will make a three days' visit to the battlefield of Gettysburg for instruction in strategy and tactics. The time allotted will be devoted entirely to study and instruction. Similar trips to the other battlefields probably will be made annually in the future.

Ampil Throws Up His Job

Manila, March 7.—Senor Ampil, former president of the town of Cainta, province of Morong, who was recently captured by the insurgents and subsequently escaped, has resigned his position and arrived at Manila, where he will remain indefinitely, as he considers himself to be safer here than at Cainta. Ampil says it was the intention of his captors to bury him alive.

Hot on Irish League's Trail

London, March 7.—The Times this morning publishes a violent article on the growing power of the United Irish league and urges the cabinet to invest the lord lieutenant of Ireland, Earl Cadogan, with power to enforce all the dormant clauses of the crimes act, to enable him to proclaim the league as a whole and to deal with it by a change of venue and special juries.

Steamer Sunk In Collision

London, March 7.—The American line steamer Waesland and the British steamship Harmonides met in collision last night off Holyhead, Wales. The Waesland sank. The Harmonides rescued the passengers and the crew of the Waesland and is bringing them to Liverpool. The Waesland carried 32 cabin and 82 steerage passengers.

A Genuine Fog

London, March 7.—Fog is general all over the United Kingdom and is a great hindrance to all traffic. In London last night it was unusually dense and when the people left the theatres vehicular traffic was found to be next to impossible. In many cases pedestrians were obliged to proceed with the aid of link boys.

Big Increase In Expenses

London, March 7.—The civil service estimates, issued last evening, show an increase of £2,810,525 over those of last year, including a grant of £1,800,000 to aid the revenues of the Transvaal and Orange River colonies, £100,000 for the coronation of King Edward and £120,000 for the Pacific cable subsidy.

Marvellous Deposit of Iron

Plattsburgh, N. Y., March 7.—The Chateaugay Ore and Iron company has discovered that the vein or iron ore at their mines near Lyon Mountain, which was supposed to be 30 feet in thickness, is in reality over 70 feet, and extends for six miles from Lyon Mountain, making it one of the largest deposits of iron ore in the world.

Minstrel Bryant Dead

New York, March 7.—Neil Bryant, an old-time minstrel, died in Brooklyn yesterday. He was 72 years old, and was the oldest of those who inaugurated black-face minstrelsy. With his two brothers, Daniel and Jerry, he travelled all over the world and they became famous. His true name was Cornelius O'Brien.

From Ministry to Embassy

Washington, March 7.—The Austrian minister, Mr. Von Hengervar, confirms the report that the Austrian-Hungarian ministry here is to be elevated into an embassy. He acquainted Secretary Hay with the purpose of his government yesterday, and the secretary extended warm congratulations.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Saturday, March 8.
Sun rises—6:10; sets—5:42.
Moon rises—4:59 a. m.
High water—10:45 a. m.; 11 p. m.

The pressure has fallen decidedly throughout the west with a marked centre of disturbance over southeast Colorado. Temperatures are generally higher except in New England and the northwest. It will be fair and warmer in New England. On the coast the wind will be light to fresh and variable, becoming south.

WITHOUT EVEN A TRIAL

Natives of Samar Executed In Brutal Manner

DOINGS OF WALLER AND DAY

Will Be Looked Into by Court Martial—Opinion That the Two Men's Minds Have Become Impaired Through Excessive Privations

Manila, March 7.—A court-martial has been ordered to try Major Waller and Lieutenant Day of the marine corps, on March 17 next, on the charge of executing natives of the island of Samar without trial. Some of the circumstances in the cases are peculiarly atrocious. One native was tied to a tree and publicly shot in the thigh. The next day the man was shot in the arms. The third day he was shot in the body, and the fourth day the native was killed. Friends of the two officers attribute their actions to loss of mind, due to privations which they have suffered in the island of Samar.

The privations suffered by Major Waller and Lieutenant Day, referred to in the dispatch from Manila, were probably endured during the expedition of Major Waller and a detachment of marines, who started during the last week of December, 1901, from Lanang, on the east coast of Samar, to cross the island to Basey, about 35 miles. Incessant rains from the start, swollen streams and other natural obstacles made the marines' progress extremely slow, and when their rations were consumed the men became exhausted rapidly and dropped along the way. Major Waller became separated from his brother officers, Captain Porter and Lieutenant Williams, and the greater part of the men and proceeded toward Basey, where he arrived on Jan. 3 with two officers and 13 men and also Lieutenant Lyles of the Twelfth infantry, who accompanied the command. The major returned to the mountains the next day for relief, but turned back to Basey about 10 days later, his trip having been unsuccessful.

Captain Porter was to have built rafts, but the timber would not float. The second day after separating from Waller, Captain Porter moved toward Lanang, where he arrived Jan. 11 with two men, all exhausted physically and mentally. Lieutenant Williams and over 30 men were left in the mountains in a similar condition. A relief expedition reached the marines Jan. 18 and saved Lieutenant Williams and all his companions, with the exception of 10 men, who were not found and who undoubtedly died from starvation. Captain Porter, Lieutenant Williams and 18 men were taken to the hospital at Tacloban, none of them clear in mind regarding much of the time covered by the period of suffering. Major Waller was disordered in his recollections.

The official report of the war department at Washington said the sufferings of Major Waller's command for 20 days could not be described. Major Waller rendered gallant service with the United States marines in China during the march of the allied forces from the sea to Pekin. He was appointed to the marine corps from Virginia and was commissioned second lieutenant June 16, 1880.

His first sea duty was on the frigate Lancaster, in the Mediterranean, which vessel was present at the bombardment of Alexandria. The Lancaster landed a detachment of marines, including Lieutenant Waller, who won distinction by breaking into a burning store and removing between 15,000 and 20,000 rounds of cartridges at the risk of their lives, thus saving the lives of numerous foreigners who were living close by. Waller also rescued a score or more of Greek women from a hospital which had been set on fire by the Alexandrians. He devised a ladder out of bed clothes and lowered one woman after aother safely to his men on the ground.

Waller was promoted first lieutenant in 1885 and in 1889 he became captain and was stationed at the marine barracks, Norfolk. He again joined the Lancaster in September, 1895, and went to the Newark in July, 1896. Captain Waller was transferred to the Indiana when the destruction of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor indicated war with Spain, and he had charge of the second battery of that ship. When Admiral Cevera's fleet came out of Santiago harbor, Waller's battery fired 1744 shots in 65 minutes. In November, 1899, Major Waller, who had been promoted to the rank July 25, 1899, was stationed at the marine barracks at Cavite, where he remained until early in June, 1900, when he sailed for Taku with a detachment of 100 marines and took part in the fighting at Tien-Tsin, July 16, assisting in capturing a fort west of the North city. After leaving China Major Waller returned to Manila, and from there, Oct. 22, 1901, he went to the island of Samar, with 330 marines. Soon afterwards Major Waller attacked a force of insurgents occupying a strong position at Sojton, and after two days' desperate fighting carried the position. Two of the marines and 26 insurgents were killed. Major Waller destroyed the insurgents' quarters and 70 houses.

Almost Reached Century Mark

Campaign, Ills., March 7.—Rev. S. K. Reed, a pioneer Methodist preacher, died here yesterday, aged 99 years. He was the oldest Odd Fellow living, joining in Baltimore as a charter member.

ON BEING POPULAR.

The New View—A Thing That Is Every Woman's Birthright.

There is a new view about a woman's right to want to be popular. It is in harmony with the modern view of her right to be beautiful. It is a very honest and straightforward view. Briefly stated in The New Idea Magazine, it is:

Beauty is a normal condition; hence the love of it is not only sane, but to be cultivated. To be charming and gracious and generous is to be loved, and to be much loved is to be popular; so, again, popularity, rightly considered, is not only sane, but also a condition to be cultivated.

This wise, new conception of the right to want to be a part of the beauty and charm of the universe may be a natural reaction from Puritanism, and it may be a wider understanding of the fact that loveliness is normal.

I think that very largely it is the American girl who has done away with the wretched old time notion that there was a premium on deformity of body and manner.

The American girl with her sane training in freedom of action has proved that beauty is not necessarily in inverse ratio to brain, splendid health not the obverse of womanliness, gentleness not dependent upon sickliness, and that frequently popularity may stand for generosity, kindliness and sympathy, not self assertiveness, vanity and cajoling.

It may be, of course, that the American girl has not done all these things, but certainly she stands for them, and her popularity on two continents is supreme.

The point worth considering, it seems to me, is the possible ethical development to be achieved in the gaining of popularity. To be much liked and desired nowadays a woman need not be beautiful or witty or rich or the inheriter of social prestige.

Almost any woman who wills it can be popular. I am not going to quote here, "Be good and you'll be happy," because, taken negatively, I have always doubted, not the ethics, but the final value, of this adage.

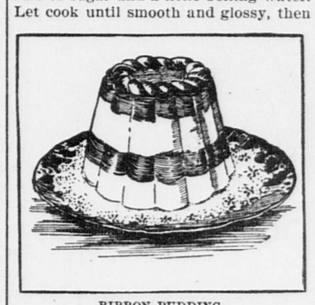

The goodness that leads to popularity is not negative—not the goodness that is made up of "not being bad," those neuter virtues that are the gray shadows between right and wrong—but a positive, strenuous goodness that gives, does and is essential to the happiness of other human beings.

The popularity winning virtues I take to be, first of all, sympathy, the wide, human sympathy that is charity and is not sentiment; second, generosity, which means the giving of interest and appreciation and but rarely money; then devotion, which is loyalty and tenderness and never wanton self sacrifice; also light heartedness, which is philosophy, not levity; and, last, a capacity for happiness that comes from love of the sunlight, the woods, color, music and laughter—a thing that is every woman's birthright.

A Good Pudding.

A pudding of sufficient richness to tempt both eye and palate is one for which the Boston Cooking School Magazine gives a recipe under the name of ribbon pudding:

Scald a pint of milk in each of two double boilers. Melt an ounce and a half of chocolate. Add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a little boiling water. Let cook until smooth and glossy, then add to milk in one boiler. To the milk in the other add half a cup of cocoanut. Dilute a fourth of a cup of cornstarch with milk to pour and stir into the chocolate mixture. Stir until the mixture thickens, then occasionally for twenty minutes. Mix a fourth of a cup of cornstarch with three tablespoonfuls of sugar and stir into the hot cocoanut mixture. Stir until the mixture thickens and then occasionally for twenty minutes. Beat the whites of three eggs until dry. Fold half of the eggs with a teaspoonful of vanilla extract into the chocolate mixture and the other half with a teaspoonful of lemon extract into the cocoanut mixture. Turn the two into a mold to make alternate layers of chocolate and cocoanut pudding. Serve cold, with a custard made of a pint of milk, yolks of three eggs and half a cup of sugar.

Fashion's Echoes.

The long curl falling on a perfect neck is again to add the finishing touch to the low coiffure.

A large black bow at the back of the stock is worn by those who do not care to wear the hair low in the neck.

The three-quarter coat will still be the smart thing, especially for traveling.

There is a decided liking manifested for the chemise drawers or the chemise short skirt combination.

We have not yet arrived at the watteau style of dress, with panniers at the sides and a bunch at the back, but another season may see this among the fashions.

The McKinley carnation is a light rose color. The Roosevelt is dark red.

The popularity of spangles is ever increasing.

The Social Realm.

No man is born into the world whose work
Is not born with him; there is always work.
And tools to work withal, for those who will;
And blessed are the horny hands of toil!
The busy world shoves angrily aside
The man who stands with arms akimbo set,
Until occasion tells him what to do;
And he who waits to have his task marked out
Shall die and leave his errand untulfilled.
—Lowell.

POLICE SIGNAL SYSTEM READY.

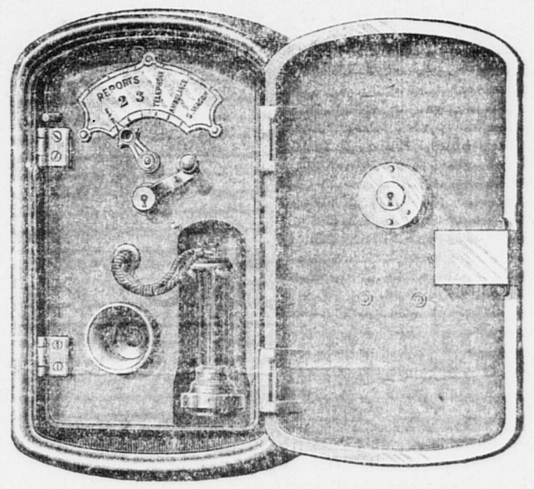

Boxes Located in Different Wards of the City—Description of the System.

The Gamewell Police Signal System recently contracted for is completed and will probably go into service next Monday.

Friday afternoon, Commissioner Knowlton, Chief of Police Hayden, Chief Engineer Williams, and Mr. Decrow, representing the Gamewell company, made a tour of the city to inspect the boxes. All of the boxes were tested, and at the return to the police station the tape showed that every call had been accurately recorded.

signal boxes located at various points about the city. From any one of these boxes six different signals may be sent. When the policeman opens the door of the box he sees a pointer which he may place on any one of six spots. Each of these spots represents a different call.

For illustration,—If he wishes to call a wagon, he places the pointer on the spot marked "wagon" and pulls down the small lever. This lever operates the train of clock-work enclosed in an inner box and instantly the call is transmitted to the police station.

The system has eighteen boxes, and as they are located somewhat different form that published some weeks ago, their location is given:

WARD ONE.

City Hall, building, Hancock street.
Washington, corner Canal street.
Hancock, corner School street.
Granite, corner Quarry street.

WARD TWO.

Howard street, corner Howard avenue.
Washington, corner Chubbuck street.
Washington corner Sumner street.

WARD THREE.

Franklin, corner Water street.
Brewers corner, Copeland street.

WARD FOUR.

Willard School, Copeland street.
West Quincy Depot, Willard street.
Willard, corner Robertson street.

WARD FIVE.

Wollaston Hose house, Beale street.
Hancock street, corner Elm avenue.
Beach street, corner Rawson road.

WARD SIX.

Hancock street, corner Billings road.
Atlantic Depot, Sagamore street.
Neponset Bridge, Hancock street.

In addition, small and very accurate apparatus has been placed in the office of the Mayor at City Hall and in the residence of Chief Hayden, whereby they may at a moment's notice communicate with the police station, and with any of the eighteen boxes, while they in turn may be called from any of the boxes.

The system is built in a thorough manner and will give a good account of itself. The accompanying cut shows one of the signal boxes with the outer door open.

A brief description of the system will be of interest to our citizens.

Briefly the system consists of electrical apparatus located at the new Police station, which apparatus is in turn connected by electric circuits to

There it records on a paper tape distinct characters, showing that a wagon is wanted and the number of the box at which it is wanted. At the same time it sets a loud alarm in motion in the police station so that it is impossible for them not to know that the call is coming.

If the officer at the box has an ugly customer, he may without opening the door of the box send in a wagon call by simply thrusting his key into a hole in the center of the outer door and giving the key one-sixth of a turn. That operates the movement within the box and instantly sends in the wagon call to the police station.

If he wishes to communicate with the station by telephone, he opens his outer door, places the pointer on the spot marked "telephone," pulls his lever and the police station is notified that he desires to communicate by telephone. If he merely desires to send his report call making a record showing that he is at that particular box, he places the pointer on a spot marked with his individual number and pulls lever.

Every call, whatever its nature, when it is sent in, is not only plainly and permanently recorded on the paper tape, but the time is likewise automatically noted on the tape. For instance, if at 12.21 A. M. Officer Murray were to send in a patrol call from Box 24, the paper tape at the office will show characters indicating that the call was pulled by Officer Murray, other characters showing the number of the box which he pulled and still others denoting the year, month, day of the month, the A. M. and the exact minute. Thus there is a complete automatic record of his work kept on every call. The wagon and telephone calls are timed automatically in the same manner.

Means are provided at the police

DECEPTIONS

WHEN before the altar the priest asked her, "Are you content?" it was with all her soul Gemma had responded, "Yes!"

Oh, yes; she was content indeed. Through the cloud of costly lace which enwrapped her in its snowy transparence she saw the vast church all dotted with lights, resplendent in the dark gleam of mosaics upon golden backgrounds, animated by the slight movement of the very elegant crowd that filled it, lighted by oblique rays descending from the nave, all a glitter of gold, silks and brilliants, and it was her own future that she seemed to see thus—the years of luxury and wealth which her rich marriage was preparing for her. And had it not been the dream for which she sighed? She, the ideal blond, of eighteen years, with the tall and proud figure, the pure, disdainful profile under heavy curls like those of an archangel, with haughty eyes sparkling like blue gems under the golden fringes of her long eyelashes.

She had been for a long time a poor girl, the daughter of citizens who had seen better days, that marvelous human lily. She had experienced all the petty troubles, all the cruel daily sufferings of misery that conceals itself. The poor and inelegant gowns, painfully remodeled every year; the insolence of creditors, humiliations, continual tormenting thoughts of money—she had experienced them all, and in her little heart, eager for pleasure and enjoyment, swollen with unsatisfied longings, a dream was arisen little by little, occupying all the room, rendering her insensible to all the rest—the dream of at last becoming rich.

She wanted it absolutely; she was born for it; she was rich now. That "yes" which she had just pronounced had by its three magic letters changed her destiny, and she was so content, so happy, that it appeared to her it was all a dream; that her Mechlin veil was a cloud that transported her into the realms of the impossible, across a sidereal heaven, of which the diamond pins thrust among her laces formed the flaming stars, and in order to return to reality she must cast her eyes toward her husband, Luigo Marchis, kneeling beside her in the mystic, velvety shade of the altar lit by the tremulous brightness of the candles.

Ah, there was nothing ideal about him, poor fellow! In vain he straightened his correct person of an elegant man, with his accurately shaved face, with slender brown mustache, and a still fresh color that gave him something the look of an actor. He remained none the less old, with his powerful shoulders a little bent, with his eyelids grown heavy and crow's feet toward his temples, with the gray locks that appeared here and there among his brown hair, with his forty-seven years, of which the weariness was more conspicuous beside that radiant and blond spring.

Forty-seven years! How was it possible? He felt his heart so palpitating, full of tears as in youth, and he could not comprehend how so much time had passed. He could not persuade himself of the incredible fact—forty-seven years passed without knowing Gemma.

For they had been acquainted with each other only two months! Marchis, however much he had frequented society, drawn there by his banking connections, had never let himself be talked to of marriage. What! A wife, children, troubles, cares, disappointment! Not even by idea!

And at forty-seven years one evening, present from motives of curiosity at a ball to which the employees of his bank had invited him, he must needs be smitten by the exquisite, vaporous grace of that blond girl, dressed simply in white, entering on the arm of a funny little man with a baby face and a big, silvery beard—her father, a modest clerk in the bank; a rather ridiculous little old man who, beside that divine apparition, slender in her robes of snow, made one think of the gnomes of folk tales, always crouching at the feet of fairies.

Ah, weakness of hearts growing old! That apparition was enough to shake all the ideas of Luigo Marchis concerning matrimony, and as the old gnome, despite his absolute nullity, was an honest citizen, incapable of resisting the assiduities of the director to his pretty daughter, the suitor had been greatly pleased with the consent of that little maiden of eighteen, that beautiful creature, that blond being, to become his wife. Now he trembled with joy. His eyes were misty with vivid emotion—not perceiving that that, too, was a sign of old age—and it was a voice choked with joy that to the question of the priest, "Are you content?" replied, "Oh, yes!"

Now it is done. United—forever united. Having risen to their feet, she with an elegant and light impulse, like a lily wind-lifted on its stem, he with a little effort and difficulty, wearied by emotion, they go down from the altar arm in arm. Now they pass through the church amid the murmurs of compliments which arise amid the shadows of the aisles, among the dull scraping of feet and the rustle of gowns. There on the peristyle, among the white columns, is a living wave of sun and air which comes to meet them, like a recall to real life outside of the mystic dream of the church, the creaking of the line of carriages that advanced, the slow descent of the steps, with the white train of the bride spreading and dragging upon the stairs in folds like snow, soft and light. Then the carriages depart. They are alone for the first time in the narrow space of the carriage, which the bridal dress fills with its whiteness, and the bouquet of orange blossoms, with its acute perfume of intoxicating virginity. And it is then that, conquered by the charm of that face, so delicate and proud amid its large, pallid curls, by the splendor of those blue eyes, the elderly bridegroom bends over her to kiss her.

"Dear me, dear me!"

And to see the tranquillity with which those finely cut, rose colored lips return the kisses through the veil, the question arises whether it is the bridegroom that she kisses or the Mechlin lace, at 500 the meter.

* * * * * * *

Ah, there are adorers around that beautiful Signora Marchis, so lovely and so young, married to an old man! It was expected that this fortress would be an easy one to conquer. Precisely on her wedding day Vico Molise, the most elegant and skeptical of the journalists of upper Italy, had propounded to his friends this theorism:

"Given a beautiful girl, very poor; given that she marries a rich old man; divide the number of his years by that of the hundreds of thousands of lire of which she becomes mistress, and you will have the number of months necessary for her to take a lover."

And as soon as he could he began, with many others, to attempt the demonstration of that theorem.

Well, this time the impeccable psychological diagnosis of Vico Molise had been found to fail. Not only, after some months, the beautiful Signora Marchis had no lover, but it appeared also that she never was to have one.

Always dressed with an adorable elegance, with a luxury full of good taste, the beautiful Gemma loved to amuse herself, moving freely in that society new for her, finding herself in her right place as a marvelous plant in a vase of valuable porcelain, developing itself in all its splendor. She went to dances, to the theater, enjoying the plebiscite of admiration provided by her beauty, coquetting a little with her adorers, fluttering about the fire in order to make them sparkle, her wings of a golden butterfly, but never letting herself be burned.

In the very moment of a declaration, in the midst of one of those waltzes whose notes seem made on purpose to stifle expiring virtue in their serpentine spirals, she cut short her adorer by turning her angelic head and saying serenely:

"I don't see my husband. Look a little where my husband is if you will be so kind."

And it was known that her greatest delight was to relate precisely to her husband the declarations which she had received. When she came home with him from a ball, all wrapped in the white silken folds of her sortie du bal, with her pure throat, her snowy shoulders that blossomed still more fair from her swansdown boa; when in the evening she met him in the dining room, still in visiting costume, with her slim waist tightly compressed by an exquisitely elegant gown, with her face animated by the slight excitement which elegant conversation always produces in a young woman, she amused herself immensely in addressing to her husband some of these provoking and roguish phrases:

"You know I was at Countess Foschis'. Molise was there, you know—always faithful and always in despair. And also Comelli, he that has such lugubrious gallantry—he has promised to kill himself for my sake within a month. We shall see. Ah, ah!"

And, sitting opposite to him in a rustle of satin and jet, making shine like two stars the brilliants, large as hazelnuts, which adorned her small ears, she continued to laugh, with her elastic laughter, full of mischief and full of tenderness.

Fortunate? Yes, he ought to have considered himself so. When he set himself to reason about it, to describe mentally his conjugal situation, he had to conclude that he would have done wrong to complain of his destiny. And yet—

What of the terribly unexpected had he now discovered in the depths of the pure sapphire of Gemma's eyes? Was there arisen in his soul the doubt that that faithfulness against every trial, that coldness toward her admirers, was nothing but the wish to preserve intact a position acquired with difficulty and that precisely to that position was directed all the tenderness shown toward himself? I do not know, but the vivid and impetuous joy of the wedding was no longer in him, although his love remained the same, and a painful doubt thrilled in his voice when he replied to the playful confidence of Gemma, forcing himself to laugh too:

"Take care, now, take care—the vengeance of the tyrant hangs over you"—

Ah, the poor tyrant! How he loved her! How she had known how to bind him with her little hands, white and perfumed as two lilies! For nothing in the world would he have discovered the truth, changed into certainty his fomenting doubt. So she had only to ask in order to obtain, for now for him that love of which he doubted had become his life, and he felt a painful stricture at his heart at the mere thought that a day might come when he would be obliged to refuse her something. Yet that day came. Suddenly, by one of those mysterious complications of business, his bank, which until then had gone from triumph to triumph, underwent a violent shock. Not a noisy downfall, one of those open, public ruins which produce great failures, but one of those deep, intimate, secret crises that must be borne without a word, a lament, under penalty of death; that can be overcome only by force of small privations, little hidden savings. It is then that strict economy in the family becomes necessary. The luxury of Gemma in those moments became absolutely ruinous for her husband; he ought to have warned her, sought to check her. He dared not and continued to content her, but very soon came the time when he could do so no more.

It was on the occasion of a great ball to which she was to go. She had ordered from Paris a marvelous gown that became her to perfection. Still she was not satisfied. Some days before, in the showcase of the most fashionable jeweler of the city, a diadem had set in revolution all the feminine imaginations; a superb jewel of antique style, set in silver gilt, of a starry pallor, where the brilliants seemed drops of flame. Gemma wished to have it, and indeed it would be difficult to find a face adapted to the almost religious richness of that jewel more than her snowy profile of an angel in ecstasy.

Ten thousand francs was the price of that jewel, and Marchis did not have them. Mute, immovable, his heart oppressed, he listened to Gemma's words as she described it to him. How could he tell her, how could he ever tell her, that he had not the 10,000 francs! It was terrible. To another woman who should have had that caprice one might have proposed to have her own diamonds reset after that model or perhaps even to have an imitation diadem made. No one would have suspected it. But he felt that the danger lay in confessing his powerlessness. Yet it must be done. And he made an effort at courage.

Gemma had seated herself beside him, throwing back and bending a little to one side her blond head with that irresistible feminine movement which displays the white throat, the pure line descending from the slender neck to the full bloomed bust, down to the round and flexible waist.

"I would like to have it. It seems to me that I should look well. Don't you think so? I have a great wish to be beautiful. If you knew why?"

She laughed now deliciously, with the air of her roguish hours. He was silent for a moment. Then, fixing a vague look upon the delicate designs of the oriental carpet, paling as if from an inward wound, he murmured:

"The fact is that I do not know—I do not really know whether—whether I shall be able to buy it for you"—

"Why?"

She had quickly raised her head, much surprised, uneasy, looking at him. Such a thing had never happened to her.

Marchis wiped his forehead and resumed his discourse.

"The fact is—you see, in a bank like ours there are moments that—certain moments in which one cannot—in which it is impossible."

What was impossible for him in that moment was to finish the phrase. He stopped and lifted his eyes timidly to her, desolately, as if to beg her to help him. She was very pale, with a sudden hardness in all her features, in her compressed mouth, in her knit brows, in her sparkling eyes.

"Have you not ten thousand francs? Is it possible?"

And her voice was as hard as her look, a profound hardness that startled him. But all at once her face changed expression, she recovered her fresh, tuneful laugh, and the sweet and limpid ray was rekindled in her blue eyes.

"Come, you want to tell me stories, so as not to buy me anything. Deceiver! I that wished to be beautiful in order to drive Vico Molise a little crazy. He has declared to me that he is tired of my perfidy. See, you deserve—do you know that I am becoming angry with you?"

She really believed that she had hit the truth with her words. Indeed he had so well kept up the illusion with her, he had hidden so jealously his embarrassment, that she did not know how to explain this sudden restriction. But meanwhile every word of hers was a blow to the heart of Marchis. He saw her already at the ball, passing from arm to arm, with her step like a flying angel; listening to the insidious compliments of Vico Molise and his kind and keeping meantime in her heart that leaven of rancor against him because of his refusal. And he saw himself again, as he had seen himself a little while before in the mirror, old, weary, worn, beside her, so fresh, young, with eyes sparkling from the cruel scorn of one who has made an unequal bargain.

Suddenly he rose like one who has taken a decision, passed his hand across his brow and, without replying, went away to go out of the house. She believed that she had conquered and let him go without moving herself, only with a flash of cunning in her eyes. But when he was on the stairs the door opened, and a blond head appeared between the folding doors:

"We are agreed, then?"

He did not reply, and she heard his step down the stairway, slow, heavy, weary.

* * * * * * *

"Come in." And he entered.

In the little dressing room so illumined as to seem on fire, with the air filled with fragrance from the little unstoppered bottle of perfume, all gleaming white with the disorder of feminine apparel scattered about, Gemma stood erect before the mirror between two kneeling maids, ready dressed for the ball. She was truly radiant in her gown of white satin with almond blossoms, with fresh sprays of almond flowers around the neck of the dress, at the waist, among the waving folds of the train. Issuing from that covering of delicate, pale, dawn tinted flowers, she, too, was fresh as they, with her faintly rosy complexion, as if she were one of those flowers become a person. But under her lashes gleamed anon the flash of cold and cruel rancor.

But, hearing him enter, she turned, and, seeing that he held a casket in his hands, she comprehended everything. With a bound she was beside him, her arms twined around his neck.

"Oh, how good you are! How good you are! How I love you!" He trembled all over and was very pale. Gemma did not even perceive it. All at once, with one of her irresistible movements, she loosened her arms from his neck, took with one hand the casket, and with the other holding her husband's hand she led him after her to the mirror. She seated herself and opened the casket. Among puffs of red plush, under the burning light, the diadem sent forth sparks like a flame. She had a new outburst of joy, took the husband's head between her hands, drew it down and kissed his forehead—oh, the forehead of a corpse, icy and livid! Then, without looking at his features, his wandering gaze, she offered him the diadem and bent before him her blond head, which was so well suited to that mystical jewel.

"Come, sir, crown me!"

And while he sought to unite with trembling hands the clasp of the gems among those marvelous blond curls, waving and breaking into ripples of gold at every movement, she, still with her bent head, lifted her smiling eyes to meet his look. And he answered with a resigned gentleness to the smile of those perilous blue eyes, he, the poor man who deceived for the sake of desire to be deceived and who bought for himself a little mock love with—mock diamonds.—Translated For Short Stories From Italian of Haydee by E. Cavazza.

REVISING A PROVERB.

Whom the Gods Love Die Not Young, but In Old Age.

Wisdom aspires to age, while the shallow dread its finger marks, half conscious that their weak minds would sink into senility beneath the burden of years. Pæans of praise are paid to youth in forgetfulness of the fact that only the aged can contrast the varying phases of consciousness during the different decades of a century of life. Verily it was a wise poet who sang:

"Whom the gods love die young?" Nay; rather say,
With bated breath, "Whom the gods love die old."
Shall the morn pale ere it hath coined its gold,
The sun go down while yet it is full day,
The statue sleep unmolded in the clay,
The parchment crumble ere it is unrolled,
The story end with half the tale untold,
The song drop mute and breathless by the way?

Nay, nay, nay. Broken lives are surely not the perfected human product of God's great plan. The prophets of the remotest recorded time, the grandeur of whose thought has been the theme of preachers and writers for thousands of years, lived to ages which seem miraculous to moderns. The man who grows old grandly, with grace and good nature, really retains his youth.—Troy Press.

An Accommodating Negro.

A story is told of a priest's experience in a small New England town. The clergyman was just about to retire for the night when he heard a knock at his door. He called "Come in," and a negro presented himself and said rather shamefacedly:

"Father, there is a girl outside. May I bring her in?"

Assent having been given, he disappeared for a moment and returned with a white woman and informed the scandalized priest that they wished to be married.

He was shown the door with promptness, and the girl was severely admonished on the course she was pursuing.

Fifteen minutes later there was another knock, and on opening the door the priest found himself again face to face with the would be colored bridegroom.

With great indignation, the priest said:

"I thought I sent you about your business before!"

The darky paralyzed him with this reply:

"Yes, I know you did, Father James, but Mary and I have talked it over, and we thought maybe you would look at the matter differently if you knew I was willing to turn Irish."—New York Times.

Rivers Which Traverse the Ocean.

In the ocean the longest way round is ofttimes the shortest way home. For instance, if a United States transport were to leave San Francisco for China the most logical course would seem to be straight west across the north Pacific to the land of the Boxers.

But in reality the ship would be steered to the southwest along the equator and past the Philippines to the Asian coast. This course would be several hundred miles longer, yet it would take the vessel to her destination much quicker than the straight course. In the one case she would be going with the current; in the other she would be going against the current.

The ocean is not a simple, pathless expanse over which short cuts may be made, but a system of highways, crossways and even blind alleyways, which have been surveyed and laid out by nature herself.—Ainslee's Magazine.

One of Many.

Mr. Gillis—Surely, Miss Gray, you haven't forgotten me already? Why, I proposed to you at the seashore last summer!

Miss Gray (much puzzled)—Can't you recall some other incident?—Judge.

"Why, man," exclaimed the other fellow, "you know she tells everything she knows!"

"Well, isn't that what I said?"—Baltimore News.

ATTITUDE OF COLOMBIA

In Regard to Canal Through Her Territory

GLADLY WELCOMES PROJECT

Will Concur In Panama Company's Sale to Our Government, but Wants Respective Rights and Relations Fully Understood Beforehand

New York, March 8.—Mr. Concha, minister plenipotentiary to the United States from Colombia, who arrived in this city a few days ago from Bogota, has addressed an official communication to William N. Cromwell, general counsel of the new Panama Canal company, on the subject of the attitude of Colombia with regard to the construction of the Panama canal. The communication follows:

"Confirming the conferences which we have held upon the subject of the relation between the republic of Colombia, the United States of America and the new Panama Canal company, I beg leave to state in answer to your specific enquiries that the cable communication made to the Panama Canal company by my government on the 28th ultimo was purely formal and as a reminder of well known conditions, and was not declaratory of opposition to the proposed transaction between the canal company and the United States, if made under the reserve of an agreement between Colombia and the United States.

"That incident has been so distorted by the enemies of the Panama canal route that I take pleasure in confirming my assurances to you that the government of Colombia does not at all object to the sale and transfer as proposed by the canal company to the United States, but, on the contrary, my government approves of the steps taken by the canal company and will give all requisite consents and do all in its power to facilitate the matter under the reserve referred to. Colombia welcomes the construction of the Panama canal within its domains by the United States and entertains for this government and its people the warmest spirit of cordiality in the completion of this, the greatest enterprise of modern times, destined to have a most beneficial and material influence in the development of the interests of both nations.

"This concurrence of Colombia in any sale by the new Panama Canal company to the government of the United States is, with the reservation, of course, that a mutually satisfactory convention shall be agreed upon between Colombia and the United States as to their respective rights and relations to the Panama canal, to be constructed by the United States, and we have not the least doubt that such agreement will be reached.

"Animated by this spirit and governed by these views, I have been empowered by my government to proceed with the pending negotiations with this government; and as I bring the most recent instructions and view of my government, I am happy to give assurance of our sincere desire to conclude such negotiations promptly and upon a reasonable basis. I am now developing and very soon shall definitely submit to this government the views and proposals of Colombia upon the subject with the design of encouraging a speedy and full consummation of the purchase by the government of the United States of all the rights, concessions and properties of the new Panama Canal company and as far as permitted to transfer to a foreign government by the laws of Colombia, and establishment between Colombia and the United States of a definite satisfactory convention upon an equitable and satisfactory basis."

Big Railroad Consolidation

San Francisco, March 8.—The Southern Pacific company filed articles of incorporation here yesterday by which it transfers all its property in California, Arizona and New Mexico to a new corporation. The new corporation is a consolidation of the three old companies. It is known as the Southern Pacific Railroad company. Its capital stock is fixed at $159,445,000.

Settled For a Year

Pittsburg, March 8.—There will be no strike of the coal miners in the Pittsburg district this year. Yesterday the operators and miners of the district practically adopted the scale of last year. The 50,000 or more miners in this district will now continue at work without conflict.

Shaffer May Be Turned Down

Pittsburg, March 8.—The annual convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin workers will be held in Wheeling next month. Some opposition to President Shaffer is developing. M. F. Tighe of Wheeling is being urged to run for president.

To Show Parisians Fast Racing

New York, March 8.—Harry D. Elkes, the middle-distance racing cyclist, has accepted an offer to race in Paris and left on the Kronprinz Wilhelm today. He is accompanied by his pacemaker, Henry Reimer, and expects to return to America in June.

Some Still Hold Out

Cleveland, March 8.—The demands of the striking boiler makers in this city for a uniform scale of $2.75 for a nine-hour day, have been granted in a number of shops. Nearly 500 men are still out.

A STUDY IN CONVENIENCE.

Seven Room House, With Very Desirable Features, to Cost $1,500.

The house for which plans are herewith shown is suitable for a twenty-five foot plot of ground. Space and convenience have been carefully studied, but the artistic has not been forgotten. This house should be built for $1,500.

FRONT ELEVATION.

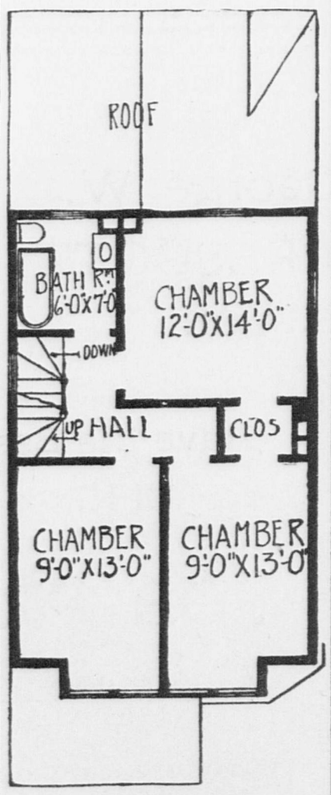

Both parlor and dining room are provided with fireplaces having a wood mantel and a mirror. To the left of the dining room is a large, well ventilated pantry, with a dresser and stairway leading to the cellar, which is about 30 by 20 feet and has bins arranged for coal, storage, etc.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN.

The foundation is built of brick, and the frame of the house is of well seasoned spruce or hemlock sheathed with seven-eighths of an inch thick surface hemlock boards covered with building paper. The side walls and roof are to be covered with shingles laid five inches to the weather.

The interior walls are to be given two coats of plaster, with a hard white finish. All interior woodwork should be painted white, and the walls should be papered.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

The side walls of the exterior will look best sienna stained, with the roof silver gray. Trimmings should be dark red.

Dimensions.—Front, 20 feet; side, 44 feet. Height of stories: Cellar, 7 feet; first, 10 feet; second, 9 feet; attic, 8 feet.

CENSUS BILL ENDORSED

President Affixes His Signature to the Measure

SHOULDERS RESPONSIBILITY

By an Accompanying Memorandum Giving Proper Consideration For Civil Service—Text of His Note to Secretary Hitchcock on the Subject

Washington, March 8.—The president has signed the bill creating a permanent census bureau, but accompanies his signature with a memorandum setting forth his intention, "in pursuance of the purpose of this act," to have appointed to the permanent force from the temporary force only such employes as are needed for the permanent establishment, and to make a civil service rule which will forbid the transfer from the census office to any other department of the government of anyone who shall not have served six months.

This memorandum, while it does not meet the approval of some of his more cautious and conservative advisers, he insists upon making, in order to shoulder the entire responsibility himself and relieve his secretary of the interior and director of the census from the unendurable importunities of place-seekers.

The matter will therefore simmer down to this: Between now and the 1st of July, when the act goes into effect, the director of the census will reduce his force to the proportions in which it will be necessary to carry the work of the permanent bureau along, so none of the persons retained will desire a transfer. He will be under bond to the president not to be swayed in his judgment on this point by any consideration except public duty; and if further assurance were needed, the fact that the act requires the approval of the secretary of the interior to each appointment seems to clinch the business. Mr. Hitchcock has never shrunk from a fight or turned his back upon the enemy after he got into one. He is not likely to begin at this late day. As for the president, if appeals are taken to him it much be remembered that—in his own expressive parlance—"the merit system is my long suit."

The president has sent the following letter to the secretary of the interior:

"Sir—I have signed the act providing for a permanent census bureau. Section two of this act provides that the work pertaining to the 12th census shall be carried on by the census office under the existing organization until the first day of July, when the permanent census office herein provided for shall be organized by the director of the census. Section five provides that with your approval the director of the census may appoint into the permanent census force in two ways: In the first place, from the present employes of the census office; and in the second place, all new appointments to be made in accordance with the civil service law. After any of the present employes of the census office have been appointed upon the permanent force they become part of the classified service.

"I have been over these two sections very carefully with the attorney general and their construction seems to be perfectly clear. You will please inform the director of the census that his office will continue to be administered as it has been administered until the 1st of July. On that day he will, with your permission, appoint such members of the present force under him as will constitute the permanent census force, appointing only so many as are to be permanently employed. After that date all appointments will be made under the regulations of the civil service act."

In Congress

Washington, March 8.—On account of the indisposition of Mr. Vest and Mr. Mallory, who expected to speak yesterday on the pending ship subsidy bill, that measure was not considered by the senate yesterday. The diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was passed and then the senate took up the measure for the protection of the President of the United States.

The bill to classify the rural free delivery service and to place the carriers under the contract system held the floor in the house. General debate will be concluded today and the bill will be considered under the five minute rule on Monday.

Roosevelt Will Give the News

Washington, March 8.—At the cabinet meeting yesterday, President Roosevelt requested the members not to talk to newspaper correspondents about matters under discussion at the semi-weekly meetings. It was thought best that the president himself make public such matters as he deems proper should be made public. Hereafter the president will do this.

Commissioner Ide Is Better

Washington, March 8.—Secretary Root has received a cable message from Manila, saying that Commissioner Ide, who is under medical treatment at Yokohama, Japan, is improving in health, and it is expected will be will be able to resume his duties at Manila in about a month.

Won't Go to Coronation

Washington, March 8.—Miss Alice Roosevelt will not attend the coronation of King Edward VII. While the White House officials decline to discuss the matter, it is stated by those in position to know that the president has decided that she should not go.

IN HER OWN BEHALF

Mrs Gero Denies Testimony of Witnesses Against Her

Dover, Me., March 8.—The story told by Mrs. Gero, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of her husband, brought to a close the evidence in the trial yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Gero practically denied all the contentions of the state. Mrs. Gero denied what had been testified about a struggle in the house, saying that there was no struggle. There was a dispute, but this was in the north room, not the south room, as witnesses had claimed. She said that she had been cutting up meat with her husband's hunting knife, and he took it from her. She said she did not know that her husband had cut himself nor that he had fallen in the yard until she went to the door. She denied making certain remarks attributed to her. She identified a dress worn by her that morning, and on it were blood spots. Mrs. Gero broke down and cried several times while testifying.

On the completion of her evidence the state offered in rebuttal evidence to show that Mrs. Gero wore another dress than the one shown, on the morning in question.

To Sit on Blondin Case

Cambridge, Mass., March 8.—As the result of the decision reached by Attorney General Parker as to which county should properly consider the question of indicting J. W. Blondin, now held in New York on the charge of murdering his wife, Sheriff Fairbairn yesterday issued a summons for a special session of the grand jury to convene next Monday. In order to have Blondin extradited from New York it is necessary that an indictment be found against him or that it shall be established to the satisfaction of the New York authorities that the man held by them is probably guilty.

Woman's Body Burned to Crisp

Winsted, Conn., March 8.—Coroner Higgins is investigating a death which occurred in Barkhamstead yesterday. Neighbors discovered the body of Mrs. James M. Howard burned to a crisp, hanging over a potato bin in the cellar. A search failed to reveal any article which would have set fire to the clothing of Mrs. Howard, and the woodwork upon which the body was hanging was not burned. Mrs. Howard's husband was away at work at the supposed time of the burning.

City Wants Safe Structure

Montpelier, Vt., March 8.—An injunction against the Central Vermont Railway company was signed yesterday by Chancellor Start, restraining the company from driving piles and building a temporary bridge across the Winooski river at the location of a washout. The city government wishes to have a clear understanding of the nature of the new structure to be erected in order to guard against damage in the event of a recurrence of high water.

Revocation of Locations

Boston, March 8.—An important decision was made by the board of railroad commissioners yesterday in the case of the Waltham street railway location, about which there has been a controversy for many months between the Waltham and the Newton and Lexington and Boston street railway companies. The effect of the decision is to disapprove of the relocation of tracks and send the matter back to the Waltham board of aldermen.

Held on Manslaughter Charge

Boston, March 8.—John Hallahan was arrested last night, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death yesterday of Hugh J. McNamara. The two men, it is said, were fighting on a street, when McNamara fell under the wheels of a wagon, which passed over him, fracturing his skull. He was removed to a hospital, where he died. Hallahan is 35 years old and McNamara was of the same age.

Bakers Seek Better Conditions

Boston, March 8.—Unless the 1500 bakers of this city are granted a 10-hour workday by May 1 there is a possibility that Boston will be forced to face a bread and baked-beans famine. The four bakers' unions have placed their demands in the hands of a committee of 25. At the present time many of them are working over 12 hours a day.

Move Against Bankruptcy Act

Hartford, March 8.—The New Haven Business Men's association is conducting a movement to unite similar organizations throughout Connecticut in active opposition to the federal bankruptcy act. The agitation aims to secure a radical revision of the law.

Suspected of Incendiarism

Leominster, Mass., March 8.—Joseph Slomac was placed under arrest yesterday for alleged arson and attempt to defraud an insurance company. It is alleged that Slomac fired his house to obtain the insurance. He is held under $2000 bonds for a hearing.

A Job For Diplomats

London, March 8.—Cabling from Tien-Tsin, the correspondent of The Standard reports a dispute there, which arose from the attempts of the French consul to include certain mission properties in the French settlement. The American consul hoisted the American flag on the disputed buildings. The French consul now threatens to hoist the French flag above the American.

Railroads to Be Prosecuted

Chicago, March 8.—United States District Attorney Bethea has received instructions from Washington to begin legal proceedings against railroads centering in Chicago whose officials testified before the inter-state commerce commission to infractions of the law. It is probable that injunctions will be instituted.

Good Afternoon.

It is just a week since the quarrymen went out on a strike. As far as known no steps have been taken by either side to settle the strike. Should the strike continue it will be but a matter of a short time before the cutting plants will have to shut down for lack of stock.

Quincy seems to be peculiarly unfortunate with its labor troubles, for it invariably happens that when the outlook for the year's business seems the brightest some labor trouble is sure to arise, and by the time a settlement is reached the orders have been placed somewhere else, and Quincy suffers.

It is also noticeable that in Barre, Vt., which is Quincy's greatest competitor, when any labor trouble arises both sides get together and the differences are settled without a day's loss of work. It seems too bad that such quick settlements can not be made in Quincy.

There are probably some who would like to stop the erection of double houses and apartment houses in Quincy. Others will not see the necessity of brick party walls in double houses as required in the proposed building ordinance which reads: "Two-story double houses shall be divided in the basement by a brick party wall not less than 8 inches thick to top of first floor, or by a 4-inch brick wall, built in between piers not less than 12 inches square, the piers not to be more than 6 feet apart. The division partitions above such walls shall be filled in with brick between the studding and floor joists up to the roof boards."

A new feature of the Saturday Ledger is the anniversary war stories by George L. Kilmer. It was on March 9, forty years ago that the Monitor met the Merrimac, and a great deal of interest centers in that battle. The story will be continued next Saturday.

With our new police signal system it behooves the people of Quincy to be good. The police will want to try the practical workings of the system while new, and probably arrests will be more numerous if provocation is given.

—The Somerville Journal says the bill before the legislature providing for the encouraging the planting of nut trees in Massachusetts is worthy of careful consideration. Nuts are not used as much as they ought to be for food, and they might well be grown systematically.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

$100,000 PLANT.

Counsel of Gas Company Explains Valuation.

Mr. De Normandie Explains Reports.

Some Striking Irregularities in the Returns.

The hearing Friday on the petition to reduce the price of gas in Quincy was divided between the Gas company and the petitioners.

E. P. Carver, Esq., counsel for the company, in opening, said two voluntary reductions in price had been made in ten years, from $3 to $2.50 in 1892 and from $2.50 to $2 in 1895. The leakage, or gas unaccounted for, was 22 per cent. This compared favorable with small places. He desired to introduce a tabulated statement showing the actual receipts, expenditures, interest, miles of mains, etc. Besides the capital stock there was a Worcester claim of $20,000, which the company claim was an illegal issue. We should be most happy to extend our mains if it would pay. Should say that gas cost us $1.40. We have paid in all for this plant about $100,000. This is made up as follows:

Richardson & Hill, stock and interest,	$37,080
Debt assumed and suits settled,	38,500
Interest of stock for eleven and one-half years at 6 per cent.,	24,548
Total,	$100,128

The present owners did not invest any money that did not go into the plant. Whatever has been paid up has been charged against the plant. When Richardson & Hill loaned the money they did not expect to buy the plant. They purchased before they found out anything about the outstanding notes.

George H. Field said he owned twelve houses, several of which were piped for gas. None of the tenants used or asked for gas. He had built directly and indirectly sixty houses. About one-fourth of these use electricity. None ever expressed a desire for gas. Never heard of any general dissatisfaction until the hearing came up.

Ex-Mayor Porter said he had used gas ever since the company started. As far as he knew it was of good quality and the service was all right. It was used in three of his houses and no complaint had been made.

Charles A. Howland had used the gas for many years. He was treasurer of the company from 1883 to 1888 when he sold to Williams & Ruggles. We bought the plant to save the life of it. The amount of stock was $33,000. I ran the plant for five years, did $500 of work a year for which I got $100. When we took the plant gas was $5. We reduced it to $3. He preferred gas to electricity. He did not hear any general complaint. Gas was 33 per cent. cheaper than electricity.

Theophilus King had used gas for twenty-five years. Was glad to get it for $2.00. He was a director in 1883. We leased the plant to Williams & Ruggles, and later they bought it at $105. He believed it impossible to serve cheap gas in Quincy. He would like to have it cheaper, but believed it impossible.

For the petitioners E. F. DeNormandie analyzed at length the returns of the Citizens' Gas Light Co. to the Commissioners of Corporations from 1880 to 1901 inclusive. According to the returns of 1880 it appears that the construction account of the company amounted to $18,000. The capital paid in was then $12,500 and the apparent profit was $4,873.73.

For 1886 the real estate is valued at $10,000, machinery at $10,000. The capital stock is fixed at $40,000 with $33,000 paid in.

In 1887, when Theophilus King became president, the real estate was returned at $2,000, mains at $3,000, buildings at $1,500, machinery at $4,000. In 1888 the returns show an apparent loss of $31,268.02.

In 1890 the land had increased from $1,000 to $3,800, the buildings and holders from $4,500 to $15,000; the machinery, mains and meters from about $6,500 to $51,400, and the balance to profit and loss appears on the other side of the sheet, with an apparent profit of $9,034.29, showing an apparent profit in two years of over $55,000.

In 1891 the land has risen to $8,836.80; building exclusive of holders to $5,700; machinery, holders, mains, meters, etc., to $74,314.48; patent rights appear for the first time at $1,500; total $102,500. The capital stock fixed by the corporation was $100,000, with $53,000 paid in.

In 1892, the valuation of plant is fixed at $59,580.75, and in 1893 at $33,000 with questionable debits.

There are no striking irregularities from 1895 to 1901.

Mr. DeNormandie argued that it was intent of the reports to deceive and defraud. That the fictitious valuation put upon the plant by the present owners, the large debt carried, in excess of the capital paid in, is a gross injustice to the citizens of Quincy.

No dividends were declared, but $42,148.88 was paid in ten years for interest and salaries as follows:

Year ending June 30.	Interest.	Salaries.
1892	$1483 10	$1533 34
1893	1990 05	2000 00
1894	2178 02	1999 94
1895	2291 09	2000 00
1896	2454 76	2055 51
1897	2663 48	2000 00
1898	2314 93	2000 00
1899	2381 67	2000 00
1900	2431 25	2080 00
1901	2371 74	2000 00
	$22,560 09	$19,588 79

No real estate was acquired during the ten years and the additions to the plant amounted to but $3,753.61 as follows:

Year ending June 30.	Mach. & Mfg. Appliances.	Mains.	Meters.
1892		$139 16	$76 50
1893		213 94	95 51
1894	$40 05	114 94	8 95
1895	12 02	131 96	109 20
1896	74 43	100 31	112 20
1897		50 22	170 40
1898		131 57	178 05
1899		143 90	129 10
1900		203 03	63 25
1901	100 00	133 37	221 55
	$1,226 50	$1,362 40	$1,164 71

Counsel Carver in his closing argument, said we must consider that this matter has been heard by the Gas commission who were appointed to fix the price of gas. You were the creators of that board. We have demonstrated that it is impossible to furnish gas at the price named in this bill. You will find that this plant cannot be replaced for less than $75,000. The real trouble is that this company cannot afford to sell gas at $1.25. It is apparent that Mr. DeNormandie has probably dreamed so many nights about this it has been to him an important matter. It appears to him that the salaries are extremely large and if not for that we would have cheaper gas. Cut down the salaries one-half and the plant would not net six per cent. In other words, he would like to run the plant but would not put any money into it. But he comes here and asks for a bill which if it passes will result next year in many other similar bills.

You are to consider whether you can reduce the price to an amount that does not give a fair return. To consider if it is adviseable to overrule the powers of a body you have yourself created. If you pass a law of this kind will you not be obliged to pass a bill that no company shall charge more than $1.25.

Counsel for the petitioners in closing said: We do not ask for injustice, but that justice be done to actual capital invested and to the citizens of Quincy. I think we have shown an extraordinary condition of affairs. We have not uncovered the whole and we can not until we can summons people here to give testimony under oath. We do not consider that the Legislature should be biased by a board who were not in full possession of all facts. If you are not satisfied we ask that you you seek authority to summon witnesses, and find out just how much of Richardson & Hill's money has gone into this thing.

By this time it was 1 o'clock and the chairman announced that they could not sit after that hour and that the hearing therefore was closed.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

The importance of endurance in the Christian life cannot be overestimated. A good start is an essential element in success, but no matter how good the start, if we do not continue, if we do not endure, success is impossible. The Galatians began well, but they did not continue so, and hence Paul needed to warn them against the harmful consequences of becoming weary in well doing. In the parable of the sower the seed that fell upon stony ground sprang up quickly, but it had no power of endurance; it soon withered away and consequently produced no fruit.

The need of powers of endurance is also very great. The Christian life is not a flowery bed of ease. Temptations, discouragements, hardships, beset us upon every side. Our life is a constant warfare; hence we must be able to "endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ." It is a race, and an essential element of victory in a race is the power to endure.

The importance and need of endurance being so manifest, we may well study the secret of endurance. The topical references suggest several elements necessary to endurance in the Christian life and work.

1. Faith is a secret of endurance. This is illustrated in the life of Moses. Moses persevered in his religion at great cost and sacrifice, and faith was one of the secrets of his endurance. "By faith Moses when he came to years refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." Faith was a principal factor in the choice of Moses. Faith leads to endurance. The man who believes firmly in God, in the future life, in the power of Christ to save, in the profitableness of a Christian life, will persevere and endure even in the face of sacrifice or hardship.

2. Consideration of the future is a secret of endurance. This was another factor in the endurance of Moses. He considered the future consequences of his actions. Had he looked simply at the present, as so many do, he would have chosen to continue as the son of Pharaoh's daughter rather than the son of God. But in the light of the future such a choice would have been suicidal. Having "respect unto the recompense of the reward" he "esteemed reproach for Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt." So will any one decide who looks faithfully to the future consequences of his actions. The wages of sin is death. The wages of enduring service for God is eternal life. These facts should be an inspiration to endurance.

3. God's presence is a secret of endurance. God promised to be with Moses in his great undertaking of leading Israel to Palestine. "Surely my presence shall be with thee." God will also be with us. What we cannot endure He will endure for us or give us the power to endure. Therefore we should be "steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

BIBLE READINGS.

Josh. i, 1-7; Matt. xxv, 31-46; xxviii, 19, 20; I Cor. xv, 58; Gal. v, 1; vi, 1-10; II Tim. ii, 1-3; Heb. xi, 32-40; xii, 1, 2; Rev. ii, 10.

Have Patience.

To hear your murmuring and repining, it would seem that you are the most innocent soul living and that it is great injustice that you are not admitted into the celestial paradise. Remember how you have offended God, and you must acknowledge His righteous dealing with you. Confess to Him with the humility of the prodigal son, "Father, I have sinned against heaven and Thee." I know how I am indebted to Thy justice, but I have not myself the courage to discharge the debt. If it were left to me, I should deceive, I should spare, I should betray myself. But Thy merciful hand executes what I should never have had the courage to do. It corrects me in love. Grant also that I may endure with patience its salutary corrections. If a sinner has a just indignation against himself, the least he can do is to receive the correction which he has not the fortitude to choose.—Episcopal Recorder.

Our Pilot.

Our life is like the ocean, at times stormy, at others calm. As a vessel must have some one at the helm to guide it in all kinds of weather, so we need a pilot at all times to guide us lest we go astray. Those who take Christ for the pilot never drift or get shipwrecked. We must have faith in Christ and fidelity to His cause. If we steadfastly follow Him, He will guide us safely through the dangers of this world to the harbor of heaven, there to receive the reward promised to the faithful, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Call of Heaven.

It is not the ornamental but the useful life that counts most for God and man. We live in a busy, stirring time, and duties press on every side. Occasions multiply for the fullest expansion of our physical, mental and religious energies. Up and doing is the call of heaven and earth.—Presbyterian.

Whom God Loves.

The grand characteristic of the gospel of Jesus Christ is that it makes a man feel that he is a being of capacity and worth, one whom God loves and cares for, desires to redeem and save and purposes to do great things by, counting not the cost the process of His grace involves.—Evangelist.

MASQUERADE BALL.

Quincy Represented at the Cochato Club Party.

The masquerade ball given by the Cochato club in their hall last evening brought out a large gathering of people, representing Braintree and all the near by towns and cities including Boston and Cambridge. About half of the gathering were in costume. In nearly every case the disguise was complete and the makeups were very elaborate. Mrs. W. E. Morrison, Mrs. F. H. Dearing, Mrs. G. W. Wheeler, Mr. G. O. Wales, and Mr. F. E. Norris were the committee to judge the contestants for prizes. It was very difficult work for them but they mastered the situation as follows:

Best caricatures: Mrs. C. F. White, fancy evening fan; Mr. L. O. Crocker, picture.

Best fancy dressed: Miss Marion Clark, white chiffon fan; Mr. Fred Howe, silver headed cane. The prizes were presented by Mr. Wales after a few dances.

Among those in costume were

Miss Louise Pray, colonial dame.
Mrs. George E. Williams, college girl.
Miss Ethel Williams, jockey.
Miss Miriam Thayer, gypsy.
Miss Lena Abbe, French peasant.
Mrs. G. O. Wales, orphan.

The Colonel's Visit in 1900, Ella Packard
Life of Col. Parker, Miss Olmsted
Song, German Chorale, School

Things said by Col. Parker, Read by thirteen children
A District Schoolmaster, Miss Dearborn
Poem, "Sometimes," Read by Miss Lingham
Address, Dr. Hallowell

Dr. Hallowell addressed the pupils in a few well-chosen words. He began by saying that although he had never enjoyed a personal acquaintance with Col. Parker, there were some words of Shakespeare, written many years ago, which he always recalled when Col. Parker's name was mentioned. They were these:

The whinning school-boy with his shinning morning face,
Creeping like snail, unwilling to school."

After a pause he resumed, saying, it was strange that, after all that had been said, those lines should remind him of the Colonel; but it was because those words, true so long, are true no longer.

Col. Parker was a great lover of children and it is the children who owe the greatest debt of gratitude to him.

One pleasant thing to remember at this time is that he knew he was appreciated, a privilege accorded to few, during their lives.

To Miss Dearborn, perhaps most of all, are due some of the happiest days of Col. Parker's life, when, at the Parker Anniversary, two years ago, the whole nation had an opportunity to show their esteem to one who has done so much for education.

He had been out so late the night before that he did not know at what hour he had come home. When he awoke, he was curious to learn just how "rocky" he looked. He accordingly reached out for the silver backed hand mirror that lay on the table beside his bed.

Instead of the mirror he got hold of the silver backed hair brush. Not recognizing his mistake, he took the brush up and gazed at the bristles for a moment. Then he felt of the silver back and then stared back at the bristles.

Life Guards.

The Life Guards are two regiments of cavalry forming part of the British household troops. They are gallant soldiers, and every loyal British heart is proud of them. Not only the King's household, but yours, ours, everybody's should have its life guards. The need of them is especially great when the greatest foes of life, diseases, find allies in the very elements, as colds, influenza, catarrh, the grip and pneumonia do in the stormy month of March. The best way that we know of to guard against these diseases is to strengthen the system with Hood's Sarsaparilla—the greatest of all life guards. It removes the conditions in which these diseases make their most successful attack, gives vigor and tone to all the vital organs and functions, and imparts a genial warmth to the blood. Remember the weaker the system the greater the exposure to disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the system strong.

Reception at Braintree.

A very successful and pleasant reception was given the South Congregational choir at the church by the Young Men's Union. This was held Thursday evening, being postponed from Wednesday, on account of the storm. The church was decorated with ferns, palms and other potted plants.

A large number availed themselves of the opportunity to meet the choir. In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Arnold, Mr. W. G. Torrey, Miss Abby Arnold, Mrs. Azel French, Mrs. R. M. Sanborn, Mrs. Warren Foss, Mr. L. W. Thayer, Mrs. O. B. Oakman and Miss Alice A. Holbrook.

Refreshments consisting of coffee, cake, and fancy crackers were served in a charming manner by the following: Mrs. C. F. H. Crathern, Mrs. W. A. Torrey, Mrs. G. W. Stevens, Mrs. B. C. Spring, Mrs. G. V. Pennock, Miss May Moran, Miss Mary Foss, and Miss Annie Brooks, in the chapel which was prettily decorated with cut flowers.

During the social hour which folfowed music was rendered in the chapel by Cuff's orchestra and in the church Mr. Frank Gilbert of Quincy gave several selections on the organ, after which Rev. C. F. H. Crathern in a few well chosen words, expressed the hearty appreciation of the choir who responded by a selection. Much credit is due the Young Mens' Union and the committee who had the affair in charge

KEITH'S THEATRE.

As was to have been expected, Capt. Woodward's troup of seals and sea lions hold over at Keith's Boston theatre for a second week, but will be surrounded by one of the best variety shows of the season. The seals and sea lions are simply wonderful, and no word description could convey an adequate idea of their performance. The stage setting, too, is one of the most beautiful pictures of the kind ever witnessed by theatregoers. Among the entertainers announced for the week of March 10 are the following: Al. Shean and Charles T. Warren, in "Quo Vadis Upside Dawn," a burlesque on the famous play that is ridiculously funny; Smith and Doreto, comedy acrobats, just ove from London; the Craigs, accomplished instrumentalists; Howard and Linder, in a German dialect comedy, and Deonzo Brothers, marvelous barrel jumpers. Underlined for Holy Week is the Fadette Ladies' orchestra, one of the most noted musical organizations in the country this biing their first appearance in vaudeville.

Died in 103d Year.

Mr. Harrington was 102 years, 2 months and 11 days old, having been born in Adrila, Ireland, Dec. 23, 1799. His parents both died comparatively young. Of their seven children, Mr. Harrington was the youngest. One sister died twelve years ago at the age of 102, and another eight years ago at the age of 96 years.

In early life Mr. Harrington worked upon a farm. Later he followed the sea for a living, and for a short time was his own master in the fishing business.

Mr. Harrington was the father of nine children, three by his first wife and six by his second. His oldest daughter, Mrs. William Catham, resides in Buffalo, N. Y., and is over eighty years of age. Another daughter, Mrs. Jeremiah Daily, lives in Hallowell, Me., and is nearly eighty years old. One son by the second wife is John Harrington of Hallowell, Me. A daughter by the same marriage is Mrs. Thomas Cullinan, with whom he has lived since coming to this country.

Mr. Harrington visited the barber shop once a week and was a familiar figure to the people of South Braintree. His conversation was interesting, being interspersed with anecdotes of a time unknown to the people about him.

Mr. Harrington was born in one century, lived in perfect health through another and took his departure soon after the birth of another.

The funeral was Thursday morning from St. Francis church. The burial was in Randolph.

☞ Frank F. Crane will have a large sale of horses, carriages and real estate of John J. Higgins at South Weymouth on Thursday, March 20th.

Story-Address on India.

Sunday evening at Bethany church Mrs. Abby Snell Burnell will give her story-address on life in India. Seldom has Quincy had the privilege of hearing such a speaker. Mrs. Burnell, who lived several years in Southern India, has adopted a most unique way of picturing the life of the women in that country. Dressed in one of the bright, graceful costumes, and speaking in the first person, she weaves together, in form of a continuous story, such facts and conditions as she became familiar with. As "Menarchee" she tells of her childhood, marriage and of the shame and disgrace which fell upon her because, for a long time, she bore her husband no sons; then to her great joy on becoming the mother of a boy. The climax of the story is reached when this boy, grown to manhood, graduates from college and breaks his caste. The public invited.

Personal.

A Syracuse paper reports the success of the wife of a Quincy young man as an author. It says: A letter was received from D. Appleton & Co. yesterday by Mrs. Frank E. Southworth of this city accepting for publication a manuscript she had submitted entitled "The Story of the Empire State." It is a brief history of the State of New York intended for popular reading and the publishers have notified Mrs. Southworth that her manuscript will be used without revision. D. Appleton & Co. accepted "David Harum" after it had been refused by a number or other publishers.

Vespers.

There will be vesper services at the Wollaston Congregational church on Sunday afternoon, March 9, at 4 o'clock. The choir is as follows:

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

A year and a half after her husband's departure Mme. Fedor died in the arms of her daughter, who was thus left alone and almost penniless. Nadia Fedor then asked and easily obtained from the Russian government an authorization to join her father at Irkutsk. She wrote and told him she was starting. She had barely enough money for this long journey, and yet she did not hesitate to undertake it. She would do what she could. God would do the rest.

The next day, the 19th of July, the Caucasus reached Perm, the last place at which she touched on the Kama.

The government of which Perm is the capital is one of the largest in the Russian empire and, extending over the Ural mountains, encroaches on Siberian territory. Marble quarries, mines of salt, platinum, gold and coal are worked here on a large scale. Although Perm by its situation has become an important town, it is by no means attractive, being extremely muddy and dirty and possessing no resources. This want of comfort is of no consequence to those going from Russia to Siberia, for they come from the more civilized districts and are supplied with all necessaries, but to those arriving from the countries of central Asia, after a long and fatiguing journey, it would no doubt be more satisfactory if the first European town of the empire, situated on the Asiatic frontier, were better supplied with stores.

At Perm the travelers sell their vehicles, more or less damaged by the long journey across the plains of Siberia. There, too, those passing from Europe to Asia purchase carriages during the summer and sleighs in the winter season before starting for a several months' journey through the steppes.

Michael Strogoff had already sketched out his programme, so now he had only to execute it.

A vehicle carrying the mail usually runs across the Ural mountains, but at the present time this, of course, was discontinued. Even if it had not been so, Michael Strogoff would not have taken it, as he wished to travel as fast as possible without depending on any one. He wisely preferred to buy a carriage and journey by stages, stimulating the zeal of the postilions by tips.

Unfortunately, in consequence of the measures taken against foreigners of Asiatic origin, a large number of travelers had already left Perm, and therefore conveyances were extremely rare. Michael was obliged to content himself with what had been rejected by others. As to horses, as long as the czar's courier was not in Siberia he could exhibit his podorojna without danger, and the postmasters would give him the preference. But once out of European Russia, he had to depend alone on the power of his rubles.

But to what sort of vehicle should he harness his horses?

It is to be hoped that the invention of Russian coachbuilders will devise some improvement in this last named vehicle. Springs are wanting in it, so it is very uncomfortable. In the absence of iron, wood is not spared, but its four wheels, with eight or nine feet between them, assure a certain equilibrium over the jolting, rough roads. A splash board protects the travelers from the mud, and a strong leather hood, which may be pulled quite over the occupiers, shelters them from the great heat and violent storms of the summer.

It was not without careful search that Michael managed to discover this tarantass, and there was probably not a second to be found in all the town of Perm. Notwithstanding that, he haggled long about the price, for form's sake, to act up to his part as Nicholas Korpanoff, a plain merchant of Irkutsk.

Nadia had followed her companion in his search after a suitable vehicle. Although the object of each was different, both were equally anxious to arrive and consequently to start. One would have said the same will animated them both.

"Sister," said Michael, "I wish I could have found a more comfortable conveyance for you."

"Do you say that to me, brother, when I would have gone on foot, if need were, to rejoin my father?"

"I do not doubt your courage, Nadia, but there are physical fatigues which a woman may be unable to endure."

"I shall endure them, whatever they may be," replied the girl. "If you ever hear a complaint from my lips, you may leave me in the road and continue your journey alone."

Half an hour later on, the podorojna being presented by Michael, three post horses were harnessed to the tarantass. These animals, covered with long hair, were very like long legged bears. They were small, but spirited, being of Siberian breed.

They were harnessed thus: One, the largest, was secured between two long shafts on whose farther end was a hoop called a douga, carrying tassels and bells. The two others were simply fastened by ropes to the steps of the tarantass. This was the complete harness, with mere strings for reins.

Neither Michael Strogoff nor the young Livonian girl had any baggage to make the journey and the more than modest resources of the other prevented them from embarrassing themselves with packages. It was a fortunate thing under the circumstances, for the tarantass could not have carried both baggage and travelers. It was only made for two persons, without counting the driver, who kept his equilibrium on his narrow seat in a marvelous manner.

The driver is changed at every relay. The man who drove the tarantass during the first stage was, like his horses, a Siberian and no less shaggy than they—long hair, cut square on the forehead, hat with turned up rim, red belt, coat with crossed facings and buttons stamped with the imperial cipher. The driver on coming up with his team threw an inquisitive glance at the passengers of the tarantass. No luggage? And had there been, where in the world could he have stowed it? Rather shabby in appearance too. He looked contemptuous.

"Crows," said he, without caring whether he was overheard or not; "crows at 6 copecks a verst!"

"No; eagles," said Michael, who understood the slang perfectly; "eagles, do you hear, at 9 copecks a verst and a tip besides."

He was answered by a merry crack of the whip.

In the language of the Russian postilions the "crow" is the stingy or poor traveler who at the posthouses only pays 2 or 3 copecks a verst for the horses. The "eagle" is the traveler who does not mind expense, to say nothing of liberal tips. Therefore the crow could not claim to fly as rapidly as the imperial bird.

Nadia and Michael immediately took their places in the tarantass. A small store of provisions was put in the box, in case at any time they were delayed in reaching the posthouses, which are very comfortably provided under direction of the state. The hood was pulled up, as it was insupportably hot, and at 12 o'clock the tarantass, drawn by its three horses, left Perm in a cloud of dust.

Water and the Kidneys.

As the waste in animal food in those who lead indolent lives is carried off by the kidneys it is very desirable that they should be kept well flushed with plenty of water, for pure water is to the kidneys what fresh air is to the lungs, and taken in the early morning, preferably as hot as it can be sipped, it washes away the unhealthy secretions that have accumulated in the stomach during the night and stimulates it to healthy action, and then, passing on through the system till it reaches the kidneys, carries away by their aid the uric acid, gout poison and other impurities that should have no fixed habitation in the body at all and would not have if the sufferer were properly dieted for even two or three weeks each year.

A Very Old English Cloth.

Fustian is a species of cotton cloth much used by the Normans, particularly by the clergy, and appropriated to some orders for their cashubles. The Cistercians were forbidden to wear them made of any material but linen or fustian. A stronger description was first manufactured in England at Norwich, temp. Edward VI.

It was much used for doublets and jackets in the fifteenth century, at which time it appears to have been imported from Italy. "Fustians of Naples" are named in a petition to parliament from the manufacturers of Norwich in 1554. The name was corrupted in England into "futianapes" and "fustian and apes"—i. e., "fustian a Naples."—Notes and Queries.

Heidelberg Castle.

The castle of Heidelberg is the largest in Germany. It stands 330 feet above the Neckar river and was occupied as a castle as early as A. D. 1294. In a cellar in one corner of the ruins is the famous "tun" or monster cask, capable of holding 49,000 gallons. This was for the storage of wine used by the nobility who dwelt in this castle.

His Idea of Success.

"What is your idea of success?"

"Success," answered the man who has realized a few ambitions, "is merely the attainment of a condition which causes people who knew you years ago to look at you and smile and say, 'A fool for luck!' "—Washington Star.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

GAMBLING SYSTEMS.

There Never Was One Devised That Can Beat the Bank.

When a system is played against a bank like that at Monte Carlo, the percentage against the player is not on the amount of his capital, but on the amount that he stakes on the tables while playing his system. Supposing that I have a capital of £10, and that I play £1 each coup until I have either lost my £10 or won a similar amount of the bank. I should in all probability have to play about 200 coups in order to do the one or the other. Therefore the percentage against me would not be on £10, but on £200. If this bank percentage were 2 per cent, I should consequently be paying £4 for the right to risk £10 at even chances.

I used to know long ago one of the chiefs of the old Homburg gambling bank. I found him at Monte Carlo in the same position there. He was fond of calculations, and one day we averaged the amount staked at the tables each day, and we found that the annual gross profit of the bank was almost exactly the percentage on the amount staked in the course of the year. There can be no business in which the return is more certain or greater. Consols return less than 3 per cent per annum. A mine that pays a dividend of 100 per cent is a Pactolus. But a coup at Monte Carlo takes a little less than a minute. The percentage is, if I remember rightly, a little under 2 per cent, or, in other words, the bank charges 2 per cent for money per minute. This must make the mouth of the veriest usurer water.—London Truth.

A Shot That Made Trouble.

An odd incident happened in the then Danish West Indies about a quarter of a century ago that nearly caused serious international complications. An American marksman, paying a visit to Charlotte Amalia, amused the governor by an exhibition of his skill with the rifle. Sitting on the veranda of the government house, he said that he could cut with a bullet the signal halyards on the flagstaff of the fort and lower the Danish standard to the ground. As the lines were almost invisible in the distance the governor was willing to bet that he could not do it. The shot rang out, and the flag fell.

Presently a horseman dashed up, informing the governor that some one had fired on the flag. There was great excitement. The governor, none too popular, it seems, with the military, ruined his political future by admitting that the affair was a joke in which he connived. Report being sent to Copenhagen, highly colored, of course, by the commandant, his excellency was summarily removed.—New York Press.

Sensations During Hanging.

One question often asked and which few living persons are able to answer is, "What are the sensations of a man who is being strangled with a rope?" Some of the few who have lived to give an account of what occurred to them at that critical moment say that after one instant of pain the chief sensation is that of a mass of brilliant colors before the eyes. Professor Boughton, who was one day testing for himself what such an experience would be like, lost his footing and was accidentally discovered and rescued just as the last faint spark of life was about to leave the body. He declared afterward that he felt no pain and that the only sensation was that of a fire before his eyes which finally changed from a bright blue to a black color. He said that he had no fear of the consequences and that the colors were even a source of extreme pleasure.

Mica and Isinglass.

Mica and isinglass are not at all the same, though the names are sometimes confused. Mica is a transparent mineral, capable of being cleaved into elastic plates of extreme thinness. It is transparent and is used like glass in lanterns and the doors of stoves. Its power of resisting heat makes it much better than glass for stove doors. Isinglass is a substance consisting chiefly of gelatin. It is prepared from the sounds of air bladders of certain fresh water fishes. The best deposits of mica in the United States are in the mountains of North Carolina. In the Black Hills of Dakota mica is found near tin ore, but its presence is not an indication of gold.

A Fast Growing Vine.

The Kudzu vine is probably the most rapid growing plant in the world. It belongs to the bean family. The leaves look something like a lima bean and was once called Dolichos japonicus. It will grow easily sixty feet in three months. It was introduced into America by the Japanese during the Centennial exhibition. It is said that in its own country it has flowers like bunches of wistaria. For some reason American summers do not seem long enough for it. It rarely blooms.

PRINCE'S TOUR ENDED

Extends Thanks to All Who Greeted Him

IS RESTING AT NEW YORK

Last Day of Long Trip Spent at Albany and In Witnessing Interesting Doings by Cadets at West Point—Scarlet Fever on Hohenzollern

New York, March 8.—Prince Henry of Prussia completed his tour of the country yesterday and is once more in New York, where he will remain until Monday, when he will go to Philadelphia. He was absent from the city for nine days, during which his special train traversed the territory of 13 states and covered a total distance of 4358 miles. He was greatly pleased with his trip and, last night, thro igh his aide, Captain Von Mueller, he issued a statement expressing his satisfaction over the journey and his gratification at the cordiality with which he was everywhere received. Captain Von Mueller said:

"His royal highness is very much pleased by his trip into the interior of the United States. He is fully aware of the fact that he has had only a very superficial glimpse of a very small portion of the United States and that he might perhaps have used his time to greater advantage had he remained in one of the larger cities of the east. But he is convinced, nevertheless, that, considering the character of his mission, the trip was the right thing for him to do. In making it he has obtained a very fair idea of the vastness of the country and its resources, which the capital of the United States and the great commercial centres of the east alone could not have given him.

"But more than this impression he values the hearty welcome which he met in all the places he went through, a welcome that showed him how the people of the United States everywhere understood and appreciated the intention of the German emperor in sending him here.

"The prince made a speech in St. Louis in which he said he regretted not having been able, always, to express his thanks to those who greeted him at the railway stations, or who otherwise desired to show him their respects. He wishes to have the intent of that speech conveyed to all those who in the course of the trip have given him such a cordial reception, and especially he wishes to express his thanks to those who, early in the morning, when he was not prepared and still in bed, welcomed him with music and cheers.

"The receptions by the great cities of the south and the middle west were more than he ever had expected and so were the receptions in the east. But his royal highness is equally thankful for what the smaller places did in showing him their good will, though the train in such places stopped only a few minutes and frequently not at all.

"Altogether the prince is most gratified by his trip and shall never forget how the American people everywhere met him with hospitality and sympathy."

His last day on the special train which carried him to the south, west and east, rivalled in interest any of the others spent by him on his tour, for it began with a visit to Albany, included a run in bright sunlight down the west shore of the Hudson river and closed with a reception at the United States military academy at West Point.

Mayor Gans, on behalf of the city, and Governor Odell, on behalf of the sctate, met the prince at Albany with formal official greetings. Then he drove to the city hall and to the capitol to return the courtesy shown him. The people of the city lined the route through the city and their cheers sounded a popular welcome. He was received by the two houses of the legislature and returned his thanks to their presiding officers for the honor. He looked through the capitol and left at 10:30 o'clock for West Point.

West Point was reached at 2 o'clock and the prince was received with the military honor due his place in the naval service of his country. The cadets, formed in six companies, marched on the field and the prince, with Colonel Mills and their respective staffs, inspected them. Dress parade followed, with the prince as the reviewing officer. The prince saluted and his officers uncovered when the colors passed the reviewing stand. After the review the cadets were drawn up in close formation and, advancing to the front of the first company, the prince briefly addressed them.

At the close of the review the prince visited memorial hall. Leaving memorial hall the prince and his staff went to the riding school, where, after a display of rough riding, the prince was taken to the gymnasium and a class of cadets went through their exercises for him. The parting call of the prince was at the house of Colonel Mills, whom he congratulated and thanked.

The special left West Point 20 minutes behind schedule time, but made it up before Weehawken was reached. Prince Henry thanked Mr. Boyd, assistant general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania railroad, who personally directed the railroad arrangements of the tour, and paid high compliment to American railroads.

Consul General Buenz and Consul Geissler met the special at Weehawken and escorted the prince to the ferry steamer West Point. The West Point ran to Forty-second street and landed its royal passenger at 5:50 o'clock. A dozen detectives, two score patrolmen, and a squad of mounted police conducted the prince to the Waldorf-Astoria.

The prince had intended to return to the Hohenzollern, but the discovery of a case of scarlet fever among the crew changed his plans. He did not fear the infection himself, but decided, in view of the fact that he is to meet a large number of persons during the remaining days of his stay in the United States, that it would be better for him to go to a hotel.

Wood Will Remain Awhile

Washington, March 8.—There is a revival of the report that General Wood is going to remain in Cuba after the island is turned over to the new government. The change in the control of the government does not necessarily mean that the United States forces will be withdrawn from the island at that time. The date of the actual transfer of government and the time of the withdrawal of American troops are questions which will be determined after a conference with General Wood.

Miners' Strike Threatened

Scranton, Pa., March 8.—The danger of a strike among the anthracite miners of Pennsylvania has been greatly aggravated since it was learned that the presidents of the coal roads have positively declined to participate in any joint conference with the mine workers. President Nicholls of district No. 1 says an entire new agreement is asked, which means the recognition of the union and the rearrangement of the wage scale.

Another Case of Poison Powders

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 8.—Investigation into the death of Mrs. Ada Klump, the young wife of William Klump of Lowell, led Sheriff Chapman to take Klump into custody yesterday. The officers express the belief that Klump either sent poisonous powders which it is alleged killed her through the mail himself or knew who did send them and that the main object was the removal of Mrs. Klump.

Two Years More, Says Taft

Cincinnati, March 8.—"In two years at most, matters will have progressed so far in the establishment of a permanent government in the Philippines that the commission which has been in the islands for the past two years in the interests of the United States may be relieved of the work they have been pursuing," in the opinion of Governor Taft, who has come to Cincinnati to spend several weeks.

Irish League May Be Proclaimed

London, March 8.—The cabinet council which was called for yesterday has been postponed till next Tuesday. It appears to be generally expected that the United Irish league will be proclaimed. The Irish leaders declare that they will welcome such a move, which would result, they aver, in a revolution in the south of Ireland.

Pneumonia Kills Important Witness

Cape Town, March 8.—Dr. Scholitz, the principal witness in the case against Princess Radziwill, charged with forgery in connection with notes purporting to have been signed by Cecil Rhodes, against whom she brought suit later on account of a note for £2000, died yesterday of pneumonia.

Seventh National Bank Case

New York, March 8.—Judge Thomas yesterday handed down a decision overruling demurrers made to the indictments against William H. Kimball, president of the Seventh National bank; Frank Poor, one of the directors, and G. W. Rose, the cashier. A motion to quash the indictments is denied.

Officials See No Cause For Alarm

London, March 8.—No further news has been received here regarding the Cunard Line steamer Etruria (from New York Feb. 22 for Queenstown and Liverpool, which is in tow disabled, on her way to the Azores islands). The officials of the Cunard line declare there is no cause for alarm.

Death Sentence Commuted

Berlin, March 8.—Newspapers here publish a report that Commandant Kritzsinger, who was captured by General French in December last, was, after being tried by court-martial, condemned to death, but that his sentence was commuted to banishment for life.

Hull Sure of Renomination

Des Moines, March 8.—As a result of the Republican primaries held here yesterday it is conceded that Congressman Hull will be renominated. Judge Prouty is the only candidate in the field against him, and the preliminary campaign has been a very bitter one.

England Buying Our Iron

London, March 8.—The statement of the board of trade for February shows that the imports of unwrought iron from the United States during the month increased in value £250,000 over the imports of January.

CHAMP CLARK STORIES

Anecdotes of Men High In the Nation's Councils.

Bygone Political Giants From the State of Illinois—Two Grand Old Men From Alabama—Disparity of Ages In the Senate—Senator Morgan's Power as an Orator—Truth of an Old Adage Illustrated—Unprecedented Act of a Soldier.

[Copyright, 1902, by Champ Clark.]

It makes one's heart swell with pride as an American citizen to recall the names of the men who held the center of the stage in the Sucker State from about 1845 till very recent years. Verily there were giants in those days. Besides Lincoln, Douglas and Yates there were General James Shields, the illustrious and chivalric soldier and statesman and major general in two wars, the only man who ever was or who in all human probability ever will be a senator of the United States from three different states and whose effigy in bronze adorns Statuary hall; Colonel E. D. Baker, who became a senator from Oregon and died fighting heroically at Ball's Bluff; David Davis, judge of the supreme court, senator in congress, president pro tempore of the senate; Lyman Trumbull, for eighteen years a United States senator and not without presidential aspirations; John A. Logan, major general, senator, vice presidential nominee and according to the evidence of General Grant one of the best two volunteer generals in the Union army, Frank Blair of Missouri being the other; Richard J. Oglesby, major general, United States senator and thrice governor; John W. Palmer, major general, governor, senator of the United States, nominee for president, who perhaps belonged to more different political parties than any other American that ever lived; Elihu B. Washburn, congressman for a score of years, secretary of state, minister plenipotentiary and envoy extraordinary to France; Judge Browning, who was in Lincoln's cabinet; "Long John" Wentworth, congressman, mayor prophet of Chicago; Leonard Sewell, the great civil lawyer; Emory Storrs, the brilliant criminal lawyer, and a host of lesser lights. Truly it was the heroic age of Suckerdom.

Two Grand Old Men.

"Old men for counsel, young men for war," is an ancient saw more honored in the breach than in the observance. Alabama evidently believes in the first half of that hoary dictum. Whether she believes in the second half this deponent saith not. She has the oldest pair of senators in "the less numerous branch" of the national legislature. General Pettus is 80 and is serving his first term. That he is still in the prime of his powers was clearly demonstrated by the awful cauterization which he inflicted on Senator Beveridge last winter, which set the country in a roar and in which he made the cynical declaration that "an orator is held to the rules of neither truth nor common sense."

Senator Morgan is 77 and on the 4th of last March entered upon his fifth term as a conscript father. The combined ages of these two grand old men make a remarkable showing for Alabama.

Time and Space Ignored.

Another unique feature of the senatorial situation in Alabama is that both senators live in the comparatively small city of Selma. Usually there is an unwritten age limit on senators. Generally geography cuts a big figure in their selection, but Alabama appears to be sui generis, ignoring both time and space.

It is not unusual for a state to have one old senator and one young one. Massachusetts, for example, yokes up the sedate, venerable and erudite George Frisbie Hoar, sometimes flippantly denominated "The Cherubic," with the youthful, brilliant and frisky Henry Cabot Lodge. Iowa sends to the senate William B. Allison, 73, who has refused more cabinet portfolios than any other living man, and Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver, 44, who after a splendid career in the house is entering upon what his friends hope is a more illustrious career at the other end of the capitol.

Morgan's Great Learning.

Senator Morgan began his fifth full senatorial term at an age when most men are in the sear, the yellow leaf and resting from the labors of this world and worrying as to their status in the next. But of him it may be said, "Time cannot wither him or custom stale his infinite variety."

All in all it may be safely asserted that he knows more than any other man in public life. His scholarship may not be as accurate as that of some others in particular branches, but he appears to know a great deal about everything. In this respect he closely resembles England's "Grand Old Man," William Ewart Gladstone. He also much resembles him in the grace and jauntiness with which he carries his age. No man looking at Senator Morgan's handsome face, massive head, tall and sinewy form, noting his elastic step or listening to his stately eloquence, which flows onward like the resistless current of a mighty river, would pronounce him to be past three-score years.

If the dictum, "Brevity's the soul of wit," be true, then Senator Morgan is the least witty of the conscript fathers present and past except William Vincent Allen of Nebraska, who broke all records for long distance oratory by speaking 14½ hours at one stretch on the bill to repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman law; Matthew Stanley Quay of Pennsylvania, who consumed fifteen legislative days in expressing his views on the Wilson-Gorman tariff bill, and Senator John P. Jones of Nevada, whose masterful discussion of silver makes a large book.

But these historic linguistic performances were only unusual episodes in the senatorial careers of these eminent publicists. Senator Allen rarely speaks at great length, Senator Jones is neither a frequent nor a prolix orator, and Senator Quay hardly ever speaks at all "in public on the stage." Until the speech referred to he had been regarded as the sphinx of the senate.

Not a Dinner Gong.

Senator Morgan always speaks in extenso. On any subject in which he is interested he knows so much and has so much to say that it requires a long time for him to relieve his mind. Some one asked him how long he could speak on any given subject. "Oh," he replied humorously, "if I study a subject thoroughly and systematize my argument I would consume about three hours; otherwise I could speak indefinitely." He is never tedious, however. In splendor of dictum, in wealth of metaphor, in masterful marshaling of facts, in abundance of information, in lofty eloquence, in intrepidity of spirit as well as in the length of his speeches he recalls that immortal Irishman, Edmund Burke, who, taken up one side and down the other, was perhaps the greatest transatlantic orator that ever spoke the English tongue. Macaulay laments the fact that Burke delivered some of his grandest orations to empty benches. He was dubbed "The Dinner Bell" by some wag, who declared that Burke's rising to speak emptied the house of commons as suddenly as a dinner gong would empty the public room of a crowded hotel.

On the contrary, the announcement that Senator Morgan is up at once fills all the seats and standing room in the senate chamber and packs the galleries to suffocation.

It may be truly said of him, as Dr. Johnson said of Oliver Goldsmith, "He touches nothing that he does not adorn." Without extravagance it may be affirmed that he exhausts every subject that he discusses without exhausting the patience of his auditors. It is equally true that he has never uttered a dull sentence during the twenty-five years of his senatorial career.

In the frequency of his speeches he resembles though hardly rivals that illustrious orator, Charles James Fox, for that magnificent Whig declared that he had spoken every night except two during his long parliamentary life, and his only regret was that he neglected to speak then.

Morgan's Intrepidity.

Senator Morgan is utterly fearless and perfectly loyal to his conceptions of his duty to the people. These qualities brought him into antagonism to Cleveland's second administration. It was in the long drawn out debate on the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law that he fixed upon the Gold Democrats the ludicrous nickname of "Cuckoos," which is apt to stick to them quite as long as "Hunkers" and "Barnburners" stuck to the warring factions of the New York Democracy in antebellum days or as "Snappers" and "Antisnappers" will adhere to their descendants of a more recent period or as the names "Stalwarts" and "Featherheads" clung to the two wings of the Republican party. In longevity it may equal the name "Know Nothings," which has survived for, lo, these many years.

In passing it may be stated that the amusement the Silver Democrats derived from Senator Morgan's happy characterization of his Democratic opponents was about all they secured in that celebrated debate. "He laughs best who laughs last," and the gold cohorts had the last laugh on that occasion, and it was loud, hilarious and long.

Weapons Ready to Hand.

Lord Bacon hath it, "Reading makes a full man, conversation a ready man and writing an exact man." The first two qualifications Senator Morgan possesses in a phenomenal degree. Considering what a busy life he has led, it is incomprehensible when he found time to learn so much or, having learned it, how he managed to digest and assimilate it. His capacious head in no way resembles a storehouse into which a vast mass of things have been thrust indiscriminately, but rather a well arranged armory in which is found every species of weapon, bright and shining in its proper place, ready for instant use, or an intricate machine in which every wheel, cog, spring and pulley does with utmost precision its predestined work.

Unprecedented Act of a Soldier.

He is an academic scholar and a profound lawyer, one of the best in the south. He had never held any civil office except that of presidential elector on the Breckinridge and Lane ticket prior to his election to the senate.

He served in the Confederate army during the entire civil war, rising from private to brigadier.

In one respect his career as a soldier has no parallel so far as I have been able to ascertain and for that reason deserves to be known of all men. He is the only military officer I ever heard of, from Joshua to General De Wet, who voluntarily resigned a generalcy to accept a colonelcy. While others were fussing, fuming, fretting, sulking, resigning or asking to be relieved about some question of rank or seniority of commission he by reason of his great love for the men in his old regiment resigned his commission as brigadier to command once more the soldiers with whom he first enlisted. In that action Morgan has had no imitators in all the hoary registers of time.

Search through the land of living men;
Thou canst not find his like again.

A Fortieth Anniversary War Story

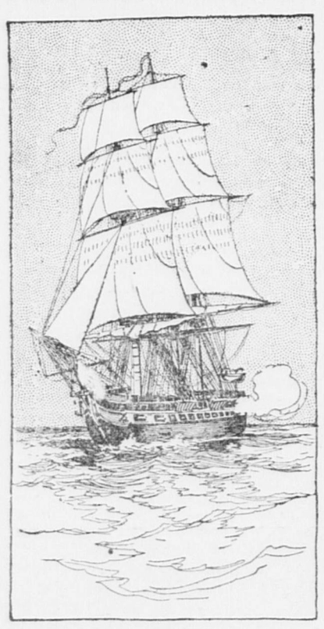

ARMORED GUNBOATS

February and March, 1862

[Copyright, 1902, by G. L. Kilmer.]

FIGHTING on the water in 1862 was opened by so called ironclads, but not until the battle of the Monitor, March 9, was plate armor put to the proof. The naval authorities and congress grudgingly and with half heartedness toward the close of 1861 ordered the construction of plated vessels, but it is a fact that the ironclads Cincinnati, Carondelet, St. Louis, Pittsburg and Louisville, which helped to win the victories at Fort Henry, Donelson and Island No. 10 in February and April, 1862, were built from the private funds of Captain J. B. Eads, the contractor, and were actually his personal property when they battled for the control of the Mississippi river and valley.

In their first battles the Eads gunboats fought against land batteries, and at Donelson the entire fleet was driven from the field by the superior power of the guns ashore. The first seven gunboats afloat had been constructed within two months. The armor was only two and a half inches thick, and at Donelson this was broken and shattered by the Confederate shells. In general appearance these gunboats resembled the famous Merrimac which the Confederates built from the hull of the old war frigate of that name. Like the Merrimac, the Eads ironclads had sloping sides and ends. They were flat bottomed and propelled by a central paddle wheel. They carried thirteen heavy guns, eight of them in broadside and five on bow and stern. The bow and the sides covering the machinery were plated, and the rest of the ship was vulnerable.

The Eads gunboats were constructed for inland waters. The Monitor, which was launched at New York in March, was the first seagoing ironclad of the war. She finally proved unseaworthy. The Merrimac never put to open sea. So the main weapon for sea fighting on a grand scale which the Federal government had to depend upon in 1862 for opening up the James and Mississippi rivers was the old type of wooden frigate and sloop. Several of the wooden ships were propelled by steam, but there were so many points of contact for the opposing navies that the United States, which retained control of nearly all of them, hadn't enough steamers to compose a decent fleet. A sailing ship, the ill fated Cumberland, was the first vessel to meet the ram Merrimac. The frigate Congress, a mammoth warship of the old line and the consort of the Cumberland when the Merrimac attacked the fleet, was aslo a sailer.

It was almost solely with the hope of sinking the Merrimac and thus preserving the wooden ships for the heavy purposes of naval warfare that the Federal government adopted Ericsson's plans and let him build the Monitor.

For that date the wooden ships had given a good account of themselves. They had fought land batteries at Roanoke and Port Royal in the fall of 1861 with better execution than the Eads ironclads in the west. Not one of them was put out of the fight by the enemy's shots, and after the Port Royal battle the Confederates abandoned all their exposed forts on the seacoast. Farragut went to the gulf to attack New Orleans with a fleet which consisted wholly of wooden ships, but even these were not all steamers nor all built for warfare. Not only that, but Confederates had on the lower Mississippi two ironclad ships, the Louisiana, constructed very much upon the plan of the Merrimac and the Eads gunboats—that is, with square upper works and sloping sides—and the ponderous ram Manassas.

The Louisiana was begun in the fall of 1861 and just completed when Farragut reached the gulf. She was plated around her gun chambers with railroad rails. The Manassas when on the water looked like the back of a whale but for her smokestack. Her rounded top and sides were heavily plated to send the shot glancing off. She carried but one gun, being intended for ramming with either of her sharp ends. She was worked by a powerful propeller, and the engine could eject steam and scalding water over her entire surface to repel boarders. This vessel was the most terrible of Farragut's antagonists when he attacked the New Orleans forts in April, 1862, and she, like the Eads gunboats, owed her existence solely to private enterprise. She had been built under the law for privateering, but after she had cleared the Federal ships out of the mouth of the Mississippi the Confederate government bought her to aid in the defense of the forts.

As a matter of fact, taking it all in all, the honors were even with the opposing ironclads when it came to maneuvering and fighting. The Eads ships were light in the water, but their armor was of no more account against heavy missiles than a turtle's shell against buckshot. The Confederate ships could turn any shot in the Federal navy, but they were as clumsy as Noah's ark. The little Monitor could turn the enemy's shots and was so constructed that she dodged around the foe like a pygmy around a giant, but when forced to encounter heavy seas she went to the bottom.

Even when building the iron plated ships of war the projectors were slow to give up the notion that stout timbers were the main thing for the bulwarks of a fighting ship. The bow or fighting end of the Eads gunboat was made of solid oak twenty-four inches thick, covered with the thin iron plating. The thin iron shield sometimes proved a drawback. While a shell or a solid ball would often pierce the stoutest timbers that could be put into a ship's sides, it would only hit the objects directly in the line of its flight, but a shot obstructed by the plating would tear through the wood backing of the plate and hurl great splinters around the decks, disabling numbers of the fighting crew.

It was natural in the situation in the early stages of the war that the Confederates should pin their faith upon iron armor and the north cling to the wooden ships. The south was on the defensive and risked everything upon the salvation of its harbors and coasts. Even at Charleston in the Fort Sumter days the Confederates had iron batteries. The Merrimac and Louisiana were monster floating batteries, the Manassas a monster battering ram. The news of the building of these war vessels was received by northern sailors with smiles of contempt. They expected to outsail them and thus to outmaneuver and outfight them. This prejudice was not overcome all through the war, and there was experience to back it up.

Within a few years before the war the United States government had strengthened the navy by the addition of eighteen steam war sloops and frigates which had no superiors on the ocean. They were wooden, of course, but were moved by screw propellers so constructed that all the machinery was below the water line. All of them made splendid records during the war with the exception of the Merrimac, which was burned at Norfolk and raised and converted by the Confederates into the ram. Farragut had the Brooklyn and then the Hartford in his battles for the flagship, and the Richmond was also in his fleet of fighters. Besides these three, the Niagara, Colorado, Wabash, Pensacola, Pawnee, Mohican, Iroquois, Wyoming and Seminole were crack ships of the best fleets during the hottest sea fights.

Swift sailing was a necessity for the northern navy at the outset, and her captains never lost sight of the fact, hence kept their faith in the wooden ship propelled by steam. It was well they did, because the labor and delay of creating ironclads made it impossible to have an armored fleet during the war. The first task was to establish a blockade along thousands of miles of seacoast and to have ships which could chase blockade runners and fight them on sight. The next problem was to maneuver and fight in front of fortifications. While guns and resisting power would be a good thing once a ship was within range of a fort, yet the ability to get in or away quickly when necessary was just as much to be desired. The Eads ironclads barely saved themselves by backing rapidly out from the fire at Donelson.

Although the Federal wooden ships went down before the southern ironclads in every fair fight, the northern ship commanders never dodged the ordeal. Following the example set by the Merrimac early in 1862, the Confederate ram Arkansas in 1863 and the Albemarle in 1864 dashed into the wooden ships of the enemy and sent them to the bottom. But there were more wooden hulls left to keep up the fight, and scores of brave captains risked destruction rather than lower the flag before any craft afloat. Even when the missiles of the wooden ships rolled from the iron armor of the rams the gallant captains attempted to ride down their antagonists with their superior velocity. At Mobile bay, in 1864, Farragut tried to drive his wooden flagship upon the low decks of the ironclad Tennessee and carry her to the bottom. The wooden ships were doomed the moment iron armor became the fashion, but they died hard. The names Hartford, Brooklyn and Kearsarge, last of the line, stand only second to the oak ribbed warriors of 1812, the Constitution, Chesapeake and Lawrence.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Delivery of Goods Delayed by Freshets and Floods

New York, March 8.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Unsettled weather was the most unsatisfactory feature of the business situation. A sudden thaw followed an exceptionally heavy snowfall produced freshets and floods. Manufacturing and transporting interests suffered severely, and consumers were urgent for shipment of delayed goods, while great quantities of merchandise became stalled in transit.

Preparations for an enormous spring trade continue undiminished. There is still some uneasiness regarding the labor situation at the coal mines, and at Fall River there is disagreement.

Not only is there no improvement to be recorded in the iron and steel outlook, but floods in the Pittsburg district added to the pressure by completely closing many plants and damaging much costly machinery.

Coal shipments have been curtailed to such an extent that dealers' supplies are low and quotations very strong.

Nothing new has developed in the footwear industry. Eastern shops are still working on old contracts, but buyers are delaying the placing of fall business in expectation of securing more satisfactory terms.

Cotton goods are well sustained, the stronger raw material giving all the advantage to sellers, but there is much uncertainty as to the labor situation. This tends to make the mills conservative regarding the acceptance of contracts for future delivery. Less activity is reported in the market for woolens, buyers having apparently completed their first round of orders.

All staples steadied and some rose sharply, the net changes for the week amounting to a considerable advance.

Frightful Railroad Wreck

San Antonio, Tex., March 8.—A broken rail caused a wreck on the Southern Pacific railroad near Maxon yesterday morning. From the latest accounts 13 people were killed outright and 28 were more or less injured. The train was 2½ hours late, going at such a rate of speed that the tender and engine landed 75 feet from where they left the rails. The cars behind were piled up against the engine and caught fire and all were consumed except the sleepers.

Conflicts In Prospect

Constantinople, March 8.—Since the liberation of Miss Stone numerous revolutionary bands have crossed from Bulgaria into Turkish territory, taking advantage of the temporary withdrawal of troops from the frontier. This was evidently planned by the Macedonian committee, and, although no immediate danger is feared, such crossing of the frontier may result in conflicts with the Ottoman forces.

Why Austria Needs Embassy

Vienna, March 8.—The Bremdenblatt, commenting on the decision of the government to raise the Austro-Hungarian mission at Washington to an embassy, in 1903, says: "In view of the impending rearrangement of the politico-commercial relations of Europe and the United States, it is doubly important to be in close contact with all nations which are pre-eminent in the economic domain."

Tracing Alleged Silk Frauds

Chicago, March 8.—In an effort to recover $1,000,000 which is said to have been diverted from the United States treasury by silk frauds in the New York custom house a year ago, W. W. Smith, United States special attorney, took evidence yesterday among Federal officials here and the wholesale dry goods houses. He has already conducted inquiries along the same line in New York.

Alfonso Not Up to Date

London, March 8.—The Daily Mail this morning publishes a letter from Madrid saying that all the important Spanish newspapers are discussing the possible necessity of prolonging the regency, owing to the incapacity of King Alfonzo to exercise the functions of a sovereign. The correspondent concludes his letter by saying that the censor stops all telegrams on this subject.

Priest In Bandits' Hands

Pekin, March 8.—Bandit soldiery have captured a priest at Jehol, about 100 miles northeast of Pekin. Both the French and Russians are anxious to send troops to rescue this priest, but as Jehol is a rich gold mining district, the court has ordered General Mai-Uk-Wan to hurry and release the prisoner in order to forestall the entry of foreign troops into the district.

Magnate In Serious Condition

London, March 8.—Telegrams received here from Cape Town represent the condition of Cecil Rhodes as most grave. Rhodes' heart is enlarged and it is encroaching on the lung space. Relief is afforded by the periodical administration of oxygen. Rhodes sees no one except his close personal friends.

Lyttleton May Be Embassador

London, March 8.—The Yorkshire Post says it learns that Alfred Lyttelton is likely to succeed Lord Pauncefote as British ambassador at Washington. Alfred Lyttelton was born in 1857. He is unmarried.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, March 9.
Sun rises—6:08; sets—5:43.
New moon—9:50 p. m.
High water—10:45 a. m.; 11 p. m.

The storm that was central over southeast Colorado has reached southeast Kansas with decreased energy. Temperatures are generally higher. There will be rain or snow in New England. On the coast the winds will be fresh west to north.

Will It Cure Me?

Why shouldn't it cure her?

Is it a complicated case? Thousands of such cases have been cured by "Favorite Prescription." Is it a condition which local doctors have declared incurable? Among the hundreds of thousands of sick women cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription there are a great many who were pronounced incurable by local doctors. Wonders have been worked by "Favorite Prescription" in the cure of irregularity, weakening drains, inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures.

"Three years ago," writes Mrs. John Graham, of 2018 Plumb Street, (Frankford) Philadelphia, Pa., "I had a very bad attack of dropsy which left me with heart trouble, and also a very weak back. At times I was so bad that I did not know what to do with myself. My children advised me to take your 'Favorite Prescription,' but I had been taking so much medicine from the doctor that I was discouraged with everything. I came to Philadelphia two years ago, and picking up one of your little books one day began to read what your medicine had done for others, I determined to try it myself. I took seven bottles, and to-day I am a strong, well woman, weighing 162 pounds. Have gained 29 pounds since I started to use 'Favorite Prescription.'" station so that the officer on duty there may let the officer at a box know that the office wishes to talk with him by telephone. If, after operating his box he receives no such information, he closes the door and proceeds on his patrol duty.

The apparatus at the police station makes a very complete and beautiful electrical display, and while so simple that it may be operated by any one of ordinary intelligence, it is beautifully and thoroughly made and looks as if it might last for all time. The instruments are located in a finely finished oak cabinet having a total length of perhaps 5 feet and a total height of 6 feet. The street boxes are made specially for outside use and are therefore provided with all the latest improvements to guard them against weather and exposure. At the same time they are very strong, heavy and capable of resisting any possible attempts at tampering with them. The workmanship in them is likewise of the finest and they are designed to work with equal facility in all kinds of weather, and under very adverse conditions.

An important feature of the system as built in Quincy is the superior excellence of the electrical circuits. As far as could be done to good advantage to the city, these circuits have been carried underground. Those which are overhead are likewise made in the best possible manner, and all the circuits for the underground and overhead have the peculiar excellence of being made up in twisted pairs as they are called, that is to say, if there are two wires in the circuit, instead of being parellel to each other merely as has usually been the custom in police telegraph, they are used in the City of Quincy twisted together. This overcomes all the effects of induction from strong currents in their neighborhood and gives in consequence superb telephone service.

The best telephone circuits heretofore constructed in police telegraph systems, while good, have usually been more or less noisy. It is a fact that in Quincy these twisted pair circuits so thoroughly overcome the difficulty, known as induction, that in listening on a circuit it is absolutely impossible to say definitely whether any lines are connected or not. Even at night when all the strong foreign currents, which usually play such havoc with telephone lines, are in full operation, the police signal wires in Quincy are so quiet that a whisper may be heard from the police station to the most distant box.

BRAINTREE.

It is good news to all that the Williams, Kneeland Co., (incorporated) with Hon. George Fred Williams as president, opened their shoe factory Monday morning and Thursday commenced full operations. The company is permanently organized and has many large orders to fill.

Last Sunday the Monatiquot river was the highest since the flood of 1886. The rushing water flowed over portions of Hancock, Pearl, Union and River street. Three dams were carried away, Hollingsworth's, Stevens & Willis' and Morrison's. The sidewalks and streets about town were severely gutted.

During the year 1901 the town has paid to the Electic Light Department for domestic lighting $415.75 as follows:

Fire department, $42.84.
School department, $46.95.
Thayer Public library, $67.50.
Water department, $102.32.
Town hall. $156.18.

There were 804 ballots cast for town officers last Monday, the largest number ever cast in Braintree at a town election. Precinct voting and two contests are credited with the large vote. In precinct one only 308 ballots were cast, while precinct two had 294 and precinct three 202. Last year the total number of ballots cast was 768.

There was a large attendance at the W. R. C., last Monday evening. A gold Past President's badge was presented to Mrs. Mary E. Bangs in behalf of the order by the presiding president. Relief Corps sewing meeting next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Caroline L. Seaver, who died last week from complication of diseases induced by old age, passed safely through a trying surgical operation forty years ago. At this time, it is stated, Mrs. Seaver's kidneys were removed, scraped and returned to the body. The delicate operation was performed by Dr. Fifield who died several years ago.

The adjourned hearing of the County Commissioners will be held at the Town house Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock.

An inventory of the estate of James P. Thorndike, late of Braintree was filed at the probate court at Dedham on Wednesday; personal, $337,502.72; real estate, $740,000.00. The final account of Amos W. Stetson as executor was allowed.

Annie Holbrook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alden Holbrook of Mayflower Park, died early Tuesday morning of peritonitis, after a few days' illness. Miss Holbrook was twenty-three years old.

Mrs. E. W. Hunt, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia is rapidly improving.

John Flood, an aged and respected citizen passed away after a long period of illness, Sunday, at his home on Elm Knoll. A wife and son survive him. Funeral services were held Tuesday morning from his late home.

The regular meeting of the Jonas Perkins School association was held Tuesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Doane. Mr. West gave an interesting reading from one of Mulford's books. Plans for the coming anniversary are being perfected and a good social time is expected. The next meeting will be held with Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Baker.

The dedication of the First Baptist church, Bridgewater, occurred Wednesday evening, March 5, and special services were held on Sunday, at which a man and wife received baptism, also on Tuesday evening, Wednesday afternoon and Friday evening. Its pastor, Rev. Wesley L. Smith, is well known here as the former pastor of the Weymouth church and organizer of the Braintree Baptist church. Mr. Smith was also founder of his present church and it is by his indefatigable exertions that in four years' time they are permitted to worship in their own church home. Having started with 22 members they have received accessions till their present membership numbers 76. Their house is convenient and, though not large, will seat three hundred.

The monthly meeting of the Penniman School association will be held next Tuesday evening in the school hall. Rev. Ralph Haughton of Weymouth Heights will deliver a lecture on "The art of optomism." There will be music by home talent. A social hour with coffee and sandwiches at the close. All are invited.

Mrs. C. F. White has been ill the past week with a severe attack of the grip.

A new lodge of the I. O. O. F., M. U., is to be started in East Braintree. The first meeting is to be held in Kelley's hall, Quincy avenue, Wednesday, March 12. The application list for those who intend to join is in the hands of Alfred D. G. Poch and W. H. Poch. So far about thirty names have been secured.

A HINT TO A BOASTER

[Original.]

Dick Spier was one of those men who could jump higher, run faster, dive deeper and come out drier than any other man in the wide world. At any rate, stories were never swapped between him and his friends but Dick's experiences overtopped those of any other one of the party. At a gathering one evening he told how he had during the previous summer taken more weakfish on the New Jersey coast than any man of his party and during the autumn following had killed more deer in the Adirondacks than any of his fellow companions.

"What can we do to stop this boasting?" said Stephen Burd to Phil Wentworth, a Cornell man who was fitting himself to be a mechanical and electrical engineer.

"I think I have a plan," replied Wentworth. "Leave him to me.

"Dick," he said, "did you ever fish for pickerel in Amber lake?"

"Did I? Last summer I landed fifty pounds in an hour and forty-three minutes."

"They're gamy. You can't land all you take."

"I can land five out of every six I get on my hook."

"That's a big average. I think I can do pretty well at landing pickerel, but I don't know that I could average up to that."

Wentworth winked at Burd, who plainly understood that he was to trap Spier into a contest.

"Dick" said Burd, "I'll bet you a cent that Phil Wentworth can land more pickerel on Amber lake in a given space of time than you can."

"Why not make it a champagne supper?" said Spier.

"I'm opposed to betting for stakes of value."

The next Saturday afternoon the party were in a fishing boat on Amber lake. They began at 2 o'clock, and the match was to last till 4. The man who lost the most fish off his line was to be the loser. Spier caught three fish and landed them all. Then he hooked a pickereland lost it. Wentworth hooked one and landed it. About this time the pickerel came in such quantities that either of the contestants had but to throw in his line to hook a fish. Spier lost one out of every three, while Wentworth landed every fish he hooked. The fish fought nobly for their lives, but just as those on Wentworth's hook seemed about to get away they would suddenly turn over and cease to struggle.

"What's the matter with you, Dick?" cried Burd. "Seems to me you're not handling them with your usual skill. You're not going to land fifty pounds in an hour and forty-three minutes this time."

"I'm landing one in six now, and any expert fisherman will tell you that's a first rate average."

"But Phil is landing every one he hooks. How do you do it, Phil?"

"Science," replied Wentworth.

"Science!" exclaimed his disgruntled opponent. "I believe you have some way of bewitching the fish."

"What kind of a reel is that you're using, Wentworth?" asked one of the party.

"One of my own invention."

As he spoke a pickerel took his hook and ran away with it, bending the pole to a letter U.

"That's a strong line of yours," said Spier, disappointed that it did not break.

The fish struggled fiercely and at last broke the pole, the only weak part of the tackle. All expected to see him get away, when suddenly, like his brothers, he was landed.

"Give it up, Dick," said Burd. "You've lost five fish, and Wentworth hasn't lost one."

"I've landed the average, and Wentworth has worked a miracle. However, I'm beaten, and I insist on paying for the supper."

"You haven't lost a supper," put in Wentworth.

"All I want to know," said Spier, "is whether you landed those pickerel scientifically or whether there was some trick about it."

"I give you my word it was by pure science."

The party retired to the Rod and Gun club, where a supper was ordered, it being agreed that which of the contestants should pay for it was to be decided by vote of the party. When the festivities were at their height, Burd rapped for silence and asked Wentworth how he managed to land so many pickerel.

"If Spier will consent to play fish," replied Wentworth, "I'll give him a practical demonstration."

"All right," said Spier. "Go ahead."

Calling for his rod and line, Wentworth filed the point of the hook blunt and tossed the hook across the table to Spier.

"Put it in your mouth," he said.

Spier did as he was bid. Wentworth pressed his thumb on a certain spot of the pole just below the reel, whereupon Spier gave a yell, seized the hook and took it out of his mouth in a hurry.

"What does it all mean?" cried several at once.

"It means this," said Wentworth. "This reel contains a galvanic battery. My line is a fine steel wire, very flexible and strong enough to bear a twenty pound jerk. When I get my fish hooked, all I have to do is to press a concealed button, here, to make the circuit and paralyze the fish."

There was an explosion of laughter at Spier's expense, but by prearrangement the party voted that the conspirators should pay for the supper.

Spier took the hint, and from that time forth was more modest in his statements.

Dr. Miles' Pain Pills

Cure all kinds of Pains and Aches.

8 Shinzaka Mschi, Akssaka, Tokyo, Japan.
With this I am ordering more of the Pain Pills. Both our Japanese and foreign friends have used the Pills and they all tell me I cannot write too much in their favor. We have here what is called "Japanese Headache," which is supposed to be incurable while we remain in this country, but the Pain Pills always cure the severest attacks.
Sincerely, MAY S. HOWARD.

"During many years I could not ride in a street car, or steam car, or even take a buggy ride without suffering with sick headache. I tried many different remedies with but little help; for, if one medicine relieved me once or twice, it soon lost the power to help. Dr. Miles' Pain Pills not only relieves an attack every time, but if I take one in my mouth before starting out it will prevent even a slight attack."

Gen. Charles Dick, of Ohio, the eminent Congressman from the Garfield district, believes there is no remedy so efficient for headache as Dr. Miles' Pain Pills.

Wm. M. Bell, Gen'l Sec'y Home, Frontier and Foreign Missionary Society of the United Brethren in Christ, Dayton, Ohio, writes as follows: "During my recent trip abroad I was subject to the most severe strain upon the nervous system. Fortunately, I was never without a supply of Dr. Miles' Pain Pills and received most excellent results from their use. This remedy is standard in our home and have been specially helpful during the past season. It is a pleasure to recommend to suffering humanity these most meritorious medicines."

THE SOCIAL REALM.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick, of Chestnut street, returned today from a trip south.

The Tuesday Evening Whist club will be entertained next week by Miss Grace Burke, of Saville avenue.

* * *

Mr. Carl Lane of Goffe street has returned from Jamaica much improved in health by the sea voyage.

Owing to the severe weather Wednesday night, several literary and social gatherings did not take place. The Pickwick club meeting at Mrs. William E. Alden's Chestnut street, was postponed. Mrs. George A. Strong had sent out cards for an informal gathering at Christ church rectory, but only a few braved the weather.

* * *

Mrs. William Pratt of East Weymouth entertained the Entre Nous whist club of Quincy, Wednesday afternoon and prizes were awarded Mrs. George F. Spooner and Mrs. Dexter Groves.

Our village: life and work of Mary Russell Mitford, will be the subject of Miss Ellen Thompson's talk next Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ellery C. Butler, Russell park.

The meeting of the Chromatic club at Chipman hall, Tremont Temple, Boston, on Friday morning brought out quite a Quincy contingent. Mrs. H. Y. Follett of Wollaston sang a group of three songs; Mrs. Moorehead of Wollaston at the piano. Among those present besides club members from Quincy were: Mrs. Wendell G. Corthell, Mrs. E. C. Butler, Miss Prescott, Miss Alice Keith Prescott, and Mrs. Homer L. Bigelow.

Miss Mitford's "Our Village," which is the subject of the Tuesday afternoon talk by Miss Thompson at Mrs. E. C. Butler's next week, has the charm and novelty of being an unknown volume to many of her audience. Miss Thompson affirms that it is a book to be read in the spring and so is peculiarly appropriate to the course at this season.

—There is a room for the blind in the Congregational Library at Washington, where there are not only books printed in raised type for "finger reading," but where there are regular readers who take turns in reading to those who cannot see. On certain days in the week musicals are held for those whose loss of sight renders them most appreciative of good music.

Strike of Vast Proportions Begins at Boston

RAILROADS BEAR THE BRUNT

Of What Was Originally a Contest With the Brine Transportation Company—Strikers' Ranks May Swell, to Great Detriment of Business

Boston, March 10.—The gigantic strike of freight handlers, clerks and allied trades in this city, which has been threatened ever since the recent difficulties between the Teamsters' union and the R. S. Brine Transportation company has been in progress, was inaugurated at 7 o'clock this morning, when 7000 men, members of the Freight Handlers' union, the Freight Clerks' union and the Teamsters' union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, went on strike in accordance with the votes of their respective unions at meetings held yesterday afternoon.

This does not at present include the similar organizations which are affiliated with the Knights of Labor, although the chances are more than even that it will extend to those bodies.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford and the Boston and Albany railroads are the most seriously affected, as their employes are nearly all A. F. of L. men, while those upon the Fitchburg and Boston and Maine systems are more generally affiliated with the K. of L.

The three organizations which yesterday voted to strike are the principal members of the Allied Freight Transportation council, the other members of which, such as the Longshoremen's union, Expressmen's union, Meat Handlers, Wool and Leather Handlers, etc., have a much smaller membership.

The strike which has been decided upon by the three organizations named is practically diverted from the Brine company to the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, which will thus be forced to bear the brunt of the contest, which promises to be bitter and far reaching in its effects upon the business interests of the entire city. In addition to the above men who will refuse to deliver or receive goods from the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R., are 150 expressmen who work for the company doing business for that road.

The order for the strike adopted at yesterday's meeting of the Teamsters' union forbids the delivery of goods to any customers excepting only hospitals and public institutions. Even the newspapers are included in the prohibited list, and during the pendency of the strike no union teamster will be allowed to deliver paper to any newspaper office. As an official stated last night: "If the newspapers want their paper delivered let them go to the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R. and settle this trouble."

As a precautionary measure the entire police force of the city is held in readiness to act at the first indication of disorder. They express perfect confidence in their ability to preserve order and protect property, but should it be found that they are unable to do so, they will not hesitate to invoke the aid of the militia.

The markets being well cleaned out on Saturday night there is a large amount of perishable merchandise in the various freight houses awaiting removal and should a general strike take place upon all the roads and docks great loss to merchants would result from the delay in handling their freight.

The freight handlers affiliated with the K. of L., and the Longshoremen's union, also a member of that national body, are both very important organizations, and should they decide to strike it would mean that incoming and outgoing steamers would find it impossible to load or discharge their freight or that the work would be greatly delayed or be handled in a manner that might result in serious damage to both vessel and cargo.

Should all the allied bodies in the Allied Freight Transportation council be called out from 10,000 to 12,000 men would be directly affected.

The Allied Freight Transportation council did not order a general strike of its members, but endorsed the action of various allied bodies taken during the afternoon in voting not to handle any freight of the New York, New Haven and Hartford and Boston and Albany railroads, or of the Brine Transportation company, and instructed those unions which had not already taken such action to hold meetings at once and adopt a vote to that effect.

KILLED HER HUSBAND

Jury Returns Verdict of Manslaughter Against Mrs Gero

Dover, Me., March 10.—The jury found Mrs. Esther Gero guilty of manslaughter, in causing her husband's death. A motion for a new trial was made, and, pending arguments upon it, Mrs. Gero was admitted to bail. Mrs. Gero was charged with fatally stabbing her husband, Thomas Gero, at their cabin at Chesuncook, last October.

The government showed that liquor had been drunk by both Gero and his wife and that there was a dispute, during which Gero was cut in the abdomen. He staggered outside and died. Witnesses told of Mrs. Gero saying with an oath that she "couldn't help it," when the wound was called to her attention. Mrs. Gero, in her own behalf, claimed that Gero cut himself in an attempt to take his hunting knife from her. Gero was a woodsman and guide, and the tragedy was enacted in the woods beyond the Moosehead region.

Wilster Not Yet Floated

Gloucester, Mass., March 10.—It was expected that an attempt would be made yesterday to float the stranded steamer Wilster at Rockport, and with the idea in view the Boston Towboat company had a large fleet of vessels here. The heavy southeasterly storm kicked up such a high sea, however, that it was impossible to do anything toward floating the steamer. The storm had the effect of driving the Wilster's bow some 25 feet further inshore.

Burglar Struck a Snag

Boston, March 10.—Robert B. Reid, a restaurant keeper in the south end, sleeps in a room in the rear of his restaurant. He was awakened by a burglar early yesterday morning and in a fight the latter was given a fractured skull. The burglar gave the name of Frank Sullivan, aged 32. Reid was locked up as a witness. Reid pounded the intruder into insensibility with a bottle before he went out for the police.

Collar and Cuff Factory Burned

Bennington, Vt., March 10.—Fire broke out in the cutting room of the Unity Collar and Cuff company early yesterday morning completely destroying the establishment and contents, except the engine and boiler room and a small storehouse. The loss is estimated at $60,000. The company has frequently had 300 employes on its payroll. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Pfeiffer Survives Smallpox

Boston, March 10.—Dr. Immanuel Pfeiffer is convalescent from smallpox and his return to this city is looked for within a short time. Chairman Durgin of the board of health says that Pfeiffer's incident is considered closed. At one time it was generally expected that the board would prosecute Dr. Pfeiffer on the charge of endangering public safety.

Skull Fractured by Bullet

Springfield, Mass., March 10.—Frank Gregoire of Wales was shot by Officer Charles Thomas of Palmer while the former was resisting arrest on a warrant charging him with assault with intent to rob Mrs. Isaiah Hiscock of Wales. In the pursuit Gregoire and the officer fell together, and the shot which fractured the man's skull was accidental.

Switch Was Misplaced

Brunswick, Me., March 10.—An express train from Boston collided with an engine at Union street yesterday. Engineer Leavett was the only person injured. He may lose his eyesight. Several of the passengers were shaken up, but none was injured. One engine was wrecked. The accident was due to a switch wrongly turned.

The Norfolk Strike

Norfolk, March 10.—From present indications the strike of railway employes is by no means over. It is very probable that the strikers will not accept the terms of settlement named by the arbitration committee of the Chamber of Commerce. Both sides agreed to accept the arbitration decision. The cars ran yesterday under military guard. A riot Saturday night was the fiercest since the strike started and several soldiers and citizens were injured.

Whistles Wet as Usual

New York, March 10.—Despite the alleged promises of the saloon keepers that yesterday should be the very dryest Sunday on record so far as New York was concerned, the day passed without any noticeable change so far as the saloons were concerned. On the lower east side of the city it is doubtful if one saloon in 500 was closed. Thirty-four excise arrests in all were made.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Tuesday, March 11.
Sun rises—6:05; sets—5:45.
Moon sets—7:52 p. m.
High water—12 m.; 12:15 p. m.

Since Saturday night the storm centre has moved from Lake Erie to the Massachusetts coast and except in New England the pressure is high east of the Mississippi river. Temperatures have risen decidedly in the interior of the country. The Ohio river has apparently come to a standstill at Louisville. It is still rising below, with a stage at Evansville of 39.4 feet, 4.4 above the danger line. In New England the weather will be generally fair. On the coast the winds will be fresh to brisk northerly. Storm warnings are displayed on the New England coast, except the extreme southern portion.

TURKEY HELD RESPONSIBLE

Gets Another Note on Subject of Miss Stone's Capture by Brigands

Constantinople, March 10.—The American legation here yesterday presented to the porte the second note referring to the capture of Miss Ellen M. Stone.

In this note it is pointed out that as Miss Stone was captured, the ransom paid, and the prisoners delivered in Turkey, the brigands must be within the Turkish frontier and should therefore be captured.

The note denies that the authorities were ever required to lessen their vigilance on the frontier, and asserts that only the movements of the troops in the interior were interfered with.

The first note presented to the porte by the United States legation at Constantinople in the matter of Miss Stone's capture by brigands demanded the punishment of the guilty parties. The porte, in replying, repudiated responsibility and denied all liability.

Father Crowley Rehabilitated

Chicago, March 10.—Rev. Jeremiah J. Crowley, the Roman Catholic clergyman who was the central figure in a sensational scene here on Nov 3 last, when the lights in Holy Name Cathedral were turned out and the celebration of high mass was stopped in an effort to enforce a ban of excommunication against Father Crowley, has returned to Chicago and celebrated high mass in the church of the Immaculate Conception yesterday. Father Crowley has been to Washington, where he conferred with Cardinal Martinelli.

Monopolies Have Come to Stay

Buffalo, March 10.—John P. Altgeld, ex governor of Illinois, was the guest of the Independent club at a banquet given Saturday night. Governor Altgeld spoke on the subject "Shall the People Own the Monopolies?" Monopolies, he said, from their very nature, will be permanent, and the acts of congress having in view the control of private monopolies were dismal failures. Public ownership of public utilities, he declared, was the only solution of the problem.

This Week In Congress

Washington, March 10.—The attention of the senate will be divided again this week between the ship subsidy bill and the bill providing for the punishment of persons who assault or kill the President of the United States. The week does not promise to be an exciting one in the senate. The house, after disposing of the bill to classify the rural free delivery service and place the carriers under the contract system, will devote its attention to appropriation bills.

May Be Woman In the Case

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 10.—The mystery surrounding the sending through the mail of a poisoned headache powder to Mrs. Ada Klump of Lowell, causing her death, is seemingly no nearer a solution than on the day of the arrest of William Klump, the husband. The theory that some woman in the affections of Klump concocted the plot and carried it out still holds with the officers who are investigating.

Sealers Want Higher Wages

St. Johns, March 10.—In the matter of the strike of the crews of the sealing fleet, numbering about 3000 men, who demanded $4 per hundredweight for the catch, instead of $3.20, the previous rate, the sealing merchants have declined to accede to any of the terms submitted by the men. Both sides are working hard to score a victory.

The Shamaka Earthquake

Baku, March 10.—The official report of the recent earthquake at Shamaka shows that 126 villages, with a total of 9084 houses, were included in the area of the disturbance; that 3496 houses were destroyed and 3943 damaged. Beside the dwellings, 4163 farm buildings, 11 churches and 41 mosques were seriously damaged.

Won't Be Extradited Just Yet

Concord, N. H., March 10.—Judge Stone of the superior court has granted a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Mrs. Martha S. Munsey of Pittsfield, for whose extradition to Massachusetts Governor Jordan issued a warrant on Tuesday last. Mrs. Munsey is wanted in Massachusetts on the charge of uttering forged wills.

A Fortune In Coal

Montreal, March 10.—General Manager Shields of the Dominion Coal company states that borings made by the company near Butler's lake, C. B., have revealed the presence of a coal deposit estimated to contain at least 1,000,000,000 tons of bituminous coal.

Nobody Favored License

Lincoln, Mass., March 10.—At an adjourned town meeting Saturday night 42 ballots were cast, all for no license. The usual appropriations were made.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

NOT A DAY OF REST

Prince Henry Spent a Most Busy Sunday

A CONCERT AT HIS HOTEL

By a Hundred and Fifty Prize Winning Singers—Had Dinner at the Vanderbilt Home and Paid Visits to Two of Gotham's Leading Clubs

New York, March 10.—Prince Henry was the central figure yesterday in another round of entertainment arranged in his honor. He first listened to a concert at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, largely made up of his favorite American songs, the concert being arranged at his request. When that was over he drove to the University club to a luncheon, which was not concluded until mid-afternoon. In the evening he was the guest at dinner of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and met a large party made up of persons of social prominence.

When the prince bade farewell to the company at the Vanderbilt home he went to the New York Yacht club for an informal reception and it was late when he returned to the Waldorf Astoria for the night. He found time between the four main events on his program for the day to receive a delegation representing the Commercial club of St. Paul and several callers and to finally complete the arrangements for the last two days' stay in the country and his departure for home.

He had intended to be present at the religious service on the Imperial yacht Hohenzollern in the morning, but the case of scarlet fever which developed there several days ago altered that plan. Instead, he remained at the hotel, arising late and breakfasting at his leisure.

It was the Arion society of Brooklyn, winner of the kaiser's prize at the singing festival in Brooklyn in 1900, that furnished the morning concert for the prince at the hotel. It had been originally arranged that they should serenade the prince aboard the Hohenzollern on Saturday, but in the change of the plan the serenade was abandoned. The prince had expressed regret that he was not to have a chance to hear the club sing. It was suggested that it might still take place at the hotel and the prince approved of the idea. It was midnight, but telegrams and telephone messages were hurried out to the members and by 11 o'clock 150 of them had reported at the hotel. The concert took place in the Astor gallery and began at 11:30. The prince was delighted and addressed the members briefly in German. He thanked them for what they had done for him and congratulated them on their excellent musical ability.

The luncheon at the University club was given by the committee named by President Roosevelt to arrange for the visit of the prince and escort him on the tour.

The party left the hotel at 12:45 o'clock with mounted police as special guard for the carriage of the prince. A great crowd saw the departure from the hotel and the arrival at the club, but there was no special demonstration. An elaborate luncheon was served and there was an interesting discussion of the recent trip through the country.

After dining with the Vanderbilts the prince attended a reception at the New York Yacht club. He returned to New York Yacht club. He returned to the Waldorf Astoria at 11:15 p. m and immediately retired to his apartments.

German Papers Pleased

Berlin, March 10.—Some of the daily papers have begun summing up Prince Henry's trip to the United States. Their tone is one of complete satisfaction. They declare the prince's trip was never intended to have any specific political aim, but merely purposed to bring about an improvement in the popular feeling in both countries.

Opposed to Sunday Funerals

Trenton, March 10.—The Trenton Coachmen's union, at a meeting Saturday night, decided not to drive at Sunday funerals. In this move they have the support of all the undertakers of the city but one, who had a funeral yesterday. His drivers will be expelled from the union. The agitation against Sunday funerals has the endorsement of the clergy of the city.

Brewery Workers May Return

Cincinnati, March 10.—The lockout of the brewery workmen of Cincinnati, Covington and Newport, which has been in progress for a month, promises to end today. There were more than 3000 men out originally, but many have returned to their posts. More than 1000 workmen will be effected by the result of a conference today.

Resignation Not Contemplated

Washington, March 10.—The attention of Secretary Wilson of the agricultural department was called yesterday to reports that he contemplated soon resigning from President Roosevelt's cabinet. The secretary, in reply to a specific inquiry, said that he had no intention of taking the step suggested.

Gaynor Said to Have Crossed Border

Syracuse, N. Y., March 10.—The Post Standard says that Colonel John F. Gaynor, for whom a bench warrant was issued at Savannah, Ga., passed through Syracuse last Wednesday on his way to Buffalo and that in Buffalo, the paper is informed, Gaynor boarded a Grand Trunk train for Canada.

Death of Bishop Spalding

Erie, Pa., March 10.—Dr. John F. Spalding, Episcopal bishop of Colorado, died last night of pneumonia at the home of his son, Rev. Frank S. Spalding of this city. The latter is seriously ill with typhoid fever and his venerable father was summoned a week ago. He stood the journey well, but afterward caught a severe cold, which developed into pneumonia. He was 85 years old.

Talk of War Preparations

London, March 10.—In a dispatch dated Shanghai, the correspondent of The Standard says that Chinese merchants coming from Port Arthur declare they have been ordered to remove their families from there because preparations were being made there for a war with Japan.

To Leave the Pulpit

Groton, Mass., March 10.—Rev. Joshua Young, D. D., of the Unitarian church, where he has been pastor for the past 27 years, read his resignation yesterday. Dr. Young, who is 78 years old, has been a minister in active service for 54 years. He assigns old age as the reason for resignation.

Went Astray In Fog

Boston, March 10.—The Gloucester fishing schooner Patriot made port yesterday and reported that two members of her crew, names unknown, went astray in their dory on Quero bank, nine days ago, in the fog. The men belonged in Newfoundland.

Wedding Plans Disarranged

Boston, March 10.—Naval Constructor Robert of the Charlestown navy yard has received orders from Washington to go to San Francisco, and from thence to Cavite, P. I. Mr. Robert was to have been married on April 8.

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. Among the tens of thousands who have used it for the grip, not one case has ever been reported that did not recover. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

Many clergymen have remonstrated against Sunday funerals, but now that the Coachmen's Union in Trenton, N. J., has taken it up, a change is possible.

Northampton is before Congress for a post office building, but Quincy's turn comes first. Northampton is a city with only 18,643 population, while Quincy has 23,899. Northampton gained but 1,897 in five years while Quincy gained 3,187.

Drift of Opinion.

☞When in our American public life was there ever such an unbridled, senseless guzzling of wines and liquors as has been exhibited in the various cities and towns, up and down the land where Prince Henry has been entertained? It has been the daily joke of the journals. I can hardly resist the temptation to quote some of the flippant jokes which came out day by day. Prince Henry, without question, is too sane a man not to have seen and felt the folly of this excess into which we allowed ourselves to go. My friends that practice does not represent the conviction and the sober thought of the American people, and I make bold to stand up and cry out shame against those responsible for this insolent disregard of American public sentiment. And I cry out against it because character is a precious thing, because personal worth is that which counts among men in the eyes of God, and because drink undermines character and wrecks and demolishes personal worth as hardly anything else among the vices does.—Rev. W. A. Knight at Berkeley Temple.

☞It would be comparatively easy to picture the future, if people would only do what might be expected, but the prophet has to reckon with elements of perverseness and inertia which would wofully disturb his calculations. What is needed now is not so much new inventions as an adequate use of what we have. Travel might be made a pure delight, but the railways have made no move to put an end to the discomforts that have come down from the early and crude days of steam locomotion. People speculate delightfully about the marvels of wireless telegraphy and the possibilities of seeing along a wire; in the meantime they cannot get a telephone message delivered unless by bribing an employe to violate the company's rules. If the world were getting the practical good it ought to have from such inventions the conditions of life would be greatly modified. The telephone and the telautograph, or its equivalent, would work together and give their services at prices within the reach of almost every family. The conduct of business would be facilitated, and the trend of popularity toward the suburbs would be intensified. And as with these, so with the other great inventions which are only half utilized. Something like a millennium would be very near at hand if everybody could only be induced to help it along; but such a transformation of human nature would be enough in itself to be called a millennium.—Springfield Republican.

☞Political opinions, if honestly formed as the result of study and thought, would have an exceedingly beneficial effect. Within certain limits these convictions would broaden the minds, give a wider outlook, and assist in the formation of a truer estimate of the actual conditions under which we live. In such a manner political opinions could be utilized and trained in a purely educational spirit. Contrast this educational force as it might be, with political conduct as it is actually practised. We have leaders, so-called, pandering to the emotions and flattering the tender susceptibilities of the mulitude. Leaders in the true sense of the word they are not; they neither lead, educate, train, nor direct, and they obtain recognition by a suitable handling of the plastic material of their constituency. It must be regretfully confessed that political as also trades-union leaders do not in any way rise to the height of their opportunities of directing opinion into legitimate channels of thought, and so training the workers to realize in themselves the best that their position can afford. At the same time, it must be admitted that a so-called leader can hardly, by the very nature of things, lead or guide; in most cases necessity compels him, if he wish to maintain office, to follow his flock—he simply voicing their demands. Hence leaders, instead of interesting their followers in vital matters and directing their interest to ever widening planes of thought, are compelled to play upon the excitement and at times the passions of their constituency. This exploitation of the excitable feelings is responsible for much backwardness, it hampers education, retards advance, and to a large extent prevents our taking a leading part in the evolution of industry.—Percy Longmuir, in The Engineering Magazine for March.

The Friday Club.

The Friday club generally meets at the homes of its members but March 7 was an exception, Mrs. Wilson Marsh, the hostess for the afternoon, calling the meeting at the Boston Public Library, a private room being set aside for her. Mrs. A. F. Schenkelberger and Mrs. Harry L. Rice were the program committee. This delightful afternoon was not entirely for the Friday club for invitations had been extended to the Junior Friday club, the Emerson club and friends. At the close of the literary program Mrs. Marsh entertained at lunch at Trinity court, covers being laid for thirty-five. Those present besides the Friday and Junior Friday clubs were: Mrs. Blanchard, Mrs. Hallowell, Mrs. Christianson, Mrs. Hammick, Mrs. F. S. Davis, Mrs. J. C. Morse, Mrs. E. C. Butler, Mrs. F. A. Tupper, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. E. L. Crane, Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Mrs. J. M. Nowland, Mrs. F. F. Crane, Miss Annie Newcomb and Miss Harrington. Mr. Wilson Marsh sent jonquils which brightened the corsages of the ladies as well as the table, the guests appreciating his thoughtfulness and words of greeting.

New Bell Blessed.

The new bell of St. Mary's church at Randolph was blessed on Sunday, March 2, in the presence of a congregation of over 1000. Rev. J. P. Cuffe of Quincy was among the clergymen present. The Randolph Register says:

Father Gleeson is ably supported by his assistant, Rev. William T. Deasy, who is a native of Quincy; was ordained by Archbishop Williams, after he had passed through the theological route prescribed at the colleges and had graduated; said his first mass at his home church, St. John's in Quincy, and his appointment to St. Mary's gives him his first service in clerical duties. Both Father Gleeson and Father Deasy are priests easy of approach, and glad to possess your good will and esteem. They are always pleased to meet you, pass "A Pleasant Day" in greeting, and be at peace with all mankind.

New Car Barn.

Work was commenced this morning on the foundation of the new street railway car barn which is to be erected on the east side of Hancock street just south of Merrymount park. The building was staked out Saturday and this morning a gang of men and tip carts appeared and commenced work excavating.

Sea Wall.

The Harbor and Land Commissioners have advertised for proposals for building about 1,500 feet of concrete seawall and about 700 feet of spur jetties at Stony beach in the town of Hull.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

A SIMILAR CASE.

The special sitting of the grand jury of Middlesex County, called for today, for the purpose of considering the charge of murder made against J. Wilfred Blondin, once again brings that already celebrated case before the center of the judicial stage.

The report sent out from Lowell on Friday to the effect that the government will reply, in its endeavor to secure a conviction of Blondin, on the decision made by Chief Justice Gray in the Costley murder trial, brings to mind, one of the most famous murder trials held in Massachusetts, in which Napoleon B. Furnald, of Quincy, was prominent in the prosecution.

The Globe says: Nearly 30 years ago the murder of Julia Hawkes, for which Costley was hanged, was the sole topic of discussion throughout the state and it was fought out in Norfolk and Plymouth counties by the ablest legal talent that Massachusetts possessed at that time. The case for the government was in charge of Atty. Gen. Train and Dist. Atty. Asa French; Costley was represented by Judge Sanford of Taunton and Horace R. Cheney, formerly district attorney for Suffolk county.

The similarity in the cases of Julia Hawkes and Mrs. J. Wilfred Blondin lay in the fact that their bodies were found in rivers, probably far from the scene of the crime; at least that proved to be the case in the Hawkes murder trial, and the contention of the government in the Blondin affair is that Mrs. Blondin was murdered in Boston and that her body was carried to Chelmsford, where it was thrown into a small river.

The body of Julia Hawkes was not discovered in the Sudbury river, as was stated in the press dispatch sent from Lowell, but in the Monatiquot river at East Braintree nearly beneath the bridge on Quincy avenue.

For many days the officers endeavored to locate the place where Julia Hawkes had met her death, and it was not until a few days before Costley was hanged that the exact spot was known for a certainty. When Costley was arraigned for a hearing in Plymouth the officers asked to have him discharged as they had no evidence that the murder was committed in Plymouth county.

Hon. Asa French, then district attorney for Norfolk county and father of Hon. Asa P. French, the present district attorney for the same county, reached the decision that, as the exact spot where the murder was committed was not known, the location where the body was found was known: that place was in Braintree, a town in Norfolk county, and therefore, the charge of murder was preferred against Costley, it being claimed that he killed Julia Hawkes in Braintree.

In his decision on the case, Chief Justice Gray of the supreme court, now justice of the U. S. supreme court, said: "In the absence of evidence to the contrary, the fact that the body was found dead in a certain place, is a prima facia fact that murder was committed there." This is the decision, probably, which the authorities in the Blondin case are relying on to help them prove that Mrs. Blondin was murdered where the body was discovered.

Officer Furnald learned a few days before the hanging that the murder was committed on the night of May 13, 1874. Julia Hawkes was killed by a pistol bullet fired from a 22 caliber revolver in her head, just about at left temple. The murder was committed just over the town line of Hingham, between Nashs Corner, Weymouth and Queen Annes Corner, and not on Quincy avenue in Quincy, near the corner of Howard street, as many people have always supposed.

TODAY'S COURT.

Castle Square Theatre.

A revival of Victorien Sardou's drama, "Diplomacy" has been determined upon by the Castle Square theatre management as the attraction for this week. The great play has not been seen at the Castle Square for over four years, and few of the large list of plays presented at this house are worthier a revival than this great dramatic creation of Sardou's. The greatest artists of the generation have appeared in the characters in "Diplomacy" and the many changes in the Castle Square company, since its last production at this theatre will add a special interest to this revival as it offers opportunities to compare the production with those of the past. The drama will be staged with unusual care and the leading characters have been assigned as follows: Henry Beauclerc, John Craig; Capt. Julian Beauclerc, Charles Mackay; Baron Stein, Edmund Breese; Count Orloff, J. L. Seeley; Markham, Lindsay Morrison; Countess Zicka, Eva Taylor; Dora, Marian A. Chapman; Marquise De Rio-Zares, Leonora Bradley; Lady Henry Fairfax, Maye Louise Aigen. "Diplomacy" is announced for a single week and will be followed by "Rosedale." The usual distribution of boxes of chocolate bon-bons will be made at the Monday matinee.

A CHALLENGER.

Smith Completes Handsome Yacht and Starts Another.

The Seawanhaka challenger which Crowinshield has designed for Commodore T. H. McDonald of the Bridgeport Yacht club has been laid down by Mr. Smith of Quincy Point, and she will be set up this week. The contract calls for her delivery on May 15, but Mr. Smith expects to have her all complete by the middle of April. Should his expectations be realized the boat will have a decided advantage in having more time for tuning up.

The following figures will give a general idea of the boat: Length, o. a., 39 ft., 4 in.; length w. l, 26 ft. 6 in; extreme beam, 8 ft; beam at w. l., 6 ft., 7 in; draught 6 in; amount of sail, 500 ft.

Mr. Smith has also completed a very handsome fin keeled cabin class racer of a new and very pretty type. As one enters the yard the first thing to attract attention is this yacht, already to take her first dip. Shining with a fresh coat of paint she presents a sight of which her owners might well feel proud. The top of the cabin is what is termed done sunk. This is for the purpose of driving a lea sea without stopping the speed of the boat. The dimensions are length o. a., 33 ft., 5 1-2 in.; length w. l., 21 ft; beam w. l., 7 ft., 7 in.; extreme beam, 7 ft., 11 1-2 in.; draught, 5 ft., 6 in. On the keel there is 2800 lbs lead. The owner is C. H. W. Foster of Brookline.

A Grand Wedding.

The society of the Scandinavian people of Quincy have lost one of their most prominent members. Miss Amanda Anderson of 69 Granite street, Mr. John Waldin of Dorchester is the happy man that takes the prize.

Their wedding last Saturday evening was a brilliant affair which took place in the Swedish Congregational church on Garfield street. About 175 Scandinavians were invited and nearly all responded to the invitation. Pastor G. W. Eeufstedt executed ceremonies and delivered a beautiful speech with a tendency to humor.

A great and valuable variety of household effects were presented to the bridal pair. The beautiful bride was handsomely attired in white organdie over white silk, lace and ribbon trimmings. The merry party broke up about midnight all well pleased. The "newmade" couple will make their home on Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester.

Roll-Off Tonight.

The games in the Norfolk County League which ended on Feb. 25th, resulted in a tie on bowling between the Merrymount and North Quincy clubs, and a tie on billiards between North Quincy and Braintree clubs. The bowling will be decided by a three string match on the North Quincy alleys this evening and a three-string match on Merrymount alleys Tuesday, Mar. 11. The billiard play off has not yet been decided upon. Many members of the clubs comprising the league, will witness the roll off and a hot fight is anticipated for first place and the bowling prize.

A "Smoker" will be held at the Merrymount club rooms on Friday, Mar. 14. The club will be favored with a reading by the president and songs. Refreshments will be served. Several new members are expected to present their names for admission at the next meeting, and the prospects for new quarters are encouraging.

GOLDEN JUBILEE.

Pilgrim Congregational Church Has a Three Days Celebration.

The three days golden anniversary of the Pilgrim church at North Weymouth began Sunday when Rev. Thomas H. Vincent, the pastor, delivered an historical address in the morning, and in the evening these gentlemen gave reminiscences: James L. Wilde of Weymouth Heights, C. Fearing and D. W. Barrows of South Weymouth, J. M. Lord of Weymouth Landing, Martin E. Hawes of East Weymouth and T. B. Seabury.

The church was formed and the edifice dedicated March 11, 1852, the Rev. Dr. Storrs, Sr., preaching the sermon. Eight pastors have served this church during its history, and in the following order: The Rev. Calvin Terry from 1852 to '57, the Rev. S. L. Rockwood from '58 to '71, the Rev. L. B. Voorhees from '71 to '76, the Rev. George Dodson from '76 to '79, the Rev. A. H. Tyler, from '80 to '84, the Rev. W. D. Leland from '84 to '91, the Rev. Allan Hudson from '92 to '96, the Rev. Thomas H. Vincent from '97 to the present time. Of the eight pastors five have passed away, and, strange to say, they are all buried in the same local cemetery in the community where each in turn had faithfully labored for the spiritual uplifting of the people they served.

These clergymen will take part in the service this evening: Rev. R. J. Haughton of the Old North church, Rev. Henry C. Aylord, of the Old South church, Rev. Frank E. Butler of the Union church, South Weymouth; Rev. Robert H. Cochrane of the Union church, East Braintree; Rev. Edward Norton and Rev. E. N. Hardy, Quincy.

A Cooperative Store.

G. B. Bates, A. G. Coffin, and other socialists of Quincy are interested in the Massachusetts cooperative association, which filed a certificate of incorporation at the office of the secretary of state at Augusta, Maine, on Friday.

The company was organized at Lewiston, Maine, "for the purpose of creating and distributing wealth by cooperative methods." If the ideas of the promoters are carried out there is no doubt that the result will be interesting.

The association intends to open a grocery and provision store in this city to be conducted on the cooperative plan, and in such a way that every purchaser at the store will be paid for buying there. In this way the promoters intend to "distribute wealth" as is claimed in the certificate of incorporation.

To become a purchasing member a $25 investment will be required and a fee of $1. Five per cent. interest will be paid on the 25 dollar investment, besides the rebate on purchases. The $25 can be withdrawn at any time by forfeiting the privileges of membership.

Mr. J. S. Clark, who has been connected with the Rochdale stores in England is president of the Massachusetts cooperative association and will probably start the Quincy store.

May Import Italians.

There is no change in the strike situation in Quincy today. The quarry men are standing firm in their refusal to return to work unless they are given an eight-hour day with nine hours pay.

No attempt has been made as yet by the quarry owners to operate their quarries with non-union labor, although there was a rumor Saturday that a large gang of Italians were to be imported to work in the quarries.

A quarryman is not what is called a skilled laborer, and therefore the quarry owners do not anticipate much difficulty in obtaining men should they decide to operate their quarries.

RAILWAY MAPS.

A Disgruntled Passenger's Comments on the Straight Line Variety.

"Look at that," said an ill natured passenger, pointing to a large map on the wall of the railway station. "Isn't that an abominable fraud?"

"What's the matter with it?" asked his mild companion.

"Look how it is distorted," said the other. "There is a map of a railway system from Chicago to New York. It is made to appear as following a straight line between these two cities, and yet on the map it appears to pass through every large town within 500 miles of that line.

"Just notice that towns like Cincinnati and Cleveland are so misplaced as to appear only a few miles apart, and Nashville, Tenn., is pulled 500 miles from its real location. I wonder they have not transported New Orleans a thousand miles northeast, so as to bring it on the line of their railway fraud.

"Congress ought to take hold of this fake," he continued, "and punish heavily every railroad that issues a distorted map."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Sir Boyle Roche's Bulls.

Sir Boyle Roche was the father of "bulls." It was he that asserted that "the best way to avoid danger is to meet it plump." At another time in conveying a warm invitation to a friend he remarked, "I hope, my lord, if ever you come within a mile of my house that you'll stay there all night."

He may have been the fool of the Grattan parliament, but there was a great deal of native shrewdness hidden away behind all his foolishness. To Curran when the latter once exclaimed in the midst of a debate that he needed aid from no one and could be "guardian of his own honor" Sir Boyle instantly interjected his sarcastic congratulations to the honorable member on his possession of a sinecure. But possibly the gem of his rhetoric was the picture which he conjured up on one occasion to bring home to his hearers the excesses of the French revolutionary mob:

"Here perhaps, sir, the murderous marshal law men (Marseilleise) would break in, cut us to mincemeat and throw our bleeding heads on that table to stare us in the face."—London Express.

Foods to Avoid.

It is well to refuse the sausage brought to your breakfast table if it is stale and to refrain from using the cream in your coffee if it is the least bit sour. Otherwise you run the risk of becoming blind.

Some foods, it is said, are most injurious to the sight. "A case was brought under the notice of an eye specialist," says The Dioptic Review, "in which the eyes of a whole family were affected by eating rabbit pie. In each instance the patient had become afflicted with a peculiar defect of vision that is technically known as 'failure of accommodation.' Stale sausage and sour cream cause a weakening of the sight known as 'amblobia.' Blindness resulting from eating tainted fish has been found almost impossible to cure, and quinine is often responsible for some persons' half blind condition. This drug affects the optic nerve in a manner that sometimes ends in blindness." It might be added that alcohol occasionally makes people "blind."

GARNITURE OF FLOWERS.

Skirt, Bodice and Coiffure Ornaments In Attractive Styles.

Artificial blooms are once more in favor for ball and evening gowns. When used on the skirt, they are mostly disposed in close set rows without foliage above the hem or they head flounces and ruches at the foot. When the simulated tunics appear on the skirt, these are often outlined with garlands of flowers and foliage. Very large flowers in trails, with leaves almost as big, fall at the side, and even the bodice bouquets have grown larger. But these flowers are made in the softest and most beautiful fabrics, such as silk, muslin and chiffon, the petals often outlined with rhinestones.

Artificial flower ornament sometimes takes the form of a single large blossom with a pendent trail of buds and small leaves. Roses of a bright shade of emerald green do such duty when the same flower is repeated in the hair of the wearer, just two small bright green roses being worn at the left side of the coiffure, which is low at the back, arranged in a big, loose coil. Green roses are, of course, not justified by nature, but they are undoubtedly novel and strike a decorative note on either a white or black dress.

Other flowers not justified by horticulture are roses made of gold tinsel, and a very pretty effect is gained by a small wreath of these leaves with two blossoms at one side, the result being specially admirable when the hair is dark. Wreaths of green leaves in the hair are also favorites of fashion, and these usually terminate at one side by a bow and pendent ends of black velvet and at the other by a diamond ornament.

The manner of using floral garniture for the corsage appears in the cut. An effective and pretty arrangement suitable for a young lady is composed of delicate natural shadings of small convolvulas with clusters of light green velvet box foliage, while the becoming hair wreath is made of the same flowers and is suitable for either high or low coiffure.

More unique is the design in black and white marguerites forming a complete trimming for the corsage, fastened on the left side with a bunch of black marguerites and a knot of white and nile green panne ribbon. The accompanying hair ornament includes two knots of marguerites attached with loops of the panne ribbon.

dictions may be made about it. Second is a large picture hat, which also holds its own firmly among the new styles. This is of fine black sequins underlined with folds of black tulle and a long ostrich feather falling over the brim.

Third is a toque of the fashionably wide flat shape, formed of cream roses and foliage softened with lace. Velvet ribbon and a very decorative buckle at the back give the finishing touches.

ETRURIA IS SAFE

Disabled Cunarder Put Into Port on the Island of Fayal

Morta, Azores, March 10.—The Cunard line steamer Etruria anchored here at 6 o'clock last evening. All on board are well. She had a comparatively uneventful passage, except for the breakdown which occurred during the dinner hour of Feb. 26. When this occurred the Etruria had only just finished speaking by wireless telegraphy with the Cunard line steamship Umbria. After the accident was discovered the Etruria called the Umbria for one hour, but without success.

Upon examination it was found that the ship's propeller had broken off outside the tube, and that the rudder had been carried away by the propeller.

The passengers of the Etruria were satisfied they were in no danger, and they praise the conduct of the captain and crew of the vessel. After the accident the passengers amused themselves with the usual deck sports, and concerts were held in the first and second cabins. Only those who were anxious concerning business matters chafed at the unavoidable delay.

The Etruria will wait here for the arrival of the Elbe, which left Southampton for Horta Saturday. The Elbe will carry the Etruria's passengers to England. The Etruria will then be towed home by the two tugs which are now on their way out from Liverpool for this purpose.

Stars and Stripes Flying

Tien Tsin, March 10.—The mission property here which is in dispute between the French and American consuls is less than two acres in extent. It borders the American mission property, and was previously occupied by undesirable Chinamen. The French consul stopped building operations on the disputed property. The French flag has not been raised over the property. The American consul here, Mr. Ragsdale, is maintaining a firm attitude and caused American flags to be hoisted over the property in question. The affair is in the hands of the French and American ministers at Pekin.

Cause For Chinese Worriment

Pekin, March 10.—Chinese officials are greatly disturbed over the conditions at Jehol, about 100 miles northeast of Pekin, where bandit soldiery have captured a priest. An official of the foreign office declares that the Russians have already dispatched 500 troops to Jehol from the Manchurian border. The trouble began over the settlement of claims of native Christians, and it resulted in rioting between the Christians and the non-Christians. Brigands took advantage of these conditions to plunder the country, and the Russian telegraphic connections were incidentally cut.

The Lynn Carpenters' Boycott

Lynn, Mass., March 10.—A temporary settlement of the difficulty existing between Carpenters' union 68 of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the Independent Carpenters' union was reached yesterday after an all night conference. The plan is that the Independent union members shall apply for a charter as a separate union under the brotherhood. Should this basis of settlement be ratified the boycott now in force against the Independent Carpenters' union will be raised.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER VI.

ON the afternoon of the 23d of July Michael Strogoff and Nadia were not more than thirty versts from Ichim. Suddenly Michael caught sight of a carriage, scarcely visible among the clouds of dust, preceding them along the road. As his horses were evidently less fatigued than those of the other traveler, he would not be long in overtaking it. This was neither a tarantass nor a telga, but a post berlin, all over dust and looking as if it had made a long journey. The postilion was thrashing his horses with all his might and only kept them at a gallop by dint of abuse and blows. The berlin had certainly not passed through Novo-Saimsk and could only have struck the Irkutsk road by some less frequented route across the steppe.

Michael's first thought on seeing this berlin was to get in front of it and arrive first at the relay, so as to make sure of fresh horses. He said a word to his driver, who soon brought him up with the berlin.

As he passed a head was thrust out of the window of the berlin.

He had no time to see what it was like, but as he dashed by he distinctly heard this word uttered in an imperious tone:

"Stop!"

But he did not stop. On the contrary, the berlin was soon distanced by the tarantass.

It now became a regular race, for the horses of the berlin, no doubt excited by the sight and pace of the others, recovered their strength and kept up for some minutes. The two carriages were hidden in a cloud of dust. From this cloud issued the cracking of whips, mingled with excited shouts and exclamations of anger.

Nevertheless the advantage remained with Michael, which might be very important to him if the relay were poorly provided with horses. Two carriages were perhaps more than the postmaster could provide for, at least in a short space of time.

Half an hour after the berlin was left far behind, looking only a speck on the horizon on the steppe.

It was 8 o'clock in the evening when Michael and his companion arrived at the posthouse in Ichim.

The news was worse and worse with regard to the invasion.

Here had arrived just a short time before two men.

The one was English, the other French. Both were tall and thin, but the latter was sallow, as are the southern provencals, while the former was ruddy like a Lancashire gentleman. The Anglo-Norman, formal, cold, grave, parsimonious of gestures and words, appearing only to speak or gesticulate under the influence of a spring operating at regular intervals. The Gaul, on the contrary, was lively and petulant, expressed himself with lips, eyes, hands, all at once, having twenty different ways of explaining his thoughts, whereas his interlocutor seemed to have only one immutably stereotyped on his brain.

The strong contrast they presented would at once have struck the most superficial observer, but a physiognomist, regarding them more closely, would have defined their particular characteristics by saying that if the Frenchman was "all eyes," the Englishman was "all ears."

In fact, the visual apparatus of the one had been singularly perfected by practice. The sensibility of its retina must have been as instantaneous as that of those conjurers who recognize a card merely by a rapid movement in cutting the pack or by the arrangement only of marks invisible to others. The Frenchman, indeed, possessed in the highest degree what may be called "the memory of the eye."

The Englishman, on the contrary, appeared especially organized to listen and to hear. When his aural apparatus had been once struck by the sound of a voice, he could not forget it, and after ten or even twenty years he would have recognized it among a thousand. His ears, to be sure, had not the power of moving as freely as those of animals who are provided with large auditory flaps; but, since scientific men know that human ears possess, in fact, a very limited power of movement, we should not be far wrong in affirming that those of the said Englishman became erect and turned in all directions while endeavoring to gather in the sounds in a manner apparent only to the naturalist. It must be observed that this perfection of sight and hearing was of wonderful assistance to these two men in their vocation, for the Englishman acted as correspondent for The Daily Telegraph and the Frenchman as correspondent of the—of what newspaper or of what newspapers he did not say, and when asked he replied in a jocular manner that he corresponded with "his cousin Madeleine." This Frenchman, however, beneath his careless surface was wonderfully shrewd and sagacious. Even while speaking at random, perhaps the better to hide his desire to learn, he never forgot himself. His loquacity even helped him to conceal his thoughts, and he was perhaps even more discreet than his confrere of The Daily Telegraph.

It is needless to say that these two men were devoted to their mission in the world—that they delighted to throw themselves in the track of the most unexpected intelligence; that nothing terrified or discouraged them from succeeding; that they possessed the imperturbable sang froid and the genuine intrepidity of men of their calling. Enthusiastic jockeys in this steeplechase, this hunt after information, they leaped hedges, crossed rivers, sprang over fences with the ardor of pure blooded racers who will run "a good first" or die.

Their journals did not restrict them with regard to money, the surest, the most rapid, the most perfect element of information known to this day. It must also be added, to their honor, that neither the one nor the other ever looked or listened at the walls of private life and that they only exercised their vocation when political or social interests were at stake. In a word, they made what has been for some years called "the great political and military reports."

It will be seen in following them that they had generally an independent mode of viewing events and, above all, their consequences, each having his own way of observing and appreciating. The object to be obtained being of adequate value, they never failed to expend the money required.

The French correspondent was named Alcide Jolivet. Harry Blount was the name of the Englishman. The dissimilarity of their characters, added to a certain amount of jealousy, which generally exists between rivals in the same calling, might have rendered them but little sympathetic. However, they did not avoid one another, but endeavored rather to exchange with each other the news of the day. They were two sportsmen, after all, hunting on the same grounds, in the same preserve. That which one missed might be advantageously secured by the other, and it was to their interest to meet and converse together.

From these two correspondents Michael learned that the town itself was menaced by the Tartar vanguard, and two days before the authorities had been obliged to retreat to Tobolsk. There was not an officer nor a soldier left in Ichim.

He had been fortunate in distancing the berlin.

Only three horses were in a fit state to be immediately harnessed. The others had just come in worn out from a long stage.

The postmaster gave the order to put to.

As the two correspondents intended to stop at Ichim, they had not to trouble themselves to find means of transport and therefore had their carriage put away.

In ten minutes Michael was told that his tarantass was ready to start.

"Good," said he.

Then, turning to the two reporters, he said:

"Well, gentlemen, since you remain at Ichim, I wish you success in the prosecution of your mission."

"What, Mr. Korpanoff," said Alcide Jolivet, "shall you not stop even for an hour at Ichim?"

"No, sir, and I also wish to leave the posthouse before the arrival of a berlin which I distanced."

"Are you afraid that the traveler will dispute the horses with you?"

"I particularly wish to avoid any difficulty."

"It is possible that we shall meet you again in a few days at Omsk," added Blount.

"It is possible," answered Michael, "since I am going straight there."

"Well, I wish you a safe journey, Mr. Korpanoff," said Alcide.

Almost immediately the sound of a carriage was heard outside, the door was flung open and a man appeared.

It was the traveler of the berlin, a military looking man, apparently about forty years of age, tall, robust in figure, broad shouldered, with a strongly set head and thick mustache meeting red whiskers. He wore a plain uniform. A cavalry saber hung at his side, and in his hand he held a short handled whip.

"Horses," he demanded, with the air of a man accustomed to command.

"I have no more disposable horses," answered the postmaster, bowing.

"I must have some this moment."

"It is impossible."

"What are those horses which have just been harnessed to the tarantass I saw at the door?"

"They belong to this traveler," answered the postmaster, pointing to Michael Strogoff.

"Take them out!" said the traveler in a tone which admitted of no reply.

Michael then advanced.

"These horses are engaged by me," he said.

"What does that matter? I must have them. Come, be quick; I have no time to lose."

"I have no time to lose either," replied Michael, endeavoring to be calm, but restraining himself with difficulty.

Nadia was near him, calm also, but secretly uneasy at a scene which it would have been better to avoid.

"Enough!" said the traveler.

Then, going up to the postmaster:

"Let the horses be taken out of the tarantass and put into my berlin," he exclaimed, with a threatening gesture.

The postmaster, much embarrassed, did not know whom to obey and looked at Michael, who evidently had the right to resist the unjust demands of the traveler.

Michael hesitated an instant. He did not wish to make use of his podorojna, which would have drawn attention to him, and he was most unwilling either by giving up his horses to delay his journey, and yet it was important not to engage in a struggle which might compromise his mission.

The two reporters looked at him, ready to support him should he appeal to them.

"My horses will remain in my carriage," said Michael, but without raising his tone more than would be suitable for a plain Irkutsk merchant.

"Is it so?" he said in a rough voice. "You will not give up your horses to me?"

"No," answered Michael.

"Very well, then they shall belong to whichever of us is able to start. Defend yourself, for I shall not spare you!"

So saying the traveler drew his saber from its sheath, and Nadia threw herself before Michael.

Blount and Alcide Jolivet advanced toward him.

"I shall not fight," said Michael quietly, folding his arms across his chest.

"You will not fight?"

"No."

"Not even after this?" exclaimed the traveler, and before any one could prevent him he struck Michael's shoulder with the handle of the whip. At this insult Michael turned deadly pale. His hands moved convulsively, as if he would have knocked the brute down. But by a tremendous effort he mastered himself. A duel! It was more than a delay; it was perhaps the failure of his mission. It would be better to lose some hours. Yes, but to swallow this affront!

"Will you fight now, coward?" repeated the traveler, adding coarseness to brutality.

"No," answered Michael, without moving, but looking the other straight in the face.

The effect produced on the reporters by this incident was not to Michael's advantage. Their discomfiture was visible. How could this strong young man allow himself to be struck like that and not demand satisfaction for such an insult? They contented themselves with bowing to him and retired.

A moment afterward the noise of wheels and the cracking of a whip showed that the berlin, drawn by the tarantass' horses, was driving rapidly away from the posthouse.

Nadia, unmoved, and Michael, still quivering, remained alone in the room.

The courier of the czar, his arms crossed over his chest, was seated motionless as a statue. However, a color which could not have been the blush of shame had replaced the paleness on his manly countenance.

Nadia did not doubt that powerful reasons alone could have allowed him to suffer so great a humiliation from such a man.

Then, going up to him as he had come to her in the police station at Nijni Novgorod, she said:

"Your hand, brother."

And at the same time her hand with an almost maternal gesture wiped away a tear which sprung to her companion's eyes.

Babe's Head In Sewer Trap

Worcester, Mass., March 10.—Margaret Ambrosaytis, aged 30, a Polish domestic, was arrested last night on a charge of infanticide, after a tenant in her home had discovered the head of an infant in a sewer trap. The body could not be found. Joseph Savage, who, the girl said, was the father, was held.

COUNSEL OF FUNSTON

Would Have Americans Think All They Want

BUT KEEP MOUTHS SHUT

Has Not a Very Exalted Opinion of Aguinaldo—Rudyard Kipling Contributes an Opinion Regarding American Tactics In the Philippines

New York, March 10.—As if talking to a group of comrades in his own tent, and with an occasional word of blunt wit that popped out like a Mauser bullet, Brigadier General Funston stood Saturday night before the members and guests of the Lotos club and related his views and his experiences in the Philippines.

To begin with, he said, in no war has any nation ever shown such forbearance, such patience and charity as the American army in the war with the Filipinos, but the American people did not seem, all of them at least, to realize this. Many had the idea that the Filipino leaders were patriots, like our forefathers, but this was not true. He then recited the incident of Antonio Luna, who was murdered by Aguinaldo because Aguinaldo feared he would become the dictator.

"And Aguinaldo admitted it to me," said General Funston. "And is that the act of a great man like our George Washington?"

General Funston spoke with great earnestness in denunciation of the men in the United States who are keeping the war in progress in the islands.

"I don't want to be brutal," he said. "I don't want to say anything that I shall go away from here regretting, but I would rather see any one of these men here in this country tried for treason and hanged till they were dead than to see the humblest soldier in the United States army lying dead on the field of battle."

"Think what you please about the justice or the propriety of taking the Philippines and of holding them, think as you please, but for heaven's sake keep your mouths shut until we get this war settled and the sovereignty of the United States settled, and then get together in this country and pull hair and fight it out among yourselves."

In a simple but intensely dramatic way he told the story of the capture of Aguinaldo.

"When I got into the house and went up to Aguinaldo," he said, "the gentleman was very mellow, indeed. But he grew a little hysterical. 'Oh,' he said to me, 'certainly this is a joke sir; all a joke, isn't it?'

"'Not much, old man,' I said. 'It's the real thing,' and the little fellow nearly collapsed."

The general declared the Filipinos could not be classed with the Cubans, and that if the United States troops should now leave the Philippine islands there would be half a dozen different kinds of civil wars there and the world would hold the United States responsible for them.

General Funston said he talked with Aguinaldo on their way back to Manila on the warship Vicksburg and that Aguinaldo told him that neither Dewey nor anyone else had promised him anything, but that he and his people had faith in the Americans.

Contribution From Kipling

London, March 10.—Rudyard Kipling has written a letter to a London paper which is attracting much attention. Dealing with the Philippines, Kipling replied to a Shanghai correspondent, who drew his attention to American methods in those islands, as follows:

"All you say about the Philippines, the conflict there between the Americans, military and civil, and the pigheadedness of the military and their habit of setting 'bulldogs to catch rabbits,' is immensely cheering to me, because it is precisely what we are doing in South Africa.

"You cannot persuade a big country full of prosperity that it does not know everything. When it has lost a few thousand sons and a few millions sterling, it may, if unusually enlightened, begin to understand that it has taken hold of the wrong end of the stick. But that is a great deal to hope for and, probably, will not come in our time.

"I am very glad to learn, on your showing, that the American seems to be 'constitutionally incapable of admitting himself wrong and frankly putting himself in the right,' because I did not like to think of the Americans as any more logical than ourselves.

"Of course, what a new country wants is a high-toned despot of unlimited powers and absolute integrity. But as peoples, we must just muddle along in the expensive, wasteful, butcherly fashion that attends our methods."

On Maiden Trip to Boston

Fears of a Flood

Saratoga, N. Y., March 10.—There was a heavy rainstorm in this section yesterday, which threatens to bring about another flood in the low Adirondacks and in the upper Hudson river valley.

Mortgagees' Sale of Real Estate.

BY Virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by John C. Rochford of Newton, Mass., to George F. Spooner of Quincy, Mass., dated May 15th, 1901, and recorded with Norfolk County Deeds, Libro 897, Folio 145, and assigned by said George F. Spooner to John Harkins and William Harkins, both of said Quincy, by deed dated January 18th, 1902, and recorded with Norfolk County Deeds, Libro 913, Folio 80, will be sold at public auction, on the premises hereinafter described, for breach of the condition of said mortgage, and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, on THURSDAY, the twenty-seventh day of March, 1902, at four o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed and therein described substantially as follows, viz:

A certain parcel of land situated in said Quincy, with the buildings thereon, being Lot No. 4 on a plan drawn by H. T. Whitman, dated May 1901, and recorded in Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, Libro 897, Folio 142, and bounded and described as follows: Southeasterly by Revere Road, formerly called Canal street, seventy-six (76) feet; southwesterly by lots 2 and 3 on said plan, fifty-five and 25-100 (55.25) feet; westerly by said lot 2, thirty-four (34) feet; southwesterly again by said lot 2, thirty-six (36) feet; northwesterly by lot 1 on said plan, forty and 75-100 (40.75) feet; northeasterly by land of F. W. Crane, one hundred and twenty and 32-100 (120.32) feet, and containing according to said plan, six thousand, eight hundred and forty-five (6,845) square feet of land, be any or all of said measurements more or less, or however otherwise bounded or described.

The above described premises will be sold subject to a prior mortgage given by said John C. Rochford to George H. Brown, Trustee, for eight thousand dollars, of which thirty-three hundred dollars only have been advanced and paid, this mortgage is dated May 15th, 1901, and recorded with Norfolk County Deeds, Libro 897, Folio 143, and also subject to all unpaid taxes and assessments, if any, and to all other encumbrances whatsoever.

Three hundred dollars of the purchase money to be paid by the purchaser in cash at the time and place of the sale. Other terms will be made known at the time and place of the sale.

JOHN HARKINS,
WILLIAM HARKINS,
Assignees and present holders of the above Mortgage.

THOUSANDS QUIT WORK

FAST FREIGHT BUSINESS

In Many of New England's Larger Cities Will Be Affected by Decision of Expressmen to Join the Strikers —May Involve Ten Thousand Men

Boston, March 11.—After nearly six weeks of skirmishing the dreaded labor war between the organized teamsters, freight and express handlers of Boston and the two great railroad corporations, the New York, New Haven and Hartford and the New York Central and Hudson River railroad, the latter locally known as the Boston and Albany, broke out yesterday. If powerful agencies are not speedily invoked to complete peace the struggle will not only have a far-reaching effect, but will be greatly to the detriment of the business interests of Boston and New England. The strike, which is a sympathetic one, adready involves nearly 8000 men in and about Boston, every one of whom has been accustomed to handle each day many hundred pounds of freight and express matter.

Stopping work because of the discharge of union men who refused to handle non-union moved freight the various organizations now on strike made every effort yesterday to extend their sphere of influence to affiliated bodies, while the corporations spent the day in trying to refill the vacant places and receive and dispatch goods offered them. Both met with some measure of success. Today the local employes of the great express companies, the Adams and the New York and Boston, two companies which handle practically all the fast freight in southern New England, will refuse to work, and join the strike, while several smaller bodies of organized labor, such as the brewery teamsters, the piano movers, as well as freight handlers in East Boston will be idle.

On the other hand the N. Y., N. H. and H., after succeeding yesterday in moving considerable freight by the aid of Italians, will augment the force today and the Boston and Albany expects to have a large number of new men working in its freight sheds. The situation, while devoid of sensational incidents or lawlessness, is one of stubborn determination on both sides, and the business interests of the city are viewing it with great anxiety.

As yet the strike has not extended to the Boston and Maine system on the north side of the city, whose freight-handling men are nearly all members of the Knights of Labor organizations, while those who are out are all members of the American Federation of Labor. It seems probable, however, despite the efforts of the business men and the state and city authorities, that the strike will spread until it involves something over 10,000 handlers of merchandise, in which case it will rank as one of the great labor fights in this part of the country.

The action of the expressmen late yesterday afternoon in joining the freight handlers was one of the features of the day, and will quickly effect the fast freight business with nearby business centres like Worcester, Springfield, Hartford, New Haven, Providence, Fall River and New Bedford. The railroads, however, have not yet notified their receiving agents outside the city of any inability to handle freight or express matter, and are making every effort to take care as usual of everything offered them.

The contest is being closely watched on all sides by the labor leaders, who yesterday appealed once more to the state board of arbitration; by the city authorities, who have used every endeavor to heal the breach, and by the business men, who held a rather fruitless conference with the mayor and some of the strike leaders yesterday afternoon.

Concord, N. H., March 11.—Local freight agents have been advised from Boston not to accept shipments for that point except at owners' risk as to delivery.

Conditions Serious at Lynn

Lynn, Mass., March 11.—The strike in Boston may have the effect here of closing all the shoe factories and give many thousands of workers an enforced holiday. Teamsters' union No. 42, which includes drivers, hack and cabmen, freight handlers and longshoremen, held a meeting last night and strongly advocated a sympathetic strike. A promise to assist Boston strikers was formally made. Lynn manufacturers ship all their products through Boston and 2500 cases of shoes are already held up in the Lynn freight houses.

PRINCE EXTENDS THANKS

In His Last Speech In Public Before Returning to Germany

New York, March 11.—Prince Henry and his party returned from Philadelphia last evening. They were taken to the steamship Deutschland, on which the prince is to sail for Europe today. On the steamship the prince gave a dinner to those who have been his hosts while he was in New York. There were no speeches. About 9 o'clock the party returned to New York and attended the Irving Place theatre. In an address before the Union league at Philadelphia Prince Henry said:

"Gentlemen, this is probably the last opportunity I will have during my visit to the United States to speak in public, and I am not sorry that this should be so. What I am going to communicate to you here I am saying before the world. There has been absolutely no secret object in view connected with my mission to your country. Should any of you read or hear anything to the contrary, I authorize you herewith to flatly contradict it.

"I was told before leaving my home to open my eyes as well as my ears as wide as possible, to speak as little as I could. In this latter instance I am afraid my mission is a failure. I saw many more things than many of you may be aware of. I equally heard a great many things, among others many kind words of individuals as well as the shouts of welcome of thousands of your countrymen.

"What I express in your presence I express in the presence of your nation—my heartfelt thanks for the cordial reception and good feeling I met with during my stay in your country. It will be my duty to inform his majesty, the emperor, of this fact. I am homeward bound tomorrow. It would be wrong of me to say I am sorry to go home, but at the same time I feel sorry to leave a country in which I have met with so much kindness and hospitality. Let me add, gentlemen; let us try and be friends."

Trefile Dauphin, a grocery clerk, died of smallpox at Woonsocket, R. I. Dauphin's death is the sixth out of more than 200 cases since the outbreak of the malady in that city.

Status of Norfolk Strike

Norfolk, March 11.—The Central Labor union of Norfolk stood by the strikers yesterday in their determination to stay out as long as the condition requiring them to go back to work with non-union men is in force, notwithstanding the decison of the board of arbitration named by the Chamber of Commerce. The Central Labor body refused to raise the boycott against the railway company. The placing of railway torpedoes on the car tracks, the smashing of car windows and general destruction of the track was the feature of disturbances last night.

Ireland Wants Statesmanship

London, March 11.—Thomas W. Russell, M. P., has written a letter to The Times, which is published this morning, in which he strongly protests against the agitation to proclaim the United Irish league. Mr. Russell declares the whole country to be absolutely without crime. He contends that Ireland wants statesmanship and not coercion. Mr. Russell says the people of Connaught are living under conditions of misery which are the most appalling in Europe.

Indians Breeding Trouble

Victoria, B. C., March 11.—B. L. Kener, the Hudson Bay company's manager at Fort George, has arrived at Quesnelle and reports that the Indians are endeavoring to take possession of the fort. Attorney General Eberts forwarded instructions that several specials proceed to the scene of the trouble and take such steps as may be necessary to quell the disturbance and punish the Indians.

Charges Against Minister Wu

Pekin, March 11.—A prominent Manchurian censor has memorialized the throne for the removal of Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese minister to the United States. The censor asserts that Wu Ting Fang corruptly retained, ostensibly for repairs to the Chinese legation at Washington, $80,000 of the Tien Tsin silver refunded by the American government.

Tombs Boarders Vaccinated

New York, March 11.—Three hundred and nine-two prisoners in the tombs were vaccinated last night as a result of the discovery of a case of smallpox in the prison. The more prominent prisoners vaccinated were Albert T. Patrick, Roland B. Molineux, Florence Burns and Joseph W. Blondin.

Russia Yielding to Pressure

London, March 11.—Yielding to China's persistence, the Pekin correspondent of The Times cables: Russia now undertakes to withdraw from Manchuria within 18 months of the signature of the proposed convention. China still insists upon withdrawal within a year.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

BLONDIN INDICTED

Four Counts Charging Him With Murder of His Wife

Cambridge, Mass., March 11.—The grand jury of Middlesex county yesterday reported an indictment in four counts against Joseph W. Bondin, charging him with the murder of Margaret E. Blondin, his wife, at Chelmsford, during April of last year. The report was submitted to Judge Hardy, who is holding superior court here.

The jurors had been called in special session to indict Blondin, if such was called for by the evidence, in order that he might be extradicted to Massachusetts from New York city, where he is now under arrest. Now that the indictment has been found, steps will be taken at once to secure the presence of the defendant in Middlesex county, where the trial on the charge of murder will be held.

The indictment is comprehensive, setting forth the various ways in which it were possible under the circumstances for Blondin to have killed his wife. Each count alleges that the crime was committed in Chelmsford, and on April 27, 1901, which is the day on which Mrs. Mary Hannigan of Boston says she saw Mrs. Blondin in her house in that city.

Seeking Congressional Honors

Boston, March 11.—The appointment of Mr. Moody to fill Mr. Long's place as secretary of the navy has precipitated a contest for congressional honors in the district which has been pending for nearly two years between three very wealthy aspirants. The avowed candidates are George von L. Meyer, at present ambassador to Italy; Captain Augustus P. Gardner, a former state senator and son-in-law of Senator Lodge, and E. B. Shaw, a former state treasurer. These men are well known throughout the state.

Death Viewed With Suspicion

Rockland, Me., March 11.—The people of Vinal Haven are very much in earnest in the case of 5-year-old Leland Whitington, whose death is alleged to have been caused by harsh treatment, and they will consent to have the matter dropped only after the most thorough investigation. It is probable that the facts in the case will be placed before the grand jury today.

Sensational Charges Squelched

Fall River, Mass., March 11.—At a meeting of the city government yesterday Arthur B. Brayton was elected city clerk. Two members, previous to the election of Brayton, made charges to the effect that they had been approached and offered money to vote for Brayton. They asked for a committee of investigation, but their request was refused.

Shooting Prompted By Jealousy

Providence, March 11.—Vladislav Piasecsky, a Pole, aged 22, last night shot Antonina Kuszehska, a woman of his own race, aged 30. Jealousy was the cause. The man fired five shots, two of which only took effect, one striking the woman in the back of the neck and the other in the left elbow. She will recover. The man was locked up.

Brought Disease From Canada

Webster, Mass., March 11.—The first case of smallpox here for 20 years showed up yesterday, the patient being a man just returned from a three weeks' visit to Canada. He was taken ill last week and since then two of his children have attended school and two others have worked in the mill. Wholesale vaccination will begin.

Sheriff Waited For Him

Concord, N. H., March 11.—Joseph Russell completed a five years' term in the state prison yesterday, having been sentenced for burglary. He was immediately rearrested by Sheriff Locke of Belknap county, where he is wanted on a charge of breaking and entering at Tilton.

A New Strike Feature

Providence, March 11.—The pickets acting in behalf of the weavers on strike at Olneyville were armed with cameras yesterday and took snapshots of the non-union weavers as they came out of the mills. It is said that the photographs will be retained for future use.

Municipal Elections

Portland, Me., March 11.—There was little of interest in the city elections held in Maine yesterday. At Augusta and Belfast the Republican ticket was the only one in the field and at Biddeford the Citizens elected their entire ticket over the Independent Citizens.

Headless Body Washed Ashore

Ipswich, Mass., March 11.—The headless body of a man was washed up yesterday on Ipswich beach among some wreckage. Medical Examiner Bailey ordered the body buried, as identification was impossible. In the wreckage was part of a centreboard dory.

Verdict In Jennings Inquest

Keene, N. H., March 11.—The coroner's jury which inquired into the death of Mrs. Jennie Jennings gave a verdict yesterday that she died from injuries inflicted in a violent manner, inflicted apparently by her husband, Martin Jennings.

Taunton Schooner Missing

Boston, March 11.—Anxiety is felt for the schooner Bertha Dean, which sailed from Baltimore three weeks ago for this port. She has not been seen since leaving Delaware capes. The Dean belonged in Taunton and carried eight men.

METHUEN IS CAPTURED

British Suffer Heavy Casualties and Loss of Guns

ACCOMPLISHED BY DELAREY

Who Is Credited With Two Decisive Victories Within a Fortnight—Fears That Kitchener's Incomplete Accounts Have Not Told the Worst

London, March 11.—Lord Methuen is a prisoner in the hands of the Boers, under General Delarey. The fight in which General Methuen was captured occurred before dawn March 7, between Winburg and Lichtenburg, Orange River Colony. The British force numbered 1200 men. The Boers captured all the British baggage, and four pieces of artillery. General Methuen, who was wounded in the thigh, is retained as a prisoner. Three British officers and 38 men were killed. Five British officers and 72 men were wounded. One British officer and 200 men are missing.

Lord Kitchener's dispatches announcing the disaster to General Methuen's forces were read in both the house of lords and house of commons by Lord Roberts and Mr. Brodrick, respectively. They both paid tributes to General Methuen, the former expressing his appreciation of Methuen's success throughout the war.

The feeling of depression in the lobbies of the house of commons over the news of the disaster was very marked. The service members of the house expressed the opinion that it will necessitate sending fresh troops to the front, while the belief was widely expressed that the Boers will not fail to take advantage of General Methuen's prominence to hold him as a hostage for the safety of Commandant Kritzsinger and other Boer leaders now in the hands of the British.

Delarey, who has proved himself to be the most able of all the Boer generals, has gained a second decisive victory within a fortnight. His first victory was the capture of Von Donop's convoy, when the British casualties in killed, wounded and prisoners totalled 632, and he has now added to his laurels by the capture, for the first time throughout the campaign, of a prominent British general and by inflicting what is generally admitted to have been one of the worst reverses the British have suffered throughout the whole war.

It is supposed that Lord Methuen was marching with intention to avenge the capture of the Von Donop convoy. The newspaper correspondents in South Africa have not yet been allowed to describe the affair. The only additional details available are contained in a further dispatch from Lord Kitchener, which shows that the first confusion was caused by native boys with led horses who galloped through the mule convoy as the mule convoy was endeavoring to close on the ox convoy. The disorder among the mules communicated itself to the mounted troops, and the Boers, dressed in khaki and riding alongside the wagons, frustrated all the attempts of the British officers to rally their forces. Great confusion ensued among this portion of mounted troops, they and the mule wagons galloping three miles beyond the ox wagons, where they were cut off.

The force under General Delarey was almost entirely dressed in British uniforms. This made it impossible for the infantry to distinguish between their own men and the enemy when the mounted troops were driven in on them. The enemy numbered 1500 men. They had one 15-pounder and a pom-pom.

In a private telegram just received here Lord Kitchener adds: "I find Methuen has a fractured thigh, but he is reported to be doing well."

It is feared that Lord Kitchener's incomplete accounts have not told the worst, but among the newspapers and the public there is a tendency to accept Mr. Brodrick's advice to suspend judgment pending the receipt of details.

Distinguishing features of the editorials in the morning papers on this matter are, first the outburst of sympathy for General Methuen, which is quite extraordinary when it is remembered how he was assailed with hostile and angry criticism during the early stages of the war; and, second, the fierce denunciation of the Irish members of parliament, who indulged in hilarity when Mr. Brodrick, in the house of commons, read the dispatch announcing Lord Methuen's capture.

At the same time the papers fully admit the extreme gravity and even the humiliation to British prestige abroad involved in such a reverse inflicted by a body of Boers of equal numerical strength. It is recognized that it will certainly have the effect of prolonging Boer resistance for many months.

Row Smoothed Over

Berlin, March 11.—The dispute between Germany and Venezuela is nearing a settlement. The terms of this settlement are as yet a foreign office secret. They are, however, satisfactory to Germany, and Venezuela has apparently yielded without Germany's having made any direct threat or having had to do anything like sending an ultimatum.

Turner Safe In Kentucky

Frankfort, Ky., March 11.—Governor Beckham has declined to make requisition on the governor of Tennessee for the return of Leo Turner, owner of the notorious "Quarter House."

Lack of Organization

Pittsburg, March 11.—E. H. Heinsichs, editor of The Teamster, the national organ of the master team owners, published in Pittsburg, makes the following statement on the Boston strike: "The team drivers' strike in Boston is merely the forerunner of similar occurences all over the country and the cause of it I place mainly on the unfortunate condition of the teaming trade. The team owners lack organization and hence they are unable to deal with a strike. The trouble is the individual team owners in almost every city in this country makes his own price and runs his business without any organized system."

No Record of Promises

Washington, March 11.—Messrs. Payne and Grosvenor of the ways and means committee were among the president's callers yesterday and the Cuban reciprocity situation was discussed. To some of his other congressional visitors who talked with him yesterday regarding reciprocity, the president said there was difficulty in determining just what promises or representations were made to the Cuban delegates when they visited Washington. There was no record of any promise. The president expressed a desire for harmony.

Rosenthal's Modest Request

Chicago, March 11.—B. J. Rosenthal, chairman of the finance committee of the Olympian games, will leave here tomorrow to interest easterners in the big sports scheduled for 1904. While in the east Mr. Rosenthal will take the first steps toward asking congress for a $500,000 appropriation for the Olympian games in 1904. He will announce at that time that the promoters will ask the government to duplicate every dollar that Chicago gives.

Good Afternoon.

Prince Henry is reported to have been greatly interested in a shipyard at Philadelphia, but if he wanted to see an up-to-date shipyard he should have run out to Quincy while at Boston, and visited the Fore River plant.

The town of Weymouth with less than half the population of Quincy finds it necessary to appropriate the same amount for its poor department as does the city of Quincy. The comparison holds with other towns and cities, and speaks well for the thrift of Quincy people.

Congressman Moody who will succeed Hon. John D. Long as Secretary of the Navy in President Roosevelt's cabinet has spoken in Quincy on different occasions, and his ability is recognized. Massachusetts will lose a valuable member of Congress when he retires and no one has been named who will fill his place as acceptably, unless it be Hon. E. P. Shaw of Newburyport, the former State Treasurer.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Faithfulness is the explanation of many a successful career. Opportunity, ability and the friendly assistance that may be given all tend to further one's efforts, but the persistent, undaunted faithfulness to the labor in hand, in the very face of opposition and hindrance and obstacles, is that which conquers. The character that is developed by devotion to duty, in life's smallest undertakings, is being equipped for glorious achievements. Therein is found the secret of success. —Presbyterian.

☞We cannot help arriving finally at the conviction that a gentleman is the same the world over. It makes not a particle of difference that royalty steps in with its traditional rights, when two gentlemen meet they meet on common ground. This we take to be the explanation of the cordial relationship which has been established between the prince and the people of this country. He has no occasion to insist upon his prerogative, and we have had no occasion to assert our Republican simplicity. All concerned have been natural, and have conducted themselves entirely with reference to the instincts which control people of fine instinct. It has been a most agreeable episode and we are confident will remain so until the end.—New Haven Register.

☞The President is not well pleased with the way secrets leak out in Washington. There is nothing hidden that shall not be revealed, would be an appropriate motto for the national capital. There are never any surprises in legislation or diplomacy, the men whose business it is to know what is going on seldom failing to let the people know when there is "anything doing," not content to wait until it is done. The President proposes to stop the leaks in the cabinet, and on Friday, at the regular meeting, he requested the members not to talk to newspaper correspondents about matters under discussion at the semi-weekly meetings. It was thought best that the President himself make public such matters as he deemed proper should be made public. Hereafter the President will do this. A very proper method, but we fear there is a disappointment awaiting him, for the newspaper men have ways of learning things from heads of departments that are are past finding out.—Lynn Item.

☞Now that Prince Henry has ended his tour of duty in this country, there is the usual comment following such events. There are always suspicious people who see much that is below the surface, and so we have the statement, alleged to come from one who had fine opportunities to see what it all meant, that the Prince was here "sizing up" our defences, our navy, our army, our manufacturies, and everything else on which his royal brother is likely to desire a report. The fact that he brought with him the leading fighting men and skilled observers of his country, is used to make the tale seem a true one in the telling. It would indeed be a most unpleasant thing if the prince should use the kindness of his entertainers to their possible detriment, and yet we have all known of this sort of thing being done in diplomatic circles repeatedly. Jolly, unaffected Prince Henry, though, as a government spy, using his eyes and ears to get a line on the Americans, then to go home to try for our undoing —well, wouldn't that almost destroy your faith in mankind? Let us wait a little while and see if anything happens to confirm this view of the situation. Let us hope it is never confirmed.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞It is observed that in his speech in Boston, Secretary Long did not, like most of the speakers, say "Your Royal Highness." He did not address his speech to anybody in particular, as a matter of fact, but talked to the crowd, on the scene and through the newspapers.—New Bedford Standard.

Weymouth Town Meeting.

After its experience of late in the water department where a large shortage is reported, Weymouth voted at its adjourned town meeting on Monday to employ an accountant at an annual salary of $1,000.

The town also voted to combine the offices of Superintendent of streets and superintendent of water at a salary of $1,800.

It was voted to pay able bodied men employed on the streets $2 per day of eight hours, and police officer $2 per night. Firemen will receive thirty cents per hour for service at fires in addition to a salary of $10 per year.

The following appropriations were voted: Schools $46,000, highways and bridges $13,000, poor $14,000, police $4,000, fire department $6,000, new chemical engine, $1,500, payment of interest $5,000, printing and advertising $1,500, miscellaneous expenses $2,500, state aid $10,800, salaries of town officers $6,000, electric lights $7,829, water works $25,000, extending water main $3,000, hydrants and fountains $7,000.

City Will Ask Rebate.

Chief of Police Hayden had a heart to heart talk with his patrolmen at roll-call Monday night, in which he said the officers had become somewhat lax in reporting electric lights that were not burning, and that it was up to them in the future to keep a sharper lookout. Failure to promptly report all lights that were out would be sufficient grounds for suspension.

They were instructed that when they discovered a light out to step into some public telephone station and notify the Electric Light company at the latter's expense. They must also report the light to the Chief, as it was the Mayor's intention to keep a record of the number of hours the lights were out and demand a rebate.

In Other Towns.

At the annual town meeting last week Braintree elected a board of road commissioners, but at the adjourned meeting last evening it abolished the office, and the selectmen will be surveyors of highways as in the past.

Stoughton voted 521 to 286 against license, and elected J. H. Burnham, E. F. Leonard and C. Murphy as selectmen.

Death from Poison.

The death Saturday of Reno L., the one year old daughter of Thomas Niemi of Arthur street, from poisoning, was a sad one and should be a lesson to parents to be careful how they have poisons about where young children can get hold of them. In this case it seems the family had some strychnine in a paper on a shelf. While left alone, the child obtained possession of the package and swallowed some of the deadly poison. It died a half hour later in great agony.

Legalized Pickets.

Organized labor was out in force Monday at the State House at the hearing by the Committee on Labor on the bill of Representative Carey of Haverhill to legalize the posting of pickets by labor organizations in strikes or lockouts. Fully 600 were in the room, and delegates from 45 cities and towns outside of Boston came to plead with the committee on behalf of their various unions to report favorably the bill. There was no opposition, and the hearing closed,

PARISH MEETING.

The annual parish meeting of the First church was held Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The business was transacted expeditiously and harmoniously.

The Parish Assessrs, Messrs. Henry M. Faxon, Luther S. Anderson and James H. Stetson, and also the Treasurer, Mr. Anderson, reported in print a clear and concise form.

The Assessors reported all bills paid but outstanding notes of $1,400 and collectible pew rentals of $426.61. The outside benevolences amounted to $667.18 including $240 to City Hospital.

An increased amount is received each year from pledges, and the funds are as follows: Adams fund, $20,000; Caroline Wood fund, $500; Organ fund, $460.91; Sarah Vinal fund, $431.87.

The assessors recommend a steam heating plant for the church and chapel, as heating apparatus is necessary. They say two of the furnaces have apparently been in use for about half a century, and one for fourteen years.

A special committee consisting of Messrs. J. Franklin Faxon, Charles A. Howland, and the parish assessors, was appointed to consider and report in regard to new heating apparatus.

Hon. John O. Hall was moderator and the following officers were elected:

Parish Assessors,—Henry M. Faxon, Luther S. Anderson, and James H. Stetson.

Treasurer,—Luther S. Anderson.

Clerk,—George B. Dewson.

Collector,—George H. Field.

Trustees of Adams Fund,—Charles H. Porter, Charles A. Price and L. H. H. Johnson.

Salary of Pastor and supply of pulpit,	$3,100 00
Sexton,	400 00
Organist,	300 00
Collector, Treasurer and Clerk,	70 00

Want More Wages.

The coal handlers union of Quincy gave notice to their employes last week that they desired an increase in wages after March 15.

These men are now being paid as follows: Drivers of single teams, $1.75 per day; drivers of double teams, $11 per week; drivers of three horse teams, $12 per week.

The pay asked for under the new bill is that the drivers of single teams shall receive $2 per day; the drivers of double teams, $13 per week; and the drivers of three horse teams, $14 per week.

The employers have until March 15 to give their answer and the drivers say if not granted their demand they will strike.

Not Connected or Interested.

Editors of the Ledger:

Gentlemen: I noticed in your issue of yesterday the 10th, an article where my name was most prominently mentioned connecting me with a new enterprise in our city namely, the Quincy Cooperative Store of the Massachusetts Cooperative Association of America. In justice to the above association and myself and the public I wish to state that I am not connected or interested in any capacity either as an incorporator, officer or member of the above association. Respectively yours,

WAS ONE-SIDED.

Merrymounts Make It Three Straight on First Roll-Off.

The first roll-off between the bowling teams of the North Quincy club of Norfolk Downs and the Merrymount club of Wollaston was held Monday night at the alleys of the former. These two teams are tied for the first place and it was decided to have two roll offs, the team winning the most strings to have the championship.

The Merrymount club were on their metal Monday night, and when they entered the alleys of their opponents they were accompanied by twenty or more rooters for the Wollaston club.

The Merrymounts were in the pink of condition, and won three straight strings.

The North Quincys put up a good fight and tried hard to win at least one string, but luck was against them. The members of the North Quincy club were out in full force to cheer their team on but it was no use.

The second roll-off will be held tonight at the Merrymount alleys in Wollaston, and the North Quincys will try and serve the Merrymounts the same trick they were served with. If by any possibility the North Quincys should win three straight tonight, it means another roll off. The probabilities, however, are that the Merrymounts will at least win one string which will be enough to give them the championship.

Not a Socialistic Movement.

Rev. Edward Anderson writes to the Ledger to say that the projected cooperative store is in no way connected with the Socialistic movement. That they and their immediate interests are entirely separate.

THE IRON RAM MERRIMAC

A Fortieth Anniversary War Story

SMASHING THE WOODEN FLEET

March 8, 1862

[Copyright, 1902, by G. L. Kilmer.]

IN order to economize in time as well as in money the projector of the first iron ram fished the sunken hull of the United States war frigate Merrimac from the bottom of Elizabeth river. The conversion of the wooden frigate into an ironclad steam ram began by cutting the old hull down to within three feet of the water line. Both ends for several feet back were decked over level so that the weight of the superstructure and armament would keep them below water, or awash, as the sailors say. In the middle section, or about one-half of the ship, a sloping roof was laid of pitch pine and oak timbers twenty-four inches thick. This roof extended from the water line at an angle of 35 degrees to a point seven feet above the gun deck. At the ends of the vessel this timber shield was rounded so as to give the bow and stern guns a wide sweep in firing.

Over the timber shield of the ram was riveted an armor of iron plating in two layers and four inches thick. In motor power the old hulk was weak. Her engines had been condemned as worn out even before they passed through the fire which destroyed the frigate, and they afterward lay for weeks submerged in salt water.

But at her worst the Merrimac, or Virginia, as she was rechristened, was the best fighting machine afloat in southern waters that spring morning when she slipped from her ways, took a sousing if rather ungraceful plunge and righted herself with an air that seemed to convey to the model men-of-war of the world the saucy challenging salute: "I am here! Haul down your colors!"

Nothing was lacking to make the Merrimac a most terrible floating battery. She carried a 7 inch rifle each in bow and stern and three 9 inch smoothbores in each broadside. Last, but not least, for that was the main purpose of this unique creation, came the ram, or beak, a cast iron prow, projecting four feet from the bow, and when in action so completely submerged as to be out of sight of the enemy and cut below the water line in striking.

All the heavy armor of the ship was intended simply to shield men, engines, machinery and cannon while the vessel should be fighting her way toward an enemy to give a finishing thrust with that terrible beak, which weighed 1,500 pounds. When the Merrimac appeared in Hampton Roads, five Federal vessels lay just across the main channel—the thirty gun sloop Cumberland and the fifty gun frigate Congress at Newport News, and six miles east, off Fortress Monroe, the forty gun frigates Minnesota and Roanoke and the fifty gun frigate St. Lawrence. These were all wooden ships, and only the day before, in anticipation of a raid by the much belauded Merrimac, had been ordered to make all haste into the Potomac river for safety.

Hampton Roads is a waterway between the lower end of the Chesapeake bay and the mouth of the James river. The Confederates occupied the southern shore with batteries, and the northern shore was lined with forts and camps of the Federal army. The order for the Federal vessels anchored north of the channel within range of friendly guns to seek safety in flight had not taken effect when the ram hove in sight about noon the 8th of March. On board the Congress and Cumberland the sailors' freshly washed clothing was drying in the rigging, and their boats were swinging from their booms.

Heralded by a pillar of black smoke rising out of the mouth of Elizabeth river, a strange craft steamed from under the Confederate batteries and headed for Newport News in the direction of the Congress and Cumberland and the Federal shore batteries. These ships and batteries, aggregating 100 guns, opened on the stranger at three-fourths of a mile.

The broadsides of the thirty-two pounders of the Congress rolled harmlessly from the plated shield of the ram, which passed the frigate and moved slowly toward the Cumberland to get position to ram. She kept well out of the way of broadsides for a time, but at last the Cumberland's pivot rifle and forward guns bore on the target. A duel of fifteen minutes at 300 yards followed, and the shots of the ram cut the wooden war sloop with frightful effect. The tide was slack, with no wind, and the Cumberland was a still target for the steam ram. Entire gun's crews were annihilated by single shots.

At the end of fifteen minutes' firing the Merrimac headed for the Cumberland, striking her ponderous beak upon the wooden bow. The sloop immediately began to sink and carried the ram down with her until the iron beak which coupled the antagonists broke off. As the ram backed away she stood motionless for some time under the broadsides of the Cumberland, and the heroic sailors of the sloop, although they knew their ship was doomed, poured shots upon the Merrimac at close quarters till she fairly reeled under the blows on her plating.

Not a shot broke through the armor of the ram. The Cumberland continued sinking, and the commander of the ram hailed to know if she would surrender. "Never!" cried her captain, the gallant Morris. "We'll sink alongside." As the water rose the crew climbed higher and continued working the guns until at last their muzzles were in the water. The man who fired the last shot as a deathknell was mortally wounded in the act and one of eighty killed in that short fight. The flag was flying from the staff as the old ship rested on the bottom, with her rigging above the tide.

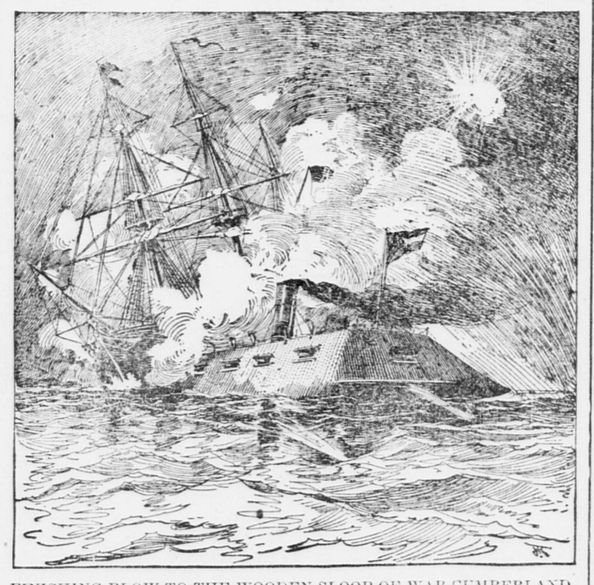

After finishing the Cumberland the Merrimac turned to the frigate Congress, which could only be reached by taking a tortuous channel that brought the ram under the guns of the Federal batteries on shore. If the batteries had had a few more heavy guns or more solid shot for the ones in position that day, there would have been no Monitor and Merrimac fight on March 9. At one time the ram's keel dragged in the mud while she was making a long turn 800 yards from the batteries. Well aimed shells tore away her davits, knocked the muzzle off one of the guns and stove two firing ports into one. The ram's commander, Admiral Buchanan, was struck by one of the shots, and a sailor who crawled out on deck to replace a flag shot away was instantly knocked into the sea.

While the Merrimac was fast under the guns on shore the Congress slipped her cable and moved into shoal water close under the friendly batteries. The Merrimac finally got free and steamed up close enough to land some shots in her. The sailors immediately ran out white flags, but the colors still floated at the mast.

A Confederate tug steamed up toward the Congress, but General Mansfield, the Federal commander on shore, ordered his riflemen to fire upon her for fear the guns of the Congress would be turned upon his batteries. The tug was driven off by this fire, and the heavy guns continued pounding the ram. At this Admiral Buchanan, believing that some of the missiles flying over the ram came from the Congress, ordered the helpless frigate to be riddled with incendiary shells. She was soon ablaze, and the survivors of the crew saved themselves by jumping into the water. Two southern officers lost their lives while working to rescue the wounded sailors of the burning ship.

One man killed and twenty wounded were the battle casualties on the ram. Two guns had lost their muzzles, the smokestack was gone, likewise one anchor; but the monster was a monster still. Eight guns and their crews were in fighting trim, and at dark she went back to her moorings to prepare for a finish fight with the rest of Uncle Sam's wooden fleet next day.

FINISHING BLOW TO THE WOODEN SLOOP OF WAR CUMBERLAND.

For the Daily Ledger.

AT NIAGARA FALLS.

Mrs. Skinner Writes of the Visit There of Prince Henry.

Niagara Falls, Canada.

Prince Henry of Prussia was here the fifth of March; his stay on British soil was brief, but long enough to convince him that his royal uncle's subjects were glad to see him and welcome him to the great Dominion.

At 3.45 P. M. the train from Buffalo bearing the royal party, steamed into the station at Niagara Falls, New York; the bands struck up "Die Wacht am Rhine," and crowds of people caught a glimpse of the Prince as he stood for a moment on the platform of the last coach.

The Mayor and committee of arrangements entered the car, greeted the royal guest, and handed him an engrossed copy of resolutions of welcome in behalf of the city.

A carriage and white horses was in waiting, which the Prince entered with Admiral Evans, Mayor Butler, and a member of the United States secret service.

The flag draped streets were lined with thousands of expectant people, a salute was fired, the right of way cleared, and cameras adjusted for a snap shot; but those who expected a royal procession were doomed to disappointment for the the Prince desired to be incog. Incog as the esteemed "Mr. Dooley" would put it is this,

Why, when four men are in a carriage and one is a Prince, and all are in civilian dress, if the carriage drives by with horses, "on the run," if you keep your eyes open you see four men, and as the prince is among 'em, of course you see the Prince—incog—a fleeting glimpse of royalty.

Preceded by a mounted guard the party drove rapidly to the Upper arch bridge, and at that point was immediately surrounded by the military escort and amidst the cheers of the people gathered there, the Prince and escort boarded the Ondiara, a special car provided for the Gorge route, and back of it were three trolley cars with others of the royal party.

Midway across the bridge the cars stopped, as this is the dividing line between the United States and Canada, the guards remaining on the New York side, not being allowed to cross to foreign soil while on military duty.

Awaiting the cars was the Canadian delegation who greeted the Prince and party, and in behalf of the Earl of Minto, governor general of Canada, welcomed the Prince and presented him a copy of the address from the legislature at Toronto, in which regrets were expressed that his stay would be so brief in a country where so many of his countrymen dwelt in peace and prosperity.

The greetings over, the cars crossed to Canada and were welcomed by throngs of people with cheers and flutter of handkerchiefs.

On arriving at Table Rock the Prince alighted, and first set foot on British soil. He exclaimed on viewing the Horse Shoe falls, "What a rush of waters!" "It has long been my desire to see Niagara."

As he viewed the scene, the Mayor caused his Royal Highness to open his eyes in astonishmennt, by telling him that last summer a woman went over the Falls in a barrel—a drop of 152 feet and came through alive.

The falls were not at their best; the day was cloudy, the sun even was—incog.

Back across the bridge to the New York side, and along the Gorge route sped the cars, beside the tossing, foaming waters of the lower rapids, to the great whirlpool, where the Prince once more alighted for a nearer view and expressed both in German and English his wonder and delight.

The party made a complete inspection of the great power house plant. At 5.50 they were aboard their train en route for Boston.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a seyere attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use or these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

A HOME FOR THE HORSE.

Stable That Boasts Not Only Artistic but Sanitary Points.

When a man goes to an architect or a builder and makes known the fact that he desires to build a home for himself, the first thing that he demands in the house which he proposes to erect is that it shall be constructed on sanitary lines. No matter how simple or how ornate the design, no matter how little or how great the cost, the prospective purchaser will insist, and properly enough, that the building shall be put together in such a way that it will be health protecting, not health destroying. He may not make this demand in so many words, but the demand is in evidence just the same, and the architect is forced willy nilly to pay heed to it.

How different it is, however, when a man wants to build an outhouse or a stable. As a rule, nothing is considered there but the cost, and anything in the way of a home is deemed good enough for the beast of burden. As a mere matter of economy the builder of a stable should realize that it is money well spent to provide a healthy house for his horse.

The plans shown in this article are designed to meet just such a requirement, and, while the stable cannot be called a cheap one in the ordinary sense of the word, yet the reader who builds as suggested will in the long run be forced to admit that his money was put out to good advantage. A stable can be built from these designs at a cost of from $1,000 to $1,500, according to the local price of labor, materials used, and so forth.

The plans provide for a building which shall be not only a stable, but a carriage house. The stable section is on the left hand side and has a manure pit at the rear, with doors from both stable and yard. The feed shoots are located near the box stall. In addition to this stall, which is a commodious one, there are three smaller stalls, each having a separate window.

The floors of the stalls are laid on a slight incline to a gutter which runs to a cesspool on the outside of the stable. The bottom of the stable can be of concrete, with a brick floor superimposed. The building is entered by a large swinging door, with inclined platform to the ground. There is also a smaller door to the left of this.

The carriage house is on the right of the stable and is connected with it by a sliding door. It is furnished with a washing place for the carriages, drained to the outside in a similar way to the stable. There is an ample closet for the harness. A stairway leads to the left. Large windows give plenty of light and ventilation.

In the loft is a door to receive the hay, straw, feed, etc., for the animals housed below. If desired, a partition can be put up to give a sleeping place for the man who has charge of the horses. There is sufficient light and ventilation from three windows and a ventilator in the top of the roof.

The framing should be of spruce, built in the brace frame style and covered with surface hemlock sheathing boards. All trimmings should be of white pine, with the doors of yellow pine.

Dimensions.—Front, 50 feet; side, 26 feet. Height of stories: First, 14 feet; second; 11 feet.

Cementing Gables.

To plaster gables with cement use a good quality of slow setting portland cement with about equal proportions of clean, sharp sand and apply as ordinary plaster. If it is desired to ornament it in any way, such as inserting bits of glass, stone or gravel, these should be put in place while the cement is fresh. When the cement is in place, it should be kept moist by frequent wetting until the work is entirely finished.

Nobility Recommends Nervine.

The above portrait is that of Countess Mogelstud, of Chicago, Ill., whose gratitude for the benefit received from the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine prompted her to make this statement:

"It affords me great pleasure to add my testimony to the very excellent merits of Dr. Miles' Nervine. Although I am past 80 years of age I find it soothes the tired brain, quiets the irritated nerves and insures restful sleep. I never feel contented without a bottle of it in the house." Gratefully yours,

GERMANY AND ENGLAND

Engaging In a Serious Dispute as to the Government of Tien Tsin

Pekin, March 11.—The policies of Germany and Great Britain in China, which Great Britain had hoped had been consolidated by the signing of the Yang Tse agreement a year ago, have developed an antagonism equal to that of Russia and Japan over Manchuria, and seriously involve the interests of other nations.

Germany is the only power refusing to agree to the reduction of the large garrisons which the European governments are maintaining at Tien Tsin and the restoration of the control of the native city of Tien Tsin to the Chinese.

The British diplomatists are trying to help the Chinese to regain the government of Tien Tsin, and the reason for the British action in blocking the payment of the February indemnity was to bring Germany to terms. The British believe the Germans are using Tien Tsin as an inducement to the Chinese to grant her (Germany) a practical monopoly of the mines in Shantung province.

The British diplomats regard the argument that the municipal government of Tien Tsin by Europeans is a military necessity as a subterfuge, and, in her role of protector of the Chinese against foreign aggression involved in the Anglo-Japanese alliance, and hoping to increase her prestige among the Chinese, Great Britain is helping them to regain Tien Tsin.

American influence is being used to this same purpose.

In Congress

Washington, March 11.—For nearly two hours yesterday Mr. Vest addressed the senate in opposition to the pending ship subsidy bill. He carefully analyzed the pending measure and attacked the present navigation laws, which, he declared, were relics of barbarism and responsible for the decline of our merchant marine. Mr. Tillman of South Carolina followed in a brief speech in opposition to the bill.

The bill to classify the rural free delivery service and place the carriers under the contract system was passed in the house, but in a form which completely changed the purpose for which it was framed. Before it was passed the bill was altered radically by its opponents.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER VII.

NADIA, with the clear perception of a right minded woman, guessed that some secret motive directed all Michael Strogoff's actions; that he for a reason unknown to her did not belong to himself; that he had not the power of doing what he desired, and that in this instance especially he had heroically sacrificed to duty even his resentment at the gross injury he had received.

Nadia, therefore, asked no explanation from Michael. Had not the hand which she had extended to him already replied to all that he might have been able to tell her?

Michael remained silent all the evening. The postmaster not being able to supply them with fresh horses until the next morning, a whole night must be passed at the house. Nadia could profit by it to take some rest, and a room was therefore prepared for her.

The young girl would no doubt have preferred not to leave her companion, but she felt that he would rather be alone, and she made ready to go to her room.

Just as she was about to retire she could not refrain from going up to Michael to say good night.

"Brother," she whispered.

Michael Strogoff did not lie down. He could not have slept even for an hour. The place on which he had been struck by the brutal traveler felt like a burn.

"For my country and the Father," he muttered as he ended his evening prayer.

He especially felt a great wish to know who was the man who had struck him, whence he came and where he was going. As to his face, the features of it were so deeply engraved on his memory that he had no fear of ever forgetting them.

Michael at last asked for the postmaster. The latter, a Siberian of the old type, came directly and, looking rather contemptuously at the young man, waited to be questioned.

"You belong to the country?" asked Michael.

"Yes."

"Do you know that man who took my horses?"

"No."

"Had you never seen him before?"

"Never."

"Who do you think he was?"

"A man who knows how to make himself obeyed."

Michael fixed his piercing gaze upon the Siberian, but the other did not quail before it.

"Do you dare to judge me?" exclaimed Michael.

"Yes," answered the Siberian, "for there are some things that even a plain merchant cannot receive without returning."

"Blows?"

"Blows, young man. I am of an age and strength to tell you so."

Michael went up to the postmaster and laid his two powerful hands on his shoulders.

Then in a peculiarly calm tone he said:

"Be off, my friend; be off! I could kill you."

The postmaster understood this time. "I like him better for that," he muttered as he retired without adding another word.

At 8 o'clock the next morning, the 24th of July, three strong horses were harnessed to the tarantass. Michael and Nadia took their places, and Ichim, with its disagreeable remembrances, was soon left far behind.

The next day, July 25, at 3 o'clock in the morning, the tarantass arrived at the posthouse in Tioukalmsk, having accomplished a distance of 120 versts since it had crossed the Ichim.

They rapidly changed horses. Here, however, for the first time the driver made difficulties about starting, declaring that detachments of Tartars were roving across the steppe and that travelers, horses and carriages would be a fine prize for such robbers.

Only by dint of a large bribe could Michael get over the unwillingness of the driver, for in this instance, as in many others, he did not wish to show his podorojna. The last ukase, having been transmitted by telegraph, was known in the Siberian provinces, and a Russian specially exempted from obeying these orders would certainly have drawn public attention to himself, a thing above all to be avoided by the czar's courier. As to the driver's hesitation, either the rascal traded on the traveler's impatience or he really had good reason to fear some misfortune.

However, at last the tarantass started and made such good way that by 3 in the afternoon it had reached Koutalsinskoe, eighty versts farther on. An hour after this it was on the banks of the Irtish. Omsk was now only twenty versts distant.

The Irtish is a large river and one of the principal of those which flow toward the north of Asia. Rising in the Atai mountains, it flows from the southeast to the northwest and empties itself into the Obi after a course of nearly 7,000 versts.

At this time of year, when all the rivers of the Siberian basin are much swollen, the waters of the Irtish were very high. In consequence the current was changed to a regular torrent, rendering the passage difficult enough. A swimmer could not have crossed, however powerful a one he might be, and even in a ferryboat there would be some danger.

But Michael and Nadia, determined to brave all perils whatever they might be, did not dream of shrinking from this one.

However, Michael proposed to his young companion that he should cross first, embarking in the ferryboat with the tarantass and horses, as he feared that the weight of this load would render it less safe. After landing the carriage on the opposite bank he would return and fetch Nadia.

The girl refused. It would be the delay of an hour, and she would not for her safety alone be the cause of it.

The embarkation was made not without difficulty, for the banks were partly flooded and the boat could not get in near enough.

However, after half an hour's exertion the boatmen got the tarantass and the three horses on board. Michael, Nadia and the driver embarked also, and they shoved off.

For a few minutes all went well. A little way up the river the current was broken by a long point projecting from the bank and formed an eddy easily crossed by the boat. The two boatmen propelled their barge with long poles, which they handled cleverly, but as they gained the middle of the stream it grew deeper and deeper until at last they could only just reach the bottom. The ends of the poles were only a foot above the water, which rendered their use difficult and insufficient. Michael and Nadia, seated in the stern of the boat and always in dread of a delay, watched the boatmen with some uneasiness.

The shout was occasioned by the new direction the boat was rapidly taking. It had got into the direct current and was being swept down the river. By diligent use of the poles, putting the ends in a series of notches cut below the gunwale, the boatmen managed to keep their craft against the stream and slowly urged it in a slanting direction toward the right bank.

They calculated on reaching it some five or six versts below the landing place; but, after all, that would not matter so long as men and beasts could disembark without accident. The two stout boatmen, stimulated, moreover, by the promise of double fare, did not doubt of succeeding in this difficult passage of the Irtish.

But they reckoned without an incident which they were powerless to prevent, and neither their zeal nor their skillfulness could under the circumstances have done more.

The boat was in the middle of the current at nearly equal distances from either shore and being carried down at the rate of two versts an hour when Michael, springing to his feet, bent his gaze up the river.

Several boats, aided by oars as well as by the current, were coming swiftly down upon them.

Michael's brow contracted, and an exclamation escaped him.

"What is the matter?" asked the girl. But before Michael had time to reply one of the boatmen exclaimed in an accent of terror:

"The Tartars! The Tartars!"

They were indeed boats full of soldiers, and in a few minutes they must reach the ferryboat, it being too heavily laden to escape from them.

The terrified boatmen uttered exclamations of despair and dropped their poles.

"Courage, my friends!" cried Michael. "Courage! Fifty rubles for you if we reach the right bank before the boats overtake us!"

Incited by these words, the boatmen again worked manfully away, but it soon became evident that they could not escape the Tartars.

It was scarcely probable that they would pass without attacking them. On the contrary, there was everything to be feared from robbers such as these.

"Do not be afraid, Nadia," said Michael, "but be ready for anything."

"I am ready," replied Nadia.

"Even to throw yourself into the water when I tell you?"

"Whenever you tell me."

"Have confidence in me, Nadia."

"I have indeed."

The Tartar boats were now only a hundred feet distant. They carried a detachment of Bokharian soldiers on their way to reconnoiter round Omsk.

The ferryboat was still two lengths from the shore. The boatmen redoubled their efforts. Michael himself seized a pole and wielded it with superhuman strength. If he could land the tarantass and horses and dash off with them, there was some chance of escaping the Tartars, who were not mounted.

But all their efforts were in vain.

The soldiers from the first boat shouted.

Michael recognized the Tartar warcry, which is usually answered by lying flat on the ground.

As neither he nor the boatmen obeyed this injunction, a volley was let fly among them, and two of the horses were mortally wounded.

At the next moment a violent blow was felt. The boats had run into the ferryboat.

"Come, Nadia!" cried Michael, ready to jump overboard.

The girl was about to follow him when a blow from a lance struck him, and he was thrown into the water. The current swept him away. His hand raised for an instant above the waves, and then he disappeared.

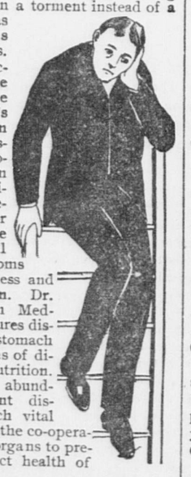

Nadia uttered a cry, but before she had time to throw herself after him she was seized and dragged into one of the boats.

In a few minutes the boatmen were killed and the ferryboat was left to drift away while the Tartars continued to descend the Irtish.

AT THE TOP.

It is a laudable ambition to reach the top of the ladder of success. But many a man who reaches the topmost rung finds his position a torment instead of a triumph. He has sacrificed his health to success.

A man can succeed and be strong if he heeds Nature's warnings. When there is indigestion, loss of appetite, ringing in the ears, dizziness, spots before the eyes or palpitation of the heart; any or all of these symptoms point to weakness and loss of nutrition. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. By perfect and abundant nourishment distributed to each vital organ it enables the co-operation of all the organs to preserve the perfect health of the body.

"For about two years I suffered from a very obstinate case of dyspepsia," writes R. E. Secord, Esq., of 13 Eastern Ave., Toronto, Ontario. "I tried a great number of remedies without success. I finally lost faith in them all. I was so far gone that I could not bear any solid food in my stomach for a long time; felt melancholy and depressed. Could not sleep nor follow my occupation. Some four months ago a friend recommended your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' After a week's treatment I had derived so much benefit that I continued the medicine. I have taken three bottles and am convinced it has in my case accomplished a permanent cure. I can conscientiously recommend it to the thousands of dyspeptics throughout the land."

NEW CABINET OFFICER

Moody to Succeed Long at Head of Navy

A POPULAR BAY STATE MAN

Who Has Had a Notable Career In the House—Were Many Aspirants For the Position—Long to Resume Law Practice at Boston

Washington, March 11.—The third change in the cabinet of President Roosevelt occurred yesterday when Secretary Long submitted his resignation in a graceful letter, it being accepted in one equally felicitous by the president. The change was made complete by the selection of Representative William Henry Moody of the Sixth congressional district of Massachusetts as Mr. Long's successor in the navy department.

CONGRESSMAN W. H. MOODY.

This change had been expected for a long time. Mr. Long had intended to retire at the beginning of the late President McKinley's second term, but he consented to remain until certain lines of policy in which he was involved were more satisfactorily arranged. Then when President Roosevelt succeeded, though anxious to return to private life—for Secretary Long will never again enter public life—a strong feeling of loyalty towards Mr. Roosevelt induced the secretary to defer his retirement until it was convenient for the president to make a change. Recently Mr. Long has been in Massachusetts making arrangements with his old legal connection to re-enter the practice of law, and he has had his house at Hingham put in order for his occupation. When Mr. Long entered the cabinet originally he was an active member of the firm of Hemingway & Long, a well known legal firm of Boston. He always has maintained a silent connection with the concern and will again become an active partner.

Mr. Moody's selection for the post of secretary of the navy was the outcome of an interesting contest. There were no less than a half-dozen aspirants, but the struggle finally narrowed down to the two representatives in congress—Mr. Foss of Illinois, chairman of the naval committee of the house, who had the energetic support of his western colleagues, and Mr. Moody, for whom Senator Lodge made the winning fight. It was for a time in doubt whether Mr. Moody would not be placed in some important foreign mission rather than in the navy department, but he preferred to stay at home.

Mr. Moody brings to his new post a mind of experience in governmental affairs acquired through his work for several years on the appropriation committee of the house. Mr. Moody is comparatively young, being in his 49th year. He is a lawyer by profession, being a graduate of Phillips academy, Andover, Mass., and Harvard university. He has been district attorney for the eastern district of Massachusetts and has served in the 54th, 55th, 56th and 57th congresses, being elected as a Republican. He was born in Newbury, Mass., but now resides at Haverhill. Mr. Moody expects to assume charge of his new office May 1.

The news that Mr. Moody had been offered and had accepted the navy portfolio reached the Capitol shortly after noon and Mr. Moody, who was on the floor of the house, was showered with hearty congratulations. For several minutes he held a regular levee in one of the side aisles on the Republican side. Democratic members crossed over to join the greetings, his congratulations from that quarter being fully as hearty and sincere as those from his own side of the house.

Mr. Moody began to rise to prominence during his first term in the house, when Speaker Reed frequently selected him to preside over the committee of the whole and predicted for him a brilliant legislative career.

As a member of the appropriations committee he has since led several fights on the floor, notably in connection with the contest between the navy and the geodetic survey over jurisdiction of deep sea surveys. He secured the adoption of a rider to an appropriation bill raising Dewey to the rank of admiral.

BANK ACCOUNTS SHORT

Teller In Portland Institution a Confessed Defaulter

MADE AWAY WITH $43,000

Said to Have Been Connected With Business Ventures Which Have Proved Unsuccessful—Considered a Substantial Citizen of Old Orchard

Portland, Me., March 12.—Granville W. Leighton, teller of the National Traders' bank of this city, is under arrest, a self-confessed defaulter to the extent of $43,000. The bank officials make no statement further than that Leighton has made over to the institution all his real estate and other property and that this, together with his bond, will make good the loss sustained by the bank.

The detection of the defalcation was brought about by the discovery of an apparent error in Leighton's books yesterday afternoon. When pressed for an explanation, the teller broke down and made a complete confession, stating that his peculations extended back over a period of several months and would reach a total of $43,000. He was immediately arrested by United States Marshal Saunders.

It is said that Leighton's trouble is due to unsuccessful business ventures. He has been connected with a number of enterprises and several of them, it is said, have proved very expensive to the promoters. Just how long he has drawn upon the funds of the bank to meet his losses is not known.

The National Traders' bank is capitalized at $250,000, and has undivided profits of $100,000. The president of the institution is William G. Davis, and the cashier is John M. Gould.

Leighton is about 35 years old, married and has three children. At Old Orchard, where he makes his home, he was considered one of the substantial citizens of the town and has held many public offices. Several years ago he was prime mover in a local reform movement conducted by the so-called Citizens' Good-Government party, and at that time he was elected chairman of the board of selectmen. His family is socially prominent.

A Point For Reciprocity

Washington, March 12.—The fourth conference of the house Republicans on the reciprocity question was fruitless, like those that preceded it, for the conference adjourned at midnight until next Tuesday. The victory was with the advocates of reciprocity, because the motion to adjourn was carried by a vote of 72 to 54 after the motion to amend the motion to make it a sine die adjournment had been voted down, 61 to 79.

Acquitted on Fine Point

Omaha, March 12.—In the case of John B. Meserve, ex-state treasurer, charged with the embezzlement of state funds, the point of law was made by Meserve that the interest received on deposit of state money in a south Omaha bank was not the property of the state. On this point Judge Baxter made a ruling in favor of the defendant and ordered a verdict of acquittal.

Lady Sykes Had a Jag

London, March 12.—Lady Christina Sykes, whose domestic difficulties have caused notoriety, was arrested on the Strand Monday night on the charge of being drunk and incapable of taking care of herself. She was arraigned in court yesterday, but her ladyship laughingly pleaded illness, and the magistrate released her with a warning not to come before him again.

Didn't Have Big Dinner

London, March 12.—King Edward did not celebrate the anniversary of his wedding Monday by a dinner at Marlborough house, nor were members of the British and Danish royal families there, as reported in the United States. The usual dinner was not given and, beyond the firing of salutes, there was no celebration of the wedding day.

Contributions Piling In

Philadelphia, March 12.—Messrs. Redmond and Devlin, Irish members of the British parliament who are in this country in the interest of the Irish cause, were given a reception here last night by the Irish-American citizens of this city and several thousands of dollars were contributed toward the fund the Irish representatives are raising in this country.

Colored Women Downed Whites

Frankfort, Ky., March 12.—The general assembly has adopted and sent to the governor for approval a bill taking from the women of Kentucky the right to vote in school trustees elections. In Lexington, at the last general election, the negro women controlled the election.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Alleged Assailants of Patrolman Keefe Held Without Bail

Malden, Mass., March 12.—George Hughes, alias George Edwards, alias Edward Carter, a man well past middle age, and George H. Blake, aged 17, were arraigned here yesterday, charged with murder. Their first arraignment was on the complaint of assault with a dangerous weapon on Patrolman Thomas Keefe of the Everett police force, but Keefe being now dead the complaint was not pressed, and the men rearraigned on the more serious charge. Both men were represented by counsel and both pleaded not guilty. They were held for the June term of the grand jury without bail.

The crime of which they are charged was committed early in the morning of Feb. 20. Keefe arrested two men near Everett square as suspicious characters. He was leading them up Broadway when they struggled from his grasp and one pulled a revolver and shot him. Hughes and Blake were arrested some hours later and Keefe, before he died, identified the former as the one who did the shooting.

Serious Quarry Accident

Chester, Vt., March 12.—Five quarrymen were badly injured yesterday at the quarry of the Union Soapstone company, an explosion occurring while the men were working on the ledge with pickaxes, and coming in contact with dynamite which had failed to explode at the time a previous blast was attempted. When the explosion took place hundreds of tons of rock and earth were scattered in all directions. David Morris was thrown 90 feet across the pit, his arms and body being badly lacerated, both eyes torn out, and he will probably die. George Moore was also probably fatally hurt, but the others will recover.

A Burglar's Queer Doings

Newton, Mass., March 12.—The residence of Wallace D. Lorell was visited by a burglar last weekand about $100 worth of goods stolen. Yesterday afternoon the family received a box by express from Boston in which was every article stolen carefully packed. The police are puzzled over the incident. The residence was entered Wednesday while the family were asleep. Jewelry, silverware and trinkets valued at many thousands of dollars were passed over and only about $100 worth of property was carried away.

With Over $16,000,000 Capital

Providence, March 12.—By the incorporation of the Rhode Island company, under the provisions of an act introduced into the house of representatives yesterday, will be effected the consolidation of the Narragansett Electric Lighting company, the United Traction company and the Providence Gas company and possibly other concerns. The three companies represent a combined capital of over $16,000,000.

Chairman Made a Side Deal

Warner, N. H., March 12.—The town meeting here was enlivened yesterday by the removal from office of Chairman Davis of the soldiers' monument commission. A report showed that Davis had given a contract for the stone work of the monument amounting to $2400 for a personal consideration of $200. The contractors made an assignment and certain documents fell into the hands of the receiver, who notified the town.

Girl Killed, Father Hurt

Boston, March 12.—Mary Clancy, 13 years old, was killed by an electric car yesterday afternoon. Her father, who saw the accident, not knowing that it was his child who had been killed, led others in trying to raise the car and broke his wrist in his efforts. It is feared that Mrs. Clancy cannot bear up under the strain. The girl ran in front of the car and witnesses attach no blame to the motorman.

Appointment Pleases Haverhill

Haverhill, Mass., March 12.—The news of the appointment of Congressman Moody as the successor to Secretary of the Navy Long has been received in this city with great satisfaction, and the citizens are highly jubilant. Steps have already been taken toward giving Congressman Moody a monster reception when he returns from Washington next Saturday.

A "Friendly Office" Petition

Worcester, Mass., March 12.—Petitions have been sent here for general circulation and signature asking that congress pass a resolution of sympathy with the Boers and instructing President Roosevelt to communicate the resolution to the British government, praying for peace with the South African republics.

A $45,000 Fire

Northampton, Mass., March 12.—The Clarke block, in the business section of the city, was completely gutted by fire early this morning, causing a loss of about $45,000. During the progress of the fire an explosion of gas took place, and as a result the supply of gas throughout the city was shut off.

Sealers Put to Sea

St. Johns, March 12.—The sealers' strike here ended yesterday afternoon and the sealing steamers have sailed for the ice floes. The terms of the settlement are that the men shall be paid $3.50, as against $3.25 last year per hundred weight for seals, and that they also have free berths as against the former charge of $3 each. Three thousand men were involved.

"BALD AND BOLD"

Mallory Thinks Ship Subsidy Bill Is In Favor of Private Individuals

Washington, March 12.—The senate had the ship subsidy bill under consideration for several hours yesterday. Mr. Mallory made an extended speech in opposition to the measure. After analyzing the provisions of the measure Mr. Mallory exclaimed: "Congress never in its history passed a measure of this character. It has passed many laws to advance private gain under the pretense of public policy, but never one so absolutely bald and bold in its advancement of private purposes as this measure.

Prior to consideration of the bill, a lively debate followed an effort on the part of Mr. Berry to ascertain when the committee on privileges and elections might be expected to report to the senate the resolution providing for the election of senators by direct vote of the people. Mr. Hoar indicated his vigorous opposition to such a resolution, on the ground that it would subvert the fundamental principle upon which the senate was founded.

The house entered the consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill, but, as usual during general debate on an appropriation bill, the members who spoke devoted themselves to everything except the bill before the house.

Ended Troubles With Bullet

New York, March 12.—Francis Skinner, "banker and broker," committed suicide by shooting some time between Monday evening and yesterday noon at his private office on New street. He was about 35 years old. Among his effects was found photographs of two children, a pawn ticket for a silver watch, a bank pass book showing a balance of $7.25, a lock of hair and 11 cents in cash. An acquaintance of the suicide said that Skinner's two children were with relatives somewhere in Maine. The suicide was probably due to business reverses and family trouble.

Used Knife and Pistol

Camden, N. J., March 12.—Because he was unable to obtain possession of his child yesterday, Lafayette Gruff cut the throat of his wife, killing her instantly. He then shot at his 7-months-old child, but the bullet lodged in the head of Mrs. Susan Gowie, Mrs. Gruff's aunt. Mrs. Gowie is in a critical condition. Gruff was arrested. Mrs. Gruff left her husband because of his alleged ill-treatment and sought shelter in the home of Mrs. Gowie.

Ask For Civilized Warfare

Washington, March 12.—Messrs. Wessels and Wolmarans, the Boer delegates in this country, had a talk with President Roosevelt yesterday. In the course of their interview they said that they neither asked for, desired, nor expected intervention on the part of this country nor any other country. What they do want, however, and what they laid before the American government, is a request that civilized warfare be insured in South Africa.

Bicyclist Caldwell Hurt

Atlanta, Ga., March 12.—Frank Cadwell of Hartford won two straight five-mile heats of a motor-paced race at the Coliseum here last night. The first heat was made in 8 minutes, 46 3-5 seconds. After four miles and one lap of the second heat had been ridden Cadwell, who was leading by two laps and a half, collided with his pacemaker and was painfully injured. Under the rules governing the contest, the race was given to him.

Kitchener to Lead Mounted Force

London, March 12.—The Daily Chronicle understands that Lord Kitchener will be relieved of much administrative work in South Africa to enable him to take the field in person and head a large mounted force in an endeavor to capture Dewet. The Chronicle is also informed that when he is released General Methuen will not assume any further military command in South Africa.

Don't Want to Come Back

Quebec, March 12.—Colonel John F. Gaynor and Captain B. D. Green, who are charged with complicity in the Savannah frauds, are at the Cheateau Frontenac in this city. They do not appear to be in the least worried as to the outcome of their cases. Both have secured the services of distinguished counsel to fight against extradition proceedings in this province.

To Search For Missing Steamer

Halifax, March 12.—The department of marine and fisheries here received instructions last night to send at once the government steamer Lansdowne to Sable island in search of the missing Allan line steamer Huronian. The steamer has not been reported since leaving Glasgow on Feb. 11 and there is an impression that she might have struck on Sable island.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

STRIKERS' RANKS GROW

Twenty-Two Thousand Now Out at Boston

BUSINESS IS ALL TIED UP

Building Trades and Other Lines Handicapped by Inability to Secure Material to Work With—Civic Federation Asked to Interfere

Boston, March 12.—Boston's labor army is an army of the unemployed today, with the great strike having entered upon its third day. With nearly 16,000 men idle by their own will yesterday, upwards of 6000 men joined them today and by combining forces will cause paralysis in freight traffic of all kinds, and will subject business men not only of Boston, but of New England, to financial losses almost beyond computation. The loss in wages alone will be enormous for, while organized labor acts on the initiative, a great many thousands of other allied laborers, skilled and unskilled, will be deprived of work.

The strike aimed at the R. S. Brine Transportation company, a New York corporation doing business here, has been inflicted on two railroad systems because they demanded that their employes should not discriminate freight delivered by the Brine company.

The marvelous feature of the strike for two days has been the absolute absence of disorder among the thousands of strikers, and the enthusiasm with which they struck. The water front and railroad freight houses, usually a bedlam of noise, are as quiet as on a Sunday. The second day witnessed fully 6000 additional to the 10,000 out on Monday.

One of the important developments of the day was the ordering out of the longshoremen at the docks of the Philadelphia and Metropolitan Steamship companies, in consequence of which steamers of those lines were compelled to depart with only partial cargoes, while their wharves are partially filled with the objectionable freight which the men refused to handle. Other docks along Atlantic avenue are in similar condition and business there is practically tied up.

The members of the general Teamsters' union, comprising 1400 brick, sand, lime and cement teamsters, also went out yesterday afternoon, which virtually ties up the building trades by depriving them of material with which to work.

The Freight Handlers' and Freight Clerks' unions of the Boston and Maine railroad, which are affiliated with the Knights of Labor as well as with the Allied Freight Transportation council, were ordered out by the latter body yesterday afternoon and stopped work for a time, but finally returned and finished out the day. They questioned the right of the allied council to order them to strike.

There is great curiosity to know what action the Master Teamsters' association will take, inasmuch as they feel that they have grievances as well as the R. S. Brine company, which is not a member of their organization.

They recently settled all differences with their teamsters and since that time have been virtually aiding the latter in their fight against the Brine company. Now that their men have again left them, simply because of their sympathy with the freight handlers, the master teamsters feel that they have grounds for abrogating their new contract with their men and that they are being treated most unfairly.

The state board of arbitration was in session all day and had before it President Cox and the strike committee of the Allied Freight Transportation council, but no way of settlement could be agreed upon. The committee later in the day waited upon Mayor Collins, and the serious condition of affairs was discussed. Mayor Collins promising his best efforts to effect an understanding between the parties at issue. Mayor Collins, deeming the situation sufficiently grave to warrant his taking such action, sent a telegram to Senator Hanna, at Washington, asking that the National Civic Federation should interest itself in the matter and endeavor to effect a settlement by arbitration.

The general opinion among business men is that this is a most opportune time for the civic federation to demonstrate its efficiency in harmonizing differences between opposing parties in a labor controversy, although there are others who believe that the strike has not yet assumed proportions sufficiently national in their effects to call for interference of a national body.

Much annoyance and inconvenience was caused yesterday by the strike of the Armstrong Transfer company's drivers, who are members of Teamsters' union 25, and who quit work in a body. Passengers who had paid on trains to have their baggage transferred had their money refunded and were compelled to get their luggage across the city as best they could.

Nearly all the drivers of the New York and Boston Dispatch, Adams and American Express companies also struck, although a very few of the teams were at work.

In the various freight houses freight gradually accumulated during the day, the few private teams in service proving entirely insufficient to relieve the congestion.

The Brine Transportation company has had all its teams in operation and has advertised for more. Wherever their teams have gone they have been wholly undisturbed. In fact, the streets have been unusually quiet, considering the large number of men who have been idle, and there has been absolutely no need of the large force of police which has at all times been within easy call.

A representative of the business interests of the city called upon Treasurer Loring of the Brine company yesterday afternoon to talk over the situation with him, but Loring declined to discuss the matter, claiming, as in the past, that the company's position has already been clearly stated.

While the team drivers and freight handlers of Lynn express themselves as being in sympathy with the Boston strikers they have not as yet ordered a strike, but only perishable goods will be handled in the city and tonight a general meeting will be held to take action during the continuation of the Boston strike.

The cutters in some of the shoe factories have been laid off, as the manufacturers are unable to secure stock. If the strike continues a great many of the factories will be unable to run. Lynn grocery firms are experiencing great difficulty in getting their supplies from Boston and many of the concerns were obliged to send their clerks here with delivery wagons for many of the necessaries of life to supply their customers.

Planning to Extend Strike

Providence, March 12.—It is announced in Olneyville that the mills of the American Woollen company to which the idle weavers are endeavoring to extend the strike include the mills in Burrillville, Blackstone, Mass., Fitchburg, Mass., and Fulton, N. Y. The strike leaders insist that unless a settlement is reached this week the weavers in those places will strike, with the prospect of trouble in four additional mill towns.

—It is said that a Socialist in Germany has discovered a way to separate water easily and cheaply into oxygen and hydrogen, its constituent elements, and burn it like petroleum. If so, the day of coal passes.—Warren Herald.

Good Afternoon.

Massachusetts will this year have an "Old Home week," which should be as successful and enjoyable as in New Hampshire where the idea originated, and in Maine, Vermont and other states which have adopted the celebrations. Each of these states have set apart different weeks, and in Massachusetts the dates are July 27 to August 2, beginning with Sunday.

Many sons and daughters of Quincy may now be found in all states of the Union, and some have not visited their old homes for years. They need just such a celebration as this to turn their thoughts toward the "City of Presidents," and if Quincy celebrates many will make an effort to make us a visit.

This city is an attractive place in July, and our seashore attracts many. To arrange a program to cover a whole week might be too much of an effort, but this is unnecessary. One or two days is usually the extent to which one municipality is expected to celebrate, unless it be the capital or the large cities. "Home Week" is largely for the towns and small cities, when these places will be pleased to receive visits from those who have gone to the big cities and other states.

If it was desirous to extend the Quincy celebration over several days, here are a few suggestions.

Sunday, welcome by the churches and addresses by old residents.

Monday, a grand union picnic for old and young at Merrymount park with base ball, field sports, and other attractions.

Tuesday,—Historical day, in charge of patriotic societies.

Wednesday,—Seashore day, with yachts races, aquatic sports, sailing, parties, etc.

Thursday,—Old Folks day, with a complimentary banquet to all residents and former residents over 70 years of age.

Friday,—Children's day with a festival for the young people at Quincy Music hall.

Saturday,—A grand hurrah, firemen's parade, and trial of hand engines, or contests in running, hose laying, etc., by the local hose companies.

Now is the time for a committee to collect the postoffice addresses of the absent sons and daughters of the city in every part of the country, open communication with them, notifying them that we intend to have an Old Home Week, perhaps asking them for any suggestions they may wish to offer as to the program, and inviting them to make their summer vacation plan so as to join in the reunion. Such an invitation is certain to induce many persons to revisit their old home, who may have been neglecting so to do for years, while in some instances it will be the means of bringing families among us for the entire summer. Coming once and receiving a hearty welcome, old ties will be resumed and interest in the welfare of the community will be kindled and permanent benefit be derived by the city.

Congratulations to the pupils of the Gridley Bryant school on their record for punctuality. It cannot be excelled.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The state board of arbitration is to be called upon to settle the dispute between Springfield and Worcester as to which city was most highly honored by the prince. His train stopped in the former city, but the prince slept all the time the train was there. He was awake when it went through Worcester but the train didn't stop.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ "It is easy to die." But to live and live rightly, loyal to truth aid courageously steadfast to duty, with an honest, constant effort to see the truth and duty clearly and intelligently—that is another and a harder task. To die requires no effort. To escape death is impossible. But what a fine, brave thing it is to live for the truth's sake, in face of the maledictions of the ignorant and the slanders of the malevolent. There is a heroism in such living which the base mind cannot know.—Nashville American.

☞ The official order not long ago promulgated from the Indian bureau, that the Indians must in future cut their hair, cease painting their faces and stop their feasts and dances, brought out from them the poignant rerepartee that they claimed the privilege of continuing their customs so long as white women were allowed to wear long hair, paint and give progressive euchre parties, with oyster supper accompaniments. Who, after this, will say that Lo, the poor Indian, is not as smart and witty in rejoinder as the best of them.—New York Tribune.

☞ So Hon. John D. Long has announced his intention of retiring from his position as secretary of the navy. It is a pity that the country must lose the services of such a man who has shown an ability seldom seen in the positions in which he has been placed. His care and foresight in the Spanish war remind one of the work of Massachusetts' great war governor, John A. Andrew, and for that alone John D. Long's name is worthy of a high place on the roll of fame. He has been a good citizen, a good governor and a good secretary. He has filled every position with honor to himself and country, and is a man Plymouth county is proud to have as a citizen.—Old Colony memorial.

☞ The appointment of Congressman Moody to the place in President Roosevelt's Cabinet, about to be vacated by Secretary Long, has been anticipated for some time. Mr. Moody is said to be the President's own selection, no one having suggested the name to him. When Governor Long announced his desire to withdraw from the direction of the Navy Department after the Sampson-Schley business was definitely settled, the President decided that a Massachusetts man should have the place. It is cause for congratulation that the Commonwealth is still to be recognized in the Cabinet, and in the choice of William H. Moody the President has taken a man who can be of great service to him. The Congressman from the Sixth District is one of the leaders of the House, and popular on both sides of the chamber. Familiar with legislation and personally on good terms with the members, he may become the connecting link between the Executive and Congress.—Lynn Item.

Mrs. Louisa Field.

In addition to the brief obituary notice of the death of Mrs. Field it is fitting that a further word be spoken. Though more than ninety years of age she still retained her faculties almost unimpared to the end.— She breathed her last on the day and the very hour which marked the seventy-third anniversary of her wedding. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Peter Whitney of the Unitarian church. With her husband, William Field, one of Quincy's pioneer and prosperous granite manufacturers, she entered her new home on Adams street, where for nearly three-quarters of a century she resided.

Having outlived her day and generation, and old time friends, she found no difficulty in making friends with the young and was never so happy as when surrounded by a large company of her dear ones. Gifted with a remarkably retentive memory few in Quincy were her equal in anecdote and story-telling. In her the lover of colonial scenes and customs found an inexhaustible fund of interest and information. In her death another of those precious living links which bind the present with the colonial past is broken.

She was descended from a family of remarkable longevity, her mother lived to be ninety-seven years of age and her grandmother rounded out a century. She took charge of her property to her death and in her last sickness carefully attended to the payment of several small obligations.

Always interested in every worthy object—ready with heart, hand and means to do her share in the promotion of the interests of the city, she leaves behind her a fragrant memory which will be not only a benediction to her surviving children and grandchildren but to all who knew her.

One Express Firm Takes Off Its Team.

Others Don't Anticipate Trouble.

Local Grocers Do Their Own Teaming from Boston.

The big strike in Boston is bound to effect Quincy business men. Several firms who had ordered goods shipped by freight have been unable to get them, with the result that they are running short on certain lines. At present there is no prospect of a settlement and as one business man expressed it Tuesday, it looked as though he would have to drive a team to Boston himself.

Many of the drivers of the local express companies are union men, and there was a rumor Tuesday night that they were to be ordered out today, which would make it appear that the strike leaders intended to paralyze business all over the state.

One of Brine's teams came to Quincy Tuesday afternoon to carry away some of the boxes and reels that were used by the Gamewell Co. in putting in the police signal system. The team arrived opposite Hall's store at the corner of Washington and Canal streets early in the evening. It is the hall over this store where the coal handlers have their headquarters. Word was received that one of Brine's teams was coming, and a crowd quickly gathered. The driver of the team stopped and began to load the articles into his team. The crowd tried to anger him so as to precipitate a row but the driver wisely paid no attention to the remarks by the crowd, but continued his work and then drove away toward Boston.

Not only are the drivers of Quincy express teams members of the union, but drivers of stone teams as well, and if the Quincy men are ordered out business in Quincy will suffer quite as much as in Boston.

QUINCY EXPRESSING.

But one of the local express company is affected by the drivers strike, and that company is not seriously bothered. This company is the Gallagher Express Co. Three of their Quincy drivers belong to the Union, and they are out on a sympathetic strike. The Boston union drivers are also out. The only result is that the company has been obliged to pull off their team that went over the road to Boston. Small parcels will be received and delivered as usual.

The New York & Boston Dispatch, Express Company are not affected as yet. Their local men are not members of the union and unless the Boston men should be ordered out they will have no trouble.

The Abbott & Miller express company are having no trouble. None of their men are union men, and as their Boston work is done by the teams that go over the road the strike will probably not affect them in any way.

The same may be said of the Quincy & Boston express company. The proprietors of the company drive their own teams and the strike can not interfere with their business.

Several of the large Quincy grocery firms also run their own Boston teams.

Concert and Lecture.

A concert of national war songs was given Tuesday night at the First Presbyterian church in the presence of a good sized audience by its efficient choir, assisted by the Granite City quartette, and a ladies quartette. The soloists were Miss M. Esson, Mrs. Birnie and Mrs. Donald. Messrs. G. Bowman, William and E. Warmington, Pierce, Kemp and Parsons. The choruses by both the quartettes and choir were rendered in harmony and with spirit. Miss B. E. Todd presided at the piano. The Rev. Dr. Withrow gave an excellent address on, "Wars, and some of their results."

Torch Applied.

The steamer Providence which was beached at Nut Island last fall to be broken up for the old metal, was set on fire at 11 o'clock this morning. It has been burning briskly all day and the chances are that there will be but little left of her by night. It was hoped by many that she would not be fired until night, as at that time it would have made a fine illumination.

LIQUOR LAWS.

Senator Sprague and Representative Badger Prominent.

Representative Badger spoke in the House Tuesday in favor of the report of his committee, which granted leave to withdraw on the petition of the Liquor Dealers association for permission to carry on business on election days after the close of the polls.

A motion was made to substitute the bill, which was supported by Messrs. Mills, Jackson and Donahue of Fall River and Mr. Bradley of Boston. In favor of the report besides Mr. Badger were Mr. Davis of Salem, and Mr. Keith of Brockton of the committee. The substitute was lost by a vote of 24 to 91, and the report accepted.

The same committee also reported leave to withdraw, on petition of W. E. Weld that Boston vote on the license question once each two years.

The Liquor Law committee gave a hearing on petitions for regulation of hours in which liquor may be sold in cities of over 100,000 people and to regulate the granting of licenses. Fred D. Stanley, for the petitioners, said that he had drawn up a new bill as a substitute for the Sewall bill. He thought that the local option principle should be followed out in this matter and had tried to do this in his new draft. The draft Mr. Stanley proposed amends the law so as to provide that spirituous or intoxicating liquor shall not be sold between the hours of 11 at night and 6 in the morning, or the Lord's day; provided, however, that if the licensee is licensed as an innholder the authorities granting the license shall from time to time prescribe regulations governing the sale of such liquors during such hours to guests who have resorted to his inn for food or lodging.

Among the remonstrants were M. M. Johnson, Mrs. N. E. Cheeney, Rev. Fr. John S. Mullen, Rev. C. L. Morgan, Rev. E. X. Dolan and Rev. F. J. Butler.

Senator Sprague, who is chairman of this committee, gave the petitioners the chance they vanted to score a point. It was when Rev. Mr. Butler said that the Sabbath in Brighton was desecrated by the two hotels there, which were the greatest scandal of the place. They were not doing the business they were intended to do. "Why don't you stop these abuses?" asked Chairman Sprague. He replied that it was not always easy to stop these things. He told the Chairman to go to the Police Commision himself and see how many efforts the people had made to stop these abuses, but all of no avail. This was the signal for applause from the temperance advocates in the room.

FUNSTON DEFENDS ARMY

Aguinaldo's Capturer Discusses Its Philippine Policy.

CHARGES OF CRUELTY DENIED.

He Declares Every Insurgent Leader Is a Murderer and That Filipinos Are Unfitted For Self Government. His Opinion of Americans Who Encourage the Insurgents.

General Frederick Funston was the guest of honor at a dinner given the other night at the Lotos club, in New York.

General Funston was seldom interrupted by applause, the company being too deeply interested in his address on the Philippine insurrection. He said:

"There are a few facts which should be laid before you. When Manila surrendered to Admiral Dewey and General Merritt, there were many Spanish families, men and officers, with their wives and children, there. It would have been the blackest page in American history if we had surrendered them to the insurgents, a blot that we could not have wiped out in a thousand years of good conduct among the nations of the earth. The whole civilized world would have regarded it as such. I don't suppose that Aguinaldo and his officers would have countenanced it, but there would have been a slaughter without parallel. One has but to know the pitiful story of 1899 and the butchery of Spanish troops to realize this.

"Joint administration of the city between the Americans and the insurgents was not possible. The demagogue Aguinaldo ordered trenches dug about our lines from 50 to 250 yards, and he filled them with an army of over 20,000 men. The insurgents insulted and provoked our men. The extreme discipline enforced by General Otis kept the armies from conflict. There was the greatest patience, and finally a sergeant on sentry duty, with two other men, met some insurgent officers and men, who insisted on crossing a bridge. He challenged them three times, and then at one shot he killed with his Krag one insurgent lieutenant and one insurgent private. The Nebraska soldier knew how to shoot, and within a minute or two the rifle pits of the insurgents were blazing against their liberators, and the war had begun.

"If that sergeant had not fired that good shot, he would have been liable to discharge, dishonorable discharge from the army. He would have suffered the same if he had not killed his own captain if that officer had refused three times to answer the challenge.

"At the time of the outbreak of the war in the Philippines the Twentieth Kansas had seventy-five men outside the lines on patrol duty. I was in Manila sitting on a porch with Major Metcalf. I had fallen asleep, and he woke me, saying that the dance had commenced. He was right. There was the rattle of the Mauser coming from intrenched insurgents, and the trouble had begun.

"We hear of the abuses and extravagances of behavior of our soldiers in the Philippines. I want to testify that out of our regiments 95 per cent are brave, humane and a credit to their country. The other 5 per cent who are writing to the newspapers, telling of alleged abuses, have served more time inside the guardhouse than they have in the field.

"But I would like to say a word about those who died in the island for their country. There was Captain Godfrey of New York, beloved even by the natives, a humane and just man without malice in his heart. He died in an ambuscade and, dying without hatred in his heart, heard the curses of his men and saw the tears in their eyes. There was Sergeant O'Brien, who had been in the service of the flag for twenty-five years. He was ill in the hospital when he learned that his company must go to the front, and he told the doctors to go to—well, a different place from the one I believe he went to. He was shot through the heart.

"We who have seen those we loved killed know that their deaths were due to what has happened in the United States since January, 1900, and we know that the deaths of the enemy were due to agitation in the United States, because they had been misguided into the belief that there were many in the United States who wanted to see them free.

"Can you say that these Filipinos who died for a dictator can be compared with the men who fought for and made the United States?

"Aguinaldo's ablest aid, Antonia Luna, a good officer on account of his personal courage, was ordered by Aguinaldo to be assassinated. He was shot down in cold blood. I talked with Aguinaldo myself about this, and he told me that he had the man killed because if he had not done so he would have been assassinated himself. Would George Washington have done that?

"There was a little boy in Manila who came to my house once in awhile. He wanted to learn English and had obtained a grammar. In so far as I could I helped him, and then one night he was taken by a savage and whipped to death. It took three hours to kill him. Could Israel Putnam have done that? I am glad to say that the next day we caught Tagunta, the murderer, and I hope he is with the angels.

"The United States has been the most lenient government on earth. There is not a single instance in which the insurgent chiefs could not have been convicted of murder by any civilized government. Among them is Aguinaldo, the murderer of Luna. We have been sparing of the ignorant, and most of the hanging has been of those 'higher up,' who have been caught red handed.

"I don't want to be brutal, but to be fair, and I must recount this: Two soldiers in the Twenty-fourth infantry, a colored regiment, deserted. They were recaptured and executed. They were ignorant. There are men in the United States who have done more harm by pen and voice than those two negro deserters. They are those who are keeping some guerrillas in the field when the war is over. I say I don't want to be brutal, but I would rather see them hung than the humblest soldier in the United States army.

"Let us keep still until the war is over and then fight it out among ourselves as to what we are to do with them. They are not fit for self government, let alone absolute independence. There can be no comparison between them and the Cubans as to their capability of self government, and I don't lie awake nights worrying over the future of the Cubans.

"The Filipinos never had a Garcia and they never had a Maceo and the others who fought for liberty against Spain. They are not competent to keep a stable government for six months if they should be granted independence. There would be a half dozen wars in six months after they had been left to themselves, and we are responsible, for the whole world so regards us."

BEG TEACHER NOT TO WED

East St. Louis Pupils Present a Petition—Solitary Boy's Wisdom.

Pupils of the Rock school, East St. Louis, have presented their teacher, Miss Minnie Cannady, with a petition not to get married. The document is as follows:

"We, the undersigned, pupils of room No. 7 of the High Grammar school, do hereby petition you, Miss Minnie Cannady, our dear teacher, not to resign, as is your present intention, so as to enter the state of matrimony, but to defer this matter for a year."

The engagement of Miss Cannady to Oscar Laederach of Long Pine, Neb., was announced several weeks ago, and March 18 was set as the date of the wedding. Miss Cannady is popular with her pupils, and the news of her approaching marriage caused consternation among them. They went to her singly and in bodies, begging her not to leave them. She would not make promises to reconsider the marriage question. Then the girls in her class, ranging in age from ten to fourteen years, circulated a petition, and every pupil of the forty-five but one signed it. One boy of surpassing wisdom when asked to sign replied, "I like Miss Cannady as well as any of you, and I don't want her to leave us, but when a woman makes up her mind to get married there's no use trying to stop her."

Miss Cannady has not yet given an answer, but there are rumors that the wisdom of the boy is to prove true.

THE CHINESE LANGUAGE.

Professor Herbert A. Giles Explains Some of Its Peculiarities.

Professor Herbert Allen Giles of Cambridge university recently delivered the first of a course of six lectures which he is to give in Havemeyer hall at Columbia university, in New York, under the new Dean Lung foundation. President Nicholas Murray Butler introduced the speaker, whose particular topic was "The Chinese Language."

After explaining that the spoken and written languages of China were entirely distinct Professor Giles stated that the former was more easily to be acquired than French or German, but that a proper knowledge of the latter demanded a lifetime of study. In pointing out how root ideas are adapted by the Chinese to surrounding circumstances the lecturer said:

"To express the words 'flattery' and 'treacherous' the Chinese use the character meaning 'woman' in connection with other characters. 'Friendship' is expressed by two hands, 'brightness' by the sun and moon in conjugation, 'goodness' by a woman and a child, and so on. Originally pictures, the characters have now become words."

MERRYMOUNT WINS.

North Quincy Not In It on the Roll-off for Championship.

The second roll-off in the tie bowling games for the championship in the Norfolk County league between the Merrymount club of Wollaston and the North Quincy club of Norfolk Downs was rolled Tuesday night at the Merrymount club alleys.

The first roll off was Monday night at the North Quincy club alleys, in which the Merrymounts won all three strings. The North Quincy team hoped to play the same trick on the Merrymounts Tuesday night, but they were only able to win one string.

ves This gi the championship to the Merrymount club who won five out of the six strings.

School Attendance.

Not a single case of tardiness was reported at the Gridley Bryant school for the four weeks ending Feb. 21. With ten chances per week per scholar, or forty chances in the month, this is a remarkable record. There was an average daily attendance of 280, so there were 11,200 chances to be tardy. At the Willard and Coddington, where the attendance is larger, there were but 6 tardinesses in each school.

The John Hancock school had the best percentage of daily attendance by the report.

The summary:

Militia to Parade.

The six Boston companies of the Ninth regiment, also the naval brigade and light artillery, will parade at the dedication of the monument at Dorchester Heights, South Boston on Evacuation day, March 17.

TODAY'S COURT.

Charles Hagg was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy and was fined $10.

Cost of a King.

Edward VII.'s coronation will cost the equivalent of $20,000,000, but it will nearly all come from the pockets of the wealthy or upper class and will be distributed chiefly among tradesmen and artisans. Useless as such pageantries are, it is another instance, says the Philadelphia Times, of "an ill wind that blows nobody any good."

The Awakening of Spring.

With kisses straight from heaven the soft winds bring
The first sweet odorous breath of waking spring.
And all adown the glade soft whispers go
To tell the waiting buds beneath the snow:
"The spring is here, the jocund, joyous spring!
Awake and hear the bluebirds' carol ring."

Aye, spring is here; she comes with smiling eyes
And soft, white fleecy clouds in sapphire skies.
A subtle thrill runs through the cold gray earth.
A thrill of love which promises new birth.
The roots revive, the mosses creep and grow;
Through gnarled old trunks new life begins to flow.

With glances warmer grown she melts the rills
And breaks the icy fetters of the hills.
Where yesterday the drifted snow did lie
The sweet arbutus opes her starry eye.
Hepaticas spring up from sodden mold.
And dandelions flaunt their stores of gold.

Tiptoeing o'er the mountain tops, she weaves
A robe of silvery green with tender leaves
And throws it gently o'er the hills and dales.
The naked forest and the barren vales,
Embroidering it with blossoms everywhere
And scenting fold on fold with perfume rare.

How Canadians "Get Square"

Toronto, March 12.—The city council has adopted a resolution declaring that hereafter no more tenders for civic work will be accepted from American contractors. The reason given for the action is that Canadians are barred in American cities.

The Cropsey Murder Case

Elizabeth City, N. C., March 12.—The grand jury of Pasquotank county found a true bill yesterday against James Wilcox, charged with having wilfully killed Nellie Cropsey on Nov. 20, 1901. Wilcox entered a plea of not guilty.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

A Recommendation.

"You suggest that I should furnish the capital and you the experience, but what experience have you had in this business?"

"I lost $20,000 in it in two years."—Scribner's.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Judge Pierce, in superior court at Worcester, Mass., named Edwin Brown receiver of the Flexible Door and Shutter company of Worcester, incorporated under the laws of Maine and capitalized at $500,000. The action is one of protection to stockholders as it is said the business has outgrown its paid in capital.

Fred H. Welch of Winchester, Mass., an employe of the Boston and Maine railroad, was killed at Rotterdam Junction, N. Y. He was caught between the bumpers while coupling cars.

To commemorate the war services of the American liner St. Paul a bronze tablet was unveiled on board that vessel at New York.

The condition of Joshua Wilbur, United States consul at Dublin, who is ill at the residence of his sister in Rutherford, N. J., is reported to be such as to preclude all hope of his recovery.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., is not recovering as rapidly as was expected, and Dr. Rixey has called in other physicians for consultation. At the White House it is said that the boy's condition is not serious.

Hannis Taylor of Mobile, Ala., lately United States minister to Spain, has been appointed special consul for the government to aid in the defense of claims before the Spanish treaty claims commission.

Willing to Part With Islands

Copenhagen, March 12.—The folkething, in committee of the whole and in executive session yesterday, voted, by a large majority, in favor of the ratification of the treaty providing for the sale of the Danish West Indian islands to the United States.

Proclamation Delayed

London, March 12.—At the cabinet meeting yesterday, it was decided that the time had not yet arrived for enforcing the drastic clauses of the crimes act. For the present, therefore, there will be no proclamation of the United Irish league.

Requisition Papers Signed

Boston, March 12.—Governor Crane has signed the papers for the extradition of Joseph W. Blondin, the alleged wife murderer, from New York. These requisition papers will be presented to the governor of New York today. Captain Proctor of the state police carried them to Albany last evening.

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. Among the tens of thousands who have used it for the grip, not one case has ever been reported that did not recover. For sale by all druggists.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER VIII.

THE blow which had struck Michael Strogoff was not mortal. By swimming in a manner by which he had effectually concealed himself he had reached the right bank, where he fell exhausted among the bushes.

When he recovered his senses, he found himself in the cabin of a mujik, who had picked him up and cared for him and to whom he owed his life. For how long a time had he been the guest of this brave Siberian? He could not guess, but when he opened his eyes he saw the handsome bearded face bending over him and regarding him with pitying eyes. He was about to ask where he was when the mujik, anticipating him, said:

"Do not speak, little father, do not speak. Thou art still too weak. I will tell thee where thou art and everything that has passed since I brought thee to my cabin."

And the mujik related to Michael Strogoff the different incidents of the struggle which he had witnessed—the attack upon the ferry by the Tartar boats, the pillage of the tarantass and the massacre of the boatmen.

But Michael Strogoff listened no longer, and, slipping his hand under his garment, he felt the imperial letter still secured in his breast.

He breathed a sigh of relief. But that was not all.

"A young girl accompanied me," said he.

"They have not killed her," replied the mujik, anticipating the anxiety which he read in the eyes of his guest. "They have carried her off in their boat and have continued the descent of the Irtish. It is only one prisoner more to join so many others which they are taking to Tomsk."

Michael Strogoff was unable to reply. He pressed his hand upon his heart to restrain its beating.

But, notwithstanding these many trials, the sentiment of duty mastered his whole soul.

He remembered the errand which he had undertaken. Indeed never by day or night was his emperor's mission for even a moment absent from his mind. Not the presence of the greatest danger, the tortures of hunger and thirst, the weariness of excessive fatigue, not even all combined could cause him to forget that a momentous matter was intrusted to his courage, his zeal, his fidelity and his endurance. Michael Strogoff was worthy of this trust.

"Where am I?" asked he.

"Upon the right bank of the Irtish, only five versts from Omsk," replied the mujik.

"What wound can I have received which could have thus prostrated me? It was not a gunshot wound?"

"No; a lance thrust upon the head, now healing," replied the mujik. "After a few days' rest, little father, thou wilt be able to proceed. Thou didst fall into the river, but the Tartars neither touched nor searched thee, and thy purse is still in thy pocket."

Michael Strogoff gripped the mujik's hand. Then, recovering himself with a sudden effort, "Friend," said he, "how long have I been in thy hut?"

"Three days."

"Three days lost!"

"Three days hast thou lain unconscious."

"Hast thou a horse to sell me?"

"Thou wishest to go?"

"At once."

"I have neither horse nor carriage, little father. Where the Tartar has passed there remains nothing!"

"Well, I will go on foot to Omsk to find a horse."

"A few more hours of rest and thou wilt be in a better condition to pursue thy journey."

"Not an hour!"

"Come, now," replied the mujik, recognizing the fact that it was useless to struggle against the will of his guest, "I will guide thee myself. Besides," he added, "the Russians are still in great force at Omsk, and thou couldst perhaps pass unperceived."

"Friend," replied Michael, "heaven reward thee for all thou hast done for me."

"Reward! Only fools expect reward on earth," replied the mujik.

Michael Strogoff went out of the hut. When he tried to walk, he was seized with such faintness that without the assistance of the mujik he would have fallen, but the fresh air quickly revived him. He then felt the wound in his head, the violence of which his fur cap had lessened. With the energy which he possessed he was not a man to succumb under such a trifle. Before his eyes lay a single goal—far distant Irkutsk. He must reach it! But he must pass through Omsk without stopping there.

"God protect my mother and Nadia!" he murmured. "I have no longer the right to think of them!"

Michael Strogoff and the mujik soon arrived in the mercantile quarter of the lower town, and, although under military occupation, they entered it without difficulty. The surrounding earthwork had been destroyed in many places, and there were the breaches through which the marauders who followed the armies of Feofar-Kahn had penetrated.

The mujik was conducting his guest straight to the posting house when in a narrow street Michael Strogoff, coming to a sudden stop, sprang behind a jutting wall.

"What is the matter?" quickly asked the mujik, much astonished at this sudden movement.

"Silence!" hastily replied Michael Strogoff, with his finger on his lips.

At this moment a detachment debouched from the principal square into the street which Michael Strogoff and his companion had been just following.

At the head of the detachment, composed of twenty horsemen, was an officer dressed in a very simple uniform. Although he glanced rapidly from one side to the other, he could not have seen Michael Strogoff owing to his precipitous retreat.

The detachment went at full trot into the narrow street. Neither the officer nor his escort concerned themselves about the inhabitants. Several unlucky ones had scarcely time to make way for their passage. There were, therefore, a few half stifled cries, to which the thrusts of the lance gave an instant reply, and the street was immediately cleared.

When the escort had disappeared, "Who is that officer?" asked Michael Strogoff, returning toward the mujik. And while putting the question his face was pale as that of a corpse.

"It is Ivan Ogareff," replied the Siberian, but in a deep voice which breathed hatred.

"He!" cried Michael Strogoff, from whom the word escaped with an accent of fury which he could not conquer. He had just recognized in this officer the traveler who had struck him at the posting house of Ichim, and, although he had only caught a glimpse of him, it burst upon his mind at the same time that this traveler was the old Zingari whose words he had overheard in the market place of Nijni Novgorod.

The mujik and Michael resumed their way and arrived at the posting house. To leave Omsk by one of the breaches would not be difficult after nightfall. As for purchasing a carriage to replace the tarantass, that was impossible. There was none to be let or sold. But what want had Michael Strogoff now for a carriage? Was he not alone, alas? A horse would suffice him, and, very fortunately, a horse could be had. It was an animal of mettle, capable of enduring much fatigue, and Michael Strogoff, accomplished horseman as he was, could make good use of it.

The horse cost a high price, and a few moments later Michael was ready to start. It was then 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

SMOTHER A COUGH.

Press your hand hard enough over your mouth and you can smother a cough but you can't cure it that way The outside is the wrong end to work on.

Scott's Emulsion thoroughly cures coughs because it strikes at the root of the trouble. The throat and lungs need a regular system of education to cure an old cough.

The point of value about Scott's Emulsion and coughs is that, while Scott's Emulsion does soothe the raw throat and lungs, it also nourishes and heals the inflamed areas.

It replaces inflamed tissue with healthy tissue—the only real cure for an old cough.

PRINCE HENRY DEPARTS

Sails on the Deutschland For the Fatherland

LUNCHEON ON THE STEAMER

Preceded the Formal Farewells—Expresses Thanks to Nation For Consideration and Good Feeling Shown Toward Him—President Responds

New York, March 12.—Prince Henry of Prussia sailed for Germany on board the Deutschland at 3:45 p. m. yesterday and thus ended his first visit to the United States. The day was perfect, being warm, spring-like and sunny. The prince's last day in America was spent entirely on board the Deutschland. He breakfasted at 8:30 and immediately retired to his cabin, where he spent several hours in writing letters. About 10 o'clock he began to receive farewell visits from members of the party who accompanied him and various officials of Germany in this country and the United States government. Mayor Low of New York was one of his latest callers. In bidding him farewell, the prince said: "I thank the citizens of New York for all their kindness to me, which I appreciate deeply. If I should return to America I should feel when I reached New York that I was once more at home."

The first function of the day was the luncheon which Prince Henry gave to members of the party which accompanied him on his tour. Covers were laid for 20 persons in one of the tables of the dining room of the steamship. At the close of the luncheon, when it came time to say good-bye, the prince, taking the rose from the table, said: "This is the badge which I have been admiring during my entire trip to the United States—American beauty." Then he placed the flower in his buttonhole and each guest, taking a rose from the table, did likewise.

Immediately after the luncheon, at the prince's invitation, the party went to the commanders bridge of the Deutschland and was photographed there. Then the real leave-taking began and the American members of the party began to go ashore.

The Deutschland's sailing time was 3:30 p. m., but it was 3:45 when Captain Albers gave the signal to start. The crowd gave a big cheer and the prince appeared on the bridge and bowed. The Deutschland backed out into the North river amid the tooting of vessels and all kinds of craft. As she passed down the river she received the same noisy ovation. She passed the battery at 4 o'clock and the great crowd which had gathered there cheered as the vessel steamed on down the bay. The Deutschland reached the Narrows at 4:35 and Forts Wadsworth and Hamilton fired a salute, which was answered by numerous blasts from the Deutschland's whistle. The garrison at Fort Wadsworth lined up on the bluff until the steamer had passed out onto the Atlantic ocean. The shores and hills were black with people who had gathered for a last look at the departing liner which bore the sailor prince of Germany back to the fatherland. The Deutschland is scheduled to arrive at Hamburg next Monday morning.

The imperial yacht Hohenzollern started on her homeward trip at 2:40 o'clock yesterday afternon. A crowd witnessed the departure of the ship and a cheer from the people was answered with a salute by whistle from the Hohenzollern. For an hour before the time for sailing the crew and officers of the Hohenzollern held a levee, bidding farewell to friends. Not long after the yacht had left the pier the special police station which had been established to guard the prince's arrival was formally abolished. The Hohenzollern is under orders to proceed to Bermuda, where she will make her first stop.

"On this day of my departure, I beg to thank you personally, as well as the nation whose guest I have been, for all the kindness, consideration and good feeling I have met with during my visit to your interesting country. I hope that my visit may have increased the feelings of friendship between the country I represent and the United States. Bidding you farewell, let me wish you every possible success, and, pray, remember me to Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Roosevelt, who so charmingly and with so much pluck accomplished her task when launching his majesty's yacht Meteor. Once more, most hearty thanks. May we meet again."

"Not only have I enjoyed your visit personally, but on behalf of my countrymen I wish to express to you the pleasure it has been to see you and the real good I think your visit has done in promoting a feeling of friendship between Germany and the United States. It is my most earnest wish that this feeling may strengthen steadily. Mrs. Roosevelt sends her warm regards, and so would Miss Roosevelt if she were not absent. Pray present my heartiest greeting to his majesty, the German emperor. Again, I thank you for your visit and wish you all good luck wherever you may be."

Victim of Infuriated Bull

Newton, Mass., March 12.—David Betts, a farm hand on the Wauwinnett farm, was fatally gored by a bull last night. He was at work when attacked and finally was rescued by other workmen. Betts was terribly wounded and died in a short time.

THE OAF'S ANSWER.

Kipling's Famous Poem Satirized In Stinging Verse.

Since Rudyard Kipling published "The Islanders" there have been many parodies, but no metrical answers worthy of the name until the following appeared in the London Star:

Fenced by our patient fathers, ringed by our peaceful seas,
Long did we wake in quiet and long lie down at ease,
Till you said of strife, "What is it?" of the sword, "Let it flash again!"
Till you made a god of wanton war and an idol of armed men.
We stopped our ears to the warning; we would neither look nor heed;
We set our hate above our laws and our lust above our need.
Because of our witless rancor and our pitiless pride of race
We grudged our brothers freedom and our friends a resting place.
You blustered and bragged and bellowed, and we paid when you bade us "pay,"
But where are the fifty thousand men that you twanged to Table bay?
For soon were the judgments loosened, soon was our shame revealed,
At the hands of a little people, few but apt in the field.
Though now they are only a remnant (and Milner has started his "Star").
You ask for more of our millions and more of our flesh for war.
Sons you would tear from their mothers, lads from their lasses sweet
And brush them under the wheels of war like the dust and dirt of the street.
And what did you look they should compass? Glory that fades like a breath,
Glory to Gold in the highest at the price of a brother's death?
So! And we asked, "Is it glory to hollow the veldt with graves
And to build a gilded empire on the backs of beaten slaves?"
But you said, "The war is over!" But you said, "The end is come!"
And we swallowed the hocus of Hatfield, we swallowed lie of Brum.
Then we returned to our vomit, then we contented our souls
With the kipling fools at the pothouse and the rudyard oafs at the polls.
Given to strong delusion, wholly believing a lie,
We saw that the war was not over, and we let the months go by.
Waiting some easy wonder, hoping some saving signs,
Cheated, openly cheated, for the sake of the sacred mines.
Cheated and sick of your boasting, ah, what is your boasting worth
When the ink you fling is a blotch of blood on the rotting earth!
It was not made with the mountains; it is not one with the deep;
Fools and oafs devised it, fools and oafs must keep.
Fools, not men, belaud you; oafs, not men, adore;
How should men applaud you, O laureate of gore?

MORGAN'S BENEVOLENCE.

Kind Act For Which the Financier Was Blessed by Hospital Patients.

Here is a story which Prince Henry may not have heard about, although the luncheon given to him at Sherry's, where he met the "captains of industry," is more or less connected with it, says the New York Commercial Advertiser:

A woman had met with an accident and had been sent to the New York Polyclinic hospital, in East Thirty-fourth street. This hospital has not been favored with as many gifts as others have been, and the patient referred to found it lacking in some of the little essentials which make sick women comfortable, although nothing could exceed the devotion of the medical staff.

The new patient, filled with gratitude for the attention she received there, resolved to see what she could do to benefit the hospital. She had never seen J. Pierpont Morgan, but had heard that he was a benevolent man. So she wrote to him and told him of the needs of the hospital. Days passed, but there was no reply to her letter, and it seemed as if it might have been ignored by the busy financier. The woman recovered and returned home. It was not long after that she again became a patient in the same hospital. This was about the time of Prince Henry's arrival.

The day after the Sherry luncheon to the captains of industry an express wagon delivered at the hospital gates two porcelain bathtubs filled with the flowers which had decorated the tables and the room at Sherry's on the day the prince dined there. The card of J. Pierpont Morgan accompanied the gift.

This little incident made one woman at least realize that the great financier was not absorbed in Wall street affairs to the exclusion of all else, and it filled the hospital with fragrance and beauty, for which the inmates blessed him. One who was there at the time says:

"It may be pleasant for Mr. Morgan to know that many lips murmured blessings in connection with his name, and more than one sick woman prayed that he might be spared for many a long year to do acts of kindness like this."

New Use For Cinders.

George F. Averill, living at Arverne, N. Y., says that he has discovered a means of using the waste coal ash cinders that will make the hitherto useless material of great commercial value. The use which Mr. Averill has found for these coal ashes is in a new kind of fireproof mortar, 90 per cent of which is made up of coal ashes and the rest double hydraulic cement, says the Chicago Chronicle. Mr. Averill has had tests made under the supervision of the department of buildings in Manhattan, which show that the insulating properties of a block constructed according to Mr. Averill's specifications are very great.

Child's Opinion of Prince Henry.

The day after Prince Henry's visit to Washington Archibald Roosevelt discussed the prince with great vigor to some of his schoolmates, as follows, says the Baltimore News:

"Why," he said, "he ain't like any prince I ever heard of. He didn't come up in a chariot drawn by white horses at all. He rode in a carriage just like ours. I don't think he's much of a prince," the small boy sniffed. "He looks just like any other man—made of meat, you know."

SPRING CLEANING.

Most housekeepers dread the thoughts of spring cleaning, but if they accept our assistance their labors will be lightened and their work quickly done.

We have competent men to take up, clean and relay your carpets, or make them over to fit other rooms. Men to hang your draperies, pictures, polish your furniture, make over mattresses, measure and make new shades or turn your old ones. Men to reupholster or repair all kinds of furniture. It's wise to make your engagements early, for housekeepers every where are getting the cleaning fever on, and of course you want to finish your work first.

ACTIVITY OF MERCHANTS

To Hold a Conference on the Strike Question

FREIGHT BUSINESS BLOCKED

Ranks of Strikers Swelled by Addition of Coal Drivers and Expressmen—Members of Central Labor Union May Decide to Strike

Boston, March 13.—With 20,000 men idle, their ranks likely to be greatly swelled by sympathetic votes of the Building Trades Council and the Boston Central Labor Union, which meet tonight, and the entire city beginning to suffer from the effects of congested traffic, the only ray of light visible is the hope that the conference of business interests which has been arranged for today may lead to a settlement of the strike.

This conference, which is due in a large measure to the influence of Governor Crane, was arranged late yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the representatives of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Boston Associated Board of Trade and the Boston Merchants' association, with the state board of arbitration. Everyone present realized the seriousness of the situation, and after an interchange of opinions, it was decided that the best way of getting at public opinion would be to call a conference of business men of the city, at which, among others, the presidents of the produce exchange, the coal exchange, and of all the railroads, will be invited. It is also hoped that representatives of the Civic Federation may also be present.

During the day Governor Crane had a long talk with the committee of the Allied Transportation Council, having the strike in charge, but at its conclusion he announced that he could see no way at present of solving the problem. Later he sent for Mayor Collins, and the two executives were in conference for some time.

A little later Mayor Collins made a statement that he had no power to act. He said further: "Until the railroad officials consent to having the differences considered by an arbitration board, there is nothing more we can do. They are obdurate, therefore our hands are tied. The governor and myself have done all in our power to render assistance. The answer from Senator Hanna does not leave a further opening for working for an immediate settlement. The saloons cannot be closed until rioting starts. There is no rioting, and only when there is can the power to close them be exercised."

The railroad company against which the strike is chiefly directed, the New York, New Haven and Hartford, shows no inclination to ask for interference by the National Civic Federation, and reiterates what it has said from the first, that its duties as a common carrier are defined by law and that it is compelled to handle all freight delivered to it, whether by union or non-union teams, and that it has no option in the matter. This position, it adhered to by the company, may result in the refusal of the federation to interfere in the quarrel, as it desires a request from both parties to a controversy before taking up the matter.

Freight business at the various railroads, wharves and docks is almost at a standstill, and the moving of accumulated merchandise is becoming a most serious matter to the merchants.

The strike of coal teamsters is one of the most aggravating features, and its effect was quickly felt at hotels, restaurants and places having accommodation for only a limited supply of coal, and coal dealers were kept busy answering appeals from anxious customers for coal which could not be delivered. Several of these applicants stated that unless coal was forthcoming at once they would be forced to close their business.

Many of the teams of the Adams, National and local express companies, whose drivers are not affiliated with the Teamsters' union, were at work yesterday, but today all went out with the exception of the United States Express company's men, who belong to no union. There is also a movement to call out the hack and cabmen, who, since the strike of the Armstrong Transfer company's drivers, have been transferring more or less baggage for passengers across the city.

The brewery employes will, it is said, be locked out by Friday if the strike continues, as the supply of coal on hand at the various breweries will give out by that time and work will have to be suspended.

The meetings of the Central Labor Union and of the Building Trades Council tonight are awaited with great interest. It is the general belief that, although such action will be bitterly fought, the meeting will endorse the strike to the extent of ordering out the 90 bodies affiliated in its membership. It is also believed that the Building Trades Council will also take similar action as a matter of principle.

A particularly interesting feature of the strike is the unusually quiet appearance of the streets and the excellent manner in which the strikers have conducted themselves ever since the strike began. Although groups of men are to be seen lounging about discussing the situation, they are orderly and only in rare instances is an intoxicated man seen. In various sections of the city union headquarters have been opened which has the effect of keeping large numbers of men off the street.

Fewer teams driven by master teamsters or their clerks were seen upon the streets yesterday than was the case Tusday, and in fact no heavy teaming except "emergency" transportation was attempted by any except the teams of the Brine Transportation company. The latter were working to their full capacity.

In view of their crippled condition the different railroad companies have been making strenuous efforts to secure men to take the places of their striking freight handlers and clerks, and have succeeded in getting a large number from towns and cities along their respective lines. The Boston and Maine officials will reinstate all their old men who make application for their old places today, but those who fail to report at that time will find their occupation gone.

Secretary Easley of the National Civic Federation has wired several of the prominent labor leaders to meet him in conference here today. He will also be present at a meeting of representative business men and labor leaders who will be in conference in response to the invitation extended to them by the state board of arbitration.

The strike has caused such great complications in Lynn, especially among the shoe trade, that the Board of Trade has deemed it necessary to take a hand in it. A canvass of the members has shown that the majority believe that a radical plan should be adopted to bring the R. S. Brine company of Boston to terms. A committee will be named to communicate with boards of trade in cities around Boston, with the idea of forming a general committee to appear without delay before the Boston Merchants' association and demand that it end the strike by refusing to give business to the Brine company.

MAY CLOSE SEVENTY MILLS

Fall River Operatives Insist Upon Ten Percent Advance In Wages

Fall River, Mass., March 13.—Meetings of the unions composed entirely of textile operatives last night resulted in each instance in a vote to strike next Monday, unless the Textile Council shall order otherwise, in all the mills in which a 10 percent advance of wages is refused. The manufacturers have offered a 6 percent advance, to go into effect April 1. M. C. D. Borden has granted a 10 percent increase to employes of his mills. A strike such as seems impending would throw 25,000 people out of employment, and close about 70 mills.

The wage question is now left with the manufacturers again, and they take as firm a stand in their position as the operatives do in theirs. There are many persons who believe the strike will not materialize, and that something will turn up before Monday to avert the trouble.

Treasurer Won't Discuss Strike

Providence, March 13.—The news that Treasurer Wood had yesterday declined to enter into a discussion with the strike committee and had referred the representatives of each mill to the agents, has caused surprise in Olneyville. It is thought that the failure of the conference will lead to a strike of many other employes in the four plants of the company there.

Military Patrol Reduced

Norfolk, March 13.—The cars of the Norfolk Railway and Light company are running without military guards. Eight companies of militia will be retained in Norfolk until all danger of trouble has disappeared. Meantime four of the commands from nearby points have been relieved from duty.

Expensive Miscalculation

Chicago, March 13.—Frost leaving the ground caused the destruction of a new four-story brick building here valued at $60,000. The structure was begun last December. Apparently sufficient calculation as to the then frost-hardened earth was not taken. Warm weather caused the foundation of the structure to sink perceptibly yesterday. One corner fell and firemen at once razed the building.

Apology Closes the Incident

Washington, March 13.—It is announced that the trouble growing out of the clash between Russian soldiers and American sailors of the U. S. S. Vicksburg at Ninchwang has been settled satisfactorily, through the preference of apologies by the Russian commandant at that port to Captain Barry, the commander of the Vicksburg.

PRINCE HENRY'S VISIT

Subject of Exchange of Compliments Between Kaiser and President

Washington, March 13.—Emperor William yesterday cabled President Roosevelt as follows:

"Now that my brother has left the hospitable shores of the United States, homeward bound, I feel it a pleasing duty to express to you how deeply grateful I and the whole of the German people are for the splendor of the hospitality and the cordiality of the reception which was accorded to Prince Henry by all classes of the American people.

"My outstretched hand has been met by you with a firm, manly and friendly grip. May heaven bless our relations with peace and good will between the two great nations. My best compliments and wishes to Miss Alice."

President Roosevelt's reply follows:

"Your brother's visit to this country has accomplished much in showing the depth of kindly feeling which exists between the two nations. It has been most fortunate in every way, and I trust you will permit me to congratulate you on the admirable manner in which he has borne himself. He has won the genuine and hearty sympathy and regard of all with whom he has been brought in contact. We have welcomed him for his own sake, and we have welcomed him still more heartily as the representative of yourself and of the mighty German people. I thank you in the name of the American people for what you have done, and I thank you personally in addition for the gracious form which your courtesy took."

Disaster on the Mississippi

Vicksburg, Miss., March 13.—Steamer Providence, plying between this port and Lake Palmyra, was capsized early yesterday morning by a sudden squall and 21 of her passengers and crew were drowned. Just as the boat was entering Lake Palmyra a sudden storm of the proportions of a tornado caught her broadside on. The little vessel was lifted almost entirely out of the water, and her hull turned bottom up in 40 feet of water. Only nine of the entire boat's company were saved.

An Anecdote of Methuen

Berlin, March 13.—General Methuen was British military attache at Berlin from 1877 to 1881. Upon one occasion when he was going to the palace to visit Emperor William I, in 1881, he jumped into the Spree and saved the life of a drowning child. It made him late at his audience with the emperor. For this he apologized, but did not give the reason for the delay. A few days later, at a reception in the palace, the emperor pinned the rescue medal on the lapel of Methuen's coat.

For Revealing Military Secrets

London, March 13.—Wiring from Vienna, the correspondent of The Daily Mail says that a court-martial at Warsaw condemned to death a Russian colonel named Grimm for the systematic revelation of military secrets to a foreign power and that several aristocratic Polish ladies have been arrested as accomplices of Colonel Grimm. Colonel Grimm, it is said, was shot within two hours of the passing of the court's sentence.

Government Ownership of Railroads

New York, March 13.—Martin A. Knapp, chairman of the interstate commerce commission, delivered a lecture here last night on "Transportation." Mr. Knapp said that the highways, from the earliest period of mankind, were considered as public property, and that it was no more than just and proper that all railroads should be under government control.

Postoffice Overtaxed

Washington, March 13.—The postoffice department has been appealed to by a Miss Griffin of Australia to assist in breaking a "daisy chain" which had been started by her to collect cancelled stamps. The "chain" has grown to large dimensions, and the postoffice where she is has complained of being overcrowded by her mail.

May Not Long Survive Husband

Chicago, March 13.—Mrs. Altgeld, widow of the former governor, was prostrated by the shock of the news from Joliet. Grave apprehension for her welfare is felt, as she had been in delicate health for two years. The decedent leaves no children.

Gain For Liberal Forces

Colon, March 13.—Chiriqui has just been captured by the Liberal forces. The Chiriqui district is extremely rich in cattle ,and the isthmus usually depends upon that district for its supply of beef.

An Alleged Embezzler

Manila, March 13.—Lieutenant Hagerdorn, quartermaster of the Twenty-eighth infantry, has been placed in confinement, charged with embezzlement.

Weather Conditions and Foreacst

Almanac, Friday, March 14.
Sun rises—6; sets—5:49.
Moon sets—11:22 p. m.
High water—2:15 a. m.; 2:30 p. m.

The storm that was central over the west gulf states has moved to southeastern Michigan with a considerable increase in intensity. Temperatures as a rule continue above the seasonal average. No precipitation of consequence is indicated. On the coast the winds will be brisk to high south to southwest. Storm warnings are displayed from Hatteras to Eastport.

JOHN P ALTGELD DEAD

Stricken by Apoplexy at a Pro-Boer Meeting

HE PARDONED ANARCHISTS

And Had Controversy With President Cleveland Over Chicago Railroad Strike While Chief Executive of Illinois During Troublous Times

Joliet, Ills., March 13.—John P. Altgeld, ex-governor of Illinois, died here yesterday of apoplexy with which he was stricken at the conclusion of his speech at a pro-Boer mass meeting in the Joliet theatre Tuesday night.

JOHN P. ALTGELD.

John Peter Altgeld was born in Germany in December, 1847, and was brought to this country by his parents while yet a child. The family settled near Mansfield, O., where Altgeld received his common school education. At 16 years of age he enlisted as a private in the Federal army and was in the service until the close of the war. He then taught school in Missouri, studying law evenings, and was admitted to the Missouri bar in 1869. His first elective office was that of state attorney in Andrew county, Mo., in 1874. The next year he resigned and moved to Chicago, where he practiced law. In 1884 he ran for congress, but was defeated. From 1886 to 1891 he was judge of the superior court of Illinois.

With Altgeld's election as governor in 1893 his stormy career was fairly under way. The four years of his administration have been bitterly attacked by his political enemies and faintly praised by many of his political friends. Juggling with the state funds, their deposit in favored banks, the dissipation to private sources of interest accruing on deposited public funds, sharp bargains by which administration adherents profited—these were freely charged by Governor Altgeld's opponents.

In defense of his pardoning of Fielden, Schwab and Neebe, three men serving life sentences upon convictions of complicity in the bomb throwing during the Haymarket riots, when several police officers were killed, Governor Altgeld made a statement that the jury that tried the men was practically a packed jury.

His attitude during the great Chicago railroad strike of 1894 was one of inaction. If it was not dictated by covert sympathy with the strikers it was at least interpreted so by mobs that destroyed railroad property, sacked, burned and pillaged cars, and tied up transportation by rail in a wide area around Chicago. The mails having been interrupted, President Cleveland ordered United States troops to the scene of riot and interruption to the federal mails and interstate commerce. There was bloodshed, but law and order triumphed. Meantime Governor Altgeld entered into a controversy with the president over the latter's action but was finally silenced by a stern rebuke from the president, who telegraphed that discussion should give way "to active efforts of all authority to restore obedience to law and to protect life and property."

Mr. Altgeld was a partisan Democrat with many populistic and socialistic ideas. He became an enthusiastic silver man, a supporter of Bryan. When that doctrine was repudiated in 1896 Altgeld helped to hold the Illinois Democracy in line for Bryan in 1900, worked for the reiteration at Kansas City of the Chicago platform.

Meantime he had been hard hit in other directions, financially and physically as well as politically. He came near going down in the Globe Savings bank crash in 1896, when the funds were misappropriated by President Spaulding, who he himself had recommended for treasurer of the university board, and in which bank he was a stockholder, director, and large borrower on doubtful collateral stock in his extensive real estate enterprises in Chicago.

Ever since the failure of the Globe bank Altgeld had not been a well man. His mind was just as clear and active as of old, but though the spirit was willing the flesh was weak.

He clung to politics, was an adviser of and later a political enemy of Carter Harrison. In 1899 he ran for mayor of Chicago as an independent, but was beaten. He was a man of brilliancy, for he compelled attention; of ability, because he raised himself from the towpath to the bench and the highest executive position open to him; of sincerity and honesty, probably; of mistakes, many and grave; and, withal, a unique figure in the political life of the republic.

Minute Men to Organize

New York, March 13.—Frank J. Batcheller of Boston, chairman of the national committee of the American Minute Men, issued a call yesterday for a meeting of the national committee to be held in Boston on May 21 to perfect plans for a thorough organization and for an agressive campaign for the election of members of congress and other officials. Mr. Batcheller says that the American Minute Men is the successor to the A. P. A., which has passed out of existence. It claims a membership of 2,000,000.

Confessed Horrible Atrocities

Beaumont, Tex., March 13.—Mattie Bennett confessed yesterday to the sheriff that she was at the head of a gang of negro women and white men who had for months been luring men into her house, drugging them, beating them and robbing them. If they died the victims were dragged to the river and thrown in. If they were only stunned, they were taken out of the house to a remote street and left for pedestrians or policemen to find.

A Compromise Measure

Washington, March 13.—Overtures have been made for a compromise of the conflict over tariff concessions to Cuba and there are evidences that the two elements will come together, probably on a proposition to have the 20 percent reciprocal reduction apply for one year from next December, and covering one sugar crop.

Meteor's Mainmast Stepped

New York, March 13.—The mainmast of Meteor III, which is being built for the German emperor, was stepped yesterday afternoon. The mast is 80 feet long and 21 1-2 inches in diameter, extends 11 feet below the deck and is made of Oregon pine.

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. Among the tens of thousands who have used it for the grip, not one case has ever been reported that did not recover. For sale by all druggists.

State House Hearings.

Good Afternoon.

Lukban, the recently captured Filipino leader, is a half-breed Chinese and Filipino and is said to possess all the cruel inhumanity of both races.

Edward Tuck, a wealthy Boston man who has resided in Paris, is about to build a free hospital for Americans in that city. It will be entirely under American control.

Mr. Bryan in his frantic appeal for a million postal cards to influence the Senate to vote for the popular election of that body, seems to forget that the Senate was fundamentally created to resist, not to surrender to popular clamor.

Natick proposes to do a wholesale business in schoolhouses this year, as it has voted to build three new ones and remodel two others. But altogether will not cost half as much as it is proposed to put into the new one at Quincy Point. One of the Natick ones will cost $6,300, and two will cost $9,000 each.

Some of the features proposed by the Ledger for "Old Home Week" in Quincy in July meet with favor, but if there is a celebration in this city it will probably be confined to one or two days. One suggests a children's festival in the morning, old folks banquet in the afternoon, and a dance in the evening for young people.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Trust in the future is a characteristic of the modern man. It is now pretty well understood that life on this planet has risen from simpler forms, that man is not a fallen god expelled from an Eden and condemned to perpetual banishment, but a risen brute, allowed by the Divine Ruler for some inscrutable reason to develop in morals and intelligence in the harsh school of experience after countless generations. The earth has improved, and living things with it. Society has advanced since the Christian era in the realization of justice and love—slowly, almost imperceptibly perhaps, but enough to show the direction, to establish the fact of advance and to negative the idea of degeneration and decay. Here, too, men feel that what has been done to exterminate cruelty and selfishness is as nothing to what will be done. Ethically as well as materially, the future must be a stage of progress, and men regard the coming centuries with hope.—Hartford Times.

☞The Springfield Republican is positive in the assurance that "Governor Crane cannot be considered as a possibility for further service in his present place." There has been much speculation concerning the prospect in this regard, and not a little frank expression of hope that the commonwealth might somehow have another year of Mr. Crane's service as governor. But as nobody could offer him the place, so he could not be expected to say to nobody in particular that he would not take it. In private, however, The Republican says, Mr. Crane is frank to say that he would not for a moment consider any proposition of the sort. Evidently the statement is made with care and exactitude, and may be taken as accurate. We think the Republicans of Massachusetts would generally be glad to see Mr. Crane governor for a fourth year, and would even pardon his changing his mind now; but he could hardly be forced into the place against his will. —New Bedford Standard.

FOUNDER'S DAY.

Elaborate Program at Woodward Institute.

Scene from Merchant of Venice.

Tableaux Also a Successful Feature.

The annual Founder's day exercises the Woodward Institute were held Wednesday evening, and Woodward hall proved none too large to accomodate the friends who desired to attend. In fact the attendance was limited to the capacity of the hall and a much larger one could have been readily filled.

The program presented was of a very high order. In fact it would seem that each year an effort was made to improve on the excellence of the previous year's program, and make it a little better.

It is therefore no reflection upon previous years to say that this year's program ranks at the head of the list, and reflects great credit upon the teachers who arranged and trained the pupils in their respective parts.

The ushers for the occasion were: Miss Merrill, Miss Phillips, Miss Saville, Miss Freeman, Miss Hardwick and Miss Gardner.

It was a few minutes past 8 o'clock when the school marched in and took their places in the seats reserved for them.

The march was neatly done and evoked some little applause.

The program opened with three musical selections by the school under the direction of Mr. John D. Buckingham. These selections were "Live We Singing," "Hymn to Night," and "Prithee."

Then came two essays, The old Shakespearian Drama, and The Boyhood of Shakespeare. These were given by Miss Victoria Carter and Miss Florence Newcomb and were also designed as a preliminary introduction to the scene from one of Shakespeare's plays, "The Merchant of Venice." The first told of how the plays were arranged and put upon the stage in olden days, and the second the life of Shakespeare.

Following this were three piano selections by Miss Alice L. Claflin, and then the curtain was rolled back for Scene 1, act 4, of the Merchant of Venice, known as the court scene.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE:

Duke of Venice,	Helen C. Durgin
Antonio,	Lola A. West
Bassanio,	Gertrude King
Shylock,	Mary L. Rodgers
Portia,	Bessie M. Drew
Nerissa,	Susan A. Cannon
Gratiano,	Marian H. Bates
Salerio,	Helena F. McConarty
Clerk of Court,	Jennie J. Harris
Magnificoes,	Maggie I. Shirley, Helen E. Reardon, Elizabeth Brown

Of this presentation too much praise cannot be given, and it would be unfair to single out any particular character and say that excelled for all were equally good. The staging of the scene was fine and the costumes which were by a well known Boston firm were superb in their richness.

Following the presentation of the drama there was a series of tableaux arranged by Miss Lane. These represented "Singing Girls," "Helen of Troy," "Nydia," "Golden Stair," "The Fates," "Summer," and "Music."

The costuming of the tableaux was not quite as elaborate as that of the drama but although simple they were very pretty and appropriate. The grouping of the tableaux was fine and while colored lights would have lightened the effect somewhat, there was nothing to criticise as presented, and the encores that greeted each tableau were in themselves evidence that they were appreciated and enjoyed.

The tableaux and those to take part were:

a. Singing girls, from Della Robia, Misses Waldron, Holton, Babcock, Patterson, Doble, Burke and Fegan.

b. Helen of Troy, from Leighton, Misses Hatch, Barker and Bates.

c. Nydia, from Bordenhausen, Miss Doyle.

d. Golden stair, from Burne-Jones, Misses Waldron, Jilbert, McDonnell, Patterson, Curtin and Holton.

e. The Fates, Misses Thompson, Doyle and Curtin.

f. Summer, from Reynolds-Stephens, Misses Doble, McDonnell, Sprague, Bates and Fegan.

g. Music, Misses Babcock, Bates, Burke, Curtin, Doble, Doyle, Fegan, Hatch, Holton Jilbert, McDonnell, Patterson, Sprague, Thompson and Waldron.

This closed the evening exercises, and as the large audience slowly left the hall naught but words of praise were heard from all.

Essay on Philippines.

Over a year ago a North Windham boy enlisted in the United States army, and was ordered to the Phillippines for duty. The week one of his friends in this city received a letter from him which contained among other things an extremely interesting essay on the Philippines. It is as follows:

"The Philippines are a bunch of trouble, death and destruction. The climate is a combustion of electrical discharges, especially adapted to raising cain. The soil is fertil for raising large crops of insurrection and trickery. The inhabitants are very industrious, their chief occupations being trench building, giving poisoned water to American soldiers, making bolos and unloading Remington cartridges.

"The amusements of the male sex are cock fighting, monte, theft and cheating. Their diet consists of raw fish, dried snails, boiled rice, stewed rice, fried rice and rice. The principal exports are rice, hemp, sick soldiers and contagious diseases. The imports are American soldiers, arms, amunition, rum, beer, tobacco, bacon and salmon. Malaria is so common that on numerous occasions the islands have been taken with a chill (earthquake).

"Manila, the chief city, is situated on Manila bay, a large, landlocked body of water, full of sharks, filth and submarine boats, which Uncle Sam has forgotton to raise. Cavite is the next city in size. The cities are all noted for their large numbers of saloons and Chinese. The towns are an accumulation of shacks, full of filth, cats, dogs, chickens, pigs, lice, niggers and monkeys, who all sleep on the floor together on terms of equality.

"The climate is healthy for tarantulas, roaches, scorpions, centipedes, snakes, alligators, etc. The soil is adapted to raising foul odors and breeding disease, and the islands in general are an uncivilized cannibalized blot on the face of God's green earth, and would be, I think, a very appropriate present for a deadly enemy."

"Seriously, I am getting along finely at this time, the duty is very light, guard once a week; drill one hour a day; inspection once a month; pay day, once in two months. We have plenty of good clothes, and good food three times a day. There is good money to be made here, I believe.

"This country is a very bad one, and I do not like it at all, although I have become acclimated, so I do not mind the heat so much, but it is an unhealthy spot at the best. We have had one "brush" only since coming here, shooting 20 and capturing six. One died in the guard house and three others hung for being traitors to the United States."

In Shipbuilding.

Sydney F. Walker in writing for the Engineering Magazine for March on the possible applications of electricity, says: A portion of the work of a shipbuilding yard, as well of other industries that will in my opinion be done in future years by electricity, is the heating of the different portions of the ship—the plates, the bars, etc., which have to be heated before they can be bent to the required forms. The method at present employed is clumsy compared with electric methods, and though it will probably be thought by practical ship-builders the dream of a visionary, I have seen so many dreams come true during the last twenty-eight years that I have been engaged in electrical work, so many of the prophecies for which I have been roundly laughed at have become accomplished facts (and in many cases, in the hands of the very men who laughed,) that I have no hesitation in again venturing into the dangerous field of prophecy.

I believe also that the problem of protecting ship's bottoms from the action of sea-water will be solved, more effectually than it is now, by depositing the protecting metal upon the iron by electricity. There are, as in other cases, difficulties to be overcome in this matter apart from the practical difficulty involved in arranging the enormous depositing bath required for the purpose. Deposited metal is porous, unless hammered afterward; but this will be overcome as so many other difficulties have been during the past twenty-five years.

State Highway.

Mayor Bryant and Commissioner Knowlton are in conference with the Massachusetts Highway Commission today relative to the building of a part of Quincy avenue as a State road. Several conferences have already been held and the commission has practically decided to accept Quincy avenue from Braintree line for a distance of about 3000 feet. The conference today is to get the commission to make an allotment so that it can be built this year.

GROCERS BANQUET

Old Colony Association Entertain Guests.

All Milwaukee Delegates Present.

Largest Meeting Ever Held by the Association.

It is said that all the grocers in eastern Massachusetts interested in association work are always pleased to attend meetings held at Quincy. That was proved Wednesday evening when the Old Colony Grocers and Provision Dealers entertained at Hotel Greenleaf.

Many of the guests from out of town arrived early in the afternoon, as there was a meeting at 4 o'clock of the executive committee of the Massachusetts association. The early arrivals were escorted though the old First church, and were much interested in the mural monuments, the high pulpit and the old Bibles. They also went into the basement and visited the tomb of the Presidents, John and John Quincy Adams, and their wives, and saw the remains of the old town hearse.

At the meeting of the Massachusetts association only routine business was transacted. It was decided to call a convention later.

From 7 to 7.30 there was a reception under the aispices of the Old Colony Association. All the twelve delegates to the national convention at Milwaukee were present and were the guests of honor, viz:

From the Massachusetts association, —President George H. Bond of Newton, Fred Humphrey of Weymouth, and L. E. Pease of Springfield.

From the Lowell Retail Grocers' association.—President David Gerow and Secretary R. J. McCluskey.

From the Boston association, President A. A. Fales of Charlestown, Oscar F. Frost of Melrose and J. C. Neal of South Boston.

From the International Bureau of Grocers,—Vice Presdent Robert M. Floyd.

From the New England Grocer,—A. C. Dowse of Malden.

From the Old Colony Grocers' Association,—President A. T. Faunce of North Abington and ex-President John W. Nash of Quincy.

Other guests were Mayor Bryant of Quincy, Charles E. Lane of Springfield, G. P. Akins of Newton, E. W. Makepeace of Haverhill.

The Old Colony association was largely represented, the district including Braintree, the Weymouths, Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Rockland, Abington, Whitman, Brockton, Randolph, Holbrook, Milton and Quincy.

At 7.30 there was a business meeting at which President A. F. Faunce of North Abington presided. Resolutions were adopted in support of the Pure Food bill now before Congress, and also in endorsement of the bill in the Massachusetts Legislature relative to fake advertising.

An adjournment was then made to the dining room of the hotel where Landlord Estabrook catered with satisfaction to the wants of the inner man.

The post prandial exercises were brief. President Faunce welcomed the Milwaukee delegates and said the association was proud of their work at the convention. He said no other delegates at the convention received the consideration that the Massachusetts men did.

Oscar F. Frost, one of the Boston delegates, had heard that the Old Colony association was a very live body and now he knew it personally. He said the delegates had been very cordially received at Milwaukee, and it had been a good thing to bring the eastern and western men together. The latter favored merchant associations, while we believe in each trade for itself. The east is probably more in favor of State association than National, as evils in the trade could be reached quicker. Associations were necessary. We should aim to put business men in the Legislature.

President Bond of the Massachusetts association was introduced to tell the objects of the association, but confined himself mostly to amusing incidents of the trip to Milwaukee.

Mayor Bryant touched on legislation of interest to grocers which met with favor.

An early adjournment was necessary that out of town guests might reach home.

The prizes in the Quincy Club Hub whist tournament Wednesday night were captured by James T. Tenniman and Warren H. Rideout.

Miss Edith Farnington, formerly of Atlantic has been the guest of Miss Mabel Dornan of Appleton street the past week.

George F. Wilson & Co. furnished the caterer for the parish supper and the eats were enjoyed and the general verdict was that it was cracker jack.

The present term of the Woodward Institute will close on Wednesday, March 19, the same day as the public schools.

About 125 enjoyed the supper and social at the First church chapel Wednesday evening. It was in charge of the ladies whose names began with F to M, who served cold meats, baked beans, etc., bountifully.

Miss Helen Mitchell celebrated her birthday Wednesday afternoon by entertaining a number of her playmates at the home of her parents on Pleasant street. The afternoon was spent in a pleasant manner with games, etc., not forgetting the refreshments. Miss Helen was presented with a number of gifts by her guests.

Mrs. Herbert S. Hayford was the hostess at the ladies' matinee whist at the Granite City club rooms Wednesday afternoon. Prizes for the best scores were given as follows: Candelabrum, to Mrs. George T. Magee; silver spoons, to Mrs. R. R. Smith and Miss C. L. Bliss; bottle of perfume to Mrs. Wheble; handkerchief to Mrs. Frank C. Packard. Light refreshments were served.

Wednesday evening Neponset Lodge, I. O. O. F., visited John Hancock lodge and conferred the first degree on nine candidates from John Hancock, Mt. Wollaston, and Neponset lodges. D.D. John H. Cooper of Rockland was present and made some very interesting remarks. Visiting brothers and members to the number of nearly one hundred were present, and a royal good time was enjoyed.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS ADAMS.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian), Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town hearse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

Hancock street, across from First Church. Many old stones, among the oldest that of Rev. John Hancock, father of the Patriot, who died May 7, 1744. Was fifth minister of First Church.

PRESIDENTS ADAMS MANSION.

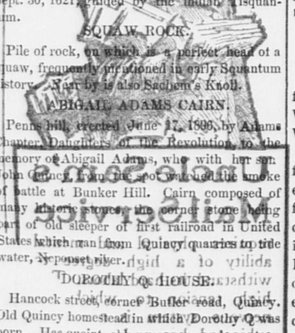

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants. Not open to public.

JOHN HANCOCK BIRTHPLACE.

Adams street, junction of Dimmock and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

MYLES STANDISH CAIRN.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution, of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept. 30, 1621, guided by the Indian Tisquantum.

SQUAW ROCK.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN.

Penn's hill, erected June 17, 1895, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son John Quincy Adams, watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being bars of old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

DOROTHY Q. HOUSE.

Hancock street, corner Butler road, Quincy. Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Has quaint old paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber, and other interesting features. Private house, not open to public.

MYLES STANDISH SPRING.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, when Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay.

PRESIDENTS LANE.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Many other points of interest might be mentioned: Thomas Crane Memorial Hall which is the public library building; Merrymount, the home of Mrs. John Quincy Adams, where Morton erected his famous May pole in 1626; the soldiers' monument at Mount Wollaston cemetery with its tablets; the famous Quincy granite quarries, many of great depth; the granite yards where monuments and statuary are being cut, and the polishing mills where granite is polished; also the big ship yard now established at Quincy Point.

MARRIED.

CHADBOURNE—NEILSON—In Wollaston, March 12, at the M. E. Parsonage, by Rev. Jesse Wagner, Mr. Guy Goss Chadbourne to Miss Emma Caroline Neilson, both of Quincy.

DIED.

JOHNSON—In Quincy, March 12, at 7 Mill street, Mrs. Hannah, widow of Mr. Oren Johnson, formerly of Lebanan, N. H., aged 76 years and 7 months.

THE BROTHERHOOD

Give a Reception to Bethany Ladies.

The Attendance Very Large.

Ping Pong, Music and Refreshments the Attractions.

The guests of the Brotherhood of Bethany church on their arrival at the chapel Wednesday evening found elaborate decorations of red, white and blue, also lighted lanterns and colored lights. Clothing was checked in the basement, and each lady as she entered the chapel was presented a pink. Although the attendance was 300 to 400 all the ladies had a pink.

In the room of the primary department there were six tables arranged for the popular game of ping pong, and and tournament for "fellows," young ladies, and in mixed doubles were played during the evening with the following results:

Miss Taber beat Miss Miller, 3—0.
Miss Bailey beat Miss Sargent, 3—0.
Miss Sampson beat Miss Merrill, 3—0.
Miss Nightingale beat Miss Rideout, 3—0.
Miss Taber beat Miss Bailey, 3—2.
Miss Sampson beat Mrs. Hunt, 3—0.
Miss Tasker beat Miss Taber, 3—0.
Miss Tasker beat Miss Sampson, 3—2.
Miss Tasker beat Miss Nightingale, 3—0, and was presented a broom adorned with a rooster as the first prize.

Mr. Carr won the tournament for "fellows," the scores being:

Mr. Carr beat Mr. Drake, 5—0.
Mr. Shelton beat Mr. Odiorne, 3—1.
Mr. Alden beat Mr. Taber, 3—0.
Mr. Carr beat Mr. Sampson, 3—0.
Mr. Alden beat Mr. Shelton, 3—0.
Mr. Carr beat Mr. Golwin, 3—0.
Mr. Carr beat Mr. Alden, 3—2.

The scores in mixed doubles were:

Miss Sampson and Mr. Sargent beat Miss Merrill and Mr. Hardwick 6—4.
Miss Melcher and Mr. Sampson beat Miss Hayward and Mr. Tupper, 3—0.
Miss Sampson and Mr. Sargent beat Miss Melcher and Mr. Sampson 3—0, and were awarded the first prize.

Other matches outside the tournament were played, it being the first experience of many at ping pong.

During the evening several selections were sung by the Quincy Male Quartette, and Hanson's orchestra furnished pleasing instrumental music.

The Brotherhood also furnished ice cream, cake and coffee. The cake was fresh and specially prepared, being frosted in white and cut about three inches square, a large letter "B" in pink adorning the frosting. All in all it was an enjoyable evening for the guests of the Brotherhood and to the members also.

The Unity Club.

The "Cities of Art" is the subject for the meeting of the Unity club at Wollaston tomorrow evening, with Mr. Wendell G. Corthell as director.

The members of the club and its friends are offered a rare treat on this evening. Dr. Arthur Stoddard Cooley, formerly an instructor in Harvard college and for three years a professor in the American School of Classical Languages at Athens, will give a double paper on "Athens." He is an expert traveler, archaeologist and classical scholar who will be able to give, from his intimate knowledge of this ancient and modern city, a rare view of the customs, dwellings and art of this once most famous city of Greece.

Mrs. John Litchfield will be the remaining essayist of the evening. She will give a paper upon Florence.

The director and soloist of the music for the evening is Mr. Herbert E. Follett and the numbers will be:

1. Ta'amo Amoro, Tosti
2. Margareta, Bruchler
3. All Heidelberg du Feine, Jeisen

A cordial invitation is extended to all people interested in the subjects to attend the meeting.

Compass Whist Club.

On Tuesday evening March 4th, the Compass Whist Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Read. Prizes were taken by Mrs. Charles L. Coe, and Mrs. Harry Read, while those for the gentlemen were secured by Mr. Harry Read and Mr. Elijah Hall. A bounteous collation was served and at a late hour the club adjourned, after spending an enjoyable evening.

An incident not down in the usual programme was the presentation to each lady member of the club, by Mr. Charles L. Coe, of a palm leaf fan, unique in design and beautiful in workmanship; which he obtained at Palm Beach, Florida, on his recent trip, which included that famous winter resort as well as Havana and other places in Cuba.

ODD CLASSIFICATION.

The Nicaraguan Route Designated In Mexico.

In Mexico the billing of railroad freight requires a knowledge and precision which can be attained by years of practice. This is due to the peculiar classification of various articles and the different rates of customs duties. A case recently occurred which severely taxed the ingenuity of the station agent, although he finally succeeded in meeting all requirements.

The town was overrun with tramps, and the council determined that steps must be taken to rid the city of them. It was finally decided to round them up and ship them out of the country. It would be to expensive to purchase tickets, so they decided to hire freight cars and ship their tramps as freight.

The cars were procured, and by the aid of the police the tramps were gathered, but then the question arose as to how the shipment should be designated on the bill of lading.

The term "persons" could not be used, as it would conflict with the state law relative to proper accommodations for the traveling public, and it would also be in violation of the company's rules governing the rates of passenger traffic. "Miscellaneous commodities" would not do, as that would subject the car load to a heavy duty upon crossing the tariff zone. Again they would have to be classified as "perishable" or the dispatcher might order the car sidetracked along the line.

But fortunately there is a customs law which exempts certain kinds of curiosities from duty, and so after much consideration the tramps were billed and forwarded as so many hundredweight of perishable curiosities—until to sell.

Curran's Duello.

It is said that a Harvard man who was visiting Paris in some innocent way offended a gallant member, who promptly slapped his face. The Frenchman's experience of course to receive a challenge for a duel. Instead of this proceeding the Harvard man turned and looked for an instant at his adversary, then quick as a flash pulled back his strong right hand and sent the fellow rolling across the floor, breaking the bones of his nose in two places.

After a few weeks, when the Frenchman had sufficiently recovered from the incident to discover what had happened, he issued a formal challenge to his American offender to fight a duel, and being the recipient of the challenge, the American was permitted to select the weapons. He promptly chose a baseball and being an old pitcher threw with an accuracy which resulted in the Frenchman's getting another wound in the nose, curing him entirely of the love for dueling.

How New York Sleeps.

New York is a city of infinite variety. There are those who have beds without sleep and those who sleep without beds. Three thousand of her winter residents slumber in the cradles of the canal barges that come each year from the canals of New York state, from the great lakes and lake Champlain to spend the winter months moored in New York harbor. In the tenement districts a man, his wife and his four or six or eight or more children sleep on a single room, and one who goes about the city finds many a device for slumber and repose. On Washington street, on the west side, where the Turks, the Greeks, the Assyrians and the Egyptians have their neighbors to a colony of Irish, is a queer little oriental hotel on the top floor of a tenement.—Leslie's Weekly.

Confederate Camp Flags.

The Confederate bars and bars were in 1863 supplemented by the cross flag. This was in size and shape like the other, except that it was white, with no stripes, and the battleflag in the upper corner next the staff. It was found deficient in actual service in that, displaying so much white, it was sometimes apt to be mistaken for a flag of truce, and on Feb. 21, 1865, it gave place to the last flag of the Confederacy, the outer half being a red vertical bar. Appearing so late in the war, it was not so familiar as the others, in fact, it was comparatively little known.

Rome's Churches.

The guidebooks are responsible for the popular impression that there are 365 churches in Rome, one for every day in the year, but that is a mistake. The exact number is 372, including the four great basilicas outside the walls. Besides these there are about 918 chapels connected with monasteries, nunneries, schools and private palaces and a large number of shrines erected by individuals in different parts of the city to fulfill vows or show gratitude for deliverance from peril or sickness. There are 68 monastic establishments, 42 for monks and 26 for nuns.

The Umbrella Conscience.

A correspondent contributes another to the series of umbrella myths. During a smart shower a gentleman who was unprovided hurriedly overtook an acquaintance whom he chanced to see some distance ahead of him carrying an umbrella, intending to ask if he might be permitted to share its shelter. He was almost up to him, when suddenly the other turned around and with a guilty look thrust it into his hands and vanished.—London Globe.

His Weak Spot.

Casey—Did ye hear about poor Flannery?

Cassidy—Sorra the word.

Casey—Sure, the big stame hammer in the foundry dropped down on his chist an' killed him.

Cassidy—Well, Oi'm not surprised, for he always had a wake chist.—Philadelphia Press.

A PROPOSITION

From the Quarrymen to the Manufacturers.

For Settlement of the Local Strike.

Is Regarded As a Compromise Measure.

Rumors are plentiful today in regard to a settlement of the present quarrymen's strike, and if any reliability can be placed upon these rumors, and it is believed there can, the strike will be settled between now and Saturday night, to the satisfaction of both sides. Then the men will return to work next Monday.

The basis upon which the settlement will be made is an eight-hour day with nine hours pay with the understanding that overtime work shall be paid for at the same ratio.

Just who this proposition sprang from is a conundrum, and for that matter no one cares, as long as the strike is settled.

The quarrymen held a meeting this morning at Farnum's hall, and it is reported that the sentiment of the meeting was in favor of the acceptance of the above-named proposition, and that the proposition will be sent to the Manufacturers' committee before night.

Should such a proposition be sent to the manufacturers' committee a meeting will be held at the earliest possible date, and from what can be learned the manufacturers' committee will accept the proposition, which is considered to be a compromise by both sides.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called 'La Grippe,'" says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

Robbers Held Citizens at Bay

Newcastle, Ky., March 13.—The bank of Newcastle was robbed early yesterday of $3,000 in cash, a lot of jewelry belonging to the president and $500 worth of stamps. Citizens were aroused but were held at bay until the six burglars made their escape.

Uncle Sam's Mail Service

requires physical and mental ability of a high degree to withstand its hard labors. The high tension to which the nervous system is constantly subjected, has a depressing effect, and soon headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, etc., develop in severe form. Such was the case of Mail Carrier S. F. Sweinhart, of Huntsville, Ala., he says:

"An attack of pneumonia left me with muscular rheumatism, headache, and pains that seemed to be all over me. I was scarcely able to move for about a month when I decided to give Dr. Miles' Pain Pills and Nerve Plasters a trial. In three days I was again on my route and in two weeks I was free from pain and gaining in flesh and strength."

THE SAVIOUR'S BLOOD.

A Relic of the Crucifixion Preserved at Bruges.

Many cities profess to possess as a relic some of the blood of Christ, preserved from that which flowed from him during the crucifixion. St. Louis brought particles to Paris which he had received from the emperor of Constantinople. The Church of St. John Lateran, in Rome; the Imperial monastery at Weingarten, a church in Mantua and the Chapel of the Precious Blood, in Bruges, all put forward similar claims.

The precious blood at Bruges enjoys the widest fame and is reported to have been collected from the Saviour's wounds by Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus when they took down the body from the cross. It was brought to Bruges by Thierry of Alsace in 1147. He had received it from his brother-in-law, Baldwin, king of Jerusalem.

Nearly six centuries ago the extraordinary devotion paid to this relic at Bruges by the inhabitants and visitors had induced the ecclesiastical and civil authorities to institute a solemn procession in which it should be borne in the streets.

A confraternity of the precious blood, consisting of thirty members, with a prevost and four chaplains, was established to guard it at all times.

The procession takes place annually, and the blood, contained in a crystal cylinder and inclosed in its shrine, is carried about with much pomp and ceremony.

She Coaxed In Vain.

He was a popular young dentist, with a clientele among the smart women, one of whom had been protesting for an hour that he was killing her. But he kept steadily at work with a soothing word occasionally, and as he said, "That will do for today," he added, "Now, I didn't really hurt you, did I, Miss V.?"

"N-no," she admitted reluctantly, "but I always felt as if you were just going to."

"That is it," said he. "Now, there is one infallible sign for which a dentist always watches when he is working on a lady's teeth and which she gives involuntarily when she is hurt. She can't help giving it, and when I see it I always stop."

"Tell me what it is?" she inquired eagerly.

"We never tell," he replied, with an inscrutable smile.

"Why?"

"Because you would immediately try to counterfeit it."—Washington Post.

"Dust Devils" of the Desert.

Travelers in the celebrated Death valley of California have described the wonderful contortions of the sand pillars that small whirlwinds sometimes send spinning across the hot plain. Even more remarkable are the "dust devils" seen by Mr. H. F. Witherby, the English explorer, in the valley of the White Nile. Sometimes two of these whirling columns, gyrating in opposite directions, meet, "and if they be well matched the collision stops them and a struggle ensues as to which way they shall twist. Gradually one gains the mastery, and the two combined begin to gyrate alike and then rush on together." Some of these whirls will strip the clothes from an Arab's back or twist a goat round and round like a top.

The Perfect Silence.

There is no sensation in the world like that which comes over you when walking through a grove of redwoods. Their great trunks rise hundreds of feet into the air and are lost in the dense roof of foliage like the columns of an Egyptian temple grown to superhuman height. On the ground there is no underbrush, but only ferns of a size and shape that suggest a prehistoric period and fallen trunks that have lain unrotting for 3,000 years. There is no sunlight, and no birds sing. If a storm arises, it is an hour before a drop reaches the ground. Here all is as it was since creation, and there is no time. It is the perfect silence.

A Happy Thought.

"Yes, Jones struggled along with historic plays and melodramas, but they wouldn't take. Now he has a wonder, a record beater."

"You don't say! What's the plot?"

"I don't know, but the play ends in the middle of the last act."

"The mid—say, what are you giving me?"

"Straight goods. The idea is to fool the people who always begin putting on their wraps before the curtain falls."—Baltimore News.

Different Kinds of Coats.

"I am sorry I kept you waiting so long, Harry, dear," murmured the wife as she entered ready for the theater. "It took me so long to put on my coat."

"Did you put on only one coat?" he asked blandly.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER V—CONTINUED.

Michael Strogoff, compelled to wait till nightfall in order to pass the fortifications, but not desiring to show himself in the streets of Omsk, remained in the posting house and there partook of food.

There was a great crowd in the public room, it being the resort of numbers of the anxious inhabitants, who at this eventful period collected there to obtain news. They were talking of the expected arrival of a corps of Muscovite troops, not at Omsk, but at Tomsk, a corps intended to recapture that town from the Tartars of Feofar-Kahn.

Michael Strogoff lent an attentive ear to all that was said, but took no part in the conversation.

Suddenly a cry made him tremble, a cry which penetrated to the depths of his soul, and these two words, so to speak, rushed into his ear:

"My son!"

His mother, the old woman Marfa, was before him! Trembling, she smiled upon him. She stretched forth her arms to him. Michael Strogoff arose. He was about to throw himself—

The thought of duty, the serious danger for his mother and himself in this unfortunate meeting, suddenly stopped him, and such was his command over himself that not a muscle of his face moved.

There were twenty people in the public room. Among them were perhaps spies, and was it not known in the town that the son of Marfa Strogoff belonged to the corps of the couriers of the czar?

Michael Strogoff did not move.

"Michael!" cried his mother.

"Who are you, my good lady?" Michael Strogoff stammered, unable to speak in his usual firm tone.

"Who am I, thou askest? Dost thou no longer know thy mother?"

"You are mistaken," coldly replied Michael Strogoff. "A resemblance deceives you."

The old Marfa went up to him and, looking straight into his eyes, said:

"Thou art not the son of Peter and Marfa Strogoff?"

Michael Strogoff would have given his life to have locked his mother in his arms, but if he yielded it was all over with him, with her, with his mission, with his oath! Completely master of himself, he closed his eyes in order not to see the inexpressible anguish which agitated the revered countenance of his mother. He drew back his hands in order not to touch those trembling hands which sought him.

"I do not know, in truth, what it is you say, my good woman," he replied, stepping back.

"Michael!" again cried his aged mother.

"My name is not Michael. I never was your son! I am Nicholas Korpanoff, a merchant of Irkutsk."

And suddenly he left the public room, while for the last time the words re-echoed:

"My son, my son!"

Michael Strogoff, by a desperate effort, had gone. He did not see his old mother, who had fallen back almost inanimate upon a bench. But when the postmaster hastened to assist her the aged woman raised herself. Suddenly a thought occurred to her. She denied by her son! It was not possible. As for being herself deceived and taking another for him—equally impossible. It was certainly her son whom she had just seen, and if he had not recognized her it was because he would not, it was because he ought not, it was because he had some cogent reason for acting thus! And then, her mother feelings arising within her, she had but one thought—"Can I unwittingly have ruined him?"

"I am mad," she said to her interrogators. "My eyes have deceived me! This young man is not my child. He had not his voice. Let us think no more of it. If we do, I shall end by finding him everywhere."

Less than ten minutes afterward a Tartar officer appeared in the posting house.

"Marfa Strogoff?" he asked.

"It is I," replied the old woman in a tone so calm and with a face so tranquil that those who had witnessed the meeting with her son would not have known her.

"Come," said the officer. Marfa Strogoff, with firm step, followed the Tartar officer and left the posting house.

Some moments afterward Marfa Strogoff found herself in the chief square and in the presence of Ivan Ogareff, to whom all the details of this scene had been immediately reported.

"Thy name?" he asked in a rough voice.

"Marfa Strogoff."

"Thou hast a son?"

"Yes."

"He is a courier of the czar?"

"Yes."

"Where is he?"

"At Moscow."

"Thou hast heard no news of him?"

"No news."

"Since how long?"

"Since two months."

"Who, then, was that young man whom thou didst call thy son a few moments ago at the posting house?"

"A young Siberian whom I took for him," replied Marfa Strogoff. "This is the tenth man in whom I have thought I recognized my son since the town has been so full of strangers. I think I see him everywhere."

"So this young man was not Michael Strogoff?"

"It was not Michael Strogoff."

"Dost thou know, old woman, that I can torture thee until thou avowest the truth?"

"I have spoken the truth, and torture will not cause me to alter my words in any way."

"This Siberian was not Michael Strogoff?" asked a second time Ivan Ogareff.

"No, it was not he," replied a second time Marfa Strogoff. "Do you think that for anything in the world I would deny a son whom God has given me?"

Ivan Ogareff regarded with an evil eye the old woman who had braved him to the face. He did not doubt but that she had recognized her son in this young Siberian. Now, if this son had first renounced his mother and if his mother renounced him in her turn it could occur only from the most weighty motive.

Every circumstance went to confirm his suspicions. If he could but lay his hand upon this pretended merchant of Irkutsk and strip off his disguise, would he not find a treasure indeed? Would not his superiors well reward his adroitness and his success? Would not the czar of Russia scowl with rage when he learned that his courier was in the hands of his foes?

Ivan Ogareff had therefore no doubt that the pretended Nicholas Korpanoff was Michael Strogoff, courier of the czar, seeking concealment under a false name and charged with some mission which it would have been important for him to know. He therefore at once gave orders for his pursuit. Then he said:

"Let this woman be conducted to Tomsk," returning toward Marfa Strogoff.

And while the soldiers brutally dragged her along he added between his teeth:

"When the moment arrives, I shall know how to make her speak, this old sorceress!"

"FRUIT OF THE LOOM."

Men and women of taste and judgment go into ecstacies over the wonderful patterns, textures and colors which are "the fruit of the loom." But there is one fruit of the loom they rarely consider, and that is the frail and faded woman, old before her time, because necessity compels her to work under conditions, which send her more fevered sister to bed and the doctor's care.

The diseases which weaken and torment women, may in almost all cases be cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

"I had female trouble for eight years," writes Mrs. L. J. Dennis, of 828 East College Street, Jacksonville, Ills. "Words cannot express what I suffered. I sought relief among the medical profession and found none. Friends urged me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When I commenced taking this medicine I weighed ninety-five pounds. Now I weigh one hundred and fifty-six pounds—more than I ever weighed before. I was so bad I would lie from day to day and long for death to come and relieve my suffering. I had internal inflammation, a disagreeable drain, brearing-down pain, and such distress every month, but now I never have a pain—do all my own work and am a strong and healthy woman."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used with "Favorite Prescription" whenever a laxative is required.

THE NICARAGUAN ROUTE

Favored by Senate Isthmian Canal Commitee

POINTS TO BE COVERED

In Concession Treaties Agreed to by Nicaragua and Costa Rica, Including Perpetual Right of Way—Hepburn Bill Will Now Go Before Senate

Washington, March 13—The senate committee on isthmian canals has decided, by a vote of 7 to 4 to report the Hepburn bill, providing for the construction of an isthmian canal via the Nicaragua route.

The action of the committee was taken at a called meeting held yesterday afternoon. It came after a brief report by Senator Morgan chairman of the committee, detailing the result of a conference with Secretary Hay as to the status of diplomatic negotiations with the Central American republics concerning the canal. He said that the secretary told him that there are no negotiations in progress between the United States and Colombia concerning the Panama route and that the new minister from Colombia had not even presented his credentials but that, on the other hand, the representatives of this country and those of Nicaragua and Costa Rica had been in consultation and had agreed upon practically all the points to be covered in concession treaties, nothing really being left relative to that but to put the agreements in writing. He said that the government of those two countries had manifested a disposition to make all the concessions the United States could ask toward aiding the construction of a canal and that among these concessions was one for perpetual right of way.

When the recitation of the report had been completed Senator Hanna suggested that probably the Colombian minister had been detained by untoward circumstances. He proposed that action by the committee be delayed until opportunity could be had to ascertain Colombia's position. This suggestion met with a strong protest from the friends of the Nicaragua route and Senator Mitchell moved that the Hepburn bill as it passed the house be reported. The motion was carried, 7 to 4, as follows: Yeas—Morgan, Mitchell, Hawley, Platt (N. Y), Harris, Turner, Foster (La). Nays—Hanna, Pritchard, Millard, Kittredge.

After the adjournment of the committee, Senator Morgan said that he would probably report the bill to the senate today. While he would use all due diligence in securing consideration of the measure he had had no conference with the Republican leaders of the senate as to when the measure should be taken up for consideration.

The Hepburn bill authorizes the president to acquire territory for right of way for a canal from Costa Rica and Nicaragua, directs the construction of a canal of sufficient capacity to accommodate the largest ships from Greytown, on the Atlantic, via Lake Nicaragua, to Brito, on the Pacific, under the supervision of the secretary of war; authorizes surveys of the harbors at the two ends of the route; guarantees the use of the canal to vessels of Costa Rica and Nicaragua and appropriates $10,000,000 for beginning the work.

Chinese Barred From Philippines

Washington, March 13.—The senate committee on immigration agreed yesterday to report the Chinese exclusion bill known as the Mitchell-Kahn measure. It is substantially the same as the modified bill submitted by the Pacific coast committee. The committee retained the provision for absolute exclusion of Chinese from the Philippines, taking the ground that the United States wanted to retain the Philippines for the Filipinos and that the latter were as much opposed to the admission of Chinese as were the Americans.

In Congress

Washington, March 13.—The ship subsidy bill occupied practically the entire time of the senate yesterday. Mr. McCumber presented a carefully prepared argument in favor of the bill. Mr. Depew delivered an elaborate speech in which he analyzed the arguments both for and against the position to pay subsidies to the shipping industry.

General debate on the postoffice appropriation bill was continued in the house, a number of topics being discussed.

May Buy Friars' Lands

Washington, March 13.—Contrary to published reports it is authoritatively announced the president has not appointed any one to negotiate for the sale of the friars' lands in the Philippines to the United States. The president has the matter under consideration, however, and a commission will probably be appointed to see what can be done toward acquiring these lands.

Succumbed to Pneumonia

Washington, March 13.—W. J. Glenn, doorkeeper of the house of representatives, died here yesterday from pneumonia. He was 39 years old. His body will be taken to his home in Cuba, N. Y., for burial. Mr. Glenn was a staunch supporter of Senator Platt and prominent in state politics. He owned the Cuba Patriot. This was his fourth successive term as doorkeeper of the house.

RISTORI AS A DIPLOMAT.

How the Great Actress Won Gortchakof to Her Cause.

Ristori was charged with the mission of bringing round Prince Gortchakof to the side of Italian unity when she went in 1860 to a play at St. Petersburg. As the court was in mourning she was commanded to come and recite "Maria Stuarda" at the Winter palace. Mme. Ristori recited her great part and electrified the court. The czar shed tears.

After she retired from the room where the imperial party was to a salon filled with courtiers, the czarowitz brought up Prince Gortchakof and presented him. He had something to say about the emotional character of Ristori's recitation. He wondered how she could have been so deeply stirred by the sufferings of one who had perished so many centuries ago.

"I was not thinking of her," cried Ristori. "I was thinking of a living and discrowned martyr, supposed to be dead, but living. I was thinking of my beloved Italy. I wanted, under the image of Maria Stuarda, to represent to the minds of their imperial majesties the cause of Italian independence and unity, and I think they vibrated in unison with my patriotic efforts. I now want to convert you, prince, for I am afraid you think that Italy must not be resuscitated, though she has risen as if from the dead and is full of life, energy, hope."

Gortchakof answered in diplomatic commonplaces. At length he appeared moved by Ristori's eloquence and said: "I promise to refer the matter to his imperial majesty. You have not pleaded in vain."

Ralph Waldo Emerson's Spree.

There is an old tradition that tells how Ralph Waldo Emerson, the Sage of Concord, once went on a wild, reckless spree. Weary of Marcus Aurelius, Alcott and the serene heights of Concord, he resolved to make a plunge into the vortex of crime and folly in a great city to see vice and the vicious at close range and thus learn by experience of the underworld.

He went straight to the saloon of one Brigham in Boston, in those days farfamed among Harvard students as the aboriginal inventor of more "fancy drinks" than any one since the days of Father Bacchus. Bewildered by the festive scene and the endless list of beverages he had never heard of, he asked Brigham which one of the whole bibulous catalogue might be relied on to impart the largest sum total of experience in the shortest possible time, to which devout inquiry genial Brigham, who at once took in the situation, is said to have replied, "Oh, I guess a glass of lemonade would be the right thing for you!"—Boston Herald.

Supplied the Want.

A certain writer while in San Francisco visited the new house of an old friend, a gentleman of Irish extraction. The hostess evidently took great pride in the house, the furnishings of which were new and beautiful and gave every evidence of taste and refinement. The writer, who has an eye for the beautiful, gave unstinted praise to everything he saw.

"But," he said, "I am sorry to see that your house, beautiful as it is, lacks one ornament which no Irish house should be without."

"What is that?" she asked unsuspiciously.

"A pig," replied the writer, with a satisfied chuckle.

The hostess' eyes sparkled.

"It did," she said indignantly, "but you have supplied the want."—New York Times.

English Names For Towns.

Many names of towns in England have been appropriated for a similar use in this country. These names frequently indicate in themselves the origin of the towns. For instance, names ending in "chester" or "cester" or "caster," such as Dorchester, Worcester and Lancaster, undoubtedly apply to sites of old military settlements or camps, and the termination is derived from "castra," the Latin word for camp. If the name of a place ends in "coln," like Lincoln, then it, too, is of Roman origin, because the Latin word for colony is colonia. When the syllable "by" ends the word, like Rugby, we then know that the Danes are responsible for the name, for the Danish word for town is by.

Judicial Differentiation.

Dipper (at wayside tavern)—That was Judge Close, who just took a solitary at the bar; know him, I suppose.

Tipper—Oh, fairly well.

Dipper—Exacting fellow. I owed him a small bill at one time, and, being tied up at the time, I went to him for a little indulgence, and he wouldn't even give me thirty days.

Hardcase (interposing)—Excuse me, gentlemen, but I had a little different experience. I didn't owe him anything, and he gave me seven years.—Boston Courier.

Peculiarities of the Opossum.

The American opossum is one of the most curious animals living in the United States. It is the only one that carries its young in a pouch like the kangaroo. It is the only animal that can feign death perfectly. It is remarkable for hanging by its tail like a monkey. It has hands resembling those of a human being. Its snout is like a hog's, while its mouth is liberally furnished with teeth. Its eyes are like a rat's, and it hisses like a snake.

Too Attractive.

"Now, here," said the salesman, "is a very fine umbrella. The handle, you will observe, is especially attractive."

"That's just what I want to avoid. Every umbrella I ever owned has been entirely too attractive."—San Francisco Post.

ARSON AND FORGERY

Charges Which Slomac Will Have to Face Before a Grand Jury

Leominster, Mass., March 13.—In the district court yesterday Joseph Slomac was found probably guilty of arson in an attempt to defraud an insurance company, and was held under bonds for the grand jury. The fire occurred in his house early on the morning of Jan. 31 last. The evidence showed that the building was fired in three places; that defendant had an unusually large insurance on a small amount of household goods; also that he had had trouble with the owner of the building.

Fred A. Whitney testified that he sold the house to Slomac for $1625, who was to pay for it in installments. Whitney stated that Slomac had paid $526 on account, then discontinued payments and demanded his money back, claiming that the condition of the house was not as had been represented. Whitney refused to refund the money and Slomac brought suit, which is now pending.

Slomac testified that he had paid $1526, of which $1000 was paid in a lump to Whitney on March 31, 1901. He produced in court what purported to be a receipt for that amount. Whitney pronounced the receipt a forgery, and declared that a receipt for $10 which he had given Slomac had been raised to $1000.

Slomac will be charged with forgery when he appears before the grand jury. He is 30 years old, a native of Sweden, a blacksmith by trade and has been in this country about 11 years.

Colored People Rap Tillman

New Bedford, Mass., March 13.—The Union league, a colored organization of this city, voted last night to send a letter to Senator Tillman condemning his "coarse, vulgar, ill-bred allusions to and aspersions of American citizens whose skin happens to be, of the color which prevails in three-quarters of the earth." The letter upbraids the senator for his "late exhibition of rowdyism" and says it is in keeping with his cowardly attacks on a long suffering people.

Bulldog Severed Boy's Nose

Warren, R. I., March 13.—James Monteviola, aged 4, was attacked by a bulldog yesterday while playing with the animal, and received a terrible bite, only a few threads holding the nose from dropping to the ground. Two physicians, after making stitches in almost an endless chain, gave the boy's parents considerable encouragement that he would not be very badly disfigured.

Was Shoemaker and Poet

Lynn, Mass., March 13.—The body of James MacLardie, 75 years old, was found in the Saugus river yesterday. Having been in poor health it is believed that he committed suicide. MacLardie was an expert shoemaker, his work receiving a gold medal at the Chicago exposition. He was a native of Glasgow, and in his native country was a poet of distinction.

Uncle Sam's Mail Service

requires physical and mental ability of a high degree to withstand its hard labors. The high tension to which the nervous system is constantly subjected, has a depressing effect, and soon headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, etc., develop in severe form. Such was the case of Mail Carrier S. F. Sweinhart, of Huntsville, Ala., he says:

"An attack of pneumonia left me with muscular rheumatism, headache, and pains that seemed to be all over me. I was scarcely able to move for about a month when I decided to give Dr. Miles' Pain Pills and Nerve Plasters a trial. In three days I was again on my route and in two weeks I was free from pain and gaining in flesh and strength."

SPRING CLEANING.

Most housekeepers dread the thoughts of spring cleaning, but if they accept our assistance their labors will be lightened and their work quickly done.

We have competent men to take up, clean and relay your carpets, or make them over to fit other rooms. Men to hang your draperies, pictures, polish your furniture, make over mattresses, measure and make new shades or turn your old ones. Men to reupholster or repair all kinds of furniture. It's wise to make your engagements early, for housekeepers every where are getting the cleaning fever on, and of course you want to finish your work first.

GREAT STRIKE IS OFF

Result of Conference at Massachusetts Capitol

GOVERNOR'S GOOD OFFICES

Had Much to Do With Breaking the Embargo Upon Freight Traffic—Twenty Thousand Men Return to Work—Some Have Lost Positions

Boston, March 14.—Through the united efforts of representatives of the great mercantile bodies of the city, ably seconded by the chief executives of the city and state in conference with the recognized leaders of organized labor, the great strike of freight handlers and kindred trades represented in the Allied Freight Transportation council, which has held the city in its grasp for the past four days, was broken last night and the men, fully 20,000 of them, resumed their respective occupations this morning.

This result was attained at a conference yesterday afternoon at the office of Governor Crane. The decision was at once reported to the Allied Freight Transportation council at a special meeting last night and unanimously endorsed.

The settlement was the result of an expressed determination of Governor Crane and those representing the merchants of Boston to bring all possible pressure to bear upon the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad company to adopt the rules in force upon the Boston and Maine railroad, forbidding freight handlers to unload teams except at their own option and risk.

All of the old men for whom places can be found will be taken back by the railroads, but owing to the suddenness with which the strike was ended and the large number of new men who have been installed it is likely that many of the old employes will find no vacancies ready for them. Eventually, it is believed that they will regain their old positions.

Teamsters and longshoremen find an unprecedented demand for their services, and traffic of all descriptions, which has been virtually at a standstill for the past three or four days, was resumed today with a rush.

The Brine Transportation company, the loading and unloading of whose non-union teams precipitated the strike of the N. Y., N. H. and H. freight handlers, does not appear to have figured at all in the settlement of the present controversy, and as far as that company is concerned the sentiment against it on the part of the labor unions is as bitter as ever. Under the new arrangement, however, union men will not be required to load or unload Brine teams.

The day was filled with conferences between representatives of the various labor unions and the city's business interests in which Governor Crane, Mayor Collins, Secretary Easley of the National Civic Federation and the state board of arbitration took important parts. Everyone was fully impressed with the gravity of the situation and felt the absolute necessity of an immediate settlement.

As early as 8 o'clock Secretary Easley, who had arrived from New York on the night train, met a number of labor leaders at Young's hotel, where their side of the controversy was explained to him in detail. This conference lasted several hours.

At 12 o'clock those in attendance proceeded to the rooms of the state board of arbitration at the state house, where they met representatives of the various mercantile bodies of the city, the officials of the various railroads and Mayor Collins, when a free interchange of ideas was had for more than three hours. Governor Crane had a representative in attendance and was kept in touch with all its proceedings, in which he manifested the greatest interest.

The outcome of this meeting was the appointment of a committee to devise some plan that might be mutually agreed upon as a basis of settlement in consultation with Governor Crane. The committee then waited upon the governor in his private office, where they were closeted for two hours. Meantime a large number of labor leaders had arrived at the state house and they went into conference in the council chamber, which adjoins the office of the governor.

The door between the rooms was open a good part of the time and there was a general exchange of ideas and propositions between the two deliberative bodies. Everyone was given an opportunity to express his opinion and, while there was unanimity of sentiment that everything possible should be done to bring the strike to a quick termination, there was a diversity of views as to how this much desired end could be attained.

Governor Crane, while impressing upon those present the fact that he had absolutely no authority to make pledges for any of the interested parties, made the following proposition:

"If the strike is declared off and those of the men who can will return to their work I will, as governor of the commonwealth, use my best efforts with the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad to have them adopt rules that will be in conformity with those already adopted by the Boston and Maine railroad regarding the loading and unloading of teams."

The governor further agreed to see the officials of the Boston and Maine, Boston and Albany, and New York, New Haven and Hartford railroads and the various steamship lines and urge them to reinstate as many men as they possibly can.

Governor Crane impressed every one present with his deep interest in the matter and it was largely through his influence that the representatives of labor present unanimously agreed to recommend to their various unions that the strike be declared off and that every man now on strike return to work.

This decision was received with intense satisfaction by a who had participated in the conference, for, although it was not effective until it had been formally ratified by the individual unions, it was conceded that it meant the termination of the gigantic battle between unionism and non-unionism which has crippled the commerce of Boston for the past four days and has entailed great inconvenience and expense upon its merchants and citizens.

When the conference with the governor ended nothing remained for the committee except to make its report to the meeting in the board of arbitration rooms which had delegted it, and after the report had been adopted, the meeting dissolved.

Immediately upon the decision to call off the strike had been reached the labor leaders hurried from the state house to put themselves in immediate touch with their respective unions, special meetings of which were being held in anticipation of the necessity for immediate action of some kind. In every instance the action of their representatives in ending the strike and ordering the men to return to work in the morning was endorsed and it was plain to be seen that the men were only too glad to see the termination of a struggle that seemed, until yesterday, to baffle all efforts at settlement.

After the committee had left the governor, the latter, to the newspaper representatives, expressed his great pleasure with the result attained by the conference. Said he: "Inasmuch as the strike has been declared off it now becomes the duty of the public to do its part, and of other employers of labor to see that the men who went out are reinstated so far as possible."

The sympathetic strike of the Lynn Team Drivers union was declared off with cheers last night, after the announcement in the union meeting that a settlement had been made in Boston. The drivers went back to work this morning.

True Bills Against Mrs Soffel

Pittsburg, March 14.—Indictments in three cases against Mrs. Catherine Soffel, wife of ex-Warden Soffel, growing out of the escape of the Biddle brothers from jail on Jan. 30, were considered by the grand jury yesterday. True bills were returned against her. Should Mrs. Soffel be convicted upon the three charges the maximum aggregate sentence which could be imposed upon her would be 15 years in prison and a fine of $2500.

Strike In Sympathy With Weavers

Providence, March 14.—The strike of the weavers in the mills of the American Woollen company is spreading to other departments of the mills which have been running since the lockout was raised. The sympathetic strike of the burlers and sewers went into effect yesterday and the loomfixers voted last night to refuse to fix looms to be operated by non-union help who late or who in future might be induced to take the places of the weavers.

Dispute Ended With a Supper

Lynn, Mass., March 14.—The trouble between the Carpenters' union 688 of the Brotherhood and Independent Carpenters' body was settled last night by the Central Labor union deciding to issue a Brotherhood charter to the Independents. Union 688 then announced an oyster supper with the Independents as guests, and later the pipe of peace was smoked.

Woman Suffrage Knocked Out

Des Moines, March 14.—The woman suffrage amendment received its death blow yesterday from the legislature. The house, by a vote of 56 to 36, adopted the report of the committee recommending that it be indefinitely postponed. After it had passed the senate the suffragists believed the most serious obstacle had been passed.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

HAD BEEN SICK A YEAR

Death of General Martin, One of Boston's Leading Cities

Boston, March 14.—General Augustus P. Martin, Boston's water commissioner, died suddenly from heart trouble yesterday. General Martin had been a sufferer from heart affection for a long time, it being a year next Monday since he was able to visit city hall. However, with the aid of his assistants he had been able to attend to a great deal of official business at home.

No man in Boston was better or wider known than General Martin. He won laurels by brilliant service on the battlefield during the Civil war, and since that time had played an important part in the city's affairs. He was an ex-mayor and former member of the board of police. Years ago he was commander of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company, and afterward was the commander of the Massachusetts commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion. At one time he was prominent in the boot and shoe industry, and he had been a director in many institutions, and at one time was prominent in the social and club life of the city. He was born in Abbott, Me., on Nov. 23, 1835. When he was only 7 years of age his parents moved to Boston and he lived here ever since.

A Contribution of $250,000

Cambridge, Mass., March 14.—Dr. J. C. Warren and Dr. H. P. Bowditch announce that Mrs. C. P. Huntington has given $250,000 to the fund for the erection, equipment and endowment of the new Harvard medical school. This generous gift makes up the required balance of the $4,950,000 that is needed for the school and makes immediately available the gift of three buildings at a cost of above $1,000,000 by J. P. Morgan, and the gift of $1,000,000 by J. D. Rockefeller as well as other gifts of smaller amount that have been made on condition that the whole amount be raised.

Probably Fatally Burned

Waltham, Mass., March 14.—Miss Kate Higgins, a domestic in the employ of W. D. Raymond, was proceeding up the attic stairs last night with a lighted lamp when it exploded and set fire to her clothing. She rushed down through the house, leaving a trail of fire behind her, and fell exhausted. Her clothing was wholly burned and her injuries were such that it is believed she cannot live.

Another Splendid Gift

Boston, March 14.—At the adjourned annual meeting of the New England Conservatory of Music yesterday it was announced that a gift of $50,000 had been made to the conservatory by Eben D. Jordan of Boston for the general building fund of the new conservatory now being erected. Two weeks ago it was announced that he would place an organ in the new conservatory, costing over $12,000.

Sturdy Old Man Gone

Kingston, Mass., March 14.—William Hagerty, who worked for 47 years without a day's illness for the Plymouth Cordage company, died yesterday in his 78th year. He lived three miles from his work and recently boasted of travelling 85,300 miles on foot to earn his living. He came here from Ireland in 1854, and voted the Democratic ticket "from Douglas to Bryan."

Exceptions In Best Case

Salem, Mass., March 14.—The hearing on a motion of the counsel for John C. Best, who was convicted of the murder of George E. Bailey, to set aside the verdict, will be made in the superior court here tomorrow. The grounds alleged are the usual ones and it is claimed that the verdict of guilty was against the evidence and because it was against the law.

Says It Wasn't a Bribe

Warner, N. H., March 14.—Albert P. Davis, who was denounced in town-meeting for accepting an alleged bribe from a contractor for the town soldiers' monument, says that the check for $200 which he received from the contractor was a personal contribution from that gentlemen to the monument fund and was to be so applied by Mr. Davis.

Prominent Marlboro Man Dead

Marlboro, Mass., March 14.—Edward J. Plunkett, twice elected mayor of this city, and who had previously served three years as councilman and two years as alderman, died yesterday of consumption, aged 32. He was district deputy of the Knights of Columbus and was well known throughout the state as a member of that order. He was unmarried.

An Alleged Forger

Concord, N. H., March 14.—George E. Bragg, 21 years old, was taken to Portland, Me., yesterday by United States Marshal Nute, who had arrested him in a lumber camp at Warren and brought him here for a preliminary hearing. He is wanted in Maine for the alleged forgery of a pension voucher two years ago.

Germany Refuses to Yield

London, March 14.—Cabling from Pekin, the correspondent of The Times says that an another meeting of the foreign ministers held there yesterday, the representatives failed to arrive at a decision regarding the administration of Pekin, Germany being unwilling to withdraw the provisional government before July 1.

PERHAPS FIFTY KILLED

By Gang Who Followed Murder as an Occupation

VICTIMS FIRST DRUGGED

Negress Who Was Leader of Crooks Tells How They Operated—Now Fears For Her Life If She Is Released From Jail

Beaumont, Tex., March 14.—John Welsh, a white man, who has been implicated, by allegation, by Mattie Bennett, the negro leader of the gang of robbers and murderers who have been operating here, was brought to Beaumont yesterday, having been arrested at Houston on the strength of the woman's confession. Welsh denies complicity in the murders. He was an iron moulder in the foundry where Benjamin Pearson, one of the murdered men, worked.

The Bennett woman talked freely to a reporter in the jail yesterday. She confessed everything except direct murder and went fully into the details of the plan followed by the gang. "The business has been going on for six months," she said. "The men would go out to the saloons and street corners and find men that had money. They'd bring them to my house, and I and the other women would give them beer with knockout drops in it. Then the men would either beat them up there and rob them or take them out into the hobo ward. I don't know how many I've drugged; too many to remember; and all of them were robbed. I don't know what them folks that I've told the sheriff about will do to me. I know I'm safe in jail now, but if I ever get out they will kill me, if any of them are alive."

The Neches river, where five bodies of supposed victims of the gang were found, skirts the town of Beaumont. It is about 150 feet wide and 30 feet deep. In some places swamps run back from it. A body thrown into the swamps stands small chance of being found. If it is true that 50 persons have disappeared from Beaumont, this may be the solution of the mystery about the missing.

In some of its features the case recalls the Bender family murders in Kansas, 30 years ago.

Live Baby Thrown In Garbage Can

Washington, March 14.—Dr. Charles L. Hagner, for 30 years a well known physician in this city, was held for the action of the grand jury yesterday, as the result of an inquest over the body of a prematurely born baby of Mrs. Peter Blair, found alive and doubled up in a shoe box thrown into a garbage can in the rear of the Blair house. A colored woman identified Dr. Hagner as the man whom she saw place the box in the can. The latter, admitting that he was the man, said that he fully believed at the time that the child was dead.

Alleged Counterfeiters Held

Norfolk, March 14.—E. T. Sterling and Joseph Sherer, who were arrested on the charge of having flooded Huntersville with spurious 5-cent pieces, were held for the United States grand jury yesterday. At the hearing it was brought out that Sherer served a term in a penitentiary.

Fought to a Draw

Baltimore, March 14.—Joe Wolcott and Young Peter Jackson fought 10 rounds to a draw here last night. It was one of the fiercest contests ever witnessed here. Under the conditions of the match Wolcott was to put Jackson out or receive no part of the gate money.

BERRY AND HANNA

Disagree as to the General Merits of the Ship Subsidy Measure

Washington, March 14.—After the passage of a considerable number of bills yesterday, the senate resumed consideration of the ship subsidy measure. Mr. Berry, a member of the commerce committee which reported the bill, made a vigorous argument in opposition to it. He charged that it would foster trusts and monopolies in the shipping industry and that already J. P. Morgan and his associates were forming a syndicate for the control of the shipping on the Atlantic. In this connection he became involved in a colloquy with Mr. Hanna, who maintained that the ships acquired by Morgan from foreign countries could not participate in the subsidies provided by the pending measure.

Mr. Perkins, another member of the commerce committee, delivered a carefully prepared speech in support of the bill, maintaining that it would add to the prosperity of the whole country.

The house closed general debate on the postoffice appropriation bill and completed consideration of 12 of the 27 pages of the bill. No amendments were adopted.

Americans Will Get Justice

Washington, March 14.—The Ecuadorian minister, Mr. Carbo, called at the state department and had a long conversation respecting several questions which have arisen of late relative to the development of American interests in Ecuador. It is understood that these matters can be easily adjusted, though some time may be occupied in so doing. Our government has been assured that there will be no denial of justice to Americans in Ecuador.

Issue Proposed by Bryan

Washington, March 14.—The Post says that the chief matter which Mr. Bryan discussed with the Democratic senators here yesterday was the resolution proposing a constitutional amendment for the election of senators by direct vote of the people. Mr. Bryan urged Democratic senators to use their best endeavors to force an early vote on the resolution by the committee which now has it in charge, and that an issue be made on it.

Agreement Not Yet Reached

Washington, March 14.—Late yesterday afternoon the work of harmonizing the conflict over Cuban reciprocity had progressed so far that a committee of conferees or arbitrators, representing the two sides of the controversy, assembled to frame a compromise agreement. The conference lasted about two hours and was not productive of final results an adjournment being taken until 2 p. m. today.

A Pro-Boer Resolution

Washington, March 14.—Representative Randall of Texas introduced a joint resolution yesterday extending recognition and sympathy to the people and governments of the South African republic and Orange Free State, appealing to the British government to cease hostilities and requesting the president to tender the good offices of this government.

Suffrage Investigation Proposed

Washington, March 14.—Representative Crumpacker of Indiana introduced a resolution yesterday authorizing the speaker to appoint a special committee to investigate the suffrage laws of the several states, and whether the right of suffrage is abridged or denied in any way.

Good Afternoon.

Theoretically cooperation is a good thing and it is practiced to a large extent in building up communities, cities, churches, etc. The movement to start a cooperative store in Quincy, however, looks more like a movement to boom Lewiston, Me., than Quincy, and to fatten the pockets of the incorporators rather than to help the purchasers. A corporation doing a large business and having a large capital, can usually buy goods in the wholesale houses cheaper than small stores, but if a cooperative store has 100 families who invest $25 each, it will have a capital of but $2,500 and would be unable to purchase as low as many of the Quincy men now do. If goods are purchased through a State Association or the Lewiston concern, their profit will be as large or larger than "middle men" usually receive.

The only possible benefit to Quincy people will be a reduction in the cost of goods either directly or indirectly. They have nothing to say in the management of the store, and the first profit goes to the incorporators and not to the purchasers. In other words the incorporators hold the preferred stock while those it is expected to benefit hold the common stock. It is not for the benefit of Quincy to drive merchants out of business, and have one corporation do all the grocery business, and one the boot and shoe business, etc., and then all unite and one concern do all the business of the city. Whatever may be the objects of the founders of the cooperative concerns, they are corporations and responsible only to themselves, and may change hands. They are trusts which are as dangerous as other trusts.

The premier of Austria-Hungary wants to make war on American industries and says that on account of their competition the European manufacturer of shoes cannot make a profit. Europe has long needed instruction in the art of making shoes, and the only way to stop the American invasion is to make better and cheaper shoes.

It is to be wondered whether those persons who are basing their arguments against the retention of the Philippines on the fact that the United States will not immediately get back all the money that has been spent would refuse to consider an investment that gave a fair rate of interest if it did not immediately return all the capital put into it. The increased commerce with the Philippines may be looked upon as the interest that the country draws.

There are only a few gilded domes in this country. One of the first in the United States was erected on the State House at Boston, and one of the most notable is that on the new Congressional library at Washington. Chicago is soon to have the most unique and probably the most beautiful, on the new Federal Postoffice building. In this case the dome will be of glass with gold leaf on the inside, thus securing the effect of a great mirror with a golden backing. The surface will be smooth and glistening, and rains will wash it clean, and the gold will be protected from dirt and weather.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The only way to get back the ransom is to syndicate Miss Stone's exclusive story. There ought to be a million or so people in England and the United States interested enough in missions to subscribe, and the $100,000 should be cleared off easily. Also, the brigands would learn that their business is small and poor compared with the possibilities of a syndicate.—Springfield Republican.

☞ Harvard's degree for Prince Henry is mildly amusing, and the more so on account of President Eliot's explanation for it. It may be well to thus honor the scion of royalty because Germany has had a wonderful intellectual history and because the prince had a grandmother; but the speech is the speech of a courtier rather than that of a scholar. Still no harm is done, and degrees are henceforth neither better nor worse.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ Prince Henry has said himself that on his tour in America he is having the time of his life, and followed the declaration with the remark that he did not amount to much "over there," meaning, of course, at home. It is a very common feeling which he gave expression to—this feeling that we do not amount to much amid the commonplace and hundrum of everyday life, and it is worth while to mark this one little expression among the many felicitious things which the prince has spoken or suggested during his visit. It helps one to understand and to feel, in the broadest, deepest, truest sense, how that a prince, if he be a true man, as Prince Henry certainly has shown himself to be, is after all, but one of us—subject to much the same limitations as other men, and, in many respects, even more limited and straitened because of the very fact that he is a prince. It is one of the most difficult lessons that we have to learn—and it is one of the most valuable if we can learn it—that contentment and happiness do not depend upon the accident of birth or upon the conditions in which we are placed.—Manchester Union.

☞ Honesty, perseverance and industry are good qualities for any man to possess. Without them any man is very likely to make a failure. Yet with these qualities many a man is still digging trenches for $1.25 a day. The prospects of his securing more than an average competence are very remote. Sometimes the suspicion arises that too much perseverance of the blind kind has hurt the honest and truly industrious man. Perseverance without tact is not worth much. Industry directed along the wrong channels is all but wasted energy. So that these three qualities will not enable anyone to count upon a life of ease after the half-century mark has been passed. What of ability? Can Carnegie deny that he is peculiarly gifted for business? There seems to be only one man in the world with the peculiar gift of organization possessed by Morgan. It is certain that pianos are being strummed over all the land by persons who are honest, persevering and industrious, yet who will never be able to make any box office produce $3,000 a night for their services. Honesty and preseverance are the foundation; but constant alertness and the incessant cultivation of faculty are equally necessary. And any man can get rich who will save half of what he earns. There are other ways, but that is the sure one.—St. Louis Republican.

TEAMSTER MAYOR

Hon. C. M. Bryant Drives Team in Boston.

Two Loads Enough for One Day.

Had No Difficulties or Exciting Times.

Wednesday Mayor Bryant told a few of his friends that he expected to team some of the stock of his firm in Boston but they thought he was joking, but from reports he evidently carried out his intention.

It seems Peter J. Williams sent in one of his Quincy teams to help out the paper firm, but the driver was jollied so much before he reached the store that he was ready to resign his position.

The Boston Journal says "The sight of a faultlessly dressed, middle-aged man, comfortably seated on the swinging leather perch of a caravan and holding the reins over a slow-gaited animal, caused considerable comment in the business district in the vicinity of Franklin and Summer streets, yesterday afternoon. He appeared entirely out of place, the position seemed new to him, and he did not handle the reins with the ease and abandon of the ordinary teamster.

Pedestrians stopped, business men watched him from their windows, and teamsters and strikers sneeringly eyed the caravan as it moved on toward its destination. The man certainly was not a "scab," neither did he look like a master teamster. It was some time before his identity was finally established.

"He was Charles M. Bryant, Mayor of the city of Quincy, and Treasurer of the firm of A. Storrs, Bement & Co., a leading paper concern of this city.

"Previous to the present strike the firm's trucking had been done by D. Tyner, but during the past few days they have been unable to supply teamsters. Wednesday the company had little necessary work to do and had only one team during the day. Yesterday a large consignment of paper and twine was received at the Old Colony freight sheds for the Storrs, Bement & Co. concern. The latter was notified, and as there were orders for the supplies, it was necessary to get the goods from the freight house to the store on Franklin street.

"But there were no teamsters, and at first there seemed little likelihood that anything would be done, as the members of the firm did not care to have any of their clerks drive a team. However, Mr. Bryant, who is treasurer of the firm and also Mayor of Quincy, decided to try his hand at teaming. Soon after noon he purchased a pair of driving gloves and, buttoning his coat jumped onto the one horse vehicle and left the store at 85 Franklin street. He had a lumper with him.

"He drove down Franklin to Federal to Summer, to South and got to the Kneeland street yards of the Old Colony railroad without the least difficulty. It took about half an hour to load the large rolls of paper, and the return trip was made to the store. A second trip was also made, and then Mayor Bryant decided that he had worked hard enough for one day, and after washing up left for his home at Wollaston. He intended to resume the work this morning, but since the strike difficulties have been adjusted, he will probably refuse to leave his office.

Don't Expect to Strike.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

I see by the papers that the Coal Teamsters held a meeting Monday night, and the public has been made to think that they were going out on Saturday.

Now, I want to state that they did not hold a meeting on Monday night. And, furthermore, there has not been any intention of ordering a strike.

It seems some of the coal dealers have informed some of their customers that it would be advisable to fill up their coal bunkers, as their chances would be poor of getting coal after Saturday, and many have taken advantage of the tip.

Now, we are perfectly willing that the public should know just where we stand and the conditions we are working under. We have done everything in a fair and honest manner and we are perfectly satisfied that the difficulty can be settled if there is any to settle.

Teamster.

☞ On Thursday, March 20, there will be a large sale of horses and carriages, also of real estate of John J. Higgins at South Weymouth. Frank F. Crane, the popular Quincy auctioneer, will sell the property.

A BLOW AT QUINCY.

Speedy Settlement Should be Made with the Quarrymen.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

The month of March has become the toe line on the track of industrial progress. From this date start many of the new arrangements which employers of labor find it necessary to consummate with their help in order to keep the wheels of industry going.

Nothing could seem more annoying to those who are responsible for the welfare of our industries, than the ever recurring demands for new adjustments in the rate of wages and hours of labor. In order to approximately gage the value of a commodity, it would seem as if some definitely settled schedule of cost should be established and maintained.

This we believe is the line of reasoning followed by not a few of our capitalist employers, and undoubtedly the inexorable balancing of cost and demand has compelled them to thus reason.

While allowing that the demand for an article in the raw, or as finished from the workshop, is largely influenced by the cost of production, it should also be borne in mind that the conditions of the producer may be materially improved without raising to any disadvantageous extent the cost of the product.

For evidence of this, observe the conditions under which granite cutters of today work, as compared with working conditions fifteen years ago. Also note the reduced price of granite monuments as compared with fifteen years ago.

Twelve years ago when the nine-hour day for granite cutters in Quincy was established, there was with a certain class of people who had grave fears lest the granite business in Quincy would go to smithereens.

The granite business survived that shock, however; and still another of equal proportions only two years ago.

Now the granite cutters have two hours a day less to puff and sweat over a stone, and receive a remuneration per day equally as large as that which they earned for ten hours' work.

The dispute now pending between the quarry owners and their help is a misfortune to the city and view on the broad principle of common justice, is hardly excusable.

In every other branch of the industry in this city the eight hours day is firmly and harmoniously established, and there is no valid reason why the hard worked and low paid quarryman should not enjoy the same boon at a rate of wages equal to that received for nine hours' work.

Every day the strike lasts is a blow at the welfare of the city, and considering the insignificant number of men who are seeking to be affected by the change, and the paltry monetary consideration involved, it seems a shame that a whole city should be downed in order to delay, for a short time only, an event which in the sequence of things is inevitable.

The laws of social and industrial progress all appropriate in the direction of betterment for the working classes without reducing the profits of capital. This fact needs no elucidation here, but should stand as a guarantee that no evil will befall the doubting quarry owners should they at once decide to accept the proposition of their workmen and so end the matter. By so doing they will exalt themselves and save the city.

CITY BREVITIES.

A Local Budget with the News in a Nut Shell.

Unity club this evening.

Look out for a cold spell next week.

Could you count the fire alarm from box 446 last evening?

Snow drops are in blossom on the Butler estate. A sure sign of spring.

Wollastonians are expecting a great treat at the Choral Union concert next week.

The regular monthly supper of Bethany church will be held this evening. Arrangements have been made for 250.

The City Council will meet Monday evening when the annual budget will probably be adopted. A debate over the building ordinance is expected.

The alarm from box 446 at 6.23 Thursday evening was for a slight fire in S. B. Little's store, on Copeland street caused by a lamp taking fire.

Mrs. William Chaffin of North Easton has been the guest of Mrs. Richards of Central avenue, and Mrs. Frank Pratt of Prospect avenue the past few days.

A pleasant evening was spent by many at the Baptist church, Wollaston, Thursday evening. The Young People's society gave a social to the church members.

The body of Mrs. Hannah T. Johnson, who died on Mill street, Thursday, was taken to Lebanan, N. H., this morning. Funeral services will be held at that place this afternoon.

The increase of the permanent police force from ten to fourteen men will not go into effect until the first of April. At that time the patrol wagon will be delivered and go into service.

The concluding instalment of the fight of the Monitor and Merrimac in March 1862 will appear in the Saturday eight-page Ledger. It is told by Capt. George L. Kilmer very interestingly in two columns.

Next Monday evening, March 17, Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., will visit Neponset lodge and confer the second degree. It is hoped that many of the local members will accompany the degree staff and assist the staff with their presence.

Rev. George W. Solly of Christ church, Dorchester, who spoke on "What is spiritual life," and told of the work of Grace chapel, Green Harbor, was listened to by a small audience at the Women's Alliance, Wollaston, Wednesday.

The Spanish war veterans, who have been unsuccessful in securing an appropriation from the city for Memorial day may be interested in the hearing to be given at the State House next Wednesday by the Committee on Cities to authorize cities to make appropriations.

There was a record breaking social at the Congregational church Wollaston, Thursday evening, there being 175 at the supper. The entertainment was in charge of Mr. N. G. Nickerson and was confined principally to a soap bubble contest. Later in the evening games were enjoyed by the young people.

The last of the first round of whist parties given by the Twelve Associates was held Thursday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hinckley, Billings street, Atlantic. Like all previous meetings, it proved very enjoyable. Mrs. Wm. Scholes and Mr. Geo. Hinckley won first prizes. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers and Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins were elected members.

Christ Church Report.

The annual report of the parish of Christ church, to the diocese for 1901, shows a total of contributions of $8,136.06 which sum is $1,000 greater than any year of the past ten. Of this large sum, $3,015.20 is for current expenses; $3,627 for the new rectory; $310 for charities in the parish and $759.35 for other parish objects. The sum of $424.51 in money and gifts was distributed to objects outside the parish.

Quincy Avenue.

The conference of Mayor Bryant and Commissioner Knowlton with the Massachusetts Highway Commission Thursday was most satisfactory. The Commission has practically decided to make an allotment to build a state road on Quincy avenue and the chances are that it will be built this spring.

OUT AGAIN.

Boston Strike Not Yet Settled.

Some Teaming Done This Morning.

But Teamsters Quit Work at 1 P. M.

The orders issued to the labor unions Thursday night to return to work was not generally carried out.

The longshoremen refused to go back, claiming that Ryan had no authority to order them back. They also accused him of being bribed by the ship owners.

Part of the lumber teamsters returned to work this morning, and part of them did not.

The coal drivers of the Metropolitan Coal Co. returned to work this morning.

When the freight handlers of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. returned to work this morning they were informed that they would have to go to work as green hands at $1.65 per day, instead of $1.85 which they were receiving before strike. They were also informed that they would not be recognized as union men.

The strikers resented this and refused to return to work upon these terms.

Later orders were issued ordering all the teamsters to strike again at one o'clock today. This order is being generally obeyed.

Conference Arranged.

A conference will be held either today or tomorrow between the committee of the Granite Manufacturers and the committee of the Quarrymen's Union.

Quarry Owners to Meet.

It was reported this morning that a meeting of the quarry owners would be held tonight to consider a settlement proposition. The meeting, however, for tonight, has been declared off but one will be held Saturday night.

Spring Flowers.

The grand annual exhibition of spring flowers, plants, fruits and vegetables, by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, will be held at Horticultural Hall, 300 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, from twelve o'clock Wednesday, the 19th, to ten o'clock P. M. on Sunday, the 23d of March, inclusive. Appearances indicate that the exhibition will be of great magnitude, as over one thousand dollars will be awarded in prizes to the successful growers of the "Flowers that bloom in the Spring."

The Mark of the Hand.

When the hand touches anything, it leaves upon the object touched a representation of that part which came in contact with the object. This impression is not visible to the eye. It is made by the acid of moisture exuded from the skin. If you place the palm of your hand flat on a sheet of blank paper, you may not see the faintest trace of the hand, and many people will be angry at the suggestion that there is any exudation—their hands are perfectly dry, they do not suffer from perspiration. Nevertheless if a metal plate covered with a certain chemical preparation be passed over the paper the representation of the hand becomes visible in great detail.

A Little Slow.

"One day," says an exchange clerk in a Philadelphia department store, "an old fellow from the country came up to my desk and, laying down a package, said:

"'Young man, here's a suit of underwear that I bought here seven years ago. It is too small for me, and I would like to have it exchanged.'

"I was thunderstruck at the nerve of the man, but I managed to say something about the time limit on such transactions.

"'Well,' said he, 'I know that, but I've never had 'em on, and this is the first time I've been in town since the day I bought 'em.'"

—The famous Kansas City annual carnival has finally been abolished. The merchants have come to the conclusion that the expenditure did not justify the returns, and have decided to advertise by some other method.

—Crystal gazing has been superseded in London by little black mirrors from India, in which faddists assert they can see future events.

Postal Currency.

A unique feature in congressional legislation this winter is presented in the promotion of a postal currency. The system was devised, perfected and patented by a private citizen, who offers the result of his efforts to the government free of all cost.

The provisions of the "post check" currency bill, now before Congress, introduced in the Senate by Mr. McMillan, and in the House by Mr. Gardner of Michigan, provides for printing the one, two and five dollar bills in the future with blank spaces on the face. These bills of course, pass from hand to hand before the blanks are filled. When it is desired to send one in the mails the blanks are filled in with the name of the payee, his city and state, a 2-cent postage stamp is placed in another blank space and cancelled with the initials of the sender in ink, the name of the sender is signed on the back, and, presto! his money has suddenly ceased to exist as currency and has been transformed into a check on the United States government, having all the safety of any bank check, and ready for inclosure in his letter. When the payee receives his check he treats it just as he would any other check—indorses it, goes to the nearest bank or postoffice and deposits it or has it cashed.

The paid check finally reaches the Treasury department, when it is replaced by a new one with the spaces unfilled. This keeps the circulation at par. No change whatever is made in the financial policy of the government, the only change being in the character of the printing on the bills or five dollars and under.

The bill also provides for the issue of $75,000,000 of fractional currency, with blank spaces similar to the larger denominations.

The government fee on the five, ten, fifteen, twenty-five and fifty-cent pieces is to be one cent each.

Congress can best judge of the wants of the people by direct word from them. It is difficult to secure legislation of this sort, involving a departure from present methods, unless there be a pronounced demand by the people. Postal Currency can be secured if those whom it would benefit will write personal letters to their Senators and Representatives in Congress, asking them to favor and work for the McMillan-Gardner Post Check Currency bill.

Another Gas Bill.

The Quincy gas bill is not only one in which ex-Councilman E. F. DeNormandie is interested. A hearing will be given at the State House next Tuesday on his bill for legislation to improve quality of illuminating gas and to prevent the manufacture and sale of water gas.

MILTON.

In response to a invitation of Willis Clark about fort persons gathered in Washington hall Wednesday evening to organize a singin school. It was proposed that all who could sing meet once a week during the next two months and have singing party. The only expense is to hall rent and no one who can not sing is to be permitted to join or attend. The object of the singing school is mutal pleasure and profit.

An illustrated ecture on the passion play will be given at the town hall next Monday evening.

Mrs. Collins has moved from Willard to Church street.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Sheldon are expected home frm Cuba this week.

A regular business meeting was held by the Unquity club this week.

Mrs. T. L. Piem who has been quite sick for some weeks is reported as much improved ahough not able to be out as yet.

A pleasing musical entertainment was given at the meeting of the Thursday evening club his week.

Supper at Atlantic.

There was an attendance of somewhere in the vicility of two hundred people at the most appetizing and bountiful chicken supper given by the Ladies' Benevolat society of the Atlantic Memdial Congregational church on Wednesday evening. Supper was served continuously throughout the evening from quarter of six o'clock, and during this time there was a fine continuous musical entertainment. The artists were Miss Jussie Wells soprano of the Berkeley Tmple choir and Miss Mabel Trask contralto of the Universalist choir of Dorchester who were accompaned by Miss Helen Bemis of Atlantic and an orchestra of students from the Perkin Institute for the Blind with Mr. Hirtless as leader and pianist. Mr. Anerdon played the cornet and violin Mr. Kenyon the clarinet and Mr. Wetherel the flute. Misses Wells and Trask sang a number of exceedingly fine solos and duets and received most apreciative applause from their audience. The music by the orchestra was delightful and there is no doubt the pople of Atlantic will wish to hear them again.

The supper committee were Mrs. Ellis Smith the president of the Ladies' Benevolent societ, chairman, Mrs. George W. Hight, Mrs. Charles Safford, Mrs. Charles L. Ce, Mrs. Robert Harding, Mrs. Frank Jnkins and Mrs. H. S. Kolseth.

The committee of entertainment were Mrs. Herbert Garwar and Mrs. W. I. Scholes, and the hostesses Mrs. Elijah Hall and Mrs. W. H. Warren.

The affair was a great success and all of the committee are to be congratulated on the result of their efforts.

Talk on Coperation.

Only a few gathered at the residence of Mrs. G. B. Bates on Thursday evening to hear the tak of Mrs. Martha H. Bruce of Boston on "Cooperation as applied to all the affairs of life," but the weather was unfavorable. Mrs. Bruce in an able paper deplored the trend of affairs, and the methods resorted to in business competition. She contended that the "middle class," as we are pleased to term it, is moving down rather than up, and that the cooperative plan was necessary to turn the tide. Stores under the Rochdale system in England had been a great success, and in Lewiston, Maine, the movement had been inaugurated in this country. She admitted that it was a trust, so called, but claimed it was for the people. It aimed to extend its business to all lines, to raise or make its supplies, and give the purchasers all the profit.

Many questions were asked, and it was evident that most of those present did not enthuse over the plans. She admitted that if cooperative stores were successful they would drive other stores out of business.

NOTED WIZARD INSURED

Large Policies Taken Out on Marconi's Life.

SCHEME OF INVENTOR'S PARTNERS

Risks Aggregating $750,000 Written In England—Basis of the Insurable Interest—No American Companies Interested—Some Curious Forms of Insurance.

Information has reached New York that policies aggregating $750,000 have been taken out on the life of Marconi by the Wireless Telegraph company of Great Britain. This is one of the most interesting cases ever reported where persons not directly related to the insured have sought protection against loss through the death of a great inventor, says the New York Post. The risk has been reinsured among a half dozen English companies, although a single policy was written covering the entire amount. The beneficiaries applied for insurance on the ground that the death of Marconi would jeopardize their interests and interfere seriously with the carrying out of their project.

While no American life company was concerned in the venture, there can be little doubt that such insurance would have been issued in New York city had the risks been applied for there. Although American companies avoid such risks as a rule, adhering strictly to the contract which affords protection to the relatives of the insured person, yet in cases where the insurable interests are in peril and properly provided for policies are issued without question. The insurance taken out on the life of Marconi is similar to the policies now outstanding at Lloyds, London, against the death of J. Pierpont Morgan of New York. In the case of Mr. Morgan insurance was asked for by persons who had never seen him and were not in any way related to him, but the protection was granted on the ground that a proper insurable interest existed in the applicants' connection with great enterprises with whose management Mr. Morgan was identified. So far as is known Mr. Morgan is the only American whose life has been thus insured at Lloyds.

Hundreds of policies have been taken out on the life of King Edward by persons whose business would be ruined in case of his death. Many such risks have been written for the coronation year, the total amount now in force aggregating several million pounds sterling. These risks, however, are far removed from the old fashioned life contract, and many policies written at Lloyds have little if any regard for insurable interest, being based on gambling propositions alone. At Lloyds, London, every conceivable form of insurance is written, covering risks varying from protection against increases in the rate of income taxation to smallpox indemnity and what is known as "freak" insurance. Scarcely any risk, however hazardous, is refused if a tempting premium is offered.

WORLD'S CHIEF SPANKER.

Professor Lillie Chastised Forty-nine Pupils In Thirty-seven Minutes.

Professor F. A. Lillie now holds the spanking championship of the world by chastising forty-nine of his pupils in thirty-seven minutes.

Manchester, near Waterbury, Conn., was the scene of this record breaking achievement, and there are precious few children there now who are not convinced that minding one's books is as good in practice as in theory, says the New York World. It came about through a minstrel parade striking town. It was recess. In a body all hands voted to quit and follow the burnt cork artists. When the bell rang for school, only a straggling few were in evidence.

Principal Lillie waited patiently till the last scholar, a girl, returned. Then there was an interesting executive session in the cellar, in which a supple length of garden hose and forty-nine children played the leading parts. Then the sobbing forty-nine, just thirty-seven minutes later, were marched back to their books. The parents of the spanked pupils are up in arms, and the school board has been appealed to. Lillie awaits their coming with calmness.

Professor Lillie is elderly and imposing in appearance. He likes to keep in touch with the market, sings impressively in the choir of the Congregational church and is a great "rooter" for the Hartford Baseball club. There are eight schools in the Manchester district, and Professor Lillie is principal of them all. In the other seven schools now not even the passing of Barnum's circus would cause an eye to lift itself from a book.

Cloth Woven For Edward's Robe.

The cloth of gold of which King Edward's coronation robe is to be made and which is now being woven will be embroidered at the Royal School of Art Needlework, in which the Princess Christian of Sleswick-Holstein has always taken a deep interest, says the New York Tribune. The material is naturally of the finest make and will be of a texture that will not only lend itself to graceful folds, but will bear the weight of the ornamentation to be worked upon it.

What England Has to Pay.

Even if the Boer war were to end today, before the affair could be cleared up and matters placed in order the cost to England would be over $1,000,000,000, and yet, says the Pittsburg Times, the Boers have stood up against all of this expenditure with practically no resources.

MADE A GOOD IMPRESSION.

A Case of Well Developed Nerve, Coupled With Wit.

"There is absolute wit in some men's nerve," said a business man to a reporter. "My partner and I, with the intention of expanding our business, about a year ago decided to send a representative through the south. We looked over the field carefully and finally picked out a young man who was possessed of good address and who, we felt sure, would do the work.

"He had been convivial in former days, but his deportment had been such for a year that it made us feel confident he would do the proper thing. He was given $400 for expenses and was started out on the mission. It was the understanding that he was to make a daily report of his efforts.

"Two months passed by, and we never heard from him. We telegraphed repeatedly to different towns that were on his itinerary, but not a word could be learned regarding his whereabouts. Finally one day a hurried telegram, collect, came. It read:

"'I am not selling many goods, but am making a fine impression. Wire $100 quick.'

"The nerve of the fellow got our nerve, and, do you know, we wired him the $100, and afterward he made good. We have never asked him what he did during the two months, and he has never broached the subject to us. It was the wit that pleased us."—Washington Star.

Nature's Wonders.

The common flea leaps 200 times its own length. To show like agility a man six feet tall would have to leap a distance of 1,200 feet. The cheese mite is about one-quarter of an inch in length, yet it has been seen to take the tip of its tail in its mouth and then, letting go with a jerk, to leap out of a vessel six inches in depth. To equal this a man would have to jump out of a well from a depth of 144 feet.

And equally strange things are found among the plants and vegetables. A well known student of nature once tried the growing force of a squash. When it was eighteen days old and measured twenty-seven inches in circumference, he fixed a sort of harness around it, with a long lever attached. The power of the squash was measured by the weight it lifted, the weight being fixed to the lever. When it was twenty days old, two days after the harness was fixed on it, it lifted sixty pounds. On the nineteenth day it lifted 5,000 pounds.

Much Ado About an "S."

The printing of the Bible is the most strictly guarded work in existence, a fact which appears strange until we reflect on the mischief an inaccurate Bible might bring about. The king's printers and the two universities of Oxford and Cambridge give to the world all the Bibles printed in the United Kingdom except some printed by special license. A few years ago the question arose whether the word "spirit" in Matthew iv. 1, and Mark i 12, should have a capital "S," it having been previously printed with a small one, and, although the word was obviously wrongly printed, it was not until after the ruling powers at the universities and the king's printers had met in solemn council that leave was given to use the capital letter.

Nothing sanctioned by authority in 1611 may be changed without creating something akin to revolution in the places where Bibles are printed.—Liverpool Post.

Verdi and His Admirer.

Verdi was once traveling in the same railway carriage with General Tournon, commander of the Ravenna district. They got into conversation which soon turned on the subject of music, and the general, who did not know his companion, expressed a most enthusiastic preference for that of Italy. "I can hardly go so far with you," replied the other. "For me, art has no frontiers, and I give German music the preference over Italian."

"Indeed, sir," said the general testily. "For my part, I would give all the German operas in the world for one act of 'Rigoletto.'"

"You really must excuse me from following you any further on this ground," replied the composer, blushing a little. "I am Verdi."

The Chief Sense.

All the great families of living things have a dominant sense. We lead our life by sight and make artificial lights to render darkness tolerable. But the creature whom next to ourselves we prefer, the dog, lives in a very different universe. His dominant sense, like that of many other quadrupeds, is the very one we most neglect, the sense of smell. The dog will track his master, never lifting up his head to search the distance; often with hair falling over his eyes he follows on, not troubling himself to shake it aside.

Goldfish.

It may not be generally known that there is cruelty in the keeping of goldfish. Half of such captives die from sheer want of rest. As fish have eyes so formed that they cannot endure the light, in a glass vessel they are in an entirely wrong place, as is evident from the way in which they dash about and go round and round until fairly worn out.

Victim of Peculiar Accident

Ogdensburg, N. Y., March 14.—The children of Minnie Hall, 30 years old, were playing against a partition yesterday and in doing so they dislodged a loaded rifle, hanging on the wall. In falling the rifle struck against a chair and was discharged. The bullet passed through the clothes of an infant in the mother's arms, and entered her side, lodging against her spine, killing her. The babe was uninjured.

Burglars Used Chloroform

Stillwater, Minn., March 14.—While Mrs. Edward Welsh was sleeping alone at her residence Wednesday night, burglars entered, chloroformed her and stole certified checks to the amount of $1000, some cash, a gold watch and a mink coat. Mrs. Welsh did not recover from her stupor until late yesterday, when she found the breeze blowing upon her from an open window.

Cotton Raising In Togoland

Berlin, March 14.—The negroes of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial institute, who were engaged the latter part of 1900 by the German government to teach the natives of Togoland, German West Africa, how to grow cotton, have succeeded, according to the report of the colonial committee, in producing cotton which is graded on the Bremen exchange above American middling.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER IX.

IT was fortunate that Michael Strogoff had left the posting house so promptly. The orders of Ivan Ogareff had been immediately transmitted to all the approaches of the city and a full description of Michael sent to all the various commandants, in order to prevent his departure from Omsk. But he had already passed through one of the breaches in the fortifications. His horse was galloping over the steppe, and, not having been immediately pursued, the chances of escape were in his favor.

It was on the 29th of July, at 8 o'clock in the evening, that Michael Strogoff had left Omsk. This town is situated about half way between Moscow and Irkutsk, where it was necessary that he should arrive within ten days if he wished to get ahead of the Tartar columns. It was evident that the unlucky chance which had brought him into the presence of his mother had betrayed his incognito. Ivan Ogareff was no longer ignorant of the fact that a courier of the czar had just passed Omsk, taking the direction of Irkutsk. The dispatches which this courier bore must have been of immense importance. Michael Strogoff knew, therefore, that every effort would be made to capture him.

But what he did not know and could not know was that Marfa Strogoff was in the hands of Ivan Ogareff and that she was about to atone, perhaps with her life, for that natural exhibition of her feelings which she had been unable to restrain when she suddenly found herself in the presence of her son. And it was fortunate that he was ignorant of it. Could he have withstood this fresh trial?

Michael Strogoff urged on his horse, imbuing him with all his own feverish impatience, requiring of him one thing only—namely, to bear him rapidly to the next posting house, where he could be exchanged for a quicker conveyance.

At midnight he had cleared seventy versts and halted at the station of Koulikovo. But there, as he feared, he found neither horses nor carriages. Several Tartar detachments had passed along the highway of the steppe. Everything had been stolen or requisitioned both in the villages and in the posting houses. It was with difficulty that Michael Strogoff was even able to obtain some refreshment for his horse and himself.

It was of great importance therefore to spare his horse, for he could not tell when or how he might be able to replace it. Desiring, however, to put the greatest possible distance between himself and the horsemen whom Ivan Ogareff had no doubt dispatched in pursuit, he resolved to push on. After one hour's rest he resumed his course across the steppe.

There he was forced to give a night's rest to his horse. The courageous beast could not have continued that journey any longer.

At Elamsk there was no means of transportation for the same reasons as in the burghs already passed by—carriages and horses were gone.

Elamsk, a small town the Tartars had not visited yet, was almost completely depopulated, for it was very easy to invade it from the south and almost impossible to succor it from the north. So relay of post, police station, government building, all were abandoned by governmental order, and on one side the functionaries, on the other the inhabitants, had gone to Kamsk, in the center of the Baraba.

Michael Strogoff was obliged to pass the night at Elamsk to permit his horse to rest at least twelve hours. He remembered the instructions given him at Moscow to cross Siberia unknown, reach Irkutsk at all hazards, but also to not sacrifice success to the swiftness of his passage. Consequently he was forced to spare the only means of travel left him.

On the morrow Michael Strogoff left Elamsk, and five days later, on the 5th of August, twenty-one days since starting, he found himself 1,500 versts yet distant from Irkutsk.

He stopped and distinctly heard the dull, heavy reports which shook the air, mingled with sharper and shriller sounds, the cause of which he well knew.

He was only half a mile from Kalyvan when a long jet of flame flashed betwixt the houses of the city, and the spire of a church crumbled down in the middle of a torrent of embers and fire.

At that moment the detonations were very violent. Soon the flames stretched forth on the left of the city. The fire had devoured a whole quarter of Kalyvan.

Michael Strogoff was running across the plain, trying to reach the cover of some trees scattered here and there, when a detachment of Tartar cavalry appeared on the right.

Michael Strogoff could no longer go in that direction. The horsemen advanced rapidly toward the city, and it was difficult for him to escape. Suddenly at the corner of a thicket he saw a house which he might perhaps reach unperceived.

To run, to hide himself, to ask and to take there, if need be, something to renew his strength, for he was exhausted with fatigue and hunger, was Michael Strogoff's only resource. He fled then to this shelter, and, drawing near, he perceived that it was a telegraph station. Two wires were going east and west, and a third was stretched toward Kalyvan.

One would suppose that under the circumstances that station would have been adandoned, but as it was Michael Strogoff could find there a refuge, wait for the night if need be to travel again across the steppe which was searched by the Tartar pickets.

Michael Strogoff hurried toward the door of that house and opened it hastily. A single person was in the room where the dispatches were written. He was an employee, calm, cool, indifferent to all that was going on outside. Faithful to his post, he waited behind his window for the public to claim his services.

Michael Strogoff went to him and with a voice broken by fatigue asked:

"What do you know?"

"Nothing," answered the employee, smiling.

"Are the Russians and Tartars fighting?"

"People say so."

"But who are the victors?"

"I don't know."

So much coolness in the midst of these terrible occurrences, so much indifference even, was hardly possible.

"And is not the wire cut?" asked Michael Strogoff.

"It is cut between Kalyvan and Krasnoiarsk, but it works yet between Kalyvan and the Russian frontier."

"For the government?"

"For the government when they think it proper, for the public when they pay. It is 10 copecks a word. I wait your orders, sir."

Michael Strogoff was going to answer that strange operator that he had no dispatch to send; that he wanted only a little bread and water, when suddenly the door of the house was abruptly opened.

Michael Strogoff thought the office invaded by the Tartars and was about to jump through the window when he noticed that two men only entered the room and that they were far from being Tartar soldiers.

One of them held a dispatch written in pencil, and, outrunning the other, he was at the window of the stoical employee. In those two men Michael Strogoff was astonished to discover two persons he had thought never to see again. They were the correspondents Harry Blount and Alcide Jolivet, no more traveling companions, but rivals, enemies, now that they were operating on the battlefield.

They had left Ichim a few hours only after the departure of Michael Strogoff, and if they arrived before him at Kalyvan in following the same route it was because Michael Strogoff had lost three days on the borders of the Irtish. And now, after having witnessed the battle between the Russians and the Tartars in front of the city, leaving the city when the struggle was still going on in the streets, they had to run to the station to send away their dispatches to Europe, each seeking to rob the other of priority in describing the stirring events.

Michael Strogoff kept at a distance in the shadow, and without being seen he could see all and hear all. He was probably about to learn important news and know if he ought to enter Kalyvan or not.

WHY STAY PALE?

A pity to see pale girls stay pale and dull when it is so easy to get Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion does a few things well. One of them is to give rich red blood to pale girls. There is a reason for it.

But perhaps you are more interested in results than in reasons.

The result of steady daily doses of Scott's Emulsion is an increase not only in the red color of the blood and in the appetite but in the good looks and bright manners which are the real charm of good health.

Scott's Emulsion is blood food.

AN IMPERIAL BOYCOTT

For Which British Cabinet Is Held Responsible.

PETTY SPITE AND SPLEEN

Shown In Cancelation of Visit to Ireland by King and Queen—Press Displays Disappointment—"Advertisement of Barren Statesmanship"

London, March 14.—The official announcement of the abandonment of the proposed visit of King Edward and Queen Alexandra to Ireland, whereby the ministers assume the responsibility for an imperial boycott, is quite unprecedented in form and causes keen discussion, the general tone of which is distinctly adverse to the action of the cabinet, which is interpreted as displaying petty spite and spleen.

The suggestion sought to be conveyed, both by the announcement itself and the comment of the ministerial organs, that the decision arrived at was directly due to the outburst of some of the Irish members in the house of commons when the news of the disaster to General Methuen's column was officially communicated to that house, is obviously false, as it was announced weeks ago that the visit would be postponed.

There seems good reason to believe that their majesties themselves all along desired to carry out the coronation visit, and though they have deferred it, on the advice of the ministers, they have no intention of relieving the latter from the onus of what is generally regarded as a tactless move.

The Irish papers keenly discuss the matter. The Freman's Journal voices the Nationalist views, saying: "The ministers have put a veto on the intended visit of the sovereign to a portion of his dominions. It would be difficult for his majesty to reject the veto of his constitutional advisers, but it is plain that he insisted that the responsibility should be theirs and not his. His minister could not venture to allow the king to see with own eyes and hear with his own ears of the barbarous methods of the castle and the deep resentment of his people. His presence here would have been a sore encumbrance to the coercionists. There was imminent danger that his visit might have conveted him to home rule or confirmed his existing conviction. Therefore, the ministers, in their own interests, and in the interest of unionism, have forbidden the visit."

The Unionist papers dwell on the profound disappointment which the abandonment of the visit will cause, not only to all Unionists in Ireland, but to many thousands of Nationalists who are keenly sensible of the commerical advantages that would be derived from such a visit.

Even the Conservative papers regard the abandonment of the visit to Ireland as being a severe slap at England's government of Ireland, and as a blazing advertisement of barren statesmanship.

Both Earl Cadogan and Secretary Wyndham advsed the king not to visit Ireland this year, because of the unsettled condition of that country. Mr. Wyndham was an optimist when under secretary of war; he has not changed his character since his transfer to Ireland. His faith in the efficacy of his own land purchase bill had influenced the two Balfours, and through them the Cecil family, and this measure will be tried out by Wyndham before the resources of the crimes act are employed against the United Irish league.

Vatican Postpones Action

Rome, March 14.—Monsignor Sbaretti, who sailed recently for New York en route for Manila as apostolic delegate to the Philippines, will receive orders from the Vatican on his arrival in America not to proceed beyond Washington on his journey, at least for the time being. In view of information on Philippine matters expected soon at the Vatican from the American government the pope deems it prudent to suspend all ecclesiastical action regarding the church in the islands.

Spanish Cabinet Out

Madrid, March 14.—Premier Sagasta yesterday notified the queen regent that the cabinet had resigned when informed that the resignation of the finance minister, Senor Urizaiz, was irrevocable. Her majesty asked Senor Sagasta to form a new cabinet, to include all sections of the Liberal party, but he declined to do so. The Spanish cabinet which has resigned was constituted March 6, 1901.

Against Compulsory Vaccination

New York, March 14.—At yesterday's meeting of the board of health of this city a resolution was adopted declaring against compulsory vaccination in any form. In the opinion of the board the passage of any bill by the legislature requiring compulsory vaccination is unwise and uncalled for.

Herbert Booth Leaves Army

London, March 14.—The report that Herbert Booth, third son of General Booth, who was in command of the Salvation army in Australia, had withdrawn from the army, is confirmed here. Ill health is the cause of Commander Booth's withdrawal.

Steamers Bumped Together

Norfolk, March 14.—Steamer Norfolk and the German steamer Hispania collided just off Lamberte point yesterday. The Norfolk was damaged to the extent of about $2000. No one was injured.

DRESS HINTS.

A debutante at her "coming out" usually wears a white gown of some thin material made high necked and long sleeved.

In dressing it is not so much what you wear as what you do not wear. It is overdressing that makes frights of many women.

Clean your silk waists with naphtha, using a soft piece of flannel to apply it with. Take every precaution while using the naphtha, as it is dangerous if used near artificial light or fire.

One of the essential points on good dressing, as well as in all artistic things, is in the harmony of tones and colors. Unfortunately this is too often forgotten. A mass of coloring on clothes is always a mistake.

An absolute necessity for wear with cotton gowns is a supply of pretty belts, neckwear, ribbons, etc., which transform a plain dress, afford several changes with one dress and give a stylish touch to one's costume without much additional expense.

White lace may be tinted a deep cream by dipping in coffee. If an ecru tone is desired, it may be obtained by placing the lace in water to which powdered saffron has been added, the amount of saffron depending upon the depth of the ecru tinge desired.

Using Powder.

A specialist in the care of the skin declares that the best method of applying powder is by means of absorbent cotton. According to her, the cotton should be dipped into the powder and this brushed over the face, powdering every part. Then with the hands the powder should be rubbed in thoroughly—massaged in, as it were. Then the face should be lightly wiped off with a piece of soft cheesecloth.

The same specialist says that the powder should not be permitted to remain on the face over night. It should be washed off first, and then the skin should be massaged with cold cream and this in turn wiped off with the soft cloth. By this mode the skin is not injured.

The first requisite in powder is purity. Many of the most expensive and best known powders contain a mineral that in the end is bound to be harmful to the skin. For this reason a pure vegetable powder should always be sought, and if one is not sure of its integrity it is better to fall back upon cornstarch or upon rice flour. These are not so dainty and fragrant as the powders of commerce, but they cannot harm the complexion.

Morals of the Child.

The moral development of the child begins almost as soon as its mental, and the two march hand in hand. The home is the place where correct moral principles should be first instilled in the mind of the child, and neglect of this may mean endless suffering for parents and child. Too often this is left to the servants, relatives or the teacher later. The parent who can neglect this side of the child's development and trust it to somebody else is not worthy of the responsibility that has been conferred upon her. The neglect is not altogether intentional, but more often due to lack of energy and forethought. The work does not begin early enough, and the little mind gets warped before the lessons are taught.—Woman's Home Companion.

Effect of Tight Clothing.

Very red hands are often caused by tight stays, snug sleeves or pinching shoes. Choking collars will occasionally be the cause. The body must be comfortably dressed. No matter how trivial the discomfort, the effect will show in the facial expression. A hairpin that has gone into the scalp an inch or two will make the most angelic face wear a weary and worried look. Strange, isn't it? There is many a beauty ill that can be traced to some silly, useless little vanity. Any one who makes it a rule to eat food that is highly spiced or overstimulating is likely to be troubled with a very florid complexion or coarse red hands. Crisp green vegetables, lean broiled meats, a diet that is generally simple and substantial, is the first law of all beautifying.

Motherhood.

Motherhood is the noblest ideal of woman. The little girl whose doll is her delight is a mother at heart before she can walk or talk. The attribute remains and strengthens. In her womanhood she is a mother not only to her children, but to her entire family. To all essential ends she is a mother to her husband himself. Very likely to the man she refused to marry she promised to be a sister, but to the man she did marry she became a mother without promising. Something, indeed, of this maternal tendency enters into all her affections, into all her relations of life.—Cardinal Gibbons.

Mutton Fat.

When you buy mutton chops or a leg of mutton, save all the suet. If you don't care for mutton and rarely serve it, a few cents will buy a pound of suet, and you can have all you need for such uses for more than a season in that weight. Melt it in a bowl set in hot water; strain through cheesecloth into wet cups. When cold, it turns out a nice, round ball of snow white, soft grease, to be applied as freely and as often as desired. It takes out soreness and allays pain of sore and chapped hands better than anything known.

Comfortable Cushions.

When making up a cushion, spread a thick sheet of wadding over, just under the outside cover, tacking down with a stitch at corners and middle of sides. The cushion feels softer, and it shows up the work or makes even a plain cover look better. Use white wadding for light and black for dark covers.

Willing to Serve In Cabinet

Los Angeles, Cal., March 14.—William S. McCormick of Los Angeles has telegraphed to Senator Kearns at Washington that he will accept the position of secretary of the interior in President Roosevelt's cabinet, should a vacancy occur through the resignation of Senator Hitchcock. "All that has been done," said Mr. McCormick, "is that Senators Kearns and Millard have asked me whether I would accept the place, and I answered that if the president offered it I would accept."

A Pension Veto

Richmond, March 14.—Governor Montague yesterday vetoed the joint assembly resolution appropriating $300,000 for pensions for Confederate veterans. His message says in part: "All are agreed that the state should do its utmost to aid her needy and deserving veterans, but all must concede that the needy and deserving alone should be the recipients of the money appropriated."

Prince's Son Going to Sanitorium

Berlin, March 14.—Waldemar, the eldest son of Prince Henry of Prussia, is going with his tutor to Dr. Sahmann's sanatorium at Whitestag. Why Waldemar should be sent to this sanatorium mystifies persons near the court. One such persons repeats the possip that Waldemar develops slowly mentally. He is 12 years old and physically fine-looking.

Mandarins Breeding Trouble

Canton, March 14.—There is great dissatisfaction here at the extortionate taxes which the mandarins are levying under the pretext of meeting the instalments of the Chinese indemnity. The merchants have petitioned the viceroy for redress, asserting that they fear the action of the mandarins will lead to an uprising.

Two Hundred Killed

St. Petersburg, March 14.—A dispatch received at the war office announces that another fight occurred between Russian troops and 300 Tunguses, north of Hubandsy, Manchuria. Two hundred Tunguses were killed, including their leader. Two Russians were wounded.

Students Must Stay at Home

Berlin, March 14.—Count Von Buelow has vetoed the proposed trip of German university students to Paris, as the government fears the French Nationalists might provoke demonstrations against the German students which would react injuriously to the interests of the two countries.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The Colorado house of representatives adopted resolutions deploring the death of John P. Altgeld of Illinois.

BY Virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Thomas F. McAnarney to the Quincy Savings Bank, dated March 20, 1899, and recorded in Norfolk Registry of Deeds, libro 837, folio 612, will be sold at public auction for breach of the conditions of said mortgage on the premises hereinafter described, on SATURDAY, the Twenty-ninth day of March, at two o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular, the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, and therein described substantially as follows:

A certain lot of land with the buildings thereon, situated on the southerly side of Quincy street, so called, in Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and said Commonwealth, and being the lot No. 34 on a "Plan of House Lots on the Greenleaf estate in said Quincy, to be sold by Public Auction August 13th, A. D., 1846," and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, and bounded and described as follows, viz: Northwesterly by said Quincy street, eighty five feet; northeasterly by lot No. 35, on said plan, about one hundred and twenty feet; southeasterly by lot No. 27 on said plan, about eighty five feet; and southwesterly by lot No 33 on said plan, about one hundred and twenty feet. Also another parcel of land being lot No. 33 on said plan, and bounded and described as follows: Northwesterly by said Quincy street, eighty-five feet; northeasterly by said lot No. 34, about one hundred and twenty feet; southeasterly by lot No. 26 on said plan, eighty-five feet; and southwesterly by lot No. 32 on said plan, about one hundred and twenty feet.

This property will be sold subject to all unpaid taxes, tax titles and assessments. Terms, $200 cash at sale, balance cash in ten days from said sale on delivery of deed.

The Social Realm.

Quicksand years that whirl me I know not whither,
Your schemes, politics, fail, lines give way, substances mock and elude me,
Only the theme I sing, the great and strong-poss'd soul, eludes not,
One's self must never give way—that is the final substance—that out of all is sure.
Out of politics, triumphs, battles, life, what at last finally remains?
When shows break up what but one's self is sure?

—Walt Whitman.

Popular Suppers.

The dime suppers of the Bethany church ladies increase in popularity by leaps and bounds. The first one held this winter catered to about 150, the next to 200 and the third to 250, but at the one last evening there were nearly 350 at what was termed by the committee a Pink tea. But no other explanation is necessary than the fact that each is an improvement on the other and a supper worth 25 cents or more is furnished for a dime. The menu last night was:

Salmon Salad.
Cold Meats:
Sugar Cured Ham. Corned Beef.
Vegetables:
Hot Baked Maccaroni.
Relishes:
English Sweet Pickles.
Cake:
Frosted. Plain. Citron. Gold. Brides
Assorted Fancy Cakes.
Jelly with Whipped Cream.
Fruit:
Apples. Bananas. Oranges.
Coffee. French Rolls.

A social hour followed and there was an increased attendance at the mid-week prayer service at 7.45.

Progress at Shipyard.

The fourth "bent" of the new shiphouse at Fore River shipyard is finished, and when one more section has been added to the great framework the assembling of the many parts which have accumulated through the winter, and the active work of construction on the battleship New Jersey, will begin at once. The keel blocks of the battleship Rhode Island are being put in place beside those of her sister vessel, on which the laying of the keel has already begun, and the seven-masted schooner, which will come under the overhang of the shiphouse, is progressing rapidly, so that there will be plenty of work for the travelling cranes to do as soon as they can be brought into use. Two of the cranes are already in position.

Sewer Work.

Work was commenced this morning putting in the upper course of brick work on the last thirty feet of the Greenleaf street section of the Metropolitan sewer. The brickwork will probably be completed within a week, but it will be three weeks before the street is cleaned up and the machinery used by the construction company, removed.

False Keys Used.

The unoccupied house of Julius Johnson on Hancock street opposite Carruth street was again entered by burglars last night. The house has never been occupied since built and it has been entered by burglars several times. The brass fittings, copper boiler and lead pipe have disappeared and the burglars are apparently carrying off the house by piece meal. From appearances it is evident that the parties who entered the house did so by means of false keys.

Quarry Owners Submit a Proposition.

Nine Hours Work on 8-Hour Basis.

The Quarry Workers Vote Not to Accept the Plan.

It was stated in Friday's Ledger that another conference had been arranged between the committees representing the Manufacturers Association and Quarrymen's Union for a settlement of the strike which has now been in effect two weeks.

This conference was held last evening and the two committees were in conference from 8 o'clock until nearly midnight. During this time there was a discussion upon a proposition made by the Manufacturers. Although it is claimed that the Quarrymen's committee have full power to settle, that committee thought it best to submit the proposition to the Union, which will be done today.

The proposition as submitted by the Manufacturers is as follows: An eight-hour day at an advance of ten per cent. in wages over the eight-hour pay, if the men will work an extra hour per day, at the regular rates, for the months of March, April, May, June, September and October. Also to concede an eight-hour day at the above basis throughout the year as soon as Barre, Vt. grants it.

The quarrymen held a mass meeting in Farnum's hall this morning at which the proposition made by the quarry owners was discussed at length. The quarrymen thought the proposition quite a complicated one, and were under the impression that there was some trickery about it. When the question of accepting the proposition was put to a vote the men promptly rejected it. This means that the strike will be continued.

Carpenters Want Eight Hours.

During the past few months the journeymen carpenters throughout the city have been organized as a union, and notice has been served upon all master builders that on and after April 1, they will want an eight-hour day with nine hours' pay.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

CHAMP CLARK STORIES

Reminiscences of Noted Funmakers In the House.

There Have Been Five Real Top Notchers — Difference Between a Congressional Humorist and a Humorist In Congress—How John Allen Got There—Generals and Privates — A Maiden Speech That Brought Fame.

[Copyright, 1902, by Champ Clark.]

Many congressmen use humor as an aid in expressing their ideas to the house—as a mere incident of speech. First and last there have been five humorists of the first class in "the more numerous branch of the national legislature"—Tom Corwin, Abraham Lincoln, Samuel Sullivan Cox, J. Proctor Knott and John M. Allen. Four of these were congressional humorists—Corwin, Cox, Knott and Allen. It will thus be seen that I differentiate between a congressional humorist and a humorist who is in congress. Unquestionably Lincoln divides with Artemus Ward and Mark Twain the honor of being the greatest American humorist—for it is an honor no matter what the dry as dusts may say by way of dissent, detraction or carping criticism—but most assuredly and most emphatically Lincoln was not a congressional humorist. Indeed there is precious little trace—the merest color, as miners would say—of his humor or of any other of his many great faculties in his congressional career. The truth seems to be that congress did not suit him and that he did not fit congress. At any rate in his brief service in the house there is not even the faintest prophecy of that astounding career which wrote his name in the scanty list of the immortals.

Private John Allen.

With the possible exceptions of McKinley, Bryan and Roosevelt there is perhaps no American statesman of this generation whose name is more familiar to the ears and tongues of the American people than that of Hon. John M. Allen of Mississippi, yclept "Private John" Allen. He has not only immortalized himself, but he has lifted into continental fame Tupelo, the little town where he resides. After a long and distinguished career in the house he voluntarily quit public life for the practice of law.

How John Got There.

The dry as dusts solemnly asseverate that humor never did any good. They are cocksure of that. Now, let's see. How did John Allen get to congress? He joked himself in. One fetching bit of humor sent him to Washington as a national lawmaker.

The first time John ran for the congressional nomination his opponent was the Confederate general Tucker, who had fought gallantly during the civil war and who had served with distinction two or three terms in congress. They met on the stump. General Tucker closed one of his speeches as follows:

"Seventeen years ago last night, my fellow citizens, after a hard fought battle on yonder hill, I bivouacked under yonder clump of trees. Those of you who remember as I do the times that tried men's souls will not, I hope, forget the humble servant when the primaries shall be held."

That was a strong appeal in those days, but John raised the general at his own game in the following amazing manner:

"My fellow citizens, what General Tucker says to you about the engagement some years ago on yonder hill is true. What General Tucker says to you about having bivouacked in yon clump of trees on that night is true. It is also true, my fellow citizens, that I was vedette picket and stood guard over him while he slept.

"Now, then, fellow citizens, all of you who were generals and had privates to stand guard over you while you slept vote for General Tucker, and all of you who were privates and stood guard over the generals while they slept vote for 'Private John' Allen."

The people caught on, took John at his word, sent him to congress, where he has staid until he has filled the land with his acclaim.

John's Maiden Speech In Congress.

Of course every representative must make his "maiden speech" in congress—that is, if he intends to try the oratorical caper at all. Frequently it is a painful ordeal. Much depends on that effort. The congressional tyro feels that the eyes of the house, of his constituents, perhaps of the whole country and of posterity, are fixed upon him. Generally he is mistaken as to the number of eyes riveted upon him, but nevertheless he feels as he rises to say "Mr. Speaker!" for the first time that he is a sort of universal optical target, and so feeling he is liable to an attack of heart failure or stage fright. Lucky the member who catches the ear of the house and of the country in delivering his "maiden speech." He is not only lucky. He is scarce, almost as scarce as hens' teeth.

In due time John delivered his "maiden speech" in congress, proved to be one of the lucky ones and took an instant secure hold on the auricular appendage of the house, which he held to the end and which he would have continued to hold had he remained in the house till the crack of doom. The members regarded Allen as a godsend, as a welcome and grateful relief from what the late lamented Mr. Mantalini would have denominated "the demnition, horrid grind" of the congressional mill. John arose to begin his "maiden speech" an obscure member. Next morning he arose to find himself famous, as did Lord Byron after the publication of the opening cantos of "Childe Harold," and the fame of the Mississippi humorist was as fairly won and as justly bestowed as was that of the English poet.

Retired to the Cloakroom.

The river and harbor bill was up John wanted to offer an amendment making an appropriation for the Tombigbee river. The chairman of the committee, Mr. Willis of Kentucky, had promised John time and had then forgotten it. John asked unanimous consent to address the house, and Willis tried to help him get it, but some one objected, whereupon John, with tears in his voice and looking doleful as a hired mourner at a funeral, said with lugubrious accent, "Well, I would at least like to have permission to print some remarks in The Record and insert 'laughter and applause' in appropriate places." That was his astonishing exordium. The palpable hit at one of the most common abuses of "the privilege to print" tickled the house greatly, and he secured the unanimous consent which he desired. He closed that speech with an amazing exhibition of gall, which added to his fame more than the speech itself. He wound up by saying, "Now, Mr. Speaker, having fully answered all the arguments of my opponents, I will retire to the cloakroom a few moments to receive the congratulations of admiring friends," which set the house and galleries wild with delight. He did retire to the cloakroom, did receive the congratulations of admiring friends, a performance which has been going on at frequent intervals ever since.

John Jokes With Governor Dingley.

In many respects the late Governor Nelson Dingley of Maine was a most admirable character. He was a learned and able man, dying in the great position of chairman of the committee on ways and means. It in no way detracts from his just fame to say that he was almost totally destitute of a sense of humor. He was so matter of fact that it approximated cruelty to joke with him, but nevertheless Allen did it. When business was at its worst during the panic which began in 1893, one morning John and the governor met on a street car. "Governor," remarked John, solemn as a billygoat, "I hear a vast deal of talk about trouble in making paying investments, but I find no difficulty whatever in the matter. In fact, less than ten minutes since I made an investment which paid me 20 per cent. I consider that a rattling good speculation." "So do I," replied Governor Dingley, pricking up his ears. "How did you manage it?" "Oh," said John, with a straight face, "I bought six street car tickets for a quarter," which convulsed everybody within hearing except the chairman of the ways and means committee, who looked as though he thought the Mississippian was trifling with momentous not to say sacred things. When the tale reached the capitol, men wondered at John's temerity.

John Astonishes General Grosvenor.

As is well known, on the 8th day of March, 1898, the house of representatives, Democrats, Republicans, Populists and Free Silverites, without a man missing, performed the most stupendous act of confidence recorded in the entire annals of the human race by voting to place $50,000,000 without restrictions and without strings in the hands of the president to be paid out on his order. As a Democrat I am happy to state that in my judgment William McKinley never violated the confidence thus bestowed. As an American, proud of my country, I delight to think that no man ever has been or ever will be president capable of betraying such a colossal trust.

The vote declaring war against Spain was also practically unanimous. So were the votes on appropriations to carry it on, but such unanimity was too beautiful to last. So when the bond bill came up we separated and took different paths. During the debate there was considerable crossfiring as to who were the more patriotic, the Democrats or the Republicans. General Charles Henry Grosvenor of Ohio threw out certain insinuations which roiled the Democrats generally and Allen in particular. John rose to the occasion, made a fiery speech, winding up by proposing that there and then General Grosvenor should open up a recruiting station to enlist a company of congressmen of which Grosvenor should be captain to serve during the Spanish war without pay. John dared the general to do it, asserting that though the Republicans had a large majority in the house there would be more Democratic congressmen who would enlist than there would be Republicans. The proposition took General Grosvenor's breath away and set the house and galleries in a roar. The venerable and doughty general did not set up his standard, but John was the hero of the hour. My firm belief is that had Grosvenor accepted John's proposition every Democrat in the house would have volunteered, perhaps every Republican. If the Spaniards had seen 360 congressmen advancing on them headed by General Grosvenor, they might have surrendered at discretion to avoid being talked to death. Quien sabe?

More Than Humorist.

While Mr. Allen's fame is entirely that of humorist, he is much more than that. No man that I ever heard in congress or out of it can use invective to better effect than the Mississippian. At times he is absolutely merciless. The two excoriations which he gave Colonel Josiah Patterson of Tennessee, one in the debate on the bill to repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman law, the other when Josiah was trying to unseat Carmack, were terrible to listen to. Patterson was John's bete noire and the Mississippian flayed him alive and then poured aqua fortis on his quivering body.

BATTLE WITH THE MONITOR

A Fortieth Anniversary War Story

FIRST FIGHT OF IRONCLADS

March 9, 1862

[Copyright, 1902, by G. L. Kilmer.]

ACCIDENT, chance or what not was the instigator and arbiter first and last in the wonderful battle between the little Monitor and the huge Merrimac in Hampton Roads, March 9, 1862. The encounter and its results turned the naval world upside down and decided who would rule the wave on the American coast, with many things besides.

Stories of the marvelous powers of the Confederate ironclad ram had terrorized the north and built up the hopes of the south. She entered Hampton Roads on March 8, sank the thirty gun wooden sloop of war Cumberland, burned the fifty gun frigate Congress to the water's edge and then lay by for favorable tides to enable her to visit similar destruction upon three more wooden frigates, the Roanoke, St. Lawrence and Minnesota, anchored at hand and already smarting under the fire of her chance shots during the first day's battle.

While the flames ignited by the incendiary shells from the Merrimac were devouring the noble frigate Congress the evening of March 8 the Monitor steamed up to Fortress Monroe, six miles from the scene of battle. Her presence there was due to an accident, and but for another accident she would not have been in existence. Her projector, Ericsson, had shamed the Federal naval board into ordering the construction of an ironclad upon the plan he had submitted. Ericsson had gone from New York to Washington in the fall of 1861 under the belief that his plans for an ironclad ship had been approved by the naval board. It was false, but the deception and disappointment caused the earnest hearted Swede to burst forth in angry eloquence. "Gentlemen," said he, "after what I have said I consider it your duty to the country to give me an order to build the vessel before I leave this room." The upshot of the little deception, which passed for diplomacy, was an order to build the Monitor within 100 days.

Ericsson's working models were completed, and the machinists toiled night and day from December to March. Finally all was ready for a trial trip and, with volunteer officers and crew—for it was a life and death venture from the start to sail in her—the Monitor left New York at midday March 6. Her commander, Lieutenant John L. Worden of the navy, was told to proceed to Fortress Monroe for the protection of the Chesapeake bay and the Potomac river from the raids of the dreaded ironclad ram Merrimac.

After the Monitor had left New York a dispatch reached there from Washington ordering Worden to sail up the Potomac to Washington, not touching at Fortress Monroe. A tug gave chase to deliver the message, but failed to overtake the Monitor, and she passed the mouth of the Potomac, bringing up at Fortress Monroe the evening of March 8, the last few miles of the sail enlivened by the sound of the guns in the fight between the Merrimac and the wooden fleet near Newport News.

Meanwhile the undelivered New York dispatch had been forwarded to the naval commandant off Fortress Monroe. With that dispatch before him, he also heard reports from the front, where the sunken sloop Cumberland lay, swaying in the tide, the flames of the burning Congress lit the sky for miles, and the Roanoke, Minnesota and St. Lawrence were patching the rents made in their wooden hulls by the shells of the Merrimac, which was only waiting for daylight to sally forth from her mooring and finish the fleet at one blow.

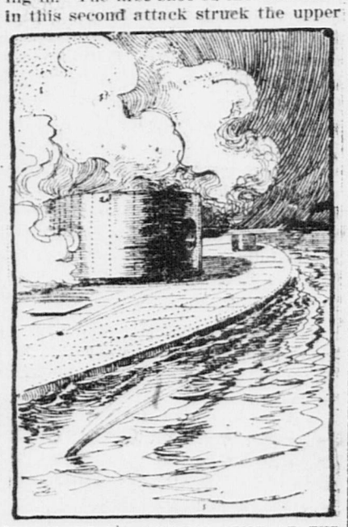

The orders were imperative to send the Monitor to Washington to defend the capital, and from the way the Merrimac had smashed things on her first attempt it looked like a hopeless case for the little black thing which resembled in comparison with the warships of the day a "tin can on a board" to go out against the monster ram. In the trip down from New York the Monitor people had discovered the weak points of their novel craft. The waves had flooded her hold, deluged her furnace room and coal bunkers, checking the fires and almost suffocating her crew with gas. She carried but two guns. Her ports could only be closed by cessation of firing. One shell in the gun chamber, the turret, would disable her fighting power, and her shots must be delivered at random or "on the fly" when the revolving turret brought the enemy opposite the gun port for an instant. Besides, the cannon were a new invention, and the powder charge was limited to fifteen pounds for a one hundred and eighty pound shot. On the other hand, the Merrimac had made a record and proved invulnerable.

But in spite of all the naval chief, who held the deciding card, concluded to cut red tape and send the floating experiment to the relief of the wooden ships down the channel. Already the Merrimac was closing in upon the Minnesota, which was helplessly aground. The pilot of the ram had promised to lay her within half a mile of the Minnesota, and the commander and crew were discounting their victory, which seemed a foregone result, when the little newcomer from the workshops of the Hudson bobbed into the arena and began pegging shots at the giant from a six hundred yard range.

The Roads was filled with spectators, for out of the thousands of soldiers and sailors marshaled there under the stars and stripes only the little handful in the turret of the Monitor could mix in the strange fight. The Confederate sailors looked for an easy victory over what seemed to be a new kind of tug with a gun or two aboard. But their heavy shots rattled off the solid plate of Ericsson's wonder without leaving a dent. Then, too, that revolving turret, which belched forth smoke and iron, baffled the gunners in gray who attempted to make port shots at the range of a ship's length. And the little ship was as nimble as a tug in dodging the Merrimac's guns. She could go anywhere and get back again while the Merrimac was training a gun on her. Even with her ridiculously weak charges the Monitor's shots started the bolts on the ram, and if she had used double charges the Merrimac would have met the fate she had visited so savagely upon the Cumberland and Congress the day before.

During the first fight, which lasted about three hours, Captain Worden and the pilot stayed in the pilothouse, a little structure of iron logs at one end of the low deck. Owing to a break of the speaking tubes communication between Worden and the men in the firing turret was cut early in the action, and messages were passed on the lips of seamen stationed at intervals. Finally the shots in the turret gave out, and the Monitor hauled off to replenish the supply.

Meanwhile the Merrimac turned again to the Minnesota and was struck with a broadside of twenty guns that would have torn a wooden ship to shreds. She answered with a shell that set the Minnesota on fire and, turning, found the Monitor again closing in. The first shot of the Merrimac in this second attack struck the upper log of the pilothouse, where Worden was looking out, and blinded him with powder. Supposing that the pilothouse was destroyed and the steering gear along with it, Worden ordered his subordinate, Lieutenant Greene, who was in the turret, to "sheer off" and look to the damaged works. Greene decided to go on with the fight alone, for Worden was stunned by the concussion of the shock as well as blinded. But the Merrimac had sailed away without waiting to finish her enemies. Even the Minnesota was saved by putting out the fires. So the net result of the second foray of the ram was that she went back to her moorings with a few extra wounded men in her crew and the reputation of running from the smallest fighting ship afloat.

During the fight both the Merrimac and the Monitor tried ramming. The Monitor lightly dodged her antagonist and in turn just missed striking the Merrimac with her sharp end by a hair. Officers and men of both ships declared that the contest was not fought out. Those aboard the ram said that when the Monitor backed off, which was to replenish her ammunition and change commanders, they believed her out of the fight. Why they didn't go ahead and smash the remaining frigates close at hand, as they had done the Cumberland and Congress the day before, they never clearly explained. Admiral Buchanan, the commander of the Merrimac in the first day's fight, had been put ashore on account of a wound.

Worden and his crew were made the heroes of the hour. In the first fight between ironclads they held the field of battle and saw their foe beat a quiet retreat. Even admitting that it was a drawn battle, the future of naval science was decided in that short fight between experimental craft. The advantages of the pygmy Monitor lay in her revolving gun turret, with its impervious shield, her rapid movements and her low invulnerable deck. Her weaknesses were that the turret was not under complete control and her guns were not fully effective. All her shots were sent at random, never twice in the same place. She sank at sea off Hatteras in December, 1862, and the forlorn fight on March 9, which gave birth to the new American navy, was her first and her last. The Merrimac was repaired for service in James river and on May 11 was blown up to prevent capture.

STRIKE'S BACK BROKEN

But Not to the Satisfaction of All Concerned

GOVERNOR ASKS PATIENCE

A General Scramble of Workmen For Their Old Places, but Ten Percent Found Their Places Filled—Independent Strikes May Be Declared

Boston, March 15.—The labor situation in Boston is extremely perplexing. To give weight to statements of labor men who spoke without authority that harmony is not restored is to make the outlook far more critical than at any time since the Allied Freight Transportation council began its fight against the R. S. Brine Transportation company.

On the other hand, Governor Crane and the state board of arbitration believe that the problem is being solved quite rapidly, considering the immensity of the strike, and only ask for time and patience from both laboring and business men, to remove all obstacles for a resumption of freight traffic under customary conditions.

As an actual fact, the strike was completely broken yesterday, although individual troubles cropped out in many quarters, some of which were adjusted without delay and others dragged along in uncertain state so that they came in for consideration by the various labor bodies last night.

During these meetings, judging from what was argued by the men, independent strikes of bodies seem impending, but the leaders in the strike just ended were sanguine that they still held control of the entire organized labor body and would not again order a strike of the freight handlers or its more serious accompaniment, a sympathetic strike of affiliated bodies. Today will show more clearly the conditions in this respect.

The physical side of the strike-breaking yesterday presented an army of workingmen rushing helter-skelter to get their old jobs. There had been more than 20,000 places vacated, but fully 10 percent of the union men found their places filled. This was the reason for friction all day, affecting only the men themselves, for employers were too busy raising the embargo on their wares to give heed to talk of unfairness. Freight began to move at docks, freight sheds, from and to wholesale houses and factories, and upon the streets, and by night great inroads had been made on the four days' accumulation of goods.

With the break in the strike, employers of freight handlers, team drivers and lumpers rushed into print with calls for more help. Even concerns which heretofore have been bound to unionism seem to have grasped the opportunity of hiring whom they liked. It is on this point of all others that the critical phase of the situation now hangs.

The real battle yesterday was between the men who controlled the strike and the representatives of great interests who had been prevailed upon to consider certain propositions as a way to a settlement of the trouble. As for three days past, it was Governor Crane, at his office in the statehouse, who stood between the parties at issue.

The governor kept receiving delegations most of the afternoon, and after hard work on his part succeeded in getting together the heads of the three great railroads which enter the city, President Hall of the New York, New Haven and Hartford, President Tuttle of the Boston and Maine and Samuel Hoar, general counsel for the Boston and Albany. W. E. Chamberlain, general manager of the eastern division of the New Haven road, was also admitted into the executive chamber.

These gentlemen were with the governor for an hour and a half. In the meantime a number of labor leaders who had been holding conferences with the state board of arbitration and at the labor headquarters arrived and were taken into the council chamber. For an hour the governor had alternate interviews between employer and employe. During these conferences Secretary Easley of the Civic Federation came into the waiting room and saw the governor and he was accompanied by Frank P. Sargent of Cleveland, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and George E. McNeil of this city.

Mr. Easley said that he had attended a meeting of the longshoremen during the afternoon and spoke there with Mr. Sargent and Mr. McNeil. The meeting was a hot one, but at the close the men all voted to sustain the officers and to return to work.

The several conferences ended about 6 o'clock, the men leaving before the railroad officials. The governor then granted an interview with the newspaper men and said that the situation looked very much more encouraging. The railroads have all agreed to take back as many men as possible without discrimination. As far as the steamship lines are concerned he understood that the men had returned to practically all of them. The railroad companies will not consent to discharge men whom they have hired in place of the strikers, but they are well disposed to the men and are very anxious to take back as many as possible. The question of the loading and unloading teams, while it came up incidentally, was not very much discussed. It will, however, be taken up next week. The governor said that both President Tuttle and the Boston and Albany officials had used every effort to get the men back. In the case of the New Haven road, the company would be willing to take back as many as possible, but the question of requiring the men to sign an agreement has not yet been arranged. In cases where men are taken back, seniority in service will have the preference.

TO HEAD OFF STRIKE

Business Men of Fall River Are Actively Exerting Themselves

Fall River, Mass., March 15.—Representatives of the business men of this city called upon the labor secretaries at their headquarters yesterday and asked if they were willing to meet the manufacturers at a conference to be held today. After a consultation between themselves, the secretaries stated that they had no objections, and they will therefore meet the manufacturers. The representatives of the business men dealt separately with the Textile council and the secretary of the Weavers' association, the latter not being affiliated with the Textile council.

Nothing was said as to the object of the conference, but it is common knowledge that the business men are anxious to have matters settled without a strike. Meetings of the leading business men have been held ever since the agitation for an advance in wages started, looking towards an amicable settlement of the disagreement. Their business has already been greatly injured and they have protested strongly against the city being plunged into a great labor struggle.

The Plymouth Stike

Plymouth, Mass., March 15.—The striking weavers in the Puritan mills of the American Woollen company were paid off yesterday, some having their accounts closed and others receiving part of their pay and being told to call again. In this latter case the persons paid occupied company tenements. Those who lived at company boarding houses were told to leave today, as the houses would be closed tonight.

Strikers' Ranks Augmented

Providence, March 15.—The filling carriers, chain builders and other floor hands in Nos. 2 and 4 mills of the National Providence plant stepped work yesterday. Estimates of the total number of operatives now out at Olneyville and Manton range from 1500 to 2000.

Mountaineers May Aid Strikers

Roanoke, Va., March 15.—Reports from the southwest Virginia coal fields are to the effect that about 1000 miners are now out. These men are face to face with armed guards and the situation may become critical at any moment. The miners are said to be relying upon the native mountaineers for aid in case of an emergency.

Says Revolutionists Lost Heavily

Panama, March 15.—The government generals, Castro and Ortiz, arrived here yesterday and received one of the most enthusiastic welcomes ever witnessed in Panama. Referring to the engagement at Agua Dulce Feb. 20, General Castro said that the government troops, numbering 800 men, were attacked by 3000 revolutionists. On the third day of the fighting, both drinking water and ammunition in Agua Dulce being scarce, General Castro ordered his troops to retreat. To do this the government forces had to break through the rebel lines. General Castro says that of the forces under the revolutionary general, Herrera, over 700 were killed or wounded.

Windward Needs Tinkering

St. Johns, March 15.—The Windward, the Peary Arctic club's steamer of 1900, which has been wintering here, sailed today for New York where she will undergo extensive repairs prior to proceeding to the Arctic regions the coming summer for the relief of Lieutenant Peary.

Smal' Sugar Crop Predicted

Middlebury, Vt., March 15.—Maple sugar producers throughout this section of Vermont anticipate an extremely light run of sap this season owing to the protracted wet weather of the past two weeks, which still continues.

Bar of Exclusiveness Down

Pekin, March 15.—Mrs. Conger, wife of the United States minister here, entertained at lunch yesterday, 11 princesses and ladies of the court. This departure from the exclusiveness of the Chinese court is quite unprecedented.

To Visit the Pope

New York, March 15.—Twenty priests from Mexico on a pilgrimage to Rome arrived here last night on the steamer Esperanza. The priests embarked at Vera Cruz.

Lord Can't Pay His Bills

London, March 15.—The failure is announced of Lord Francis Hope, the husband of May Yohe, the American actress. The petitioning creditor's claim was £4000.

A New Oil Field

Denver, March 15.—Oil has been struck at a depth of 800 feet in a well on Turkey Creek, only 12 miles from Denver.

THE HAGUE AGREEMENT

Ratified by the Senate Without Division

THE CAPTURE OF AGUINALDO

Led to a Discussion as to Whether It Was Accomplished According to Rules of Modern Warfare—Use of "Dum-Dum" Bullets Is Prohibited

Washington, March 15.—The senate spent an hour in executive session yesterday on the convention growing out of The Hague peace conference relating to the conduct of war on land and sea, and finally ratified the agreement without a division. The discussion turned entirely on the conduct of the war in the Philippines and related especially to General Funston's capture of Aguinaldo.

Senator Teller inquired whether, if this treaty had been in force at the time, the method of Aguinaldo's capture could have been justified. He quoted the provision in the treaty relating to the conduct of spies and said he did not mean himself to say that General Funston's course would not have been regular, but merely to secure the opinion of senators who had given attention to the treaty and who also were familiar with the details of Aguinaldo's capture.

Senator Burton replied to the inquiry, speaking especially for General Funston, and said he was sure the proceedings on the general's part had been not only humane, but that it had been in accordance with the rules of civilized warfare.

Senator Hoar also spoke at some length regarding this provision in the treaty. He referred to Aguinaldo's capture and said he believed the adoption of the treaty would have a tendency towards elevating the conduct of modern warfare.

Some of the members of the committee on foreign relations said briefly that the ratification of the treaty would place this country in accord with the highest thought of the times, and expressed the hope that the treaty would receive the unanimous support of the senate. Those who raised questions apropos of the discussion disclaimed any intention to prevent favorable action.

The countries party to the treaty are: Germany, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, the United States, Mexico, France, Great Britain, Greece, Italy, Japan, Luxemburg, Montenegro, Netherlands, Persia, Portugal, Roumania, Russia, Servia, Sweden and Norway, Turkey and Bulgaria.

The provisions of the treaty are binding only on contracting powers in case of war between two or more of them and cease to be binding when a non-contracting power joins either of the belligerents.

The most important feature of the treaty is that prohibiting the use of "dum-dum" bullets. Among other things specially prohibited are:

To employ poison or poisoned arms.

To kill or wound treacherously individuals belonging to the hostile nation or army.

To kill or wound an enemy who, having laid down arms, or having no longer means of defense, has surrendered at discretion.

To declare that no quarter will be given.

To employ arms, projectiles or material of a nature to cause superfluous injury.

To make improper use of a flag of truce, the national flag or military ensigns and the enemy's uniforms, as well as the distinctive badges of the Geneva convention.

To destroy or seize the enemy's property, unless such destruction or seizure be imperatively demanded by the necessities of war.

Ruses of war and the employment of methods necessary to obtain information about the enemy and the country, are considered allowable.

The treaty provides as follows regarding spies: "An individual can only be considered a spy if, acting clandestinely, or on false pretenses, he obtains, or seeks to obtain, information in the zone of operation of a belligerent, with the intention of communicating it to the hostile party.

"Thus soldiers not in disguise who have penetrated into the zone of operations of a hostile army to obtain information are not considered spies. Similarly, the following are not considered spies: Soldiers or civilians, carrying out their mission openly, charged with the delivery of dispatches destined either for their own army or for that of the enemy. To this class belong likewise individuals sent in balloons to deliver dispatches, and generally to maintain communication between the various parts of an army or a territory."

Politician Gathered In

St. Louis, March 15.—A bench warrant charging Edward Butler, a prominent local politician, with offering a bribe, was issued yesterday on the order of the grand jury. It connects Butler with the passage of the garbage bill of 1901. Butler surrendered and was released on bail.

German Embassador Remains

Berlin, March 15.—It having been rumored that a change in the German embassy in Washington was possible, the foreign office here authorizes a denial that Von Holleben, the present ambassador, will be either furloughed or recalled.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic.—A noble purpose.—Dan. i, 8-20. (Temperance meeting.)

"Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat nor with the wine which he drank." This is the purpose to which the topical reference alludes, and we have only to study the circumstances under which it was made to see the nobility of it.

1. The nobility of Daniel's purpose is illustrated in his age. He was a young man and had been selected because of his natural abilities to be educated for the service of the king of Babylon. For Daniel at that age to take a determined stand upon the side of his moral and religious convictions was certainly the manifestation of nobility of purpose. How many young men and young women indulge in doubtful and in harmful practices, excusing themselves on the ground of their youth! They are young. They must sow their wild oats. They must have a good time in their youthful days. Not so with Daniel. Instead of sowing wild oats in his youth he "remembered his Creator in the days of his youth." And he never lived to regret it. Nor does any young man who in the days of his youth purposes in his heart that he will lead a virtuous and sober life.

2. The nobility of Daniel's purpose is illustrated in the place in which he made it. He was in a strange land, a Hebrew captive and exile in the land of Babylon. In Babylon he was surrounded with idolatrous faith and worship. To take a firm stand religiously in such a place proves the nobility of his purpose. How many young people would have said: "I am in a strange land. I do not believe in eating defiled meat and in drinking wine, but I had better do it here, since my captors demand it of me. I'm in Babylon now, and I had better do as Babylon does." The strong temptation would have been to take this course of action, yet Daniel did not do it, even under such circumstances. May his example inspire the emulation of all young people and help them to stand firm for sobriety and godliness amid any surroundings or with any people. Men may laugh at us or ridicule us, but we should fear God rather than man and obey God rather than man.

3. The nobility of Daniel's purpose is illustrated in the fact that it was contrary to custom. It was customary for those who were being trained for the king's service to eat the king's meat and drink his wine. Custom is the ruination of many a young person. But Daniel was no slave to custom. He placed conscience above custom. It requires great strength of character ofttimes to do this, and yet conscience and not custom should be our guide. If it were, the drunkard's grave would be robbed of many of its victims. Let us, like Daniel, not fear to stand against custom when to conform to it means to endanger our moral or spiritual welfare.

Daniel purposed nobly and nobly executed his purpose, and God was with him and blessed him. God's presence and God's blessing are vouchsafed to all who in the midst of temptation will follow Daniel's example. Will you do it?

BIBLE READINGS.

Lev. x, 8-11; Num. vi, 1-4; Prov. xx, 1; xxiii, 1-7, 15-21, 29-35; xxxi, 4, 5; Isa. v, 11; xxviii, 1-4; I Cor. v, 11; Gal. v, 19-26.

Faith.

Faith, according to the definition in the catechism, is not only a clear knowledge of what God has revealed in the gospel, but also a hearty trust wrought in us by the Holy Spirit that we are really saved by grace through our Lord Jesus Christ. This becomes in the highest sense subjective and individual to each believer. It is indeed the pearl of great price, worth more to each one of us than the whole world besides. It is the gift of God. It is free notwithstanding its inestimable value. Assured confidence, implanted by the Spirit's operation, working in the gracious power of the gospel, as preached and taught, is to be exercised under the divine command coming to us, to believe. What is commanded to be done is not impossible, for that would not be required. It is a precious gift and a blessed privilege and duty to keep faith in lively exercise.—Reformed Church Messenger.

Cheer Up.

We may be weary pilgrims here, many of us; but, after all, the Christian pilgrim is journeying to a beautiful country, bright and sunny, where all is peace and joy and love. This life is much what we make it, and the hardest life may be a sunlit path when the Sun of Righteousness shines upon it, for there no gloom can stay. The days may seem "dark and dreary," many of them, but they will come to an end. O pilgrim, press forward, then, crying, "Excelsior!" Falter not by the way, even though it be full of stumbling places. Let these only give fresh impetus and determinaton to win the reward awaiting thee, "Ye shall reap if ye faint not."—Episcopal Recorder.

Outdoor Peace.

Have fears and worries vexed you?
Go out among the trees.
Think: He who made all these,
Will He not well protect you?

Do thronging doubts molest you?
Sit down there in the sun
Where heaven's joys o'errun
And think how God has blessed you.

Does some one scorn or slight you?
Stand forth among the hills.
Forget your petty ills.
Remember, God will right you.

Do long, long sorrows grieve you?
Look upward to the stars
And think: No anguish mars
The home that will receive you.

Good Afternoon.

Between the building ordinance and the eight hour day for carpenters, and the sewer and sidewalks assessment, and the high valuation of land, building will probably be checked and rents go up.

Hyde Park's town report, like Dedham's was printed in an office outside the County, and as a consequence none of its townspeople benefited by the expenditure of the appropriation for the printing of same.

Any plan for remodeling of City Hall which does not include a central main corridor from front to back would be incomplete and unsatisfactory. The plans adopted by the committee, and outlined in another column, seem practical and feasible, especially if the job can be done for $10,000. Now the number of offices is inadequate, and they could not be more ill arranged. To use one office as a passage way to reach another is entirely wrong, especially when the window side of the room is taken. A new City Hall will be unnecessary for many years if the present building with its imposing front is remodeled as contemplated, and a small expenditure will put off a very large one.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The city of Quincy is very much disturbed over the strike in the granite quarries. The granite business has for many years been the great industry of the place, the many pretty little homes in West Quincy illustrating to a marked degree the thrift of the owners, the result of years' of labor in these great quarries. Quincy granite has a world-wide reputation and these unfortunate labor dissensions, that are so disturbing to the usual quiet of the place, naturally attracts outside attention in view of the prominence of the industries.—Hyde Park Gazette.

☞There is one omission in the average discussion of cigarette smoking which appears to be of more or less importance. It is that the cigarette induces the young to smoke, and fastens on them a habit which many would not otherwise assume. A boy who could not endure a cigar, can begin on the cigarette, and soon become a full-fledged fiend. Again, he inhales the smoke of the cigarette, as he does not of a cigar or pipe, and this is a manifest injury. However, amid all the discussion of the doctors and scientists the factories which turn out the "coffin tacks" continue to run on full time and there is no sign that the demand for their product is on the decline.—Charlotte Observer.

☞Success in life is the ambition of all live people, and there is a long list of those who have aspired and reached the acme of that ambition. The papers tell us that the law cases for the government were handled superbly at the County court at Plymouth, last week, by District Attorney Asa P. French of Randolph, who, in every instance, won his case. Mr. French is proving to hi constituents that he is the right man in the right place, and his friends and the people made no mistake when they elected him district attorney for the Southeastern district, embracing Norfolk and Plymouth counties. The friends of Mr. French in Randolph, Braintree and Brockton, especially are more than pleased with the success that has come to him in the short space of two months. It is certain that Mr. French appreciates the able services of his assistant, Richard W. Nutter, of Brockton, and with both in the harness, the two counties will be ably represented at court.—Randolph Register.

Thayer Academy Indoor Meet.

The annual indoor athletic meet of the Thayer Academy boys will be held on Saturday, March 22, in the boys' gymnasium at 2.30 P. M., and it will, as usual, be a great attraction for lovers of sport. The events will be nearly the same as those of former years, with one or two additions to the list, in the shape of a potato race and basket-throwing contest. A basket-ball game between "02" and the rest of the school will also be played, and should furnish considerable excitment. There is a strong feeling of rivalry existing among the different classes, in regard to winning the meet, as the class scoring the greatest number of points wins the class championship. Only the first three places in each event count points. The public, as usual, are cordially invited to attend. An admission fee of twenty-five cents will be charged, for the benefit of the base-ball team.

☞On Thursday, March 20, there will be a large sale of horses and carriages, also of real estate of John J. Higgins at South Weymouth. Frank F. Crane, the popular Quincy auctioneer, will sell the property.

—A Baltimore paper in order to secure a "scoop" on the news of the arrival of Prince Henry was compelled to send its message from Nantucket by wireless telegraphy to Siasconsett, Mass., thence to Boston, to Buffalo and New York City. As the wires were all down between New York and Baltimore, the message was sent back to Buffalo, from there to Chicago, from Chicago to Birmingham, Ala., and up the coast to Baltimore.

—The schools and public library of Weymouth will be reopened next Monday.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

CITY HALL PLANS.

Outline of the Proposed Remodelling.

More Offices and Better Offices.

A Central Corridor from Front to Back.

The City Council Committee on Public Buildings met Thursday evening and will report an order to remodel the basement and first floor of City Hall.

The plan for the remodeling provides a number of changes and will be an improvement over the present arrangement of the offices.

In the basement the plans call for a store room 11 by 13 in the center beneath the present street entrance to the Council chamber. On the south side of the basement are three offices one 14 by 18-6 and two 20-6 by 16, also a coal room 20-6 by 22-6, and a large vault.

On the north side are two offices 14 by 18-6 between which are two vaults, a store room 24-6 by 13, and a boiler room 24-6 by 18-6.

In the centre is a corridor nine feet wide running east and west. From this corridor doors lead to the offices mentioned above and a stairway leads to the corridor on the first floor. Entrance to the basement is also had from the south side of the building by the stairway which formerly led to the police station.

Light and fresh air will be provided by air shafts built on both sides of the building.

On the first floor the changes are quite radical. The centre stone stairway will be removed as will also the two entrances to the first floor on the north and south sides of the front of the building.

The entrance to the front of the building will be from a door in the centre. This leads into a small outer vestibule from which entrance is made to a larger vestibule or landing place 15 x 15. From here two stairways lead to the council chamber and a stairway leads to the basement.

From this vestibule a corridor six feet wide runs through the centre to the rear of the building.

The arrangement of the offices on this floor are similar to the present arrangement. On the south side is the Commissioner's office 19 x 14-6 in which there is partioned off a private office for that official.

Next are water and tax collectors offices, both of which are 16 by 19-6. Then the Assessors' office, 23-6 by 19-6; in this is also a private office for the Assessors.

On the north side of the building is the treasurer's office 18-6 by 14-6, and the City Clerk's office 18 by 19-6. Between these two offices are two vaults.

Next to the City Clerk's office is the office of the Mayor, which is to be a room 13 by 12. Adjoining this on the south side and between it and the corridor is the office of the City Messenger, which is 7 by 13.

Next to the Mayor's office is office of City Engineer, which is 18-6 by 19-6.

At the extreme rear is a stairway leading to the Council chamber.

Entrance to all the offices on this floor is from the corridor, with the exception of the Mayor's office, which cannot be reached except by passing through the City Clerk's or the City Messenger's offices.

In the rear of the building is to be built an addition 27 by 14 in which will be located the toilet rooms.

Just how the offices in the basement will be occupied has probably not been determined as yet, but it is definitely settled that persons looking for the Board of Health, Inspector of Plumbing, Inspector of the Board of Health, Overseer of the Poor, Managers of Public Burial Places and possibly the Sewer department will find them in the basement.

A Card.

We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a 50 cent bottle of Greene's Warranted Syrup of Tar if it fails to cure your cough or cold. We also guarantee a 25-cent bottle to prove satisfactory or money refunded.

The City Council Committee on streets met last evening.

The guilds of Christ church are preparing for the annual Easter sale, to be held in the Parish house, April 16 and 17.

Thayer Academy has already arranged a long list of base ball games for the spring and most of them will be played at home.

Rev. Dr. Todd addressed the Men's League in Roxbury last Monday evening, and lectured at Woburn on Wednesday evening.

Unseasonable weather like that experienced this week is the kind to breed colds, as many have discovered to their sorrow.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, one of the best mutuals in the State, will be held on Wednesday, April 2d.

The Norfolk superior court adjourned session, will open at the Court house next Monday morning. The session will be one of three weeks.

The Fragment Society will hold its next meeting at the home of the Misses Newcomb, Hancock street on Wednesday afternoon, March 19th, at two o'clock.

The Committee on Drainage of the Legislature reported favorably yesterday on the bill to authorize the city of Quincy to make an additional sewer loan of $200,000.

The residents of Quincy Point with children in the Washington school are getting rather impatient at the delay in making an appropriation for the new schoolhouse.

L. M. Pratt & Son contributed and made the coffee for the Pink tea at Bethany church last evening and also contributed in other ways to the success of the supper.

The large sign of the Quincy Department store on the front of the Durgin & Merrill block is being moved to the left so as to clear the window of the store of L. M. Pratt & Son.

The new patrol wagon for the police department is being built by Henry E. Emerson. The horse for the wagon has already been purchased and is at the City stables. The service will be established April 1.

At the girls gymnasium at Thayer Academy, Thursday afternoon a scrub team composed mostly of the Junior and Junior Middles defeated another scrub team of the school 6—3. Misses Arnold, Abele and Waite played the best game.

The Thomas Crane public library put in circulation today the classified list of books added during 1901. They are distributed free, one to each household. A complete list of all the fiction in the library can now be obtained for five cents.

North Quincy and Braintree will settle the brilliant tie in the Norfolk County League, at the rooms of the Braintree club next Monday evening. Should a tie still exist after this contest, two more games will be played on Tuesday evening at the rooms of the North Quincy club.

George M. Jewell who died in Boston yesterday was formerly a resident of Maple place, Quincy. He leaves a widow and one son, the latter Mr. Edward S. Jewell of Wollaston. The funeral will be held on Sunday at 4 P. M. at No. 6 Louise park, Roxbury.

The Universalist Y. P. C. U. held its annual meeting March 11. The officers will be installed by Miss Hattie H. Lincoln of Hingham, at the Y. P. C. U. meeting next Sunday night. Officers elected are president, Ernest Hayden; vice president, J. E. Greene; secretary, Peter Gomez; treasurer, Miss Florence Holton.

The many friends of Warren Munroe of Hartwell's news agency, sympathize with him in the loss of his mother, who died in Kansas Wednesday. Mr. Munroe received word of his mother's serious illness Sunday, and left Monday morning for her bedside. Unfortunately he did not arrive until Thursday morning, the day after she died.

The prospects are good for a big building boom in the Quincy Point ward. It is said that twenty houses will be erected by one builder and he probably will not have a monopoly of the building. There are also inquiries for lots on Washington street for business purposes. It is certain that the supply of houses will not meet the demand even if 100 are erected this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm of South street, were surprised by a party of their friends on the night of Friday, March 9, and presented with a full dinner set. Mr. Larrie Grannet, merchant, made the presentation and Mr. Malcolm feelingly replied. Afterwards the party spent a very enjoyable evening. An orchestra gave excellent music and songs were rendered by Mr. Felten in his usual happy style.

NEW SET OF STAMPS.

Series Will Be Attractive and Distinctive In Design.

GENERAL HARRISON HONORED.

Late President's Face to Appear on a Thirteen Cent Stamp—Present Series Has Been In Use Twelve Years—McKinley's Portrait on Postal Card.

The bureau of engraving and printing has received instructions from the postoffice department to prepare designs for an entire new series of postage stamps, says the Washington Star.

The question of a new series of stamps was discussed in the fall following the death of President McKinley, and at that time the impression prevailed that when the new set was ordered the portrait of President McKinley would surely adorn one of the denominations. Undoubtedly that was the plan at that time, but the department concluded to place the portrait of the late president upon a new postal card of unique design, and this removed him in a sense from the list of eligibles.

However, a new face will appear upon one of the stamps, that of the late President Harrison. In order that there might be a place for his portrait, at the same time giving the public the best service, a new denomination was created, a thirteen cent stamp. There will be practically no demand for a stamp of this value for domestic use, but for foreign use there is a place for this denomination. Thirteen cents represents the cost of sending a registered letter weighing not more than one-half ounce to any country within the postal union. Heretofore it has been necessary to use a five and an eight cent stamp. Mrs. Benjamin Harrison has furnished the department a photograph of General Harrison which meets her approval for the purpose proposed.

Aside from the introduction of General Harrison's face into the postal gallery of notables only one other change will be made in the personnel of the series. Commodore Perry, whose face has adorned the ninety cent value from 1870 down to 1894 and the dollar from 1894 to the present date, will be superseded upon the dollar denomination by another famous sea fighter, Admiral Farragut. Commodore Perry disappears permanently.

As at present constituted the full set is as follows: One cent, green, face of Franklin; two cent, carmine, face of Washington; three cent, purple, face of Jackson; four cent, dark brown, face of Lincoln; five cent, chocolate, face of Grant; six cent, red brown, face of Garfield; eight cent, mauve, face of Sherman; ten cent, face of Webster; fifteen cent, dark blue, face of Clay; fifty cent, orange, face of Jefferson; one dollar, black, face of Perry; two dollar, sapphire, face of Madison; five dollar, dark green, face of Marshall.

The present series of postage stamps has been in continuous use for just twelve years, which is much longer than the life of the ordinary series. There have been some changes since 1890, such as substitution of the fifty cent for the thirty cent, the dollar for the ninety cent, addition of the two dollar and five dollar values and some slight changes of interest to stamp collectors, but the size, designs and colors of most of the stamps are the same as in 1890.

The postoffice department has requested the bureau to take special pains to make the series particularly attractive and distinctive. It is suggested that the Pan-American stamps were extremely satisfactory from an artistic standpoint, and the hope is expressed that the new set may be equally as fine specimens of American handiwork.

It is proposed that everything in connection with the series shall be new. New designs for borders will be drawn, new shades of color employed, and the new stamps may be of different size and shape. The postoffice department has requested the bureau to secure, if possible, new portraits and better ones if obtainable.

It is proposed that above the face the words "Series 1902" shall appear in small type, and below the name of the subject, with the date of birth and death. The ten cent special delivery stamps will be slightly changed in design, and the color will be orange instead of blue.

It is interesting to note that since 1861 but two presidents have not been honored by placing their portraits upon a postage stamp, Johnson and Arthur, Cleveland, still living, not being eligible.

It is not unlikely that when another new design for a postal card shall be adopted, and these designs change often, that President McKinley will take a place upon a postage stamp, possibly superseding Sherman on the eight or Webster on the ten cent.

Illuminated Club.

Very different from the ordinary Indian club is one which has just been invented, says the New York Herald. Its body is hollow and perforated, and its handle is detachable and has one end threaded so that it can be firmly fastened to the body. Furthermore, attached to the threaded end of the handle is an electric lamp, and from it wires run up into the handle. Apparently all the wires enter at one opening, and the handle is hollow as the body. The motions of the exercise are made quite spectacular by this device.

Device For Traveling Underground.

A revolving platform such as that used at the World's fair in Chicago, but having four instead of two speeds—the fastest being thirteen miles an hour—is proposed as an underground method of conveyance in Paris.

THE UNITY CLUB.

The Cities of Art the Subject of the Evening.

Between sixty and seventy members were present at the Unity club last evening.

"Cities of Art" was the subject under direction of Mr. Wendell G. Corthell.

Mr. Corthell introduced Dr. Arthur Stoddard Cooley, an instructor of Harvard college, as one who had visited Vienna and could give his own personal experiences of that city and Athens.

Mr. Cooley, by the aid of photographs gave a most interesting talk on the ancient city of Athens. He described the splendid edifices which were laid in ruins by the Persians, and spoke of the Acropolis as the seat of the guardian gods of the land and adorned as no other hill in the world. Temples and statues, the work of the best artists ever produced by man shone afar over land and sea from the classical and splendid brow of Athens.

Of the Parthenon, the ideal of Doric grandeur, which the genius of Phidias adorned with a wealth of art never equalled before or afterwards. The Propylaea, with its beautiful colonades surmounting broad flights of marble steps by which the Acropolis was ascended.

The temples of Theseus and Victory were mentioned, as well as statutes of Goddess of Victory of Athens. The latter is one of the greatest wonders of antiquity, the masterpiece of Phidias, done in the magnificent style of art wrought in ivory and gold.

Pictures were also shown of University of Athens, the new Library and the Museum, the latter about the finest in the world.

Mr. H. Y. Follett was in the best of voice and rendered as usual in a fine manner the following songs, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Moorhouse:

Margareta,	Bruckler
Old Heidelberg,	Jensen
Tamo Ancora,	Tosti

After the intermission Mrs. John Litchfield took up "The City of Florence." She suggested that those who might find it inexpedient to go to Florence might derive inspiration at the Art Museum in Boston. Of the famous artists of Florence she gave brief sketches. Di Boudose wrought a wonderful change in composition. Before him figures had been put in rows one above the other with little thought of connection between them, but he placed them in groups.

Leonordo a da Vinci was referred to as the greatest manager of light and shade that ever lived. Nothing that he touched but turned into a thing of eternal beauty. His "Last Supper" and "Mona Lisa" were illustrations of this Raphael and Michael Angelo equally as great, fought for honors side by side. Many others found in the Florentine school were spoken of.

The speaker in conclusion said that if all art galleries in the world were destroyed Europe would still be rich if the Pitti Gallery was saved.

Mrs. Litchfield as well as the other speakers were warmly applauded.

PERFUMES AND HEALTH.

How Flower Scents May Be Obtained In Three Ways.

Pure violet essence is said to be especially suitable to nervous people, but it must be obtained from the flowers themselves, not from the chemical imitations. Chemically derived perfumes are irritant, poisonous even, to persons of especially sensitive constitution.

True flower scents are obtained in three ways—first, by spreading fresh blossoms upon glass thickly smeared with pure grease, letting them stand in the sun and as they wilt replacing them until the grease is as fragrant as the flowers; second, by repeatedly infusing fresh petals in oil, and, third, by infusing them in ether, which is then distilled to a dry solid.

As this solid sells for about $250 an ounce it is easy to understand why the ether process, though far and away the best, is not commonly used. But the scented grease and the essences made by steeping it in pure spirit are never cheap. After all the scent possible has been extracted from the grease it is still fragrant enough to make the very finest perfumed soap.

All the citrine scents, bergamot, neroli, orange flower water, are refreshing and in a degree stimulating if properly prepared. To make a lasting perfume some animal base is essential—musk, civet or ambergris.

Getting Into Moral Debt.

Philip D. Armour, millionaire and philanthropist, continually warned young men against getting into debt. He loved free men and despised slaves. When asked if he admired a certain brilliant orator, he said: "He may have a superb voice and fine presence, but can't you hear the rattle of his chain? That man is not free. He is under moral obligations that demoralize him. He is not speaking the deepest thing in his soul, and I haven't time to hear any slave talk. I want a man to be just as free as I am."

On another occasion he said: "Don't get into debt—I mean moral debt. It is bad enough to get into debt financially. There goes a young man who is mortgaged. That young man is legging it along with a debt, and it will take twice as much power to get him along as the man without a debt. There are other debts and obligations that are embarrassing in their entanglements. Don't get into debt morally, my boy; don't get into debt so that you may not exercise your freedom to its limits."

The Sun Is Seldom on Time.

The sun does not keep good time. He is almost always too fast or too slow. Once about the middle of April he is just on time, then not again before the middle of June. At the beginning of September he joins the clock a third time, and lastly once more late in December. Now, it would seem as if he were startled at the way he had neglected us. In February he fell back until he was fifteen minutes late. By the beginning of March he had made up five minutes of his loss, and before the month is over he will have caught up to within five minutes of the schedule. Meanwhile the days have been growing longer very rapidly. We begin March with our nights longer than our days. We end it with our days longer than our nights. In the one month we have added to the length of our day an hour and twenty minutes, a bigger gain than any other month can show.—Professor S. C. Schmucker in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Going to Theater Face.

Will some one please explain the "going to the theater face" of the average New Yorker? The question is suggested by a long experience in lobbies while the auditors are passing into the houses for the evening performances. The writer stood for nearly an hour engaged in the seemingly hopeless task of discovering "the cheerful theater goer." But in they poured, men and women, each and every one with firm set jaw, gloomy brow and the look of despair. Perhaps it is because the long distances traveled on crowded cars and the thought of an equally uncomfortable homegoing make a night at the theater seem just a bit like work to the residents of this narrow isle.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Turnip.

The seed of the globe turnip is about the twentieth part of an inch in diameter, and yet in the course of a few months this seed will be enlarged by the soil and the air into 27,000,000 times its original bulk, and this in addition to a bunch of leaves. It has been found by experiment that a turnip seed will under fair conditions increase its own weight fifteen times in a minute. Turnips growing in peat ground have been found to increase more than 15,000 times the weight of their seeds in a day.

There Is a Difference.

City Editor—Why do you say, "He ran into the police station puffing and blowing?" "Puffing" and "blowing" are synonymous.

Reporter—Not at all. There's a vast difference, for instance, between puffing a man up and blowing him up.—Catholic Standard and Times.

An Intense Adaptation.

"Thinnerton represented an Indian brave at the masked ball."

"Oh, was that it? I have been laboring under the impression that he went as a feather duster."—Washington Times.

Luck.

I am a firm believer in luck. Why, some people are so unlucky that were they to travel backward they would stub their toe.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Old age makes a specialty of discovering lost opportunities.—Chicago News.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER IX—CONTINUED.

Harry Blount, more alert than his colleague, had possession of the window and handed in his dispatch, while Alcide Jolivet, contrary to his habits, stopped impatiently. "Ten copecks a word," said the operator, taking the dispatch.

Harry Blount placed a pile of rubles on the counter, his confrere looking at him somewhat stupefied.

"Well," said the employee, and with undisturbed sang froid he commenced to telegraph the following dispatch:

Daily Telegraph, London:

From Kalyvan, Government of Omsk, Siberia, Aug. 6.—Engagement of Russian troops with Tartars.

That reading being made aloud, Michael Strogoff could hear all the English correspondent addressed to his paper.

Russian troops repulsed with great losses. Tartars enter Kalyvan this day.

These words ended the dispatch.

"My turn now," said Alcide Jolivet, who tried to pass his dispatch addressed to his cousin of the Montmartre Faubourg.

But that did not suit the English reporter, who thought of remaining at the window as long as he should have news to transmit, as fast as fresh events might occur, so he did not give place to his confrere.

"You are through?" cried Alcide Jolivet.

"I am not through," simply answered Harry Blount.

And he went on writing words which he passed to the operator, who read very quietly:

In the beginning God created heaven and earth.

They were verses from the Bible Harry Blount was telegraphing to gain time and not give place to his rival. That would probably cost a few thousand rubles to his paper, but his paper would have the first information. France might wait.

Think of the anger of Alcide Jolivet, who under any other circumstances would have appreciated the joke. He even insisted that the operator should take his dispatches in preference to those of his confrere.

"That is the right of the gentleman," said the employee coolly, pointing to Harry Blount, smiling kindly to him.

And he continued to transmit to The Daily Telegraph the first book of the holy writ.

While he was operating Harry Blount went to the window, and with his glass he observed what was going on about Kalyvan, so as to complete his information.

A few minutes later he took his place again at the office window and added to his telegram:

Two churches in flames. The fire seems to gain on the right. The earth was without form and void. Darkness covered the face of the earth.

Alcide Jolivet had simply a ferocious desire to strangle the honorable reporter of The Daily Telegraph.

He once more called upon the employee, who again coolly answered:

"It is his right, sir; it is his right. Ten copecks a word."

And he telegraphed the following news, handed him by Blount:

Russian refugees escape the city. And God said, "Let there be light, and there was light."

Alcide Jolivet was literally transported with rage.

Meanwhile Harry Blount was again at the outside window, but this time, absentminded probably on account of the spectacle he saw, he made his observations too long. So when the operator had finished sending the third verse of the Bible Alcide Jolivet quietly took his place at the wicket and, as his colleague had done, placed a respectable pile of rubles on the desk and handed his dispatch, which the employee read aloud:

Madeleine Jolivet, 10 Faubourg Montmartre, Paris: Kalyvan, Government of Omsk, Aug. 6.—Runaways fly from the city. Russians beaten. Furious pursuit by the Tartars.

And when Harry Blount came back he heard Alcide Jolivet completing his telegram, singing musingly with mockery:

"There was a little man all dressed in gray, in Paris."

Alcide Jolivet thought it better not to mix sacred things with profane as his colleague had done, and he answered by a joyful chorus of Beranger to the verses of the Bible.

At that moment a commotion shook the telegraph office. A shell had entered the wall, and a cloud of dust filled the waiting room.

Alcide Jolivet was just finishing his verse, "as red as an apple, who, without a penny," but without stopping threw himself on the shell, took it in his hands before it exploded, threw it out of the window and came back to the wicket. It was all done in an instant.

In five seconds the shell burst outside.

Then, continuing his telegram with perfect coolness, Alcide Jolivet wrote:

A shell of sixty pounds' weight has burst through the wall of the telegraph office. Expect some others of same caliber.

For Michael Strogoff there was no room to doubt but that the Russians were repulsed from Kalyvan. His last resource was, then, to hasten over the southern plain.

But then the general discharge of guns was heard terribly near the telegraph station, and a hailstorm of bullets crashed through the window. Harry Blount, struck on the shoulder, fell.

Alcide Jolivet was at that moment about to transmit this supplement to his dispatch:

But the operator told him with imperturbable coolness:

"Sir, the wire is broken."

And, leaving his window, he quietly took his hat, which he brushed with his sleeve, and, always smiling, went out through a small door which Michael Strogoff had not before noticed.

The station was then invaded by Tartars, and neither Michael Strogoff nor the journalists were able to effect their retreat.

Alcide Jolivet, with his useless dispatch in hand, ran to Harry Blount, stretched on the floor, and, kind hearted as he was, took him on his shoulders with the intention to flee with him. It was too late!

Both were prisoners, and with them Michael Strogoff, taken by surprise when he was about to jump through the window into the hands of the Tartars.

CHAPTER X.

At a day's march from Kalyvan, several versts beyond the town of Diachinks, stretches a wide plain, planted here and there with great trees, principally pines and cedars. There stood the Tartar tents. There Feofar-Khan, the terrible emir of Bokhara, was encamped, and there on the following day, the 7th of August, were brought the prisoners taken at Kalyvan after the annihilation of the Russian force, which had vainly attempted to oppose the progress of the invaders. Of the 2,000 men who had engaged with the two columns of the enemy, the bases of which rested on Tomsk and Omsk, only a few hundred remained. Thus events were going badly, and the imperial government appeared to have lost its power beyond the frontiers of the Ural, for a time at least, for the Russians could not fail eventually to defeat the savage hordes of the invaders. But in the meantime the invasion had reached the center of Siberia, and it was spreading through the revolted country both to the eastern and the western provinces. If the troops of the Amur and the province of Takutsk did not arrive in time to occupy it, this capital of Asiatic Russia, being insufficiently garrisoned, would fall into the hands of the Tartars, and before it could be retaken the grand duke, brother of the emperor, would be sacrificed to the vengeance of Ivan Ogareff.

Feofar's camp presented a magnificent spectacle. Numberless tents of skin or silk glistened in the rays of the sun. The lofty plumes which surmounted their conical tops waved amid banners, flags and pennons of every color. The richest of these tents belonged to the Seides and Khodjas, who are the principal personages of the khanate. A special pavilion, ornamented with a horse's tail issuing from a sheaf of red and white sticks artistically interlaced, indicated the high rank of these Tartar chiefs. Then in the distance rose several thousand of the Turcoman tents, which had been carried on the backs of camels.

The camp contained at least a hundred and fifty thousand soldiers, as many foot as horse soldiers, collected under the name of Alamanes. Among them and as the principal types of Turkestan would have been remarked the Tadjiks from their regular features, white skin, tall forms and black eyes and hair. They formed the bulk of the Tartar army, and of them the khanates of Khokhand and Koundough had furnished a contingent nearly equal to that of Bokhara. With the Tadjiks were mingled specimens of different races who either reside in Turkestan or whose native countries border on it. There were Usbecks, red bearded, small in stature, similar to those who had pursued Michael. Here were Kirghis, with flat faces like the Kalmucks, dressed in coats of mail. Some carried the lance, bows and arrows of Asiatic manufacture, some the saber, a matchlock gun and a little short handled ax, the wounds from which invariably prove fatal. There were Mongols, of middle height, with black hair plaited into pigtails, which hung down their backs, round faces, swarthy complexions, lively deep set eyes, scanty beards, dressed in blue nankeen trimmed with black plush, sword belts of leather with silver buckles, boots gayly braided and silk caps edged with fur and three ribbons fluttering behind. Brown skinned Afghans, too, might have been seen. Arabs, having the primitive type of the beautiful Semitic races, and Turcomans, with eyes which looked as if they had lost the pupil—all enrolled under the emir's flag, the flag of incendiaries and devastators.

When the prisoners were brought into the camp, the emir was in his tent He did not show himself. This was fortunate no doubt. A sign, a word, from him might have been the signal for some bloody execution. But he intrenched himself in that isolation which constitutes in part the majesty of eastern kings. He who does not show himself is admired and, above all, feared.

As to the prisoners, they were to be penned up in some inclosure where, ill treated, poorly fed and exposed to all the inclemencies of the weather, they would await Feofar's pleasure.

The most docile and patient of them all was undoubtedly Michael Strogoff. He allowed himself to be led, for they were leading him where he wished to go and under conditions of safety which free he could not have found on the road from Kalyvan to Tomsk. To escape before reaching that town was to risk again falling into the hands of the scouts who were scouring the steppe.

At the same time with Michael Strogoff and many other prisoners Harry Blount and Alcide Jolivet had also been taken to the Tartar camp. Their former traveling companion, captured like them at the telegraph office, knew that they were penned up with him in the inclosure guarded by numerous sentinels, but he did not wish to accost them. It mattered little to him, at this time especially, what they might think of him since the affair at Ichim. Besides, he desired to be alone, that he might act alone if necessary. He therefore held himself aloof from his former acquaintances.

From the moment that Harry Blount had fallen by his side Jolivet had not ceased his attentions to him. During the journey from Kalyvan to the camp—that is to say, for several hours—Blount, by leaning on his companion's arm, had been enabled to follow the rest of the prisoners. He had tried to make known that he was a British subject, but it had no effect on the barbarians, who only replied by prods with a lance or sword. The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph was therefore obliged to submit to the common lot, resolving to protest later and to obtain satisfaction for such treatment. But the journey was not the less disagreeable to him, for his wound caused him much pain and without Alcide Jolivet's assistance he might never have reached the camp.

Jolivet, whose practical philosophy never abandoned him, had physically and morally strengthened his companion by every means in his power. His first care when they found themselves definitely established in the inclosure was to examine Blount's wound. Having managed to draw off his coat, he found that the shoulder had been only grazed by the shot.

"This is nothing," he said; "a mere scratch. After two or three dressings you will be all to rights."

"But these dressings?" asked Blount.

"I will make them for you myself."

"Then you are something of a doctor?"

"All Frenchmen are something of doctors."

And on this affirmation Alcide, tearing his handkerchief, made lint of one piece, bandages of the other, took some water from a well dug in the middle of the inclosure, bathed the wound, which happily was not serious, and skillfully placed the wet rag on Harry Blount's shoulder.

"I thank you, M. Jolivet," said Harry, stretching himself on a bed of dry leaves which his companion had arranged for him in the shade of a birch tree.

ROOSEVELT'S POSITION

As to Presidential Nomination In 1904.

WOULD VALUE THE HONOR

But Will Not Buy Continuance In Office With Patronage or Other Political Favors or by the Building Up of a Personal Machine

Washington, March 15.—The publication in two or three leading newspapers of a Washington story from which important inferences are drawn regarding the attitude of President Roosevelt toward the Republican nomination for president in 1904 has started active discussion in political circles. The story itself has enough truth in it to make it formidable as a text, though the inferences are liable to mislead the majority of readers.

Judson W. Lyons of Georgia is a negro who was appointed by President McKinley, largely at the instance of Senator Hanna, register of the treasury. He has acquitted himself creditably, and is much respected by his superiors, colleagues and subordinates in the treasury department. As his term of office was drawing near its close certain political busybodies began to talk about his being dropped out of the treasury service to make room for some one else.

A friend who had understood that Mr. Roosevelt thought well of Mr. Lyons called upon the latter to ask whether he had made any effort to secure a reappointment. Mr. Lyons answered that he had not, and, in the course of a conversation which followed on the general political outlook, took occasion to say that, although he should value a reappointment, he should not wish Mr. Roosevelt to make it under any misapprehension; that he admired Mr. Roosevelt very much, but that if Mr. Hanna were to be a candidate for the presidency in 1904 he (Lyons) should support him, though, with Hanna out of the way, he was for Roosevelt against the field.

The friend to whom this remark was made felt a little embarrassed by it in approaching the president with the suggestion that Lyons be reappointed. He said as much to an old personal friend of the president's, who volunteered to tell the president of it himself. The president's response was to reach for a memorandum card and put Mr. Lyons' name on it, remarking: "I like Lyons, and had expected to reappoint him, but this settles the matter. A man who is loyal to his convictions, and who will be so candid, when his own political fortunes are in the balance, as to be unwilling to profit through a possible misapprehension, has the stuff in him of which good public servants are made. I wish you to say to Mr. Lyons from me that I shall lose no time in making his reappointment a certainty."

How the main fabric of fact found its way into print nobody knows. The version given in some of the newspapers is substantially correct, though there was no question between Mr. Lyons and his visitor as to whether the latter was an emissary from the president, and none between the president and his friend as to Lyons' next preference after Hanna. What the president liked was the quality in Lyons which revolted as the idea of playing the hypocrite.

Expressed in the fewest possible words, President Roosevelt's attitude toward 1904 is that of a man who is neither asking for a nomination nor refusing it; who would not, and will not to his knowledge, say one word or do an act on account of its bearing upon the question of his nomination; who would value above all other honors that of having his party and his countrymen so approve his course in one term as voluntarily to give him another, but who would step out of the White House tomorrow with entire equanimity if his staying there for another day was to be at the price of sacrificing a principle which he was satisfied was right.

No man could be in Mr. Roosevelt's position without being subject to suspicion that all his words and conduct have some ulterior bearing upon his future standing with his party. Mr. Hayes was the only president of modern times who made the out-and-out declaration, before accepting office, that he intended to hold it only for only one term in any event. Mr. Roosevelt has made no such declaration; neither has he made any to the contrary. To his more intimate friends he has never concealed his position; and there is not one of them who has any doubt that if it comes to having to buy a continuance in office with patronage or other political favors, or by building up a personal machine, he will assist with the utmost serenity in the inauguration of his successor on the 4th of March, 1905, and leave the field with the sense that he has "made the best run for his money" that anyone could.

Lincoln Farm To Be Sold

Evansville, Ind., March 15.—The old Lincoln farm, in the heart of Lincoln City, will be sold for delinquent taxes. For years the taxes on the farm have not been paid and the county officials decided to offer the property for sale. The mother of Abraham Lincoln is buried on the farm.

Thread Companies Consolidate

Willimantic, Conn., March 15.—The Morse Thread company of Boston has been consolidated with the American Thread company of this place and the machinery from the above plant will be moved here some time next week.

"CLASS LEGISLATION"

Opinions of McLaurin and Harris as to Ship Subsidy Bill

Washington, March 15.—Throughout the session of the senate yesterday the ship subsidy bill was under consideration. The measure was discussed by Messrs. Foraker, McLaurin and Harris, Mr. Foraker supported the bill, although he admitted that he would have preferred to build up the American merchant marine by the levying of discriminating duties. He was willing, however, to defer to the judgment of the majority that the pending measure embodied the better plan.

Both Mr. McLaurin and Mr. Harris opposed the measure on the ground that in their judgment it was not constitutional. They maintained that it was class legislation, which amounted to a little short of robbery of the people for the benefit of a few shipowners. Mr. Harris made the point that the United States now was paying more to the American line for the carrying of ocean mails than was paid to foreign ships for greater service.

The house passed the postoffice appropriation bill. The only amendment of importance adopted was one to incorporate in the bill the provisions of the bill to classify the rural free delivery service, passed a few days ago. Quite a number of other bills were passed.

Bond Purchases Discontinued

Washington, March 15.—The secretary of the treasury announces that he will discontinue, for the present, the purchase of United States bonds of the 5 percent loan of 1904, the 4 percent funded loan of 1907, the 3 percent loan of 1908-18, and the 4 percent loan of 1925, such discontinuance to take effect at the close of business today. The secretary believes that the price of bonds is unreasonably high and that the effect of the government being permanently in the market stimulates and helps to maintain this price to the prejudice of national bank circulation.

Caucus on Boer Question

Washington, March 15.—Representative Randell of Texas yesterday circulated among his Democratic colleagues of the house a petition for a caucus of Democratic members on March 19 to consider what course should be adopted in relation to the government's attitude toward the Boers. The signatures were very general on the Democratic side, and the caucus probably will be held.

Question Raised For First Time

Washington, March 15.—The charges against Ambassador Clayton, submitted to the state department, have been forwarded to him at Mexico, in order that he may make reply, if he cares to do so. The question is for the first time raised formally as to the propriety of an ambassador or minister engaging in business, or even having financial interests in the country to which he is accredited.

Amendment to Census Act

Washington, March 15.—By a vote of 5 to 4 the house committee on census yesterday directed that the bill drawn by Representative Hay of Virginia, be reported amending section five of the recently passed permanent census act, by peremptorily placing all of the employes of the census office who were on the rolls on March 7, 1902, except unskilled laborers, in the classified service.

To Remain In Office

Washington, March 15.—Apropos of the renewal of gossip about the retirement of Secretary Hitchcock, it is generally understood in Washington that President Roosevelt does not contemplate any more immediate changes in the cabinet and that Secretary Hitchcock will be the last man to go unless he voluntarily indicates his wish to leave the department.

Postponed For Two Weeks

Washington, March 15.—The Democratic congressional campaign committee met last night and for over two hours discussed plans of reorganization. It was decided that the organization should not be completed until the next meeting of the committee, to be held in two weekks.

Aguinaldo's Captor at Washington

Washington, March 15.—Brigadier General Funston arrived here last night. His purpose here mainly is to pay his respects to President Roosevelt and Secretary Root. He will remain until next week.

Old Fighter Gone

London, Ky., March 15.—General T. T. Garrard died at his home near Manchester. General Garrard served as an officer in the Mexican war and as a brigadier general in the Federal army during the Civil war. He lived on a farm given his ancestors by Virginia patent. He was the patriarch of the Garrard tribe of Feudists, but the hope of his life was to see permanent peace established.

Hasn't Obtained Sureties

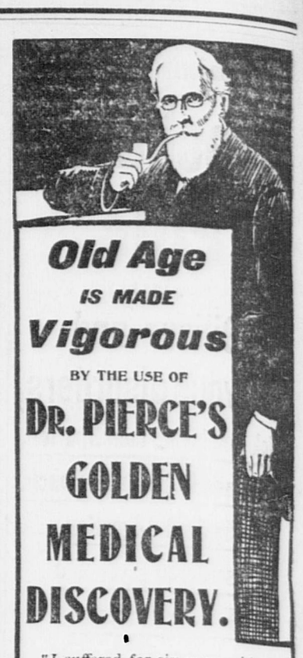

Portland, Me., March 15.—Granville W. Leighton, the teller of the National Traders' bank of this city, who was arrested last Tuesday on a charge of embezzling $43,000 of the bank's funds, has not yet succeeded in obtaining the necessary $18,000 sureties and is still confined in the county jail.

Couldn't Find Huronian

Halifax, March 15.—The steamer Aberdeen returned here last evening from Sable island. The captain reports that the missing Allan line steamer Huronian is not there.

Whole Family Stricken

Pawtucket, R. I., March 15.—The family of John Holgate, consisting of six persons, is afflicted with smallpox, and yesterday all were removed to the pesthouse.

Old Age IS MADE Vigorous BY THE USE OF DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

"I suffered for six years with constipation and indigestion, during which time I employed several physicians, but they could not reach my case," writes Mr. G. Popplewell, of Eureka Springs, Carroll Co., Ark. "I felt that there was no help for me, could not retain food on my stomach; had vertigo and would fall helpless to the floor. Two years ago I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and little 'Pellets,' and improved from the start. After taking twelve bottles of the 'Discovery' I was able to do light work, and have been improving ever since. I am now in good health for one of my age—60 years. I owe it all to Doctor Pierce's medicines."

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

A BOY'S LOCKER.

It Is Quite Easy to Make and Handy For Storing Things.

A place to put everything must precede the putting of everything in its place. How can a boy be expected to be orderly unless he has some place where his ball and bats, his rackets and his fishing lines, to say nothing of half a hundred other things dear to his heart, can be safely stored?

One of the good things about a locker is the fact that the boy himself can make it. Some plain boards are nailed together to receive the drawers that are simply a nice quality of empty grocery boxes. The dimensions cannot be given here, because the dimensions will depend upon the size of the boxes that can be had. To secure drawers that are broader than their height it may be necessary to secure boxes of the right size in length and breadth, then to cut off a piece of the top, making the height of the bottom part that is left just right to go into its compartment.

The locker we have in mind calls for several sizes of boxes. It will be well to get the boxes together before making the framework of boards that is to hold them, then plans can be made according to the sizes that are at hand. It must be noted that all the boxes must be of the same size from front to rear, while four may be of the same width; one opening may be left for a closet, a door simply being hinged into the opening. The door is made of strips of board, with two cleats across the back, to which the strips are nailed.

The locker when completed is supported against the wall by a pair of stout brackets, to be had at the hardware store, where knobs for the drawers and a catch for the closet door can also be obtained for a few cents.

In a Bad Way.

This pudgy bundle of fat boy grew nearly as broad as he is long by constant stuffing. He was eating all the time while his eyes were open, and he dreamed he was eating when he was asleep. Let him be a warning to you. You can tell what a bad way he is in by the following complaint which he made after one of his usual raids on the pantry:

"I'm so fat I can't tell which is throat and which is stomach, so I don't know whether I've got a sore throat or the stomach ache."—Chicago Record.

Strange Things About Plants.

Strange things are found among the plants and vegetables. A well known student of nature once tried the growing forces of a squash. When it was eighteen days old and measured seventeen inches in circumference, he fixed a sort of harness around it, with a long lever attached. The power of the squash was measured by the weight it lifted, the weight being fixed to the lever. When it was twenty days old, two days after the harness was fixed on it, it lifted sixty pounds. On the nineteenth day it lifted 5,000 pounds.

The seed of the globe turnip is about the twentieth part of an inch in diameter, and yet in the course of a few months this seed will be enlarged by the soil and the air into 27,000,000 times its original bulk, and this in addition to a bunch of leaves. It has been found by experiment that a turnip seed will under fair conditions increase its own weight fifteen times in a minute. Turnips growing in peat ground have been found to increase more than 15,000 times the weight of their seed in a day.

The Lost Smile.

Lost—a merry, good morning smile,
With a cunning dimple on either side
Of coaxing lips that are parted wide,
Showing small rows of teeth, like pearls.
It hasn't been missed but a little while
And matches a pair of hazel eyes,
Clouded now like the summer skies
And a mop of tangle-y, flaxen curls.

It was lost in the nursery this morning, when Dorothy, fresh and rosy from sleep,
Looked out and saw the troublesome rain
Beating its greeting against the pane,
Bathing the blossoms and bending the grain,
And—would you believe it—there and then,
She, like the skies, began to weep!

If you find it, don't put it on a shelf,
Where Sunday bonnets and manners are stored,
But bring it at once to Nursery row,
For mother and brother both miss it so,
And you shall receive a rich reward,
For it will repay you its own sweet self!
—Mary L. C. Robinson in Youth's Companion.

Trick With Glass of Water.

You wager any person that you will so fill a glass of water that he shall not move it off the table without spilling the whole contents. You then fill the glass and, laying a piece of thin card over the top of it, dexterously turn the glass upside down on the table and draw away the card and leave the water in the glass with its foot upward. It will therefore be impossible to remove the glass from the table without spilling every drop.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Labor Troubles In Massachusetts Prove a Serious Handicap

New York, March 15.—R. G. Dun & Co's Weekkly Review of Trade says: Business in Boston was completely paralyzed by the strike of freight handlers and teamsters. Fortunately this struggle was brief, but another will begin on Monday at Fall River mills and other textile plants in that vicinity. Outside of Massachusetts, however, the labor situation is exceptionally free from controversy, and even in the coal mines there is less than the usual agitation as April approaches.

Distribution of spring merchandise is making rapid progress, the most sanguine expectations being fully realized in all sections outside the strike area. Effects of bad weather are shown in railway earnings.

Consumers of iron and steel products are still anxious regarding conditions during the next three months. After July 1 it is believed that deliveries will be ample.

Labor disturbances have tended to strengthen the tone of textile products by reducing available supplies, which were already none too large.

All divisions of the cotton goods market are affected, and a general advance in quotations will inevitably follow any protracted interruption to manufacture and transportation, owing to the healthy consumptive demand.

Complaints are heard as to the delivery of woolen goods, but trade is only fair and cancellations of orders for overcoatings are reported.

Footwear is quiet, leather is dull and hides generally weaker. Last week's shipment of boots and shoes from Boston showed a good increase over the movement in 1901, but the forwardings this week will make a very unfavorable comparison.

A Desperado's End

Charleston, March 15.—Fishermen near Branchville yesterday found the half-decomposed body of a white man floating in the Edisto river, near where the express company's safe was found the day after the recent express robbery. Two pistols were strapped around the body and in the coat pockets were found 12 express envelopes, four of them containing money. Those who have seen the body pronounce it to be the notorious Bartow Warren, who is alleged to have robbed the Southern Express company twice and to have murdered the chief witness against him.

Boston's Ferries Are Dangerous

Boston, March 15.—An astonishing state of affairs in the ferry division of the street department is revealed by an expert examination and eport made by William T. Keough and William L. Tobey, mechanical engineers. It is shown that the ferryboats are dangerous to the lives of those who travel upon them, that the fire apparatus on the boats does not work, that the life-saving equipment cannot be used, and that the boats are in such a dirty condition that the health of the crews is endangered.

"Difficulties" Not Named

Dublin, March 15.—In an address here yesterday Earl Cadogan made a rather enigmatic reference to King Edward's abandoned visit to Ireland. After declaring that nobody was more disappointed in this matter than the king himself, the speaker said he refrained from characterizing the difficulties which had rendered the abandoned visit inopportune, but that they were well known and deplored by a vast majority of the Irish people.

Railroad Wreck and Fire

Knox, Ind., March 15.—A passenger train ran into an open switch here yesterday and four persons were severely injured. The train was running at high speed, when it collided with a number of freight cars which were standing on a side track. The baggage coach was torn to pieces and the engine and six freight cars were piled in a heap, and were destroyed by fire.

Leaves Prison to Die

Boston, March 15.—Governor Crane yesterday pardoned Thomas Ryan, who, in 1894, was convicted of complicity with James Thompson in the burglary of the Webster postoffice and sentenced to from 12 to 18 years in state prison. "Fatal illness" was the chief ground for the governor's action. The pardon was carried to the prison by the prisoner's wife.

Brute Gets Prison Sentence

Boston, March 15.—Edward F. Grant was sent to state prison for not less than eight nor more than ten years yesterday, for assault of a deplorable nature on his young daughter. The prisoner's counsel told the court that he foresaw the impossibility of proving the innocence of the accused, and had advised him to plead guilty to one count.

Red Flags Stirred Up Strife

London, March 15.—Wiring from Odessa, the correspondent of The Standard says that the arrest of a group of students bearing red flags led to an attempted rescue and a riot, during which, it is reported, a policeman and a rioter were killed. Troops now patrol the city to prevent a recurrence of the disorder.

Weather Conditions and Foreacst

Almanac, Sunday, March 16.
Sun rises—5:56; sets—5:51.
Moon sets—12:25 a. m.
High water—4 a. m.; 4:30 p. m.

A severe storm is central over the middle slope with an eastward movement and is closely followed by a cold wave, accompanied by snow. The rain area will extend into south and west New England and rain or snow will continue quite generally. On the coast the winds will be fresh northeast to east.

WOMAN'S WORLD

SHARLOT M. HALL.

A Western Woman Who Is Winning Fame as a Writer.

Of the new western writers who have come to the front in the last three or four years one of the most promising is Sharlot M. Hall, whose verses on the desert and on various phases of the life of the southwest have been widely copied. Miss Hall was the first white child born in Lincoln county, Kan., and her mother was the ideal western woman, an expert rifle shot, fearless and strong. It was in the midst of peril from savage Indians that the girl passed her childhood, and when only twelve years old her parents set out on the old Santa Fe trail for Arizona, where they settled near Prescott on a ranch. The girl grew up and absorbed that knowledge of the cowboy and his traits which can never be gained at second hand. The spirit of the west seems to have entered into her blood, and the result has been several remarkable poems.

The Gentle Art of Scolding.

The woman in authority should study consideration of other people's feelings. The common scold or the continual fault finder is perhaps the most disagreeable person in the world, not only unhappy herself, but making others so.

Scolding viewed in one light is really an accomplishment—that is, when used for the proper correction of servants and children. If you feel called upon to deliver a rebuke to a servant, make it clear to the offender that your displeasure is justified. Never lose your temper, but be calm and dignified, for remember that your bearing has much to do with the respect that you are held in by those under your authority. Never let a scolding degenerate into nagging, for if you do you lose all claim to respect from the delinquent, and the person at fault becomes your critic, and a very scornful critic at that.

Let all scoldings be gauged by the error, but do not make any rebuke long drawn out. Give each a hopeful ending. When properly administered, a merited scolding quickly bears the fruit of better behavior on the part of the offending one.

Many wives have spoiled the good nature of their husbands by seizing upon some fault, trivial perhaps, and constantly dwelling upon it.

Where a home is made unhappy by a great fault of the husband, if he is worthy of loving and saving, he is more effectively appealed to by tenderness than by denunciation or scorn. There are many men today in the wrong path possessed by worthy attributes who might be saved by gentle reproof from the error of their ways, but are only spurred on their downward course by the unrelenting fierceness of a scolding wife. Those who have been saved from evil ways bear witness to the efficacy of the gentle sympathy and loving advice of a true helpmate.—New York Journal.

A Housekeeping Experiment.

One housekeeper last year tried the experiment of running her household on the co-operative plan. She consulted with her cook, who was the general housework girl as well, and entered into an arrangement with her by which any surplus over the stipulated weekly allowance for household expenses was to be equally divided between the two. It was thought that an allowance of $2 a day for a family of five was sufficient, and by careful, systematic watching the weekly expenditures often did not reach the allotted $14. Whatever less they were was scrupulously divided between the two. Often there would be a dollar to the good, though 35 cents to each was the more common allotment. If, through company, sickness or some unusual demand the sum was overstepped, the next week was started in debt that needed care to eliminate.

The experiment proved highly satisfactory, though it must be admitted that the girl was one of unusual intelligence and adaptability. Undoubtedly, however, it could be successful in many households, even under somewhat less favorable conditions. It gave the maid a strong incentive to watch all leakages, and it effectually prevented the fault finding on that score which is a large cause for discontent between mistress and maid in almost every family. A stipulation in the contract was that the table should be kept up to its usual standard, and both parties to the agreement felt stimulated to make the food attractive through service and flavor rather than by outlay.—New York Post.

Managing a Husband.

There is a positive exhilaration to be derived from bringing all one's efforts to bear upon a husband whose business worries have pursued him from the office. There is a genuine delight to fight with the unknown anxieties which his love will not permit him to unburden at home. It brings out all the tact and patience and diplomacy, all the charms and graces of a woman's character, to transform a cross, tired, wornout husband into a new man—just by a good dinner and a little tact.

But to manage a husband when there are so many kinds of husbands requires, more than any other one thing, a thorough study of your subject. To "meet your husband with a smile," which is the old fashioned rule for all ills, is enough to make a nervous, irritable man frantic. Look him over before you even smile. You ought to know how to treat him. Don't sing or hum if he has a headache or begin to tell him the news before you have fed him. If there is one rule to lay down—which there is not—or if I were giving automatic advice—which I am not—I should say that most men come home like hungry animals and require first of all to be fed.—Lilian Bell in Harper's Bazar.

Cultivate a Moral Purpose.

Above all, woman needs to be emancipated by the uplifting power of a moral purpose, says William M. Salter in The Atlantic. This is her safeguard in her new relation, just as it is always man's safeguard. Let her thought be not what do I want to do or be, not what must I do or be, but what would it be right for me to do or be, taking for her standard the wide and permanent good of the race, and she may err in judgment, but she will never sin. Following one's heart is of uncertain value. Following duty or whatever is consistent with duty or if not duty as commonly understood then duty as more perfectly conceived, but always duty and not mere inclination and pleasure; this is the way of safety, this is the higher liberty.

Self reverence, self knowledge, self control—
These three alone lead life to sovereign power.

There is no other way than this old way. It is the way for men, and it is the way for women.

Work Makes Women Less Womanly.

It is impossible for women to engage in any business life without losing at least a little of that softness and—well, call it irresponsibility if you will that once formed her chief charm. She may gain the more solid qualities of mind, but walk she ever so circumspectly her eyes will be opened upon the hard facts of life, and the practicalities of a most prosaic world will rub a little of the bloom off the peach. As a matter of self protection and self interest this may be a good thing for the woman who must enter the arena of everyday life and work early.

But upon those married women who are more or less secretly propagating the gospel of discontent as well as the single woman of any assured income I would urge Mr. Punch's celebrated advice, "Don't."—Helen M. Winslow in Woman's Home Companion.

Some Good Remedies For Wrinkles.

One of the best preventives for wrinkles is to learn facial repose. Keep the body so well nourished that the face will share in the general well being, giving evidence to this by its plumpness and lack of angularity. Then it is important to keep the teeth in good condition, so that there will be no sagging in of the cheeks where teeth are missing. Massage for the face is like exercise for the rest of the body, and if used for the purpose of toning up the muscles it is beneficial. The general direction of the strokes on the face should be upward and outward in order to lift up and strengthen the failing muscles.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Benches.

Benches are quite a craze in home furnishing just now. Where a room has no mantel and has a plain, quite good sized wall space to make a feature of a high backed bench is very fashionable and proves a very effective substitute. Have a shelf fastened on brackets above the high back of the bench for bric-a-brac, throw a rug on the floor in front of it, and, with several consistently covered down cushions, the result is quite charming and often saves the entire effect of a room.

The Wash Boiler.

Many people complain that the boiler rusts and iron molds the clothes. This may be entirely prevented by rubbing the boiler well with any good kitchen soap immediately after emptying it and while it is warm. Give it a liberal coating, remembering the soap is not wasted, as it all goes into and helps the first filling of the boiler next washing day.

Mixing Batter.

A homely suggestion, but one of great service to the woman who cooks, is to use a wire egg beater when mixing flour and water or milk together. Sift the flour and pour the liquid in a thin stream, beating well all the time. It will be lighter and better in every way.

Women have evidently increased in height during the past fifty years, as Thackeray speaks of Laura Pendennis, who was five feet four, being unfashionably tall.

To find out whether poultry is tender or otherwise pinch the skin. If it adheres to the flesh, the bird is tough; if it leaves the flesh, it is tender.

Alum dissolved in an iron pot over the fire makes a good cement for repairing iron and glass.

Hartshorn will take out white marks from furniture and save repolishing.

NORFOLK, ss. PROBATE COURT.

TO the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of

JOHN Q. McDONNELL,

late of Buffalo, in the County of Erie and State of New York, deceased:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Emily A. McDonnell, with certain papers purporting to be copies of the last will and testament of said deceased, and of the probate thereof in said State of New York, duly authenticated, representing that at the time of his death, said deceased had estate in said County of Norfolk, on which said will may operate, and praying that the copy of said will may be filed and recorded in the Registry of Probate of said County of Norfolk, and letters testamentary thereon granted to her.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said County of Norfolk, on the sixteenth day of April, A. D. 1902, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks in the Quincy Daily Ledger, a newspaper published in Quincy, the first publication to be thirty days at least, before said Court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fourteenth day of March in the year one thousand nine hundred and two.

BRAINTREE.

B. J. Loring is still confined to the house with inflammatory rheumatism but is now able to sit up.

The smelts came up the brook Tuesday night and since that time undreds of pounds have been caught.

Capt. Sheppard is having a large addition built on the yacht club house on Allen street and is remodeling it into two tenements.

The regular monthly entertainment of the Penniman School association was held last Tuesday evening in the school hall.

Two Braintree conveyances have been recorded this week; John C. Randall to Ellen T. Thomas, and James J. Dolan to Inez C. Andrews.

Mr. W. G. Nixon of Middle street has had his residence connected by telephone.

Mrs. Mary Lovell Hollis, widow of Joel Hollis, died of old age Friday morning at four o'clock, at her home on Union street. The funeral will be held Sunday at one o'clock.

Mr. E. E. Abercrombie, Mr. H. G. Hewes and Mr. A. S. Morrison attended the hearing on railroad fares before the Railroad Committee at the State House, last Tuesday. The Colthurst bill was ably supported by Mr. Abercrombie and others. The meeting adjourned to March 21.

The Jonas Perkins School association and the Penniman School association will hold a union meeting in Cochato hall on Tuesday evening, March 25th. Mr. Walter Sargent of North Adams, Assistant State Supervisor of Drawing will speak on "Art in the Schools." There will be no charge for admission and it is hoped that all who are interested in school work will attend.

The Board of Selectmen met Wednesday and organized as follows: Ansel O. Clark, chairman; J. Parker Hayward, clerk. Two appointments were made, Thomas Slavin as constable and Charles H. Jackson as special police.

Dr. F. W. Brett was officially notified to visit the almshouse Wednesday and vaccinate the people there. The chairman of the Board of Health, Dr. C. M. Marstin, was there when Dr. Brett arrived and became a victim under the order. Look out for the doctor's sore arm!

The Union Veteran Firemen's Association held their first meeting in their new quarters on Tuesday evening. President Thomas A. Kelley occupied the chair and the regular routine business was transacted. Last evening an adjourned meeting was held and the matter of celebrating their new quarters was discussed. It was decided to hold an entertainment, supper and speeches and to have a short street parade and to invite the Hancock Veterans of Brockton to participate. President Kelley is chairman of the committee to arrange for the affair.

On Wednesday of this week a reception was tendered the friends of Court Autumna in G. A. R. hall. The evening was passed in a very pleasant and informal manner. Mr. E. A. Fisher, prince regent, was master of ceremonies. An excellent program was rendered, consisting of music, vocal and instrumental, readings and selections on the phonograph. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge. Mr. Fisher made a short address in behalf of the order and invited all to become members.

For some time past the social committee of the Y. P. S. C. E. have been planning a stereopticon lecture to be given by Dr. Gallagher, the proceeds of which should help to swell the fund already on hand, for the improvement of the First church parlor. The committee with Mr. H. T. Winkfield as chairman, have advertised it for some weeks and Tuesday evening, March 11, there was a good audience assembled to enjoy one of the most delightful trips, "A cruise in the Mediterranean." Dr. Gallagher in his introductory remarks said I would call it an informal talk, rather than a lecture," but called by whichever name it may be, it was certainly highly enjoyed by all present, and the earnest attention paid by the audience, must have been very flattering to the speaker.

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

The most important dramatic spectacle ever produced on the American stage, namely the Klaw & Erlanger production of "Ben Hur," which is a stage transcript of Gen. Lew Wallace's famous religious romance, will be presented at the Colonial Theatre, Boston, for a limited engagement, beginning Monday evening, March 17th. No play has ever acheived the popular success of "Ben Hur." The wonderful vogue of this performance is justified by many particulars of value, not the least of which is the illusion of the horse race on the stage in which twelve horses are concerned. The word picture of this chariot race is one of the most moving descriptions in English literature. To have the actuality of the story happen on a stage platform with anything like stirring effect seemed almost impossible, until Klaw & Erlanger devised a mechanical way of bringing it about. In the remarkable engagement of last season eight horses were used in this race. All who were privileged to witness this wonderful exhibition of stagecraft will be glad to go again to see it carried into effect by four more horses. All of these horses are driven at top speed, and are beautiful specimens of their kind, chosen for beauty as well as gait. "Ben Hur" has upset theatrical history. It has brought more people to the theatre, and builded larger receipts than ever known As a dramatic story with a religious theme, this is of more than passing importance. It proves that there is an eager appetite for what is most praiseworthy in theatre culture. The prices for this engagement are $1.50, $1.00, and 50 cents. Seats will be reserved if accompanied by check or money order. Matinees will be given Wednesday and Saturday. The performance begins sharply at 7.45 in the evening, and at 2 in the afternoon. There is no overture by the orchestra. No one will be seated during the prelude.

Castle Square Theatre.

The Castle Square Theatre stock company makes a revival of the famous romantic play "Rosedale" the coming week, and it is promised that the presentation of this popular dramatic attraction shall excel in artistic realism. "Rosedale" has enjoyed an extended popularity with the play going public of England and America, and few of the romantic dramas of the present generation appeal more successfully to both the young and old. The appearance of many of the present members of the Castle Square company, for the first time here, in the familiar characters will be awaited with much interest by the patrons of this play house. Some elaborate stage settings will be shown in the production, there will be a large number of extra people and the musical features of the play will be given especial care. Boxes of choice chocolate bon-bons will be given to all patrons of the Monday matinee.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

It is simply wonderful the number of amusement seekers who have contracted what has been denominated the "Keith habit," which is a regular weekly attendance at one of the attractive playhouses conducted by B. F. Keith in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Providence. There is authority for the statement that they number fully 100,000, and few of them are ever heard to grumble at the return they receive in exchange for the price of admission. Among the entertainers announced to appear at the Boston house during the week commencing March 17, are the following: Hall and Staley, the funny "Twentieth Century Burglars;" Latina, a beautiful and graceful acrobatic contortionist; Murray Brothers, a trio of musical comedians; Harrigan the noted "tramp" juggler; Fields and Ward, conversational comedians, and Chas. R. Crolius and Adele St. Alva, in a screamingly funny comedy sketch, with vocal dancing specialties. The Fadettes Woman's Orchestra, the best female musical organization in this country, is underlined for the week of March 24.

Strong as a horse, although weighing only 154 pounds, is Pat McCarthy, "the Sunburst of Erin," who comes out of the west next week to show New Englanders what a good lift really is. McCarthy holds three world's records for lifting, but at Austin & Stone's museum in Boston the little strong man promises something entirely new. At western cattle fairs McCarthy has distinguished himself by carrying on his back a live five year old steer. His lift at the museum will be a full size concert grand upright piano, with a man playing the instrument and two young lady dancers performing on a platform plated on top of the piano. This grand test of strength at Austin & Stone's will be given at every performance during his engagement.

A COOL RECEPTION.

It Was Not Surprising, Though, In View of the Explanation.

Letters of introduction are not invariably serviceable. For one reason, they may be too frank. Harry Furniss in his "Confessions of a Caricaturist" says that when a brother artist was setting forth on his travels in foreign climes he was provided with a letter of introduction to a certain British consul.

The writer of the letter inclosed it in one to the artist, saying that he would find the consul a most arrant snob, a bumptious, arrogant humbug, a cad to the backbone. Still, he would probably offer some courtesies to any one who had a good social standing and thus compensate the traveler for having to come in contact with such an insufferable vulgarian.

On the return of the artist to England the writer of the letter asked how he had fared with the consul.

"Well, my dear fellow," drawled the artist, "he did not receive me very warmly, and he did not ask me to dinner. In fact, he struck me as being rather cool."

"Well, you do surprise me," rejoined his friend. "He's a cad, as I told you in my letter, but he's very hospitable, and I really can't understand this state of things. You gave him my letter of introduction?"

"Why, I thought so; but, do you know, on my journey home I discovered it in my pocketbook. So I must have handed to him instead your note to me about him!"

The explanation was quite adequate.

Brains Make Soldiers.

A discussion recently took place in the smoking room of a Swiss hotel between a German and an American as to the merits of their respective armies. The former believed in discipline and trained troops. The American believed in training, too, but held that a lot depended upon the material trained. "Given," quoth he, "that brains are lacking, no amount of physical training will make up for them. Take the American troops, comparatively untrained, and see how well they fight. It's because of their brains."

"Nonsense," rejoined the aroused German. "Untrained troops can never stand against well drilled ones. Take your country, for example, with practically no drilled army. What would you do"— He paused impressively and then said, "What would you do if Germany landed an army of 250,000 perfectly drilled and perfectly equipped men on your shores?"

"Bury them," was the quiet but complete rejoinder.—Detroit Free Press.

Wonders In the Equine Foot.

The foot of a horse is one of the most ingenious and unexampled pieces of mechanism in the whole range of animal structure. The outside hoof is made up of a series of thin vertical laminæ of horn, about 500 in number. Into this are fitted about 500 more thin laminæ, which belong to the coffin bone, both sets being elastic and adherent. The edges of a quire of paper inserted leaf by leaf into another quire will furnish a good idea of the arrangement of the laminæ in all the feet, amounting to about 4,000. These are distributed in the most secure manner and in a way that every spring is acted upon in an oblique direction. Verily there is a display of nature's wonder everywhere.

Stopping a Fast Train.

People often wax impatient because express trains cannot be stopped at some unimportant little station at which they wish to alight. They should consider the cost of satisfying their whim. A train going at a rate of sixty miles an hour can be stopped within 120 yards from the first application of the brake. Now, enough power is lost to carry this same train fifteen miles over a plane surface. First there is the momentum acquired by the train flying at this remarkable rate of speed, then the loss of steam in applying the brakes and lastly the extra amount of coal to compensate for all these losses, for all of which impatient passengers would not care to pay.

A Chance to Retaliate.

The minister was young and easily embarrassed. The first time he performed the marriage ceremony it was for a couple who were both younger and still more easily embarrassed than he.

When he had finished the service and murmured a few kindly meant but halting words to the young couple whom he had just united, the bride looked at him, blushing, but confident.

"Thank you," she said clearly. "It's real kind of you to congratulate us, and as long as you haven't ever been married yet, maybe we'll have a chance some day to retaliate."

How to Make a Bulldog Let Go.

Says a breeder of bulldogs: "The quickest way to release a person from the jaws of a bulldog, if he be unfortunate enough to be bitten, is by catching the dog's hind paw, in the center of which is an exceedingly tender spot called the heart. This should be pressed or, even better, the paw taken into the mouth and bitten with the teeth. The dog will relinquish the hold at once. It is a desperate remedy, but a sure one, and one that is resorted to by the professional dogfighters.

Philosophy of Mr. Peckem.

Mrs. Peckem—John, I hear that Jones' house burned down a week after he was married.

Mr. Peckem—Well, troubles never come singly, you know.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Ever notice that as soon as you get one fiddler paid another begins to tune up?—Atchison Globe.

MERE MEN.

The four greatest men of today, says Henry Labouchere, are Marconi, Roentgen, Edison and Carnegie.

Senator Teller's speech on the Philippine question contains 75,000 words and fills twenty-six pages of The Congressional Record.

Dr. Joseph A. Booth, the last surviving brother of Edwin and Junius Brutus Booth, died the other day. He was a resident of New York city.

John G. Nairne, the famous English banker, has been appointed chief cashier of the Bank of England, one of the highest positions in the banking world.

A. Wendlinger of Richmond, Va., a military tailor, now eighty years old, made the uniforms for Jefferson Davis' staff and for the staff of every governor since then.

Thomas Hitchcock, who stirred up so much criticism in New York through his declining to give up his opera box to Prince Henry, is a man of wealth and culture and was known for many years as a financial writer over the pseudonym of Matthew Marshall.

Justice Shiras of the United States supreme court is said to be contemplating retirement from the bench soon. He will have served ten years on the supreme bench on the 10th of next October, having been appointed in 1892 by President Harrison. He is seventy years old.

Samuel McDonald, who lives near Raleigh, N. C., has just sold a portion of the oldest and best known farm in that state, the Quaker Meadow farm. It was bought by the McDowell family from the Earl of Granville long before the Revolution and then contained 2,000 acres.

The salary of John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank of Chicago, has been increased to $40,000 a year. His salary is next to the highest paid to a bank official in this country. In 1873 Mr. Mitchell entered the Illinois Trust and Savings bank as assistant teller at a salary of $35 a month.

CURRENT COMMENT.

When a sovereign state bumps against a combination of railway companies, it generally finds out that it isn't as sovereign as it might be.—Chicago Record-Herald.

All electric wires should be put into conduits, and the companies using them will find it to their advantage to adopt the underground system as speedily as possible.—Philadelphia North American.

Some Canadians are claiming that their interests are being sacrificed by England in an effort to be deferential to the United States. This shows how utterly impossible it is to please everybody.—Washington Star.

The city of Topeka has settled with the saloon keepers whose places were raided by Mrs. Carrie Nation by paying a lump sum of $1,000. The responsibility of cities for property destroyed by a mob is an established principle of law, but this is a novel application of it.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

THRONE LIGHTS.

King Leopold of Belgium is suffering from an obstinate throat complaint.

It is reported from Copenhagen that the king of Sweden will probably make a long stay at Biarritz this spring. After his visit to the Riviera his majesty will very likely visit Paris.

The late Empress Frederick of Germany in her will bequeathed to the German associations in England and elsewhere a gold inkstand studded with precious stones. Each of the German associations has recently received this bequest.

King Edward, who purchased Benjamin Constant's portrait of Queen Victoria, has caused this picture to be hung in the state dining room at Windsor castle. The only other picture on the walls of this room is Detaille's equestrian portraits of the king and the Duke of Connaught.

FIREPROOF BUILDINGS.

Why is it that the fireprooflessness of a hotel is never fully recognized until after the blaze?—Hartford Post.

The day must come when every armory and every hotel of any considerable size in so crowded a city as New York will be fireproof, or at the least of slow burning construction, in every part.—New York Tribune.

American cities are built to be burned. Their histories read somewhat like this: Flourishing, public library, handsome churches, blocks of stores, new courthouse, first class hotels; destroyed by fire; loss, millions.—Boston Herald.

OUR SOLONS' SALARIES.

Quite a number of senators are giving intimations that their refusal to increase their salaries 50 per cent was due to popular prejudice rather than personal prefereuce.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Some congressmen think their salaries should be increased from $5,000 to $10,000 a year. Some people think that about nine-tenths of the present flock should pay for the privilege of occupying seats in the national capitol.—Lancaster Eagle.

HERO HOBSON.

Captain Hobson is about to retire from the navy on account of weak eyes. Wonder what his real reason is?—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Captain Hobson seems to be still of a retiring disposition. And, bad as his eyesight is, he thinks he can see a future for himself in politics.—Boston Globe.

Boston Strike Can Hardly Be Called Settled

ATTEMPTS AT COMPROMISE

Have Proved Unsuccessful In the Cases of Longshoremen and Team Drivers —Their Leaders Say That Worse Contention Threatens to Break Out

Boston, March 17.—Saturday's conferences cleared the atmosphere of many of the perplexing questions arising out of the great industrial strike of the past week, and apparently rendered a peaceful termination certain. Now, however, there are clouds on the horizon and indications are not lacking that matters are by no means running smoothly yet.

Practically all the strikers, outside the longsoremen and team drivers are satisfied with the present outlook for a settlement so far as their organizations are concerned, but those two classes of workmen have grievances which seem to baffle all attempts at a compromise.

The longshoremen are most bitter toward the Metropolitan Steamship line, which absolutely refuses to take back but a small number of the old men, and the Clyde line, which will not discharge the men already employed to make places for the old hands. The strikers also refuse to go back on the Merchants and Miners' line, and work with non-union men, and submit to a reduction of 5 cents an hour in their wages.

They held a stormy meeting last night at which many bitter things were said of their former employers. President Ryan of the Longsoremen's union stated after the meeting that unless matters were adjusted soon they were prepared to tie up the business of the companies all along the seaboard. The situation is so strained that D. J. O'Keefe, president of the National Longshoremen's union, who is now in Cleveland, has been asked to come to Boston and endeavor to adjust the trouble.

There are still 158 expressmen who have not yet been able to secure their old positions and this has created a strong feeling against the companies. Secretary Innis of Detroit, of the National Team Drivers' union, who is now in this city trying to straighten out matters, says that the situation is very serious. Considering the expressmen's and longshoremen's troubles together, he said:

"Unless the entire unfortunate situation is settled by Wednesday there is little doubt that a worse contention will break out than has yet been seen in this city." This statement was warmly endorsed by President Ryan of the Longshoremen's union, who was present when it was made.

Both men are positive in their belief that unless a satisfactory settlement is brought about the temper of the men is such that nothing can restrain them from taking matters into their own hands. Special meetings of the two organizations will be held Wednesday night, and meantime every possible effort will be brought to bear to bring harmony out of confusion.

Chairman Reed of the state board of arbitration will visit the various steamship docks and call upon the express officials and master teamsters today and endeavor to bring about an understanding between them and their former employes.

All the influences that united to bring about what was hoped to be a final settlement of the strike will continue at work until all the great interests involved have become harmonized and until the strike can be called absolutely an issue of the past.

Sunday was filled with meetings of nearly all the labor organizations which participated in the strike. With the exception already stated the time was devoted to discussing the strike in all of its phases and in perfecting arrangements for the return to work of the members today.

Practically all freight handlers and clerks went back today and the others will be reinstated as fast as vacancies occur, although upon the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R. the men perfectly understand that they will be required to load and unload teams whenever requested to do so by their foreman, as in the past, trusting to the efforts of Governor Crane with the railroad officials to have that rule rescinded in the early future.

Guarding Against Attack

Colon, March 17.—All the approaches to Colon are now guarded by small detachments of troops. These are necessary precautions to avoid an insurgent surprise and attack similar to the one of last November. Beef, provisions, vegetables, etc., are becoming scarce in Panama, as small boats are no longer ble to communicate with the neighboring coast towns.

FAILED TO GET BOOTY

Burglars Bound, Gagged and Chloroformed a Fall River Woman

Fall River, Mass., March 17.—Two men bound, gagged and afterward gave chloroform to Corinne, aged 18, the daughter of M. B. Slocum, last night, in order to silence her while they ransacked the house. She is not badly hurt, although suffering from the shock, and the robbers did not get anything of value. They were after a travelling case which contained between $1500 and $2000 worth of valuables. Mr. Slocum is employed as a traveler for a New Bedford jewelry house.

The incident occurred at Mr. Slocum's house just after 8 o'clock last night. Miss Slocum was sitting in the parlor, at the window, in the dirk. There was a light in the kitchen at the time. The door opened, and a man came in who said Mr. Slocum had sent him from a stable for his jewelry case. The request seemed an ordinary one, for Mr. Slocum frequently used horses from the stable the man mentioned. The daughter knew that her father never sent strangers after his case, and so she said that it was not in the house; that her father had taken it with him. The man said she lied and repeated the request. Miss Slocum started to run, but she was knocked down. At that moment another man came in and between them the girl was tied, gagged and given a little chloroform on a handkerchief.

The condition of the house shows that the men hurriedly, but with a great deal of trouble, searched the house over for the case, even to ripping open the beds. But they missed it, for the case was on the top shelf of a closet. Half an hour later Miss Slocum's brother returned home and found his sister unconscious. He relieved her, sent for a doctor, and notified the police.

Blondin In Jail

Boston, March 17—J. W. Blondin, under indictment for the murder of his wife, whose body was found in the Chelmsford woods last summer, was brought here from New York by Officer Chapman and Detectives Rhoades and Proctor. They were driven to the state police headquarters. For nearly two hours the party remained in the office, but nothing was given out to the newspaper men waiting in the corridor. Blondin did not appear at all nervous. Shortly after midnight the officers took their prisoner to Cambridge jail, where he was formally delivered to Sheriff Fairbairn.

Theory Was Punctured

Bedford, Mass., March 17.—Dr. Immanuel Pfeiffer, who for 10 weeks has been ill with smallpox at his home in this town, has been officially declared well by the state board of health, and the four guards who have been on duty during his illness have been removed. Dr. Pfeiffer contracted the disease at Boston's smallpox hospital, where he went voluntarily among the patients in order to prove the truth of his anti-vaccination theories.

Buried With Military Honors

Boston, March 17.—A military funeral was given to General A. P. Martin, late water commissioner from the Norfolk Unitarian church yesterday. The eulogy was by Rev. E. A. Horton, and the music was a fitting accompaniment to the occasion. The attendance of friends was very large, for General Martin, in his long term of public life, had become almost as well known as any Boston man.

Royal Welcome to Moody

Haverhill, Mass., March 17.—Thirty thousand residents of Haverhill and surrounding towns turned out en masse Saturday evening, giving Congressman Moody, the newly appointed secretary of the navy, the greatest ovation ever given in this county to any man. The celebration was carried out without a flaw and a magnificent display of fireworks was the prominent feature.

Were Close to Death

Fall River, Mass., March 17.—John Whalen, Daniel Collins, and Joseph, the 4-year-old son of Collins, went out for a row on the Taunton river yesterday. The craft capsized, and for nearly an hour the men clung to the boat, Collins holding his son out of water. The struggling men were at length discovered by the lighthouse keeper and rescued.

Opera Singer Gets Divorce

Brattleboro, Vt., March 17.—At the Windham county court a divorce was granted Mary H. Lavin, the opera singer, from her husband, John Lavin, on the ground of intolerable severity and cruelty in neglect to support. Permission was given for the applicant to resume her maiden name of Mary Howe. Lavin is at present singing in England.

A Youthful Pyromaniac

Providence, March 17.—For the next 10 years Catherine Conley, 11 years old, will be kept under restraint, the authorities having conclusively demonstrated to Judge Sweetland that the girl is dangerous to the public safety because of her propensity for starting fires.

MOTION OVERRULED

Court Decides That Murderer Best Can Have No New Trial

Salem, Mass., March 17.—Judge Sherman on Saturday overruled Best's motion for a new trial. It was just one year ago that John C. Best was placed at the bar in the court house here for trial on the charge of murder.

On Saturday Judges Sherman and Fox, before whom the case was originally tried, heard arguments and evidence to show why the verdict of guilty, which was rendered almost a year ago, should be set aside.

Best was tried on the charge of killing George Bailey at the Breakheart Hill farm in Saugus. The crime was committed Oct. 9, 1900, and the body of Bailey was discovered in Floating Bridge pond, Lynn, on the 19th of the same month.

The trial began in Salem on Monday, March 18, 1901, and lasted a week and a half. It was late on Thursday evening, March 28, that a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree was returned. A motion for a new trial was filed the next day, and exceptions the next. It was not until late in the winter that the exceptions were heard by the supreme court. These have recently been overruled.

The hearing on the motion for a new trial has been delayed from time to time, until Saturday. The grounds set forth were: First, that the verdict was against the evidence and the weight of the evidence; secondly, that it was against the law, and, thirdly, that one of the jurors, James E. Trask of Salem, was disqualified to serve because he was deaf and could not properly sit on the jury nor hear the testimony.

Court adjourned until March 29 to give the defendant's counsel an opportunity to file exceptions. Best, the prisoner, appeared very nervous.

This Week In Congress

Washington, March 17.—In accordance with the agreement reached a week ago the senate will begin voting on the ship subsidy bill and amendments this afternoon at 3 o'clock. There will be no speechmaking after the voting begins. With the subsidy bill disposed of the bill introduced by Senator Hoar for the protection of the President of the United States from assassination will assume first place on the calendar.

The house during the present week will pass the river and harbor bill; will decide the contested election case of Moss vs. Rhea from the third Kentucky district and will consider the bill for the retirement of officers of the revenue cutter service.

Gaynor and Greene Not Worried

Quebec, March 17.—Colonel John F. Gaynor and Captain Greene, whose bail was estreated because of their non-appearance before court in Savannah to answer to the charge of defrauding the United States government, are still at the Chateau Frontenac in this city. No attempt has been made to arrest them. Both men appear to enjoy their residence here.

Winter Hangs On

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 17.—There has been a drop in the temperature of nearly 40 degrees. A gale is blowing and a blizzard is raging throughout southern Michigan.

St. Paul, March 17.—North Dakota and the Canadian northwest has experienced the worst snowstorm in many years and railroad traffic is practically paralyzed.

Mrs McKinley Sees Old Friends

Canton, O., March 17.—Secretary Cortelyou and Dr. Rixey, close friends to the late President McKinley, noted improvement in Mrs. McKinley's condition during their visit with her yesterday. The visit of these old friends seemed to give Mrs. McKinley much pleasure. Her condition changes but little from day to day, but shows gradual improvement.

Disease Continues to Spread

Woonsocket, R. I., March 17.—Five new cases of smallpox were found yesterday in two new sections. There are now 96 in quarantine, 50 of these being in the hospital. Out of a population of 30,000 about 22,000 persons have been vaccinated.

Storer Denies Rumor

New York, March 17.—Bellamy Storer, United States minister to Spain, arrived yesterday on the steamer St. Louis from Southampton. Mr. Storer was surprised to hear of the rumor that he had been recalled from his post and emphatically denied that there was the slightest foundation for such a report.

Weather Conditions and Foreacst

Almanac, Tuesday, March 18.
Sun rises—5:53; sets—5:54.
Moon sets—2:13 a. m.
High water—6 a. m.; 6:30 p. m.

The storm centre since Saturday night has moved more rapidly in an easterly direction with diminished intensity. The cold wave has reached the upper Mississippi valley and upper lake region with zero temperature as far south as St. Paul. The temperature has also fallen considerably in the Ohio valley. Rains and snows have been general in the northwest and from the Mississippi valley eastward except northeast New England. The cold wave will continue its eastward movement and reach western New England tomorrow morning. It will rain in New England. On the coast the winds will be brisk and possibly high south to southwest. Storm warnings are displayed from Delaware breakwater to Eastport.

COMPLETE SURRENDER

Of Cotton Manufacturers to the Labor Unions

ADVANCE OF TEN PERCENT

Granted Because Mill Owners Failed to Agree Between Themselves—Operatives Will Now Get Highest Wages Ever Paid at Fall River

Fall River, Mass., March 17.—Unconditional surrender to the demands of the labor unions was the record made by the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' association. A serious battle between capital and labor was averted at a moment when all hope of avoiding the conflict had been abandoned by the operatives and by 95 percent of the members of the association.

The welcome news spread over the city like wild-fire. It seemed too good to be true, because every interest had resigned to the apparently inevitable, and when it became rumored that all the mills would post notices of a 10 percent advance Monday morning the story was looked upon as a hoax.

The morning conference on Saturday brought about by the business men, resulted in failures to reach an understanding. At noon there seemed to be no possible way in which the threatened strike could be averted. Later in the afternoon it was announced that the Chase and Shoe mills had surrendered. At labor headquarters the news was received with great satisfaction. Before 4 o'clock the Seaconnet, Flint and Wampanoag had fallen into line, and it was evident that the labor unions had won a great victory.

Another meeting of the Manufacturers' association was hastily called, and then for the first time it became known that a serious disagreement had arisen in the ranks of the association, to which the surrender of the mills named was undoubtedly due.

A stormy meeting followed. The treasurers realized that it was useless to enter a fight after the action of the mills named, and they voted to grant the 10 percent advance, to take effect today. This was done in the face of the official statement, made at 12 o'clock, to the effect that the market conditions did not warrant the increase, and that the manufacturers would not under any circumstances grant the advance.

Members of the association admitted that the surrender was humiliating to them, and that, in view of their oft-repeated statement that the market conditions did not guarantee such a course, they were placed before the public and their operatives in a most unenviable light.

But there is an explanation for the unexpected and startling developments. The statement published broadcast over the country that the speedy dissolution of the Cotton Manufacturers' association was inevitable is not necessarily true, although it must be admitted that the relations between the members are strained to the breaking point.

Said one of the first men to surrender to the operatives: "In breaking the original agreement not to advance, by promising 6 percent, half of the mills in the city were forced to do a thing which they did not want to do. I am willing now to fight to a finish if we could only stand together in opposition to 10 percent, but I refuse to fight for the difference of 4 percent. By failing to unite we have lost to the labor unions, who have taught us again the lesson of standing together in times of trouble. The labor leaders are to be congratulated upon remaining firm in their original demands. We are obliged to surrender because we have failed to agree."

This morning the help returned to the mills and commenced work under the highest scale of wages ever paid in the cotton mills of Fall River.

Secretary Whitehead of the Weavers' union was notied by the manufacturers of the action taken by their association, and was further informed that the matter of standard length of cut would be taken up at once. This is the issue upon which the weavers decided to wait until the wage difficulty was settled, and it is in an effort to put in a standard length of cut that the weavers of the Sagamore mills are now on strike.

Lowell Textile Council Acts

Lowell, Mass., March 17.—The Textile council sent to the mill agents of Lowell on Saturday afternoon a demand for a 10 percent increase in wages, to take effect March 24. This increase, if granted, will affect 22,000 operatives and will add to their earnings about $13,000 a week. In view of the concession of the Fall River agents the Lowell operatives feel that their demands will be acceded to.

Time For Another Raise

Lawrence, Mass., March 17.—In view of the movement for an advance in wages which is now being made in the manufacturing cities of New England, local labor leaders are talking of the probability of a like action being taken in this city. Since the business panic of '93, a few slight raises have been voluntarily made by the mill people, but the sentiment now is that another is due.

Won't Affect Providence Mills

Providence, March 17.—Local mill managers say that the 10 percent advance in wages in Fall River will not be likely to affect the local mills, wherein, they claim, wholly different conditions prevail. They apprehend no trouble.

White's Retirement Coming

Berlin, March 17.—With expressions of regret the newspapers here print a dispatch from Washington to the effect that Andrew D. White, the American ambassador to Germany, will retire next November.

Washington, March 17.—The understanding among state department officials and among his friends has been for some time that Mr. White intended retiring from the post of ambassador at Berlin next November, when he will reach the age of 70 years.

Twenty Men Probably Drowned

Canso, N. S., March 17.—The wreck of the Dominion Coal company's steamer Tiber has been found off White Point ledges, five miles west of Canso. The steamer is below the water and pieces of wreckage floating about led to the discovery. No trace of the crew of 20 men has been found and it is likely that they have all perished.

Americans Witnessed Bullfight

El Paso, Tex., March 17.—Ten thousand people, most of them Americans, witnessed a bloody bullfight at Juarez, Mex., just across the river from this city yesterday, in which two of Spain's noted matadors—Fuentes and Mazzantini—took leading parts. Six bulls were dispatched by the sword and five horses were gored to death.

War May Be Brewing

London, March 17.—With reference to the Russo-Japanese war rumors, the St. Petersburg correspondent of The Times says that he is able to vouch that the Siberian railway is declining consignments from merchants because the resources of the line are fully occupied in forwarding troops and war material to Vladivostock.

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. Among the tens of thousands who have used it for the grip, not one case has ever been reported that did not recover. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

A great many orders for appropriations for a few hundred dollars are introduced into the City Council which are entirely unnecessary and seem to establish a bad precedent. Those for street repairs, for instance, should be referred to Commissioner of Public Works, who should from the general appropriation of $25,000 be able to make most of the desired improvements. Repairs of streets are largely current expenses and loans should not be made for minor improvements.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ It is all well enough to see that vinegar and spices are free from adulteration and are fit to take into the human stomach. But there are persons who are prone to wonder that there is never the sign of an effort to discover whether the various sorts of intoxicating beverges that are sold are of good standard quality and free from adulteration as the law provides. The usual impression is that adulteration is carried to a very considerable extent in the manufacture of intoxicants; but we rarely hear of any attempt to test the matter. A great deal has been said of the efficacy of license laws in ensuring that good liquor shall always be sold—but does anybody really know that the law is observed?—New Bedford Standard.

City Council Business.

At tonight's meeting of the City Council the Committee on Streets will report on the matter of a street railway waiting room in City Square; on petitions for locations for poles; and orders for public hearings on the change of street railway tracks in City Square.

The Committee on Public Buildings will report on the order for remodeling City Hall, and probably an order purchasing land for the new school building at Atlantic.

The Finance Committee will probably report on the budget.

In the calendar is the order for $27,984.46 for sewer constructions. It is probable that Building Ordinance will come up.

The Yachting Season.

The Massachusetts Yacht Racing Association will hold its annual meeting on Thursday at Young's Hotel, when the Quincy Yacht club will probably be reinstated. Amendments to the rules will be considered and dates assigned for open races.

THE THIRD WEEK.

Prospects Not Bright for Settlement of Quarry Strike.

The third week of the quarrymen's strike begins today and the outlook for a settlement is not bright. Labor men, as a rule, consider the proposition made by the quarry owners Friday night a fair one, and seem surprised that it was not accepted. The men, however, think that there was some trick about it.

When the two committees adjourned Friday night it was to meet again Saturday night to hear the result of the vote of the Quarryman's Union on the proposition. The result of the vote was published in Saturday's Ledger, so that the manufacturers committee were prepared for the answer. The quarrymen informed the manufacturers that the union had rejected the proposition, and that it must be eight hours with nine hours pay or nothing. Then the meeting adjourned.

A well known quarry owner said to a representative of the Ledger that eight hours a day for the entire year would reduce the output of Quincy granite considerable.

There are several elements that enter into the quarrying of Quincy granite that the general public do not understand. In Barre, Vt., owing to the stone being less hard than Quincy, the quarrying is carried on with but little waste. In Quincy, however, there is an enormous waste which of itself must increase the price of Quincy granite. Then again, at this time of year all of the quarries employ every man that it is possible to use. With quarries working to their full capacity for nine hours it is impossible to keep up with orders and they are running behind.

Now, said the quarryowner, cut off one hour per day and we are producing one ninth less, and we are running still further behind and are blocking the wheels of the cutting part of the business. We are willing, as stated in our proposition, to give the quarrymen an advance in wages, but we must work nine hours during the spring and summer months.

The quarrymen's reason for not wanting to work nine hours is that they get too tired, but I notice that when the whisle blows at night they come from work on the run and are as lively as school boys, but I never yet have seen them show activity when going to work.

While the manufacturers do not say what they intend to do, it is rumored that they will try to work their quarries with non union men.

To Build Clubhouse.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Tennis club was held Saturday evening at Th Greenleaf, and these officers elected:

President,—James M. Nowland.
Vice President,—Arthur W. Hall.
Treasurer,—James F. Harlow.
Secretary,—Eugene C. Hultman.

Executive Committee, the above, with Dr. N. S. Hunting, W. C. McConnell and Arthur B. Holden.

It was voted to raise the membership limit from 60 to 75 and to build a club house near the courts on Whitney road. The club now has a membership of 54 and is in a prosperous condition.

The Quincy Cup.

The Globe hears that Henry M. Faxon of the Quincy Yacht club is having a new boat of the scow type built by Smith of Quincy Point. Her water line length is not known, but it would not be surprising if it should prove 21 feet. A challenge for the Quincy cup, which is now being held by the Manchester yacht club can be sent any time previous to April 1, so that this rumor, if well founded, has much significance.

Fisher and Betts.

The trial of John M. Fisher and Fred E. Betts accused of using the mail in pursuance of a scheme to defraud is set for next Tuesday, March 25. Judge Lowell has overruled on Saturday the motions to quash the ten indictments against them.

The defendents have as counsels Charles W. Bartlett, Harvey H. Pratt, and Herbert Baker, and the government is represented by District Attorney Moulton and his assistant John H. Casey.

Barbers Organizing.

A large meeting of barbers was held at Doble's hall, Sunday. Edward Dufault was elected President, H. W. Howartte acted as Recording Secretary, and O. A. Minot as Financial Secretary. A member of the Journeymen's Barber International union of America addressed the meeting. After a long discussion on trade matters it was concluded to form a local union of the J. B. I. U. to remove some of the evils under which the barbers of Quincy and vicinity suffer. Another meeting will be held Thursday evening.

☞ On Thursday, March 20, there will be a large sale of horses and carriages, also of real estate of John J. Higgins at South Weymouth. Frank F. Crane, the popular Quincy auctioneer, will sell the property.

STRIKE OR LOCKOUT.

The Coal Handlers of City Out Today.

Men Claim It Is a Lockout.

Because Firms Refuse to Recognize the Union.

The coal teamsters and coal handlers working for J. F. Sheppard & Son and C. Patch & Son at Quincy, ceased work this morning. Some days ago the men organized as a union and presented a bill of wages, and also regulations regarding hours. The employers were given until the 15th of March to consider the proposition. The time expired Saturday and no notice was taken of the men's request for higher wages and regular hours.

Sunday a meeting of the union was held and it was decided to appoint a committee to wait on the dealers to see what reply they had to the men's request.

This morning the men reported for work as usual but before their team was loaded word was sent that the dealers refused to recognize the committee or say anything regarding the men's request. The men thereupon quit work leaving their teams partly loaded, but they all took their horses to the barn.

A meeting of the men will be held this evening to decide what further action will be taken.

It is reported that Mr. Fogg, who does the teaming for the Fore River Engine Co., will cart the coal for the company hereafter.

Only one team is being employed this morning. The driver does not belong to the union and will not.

The coal handlers who left work claim it is not a strike but a lockout as the dealers refused to recognize the workmen. But as the men left work of their own accord, the dealers say it is a strike, and they are not troubled over the outcome.

Good Templars.

Merrymount lodge, of Good Templars, gave a supper and social, in Doble's hall Thursday evening, Mar. 13. Mrs. Elisha Hobart and Mrs. Holbrook and their aids, received a great many compliments, for their skill in looking after the wants of the large number present. After supper the hall was opened and all were invited to enjoy themselves. Little Miss Merrill, a sweet little miss of four summers, sang a beautiful solo. The mystery box was won by Mr. John Tanton of Quincy Neck.

At the last regular meeting of the lodge Chief Templar Merrill presented the lodge with a beautiful bookmark emblematical of the order, worked by a lady 87 years old. The gift is one that will always be prized by the members, not alone for what it means to them, but the lessons it teaches them. When the dear hands that worked it are folded, and the loved one gone home, the beautiful emblem of "Faith, hope and charity," will ever remain.

New Clothing Firm.

An up-to-date clothing store is promised by the F. D. Fellows Co., who are the successors of the Granite Clothing Co., and will open up at the old stand next week. All the present stock will be removed and a complete line of new goods substituted, which will be sold at as low prices as in any city. Mr. Fellows entered the clothing business at Turner Falls and for the past 13 years has been general manager of the Beese Bryant Company of Worcester He was popular with employes and people generally. He was given a farewell party at Worcester the other night, when his associates made a presentation and wished him success. An announcement appears in this issue.

Sidewalks Wanted.

The Editor of the Daily Ledger:

The sidewalk built of granite dust by George H. Field, in front of his residence, should be a model for our Commissioner. There is plenty of same the material to be had in our stonesheds for the cost of carting. It makes a better sidewalk and would cost less than the screenings from Quincy Neck.

Over $200,000 worth of taxable property has been built in Ward Three during the past five years and yet there are but very few sidewalks in this ward in a condition to be walked on during wet weather.

Come up to Ward Three, Mr. Commissioner, and do something to take us out of the mud. Mr. Field deserves the thanks of the taxpayers in Ward Three for the liberal spirit shown in building a good sidewalk at his own expense.

Arthur Lane was arraigned for violation of the fish and game laws at Weymouth. Case continued until March 26.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

NINE HOUR DAY.

Necessary to Supply Demand for Granite.

A Review of the Negotiations.

Between the Quarry Owners and Members of Union.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

In explanation of the quarry labor situation, and to correct certain misstatements and erroneous impressions, a review of the action of both parties in the matter is given as follows:

In February the quarrymen made a demand on their employers for an 8-hour day with 9 hours pay, and weekly payments.

The quarry owners conceded weekly payments, but refused to grant the 8-hour demand. For the purpose of open negotiations, however the employers offered a compromise on the basis of 9 hours work for nine months per year, and 8 hours work for the remaining 3 months, with full 9 hours pay throughout year.

The quarrymen rejected this proposal and without making any counter proposition, went out on a strike.

Later, negotiations were re-opened and the employers were asked by the Quarrymen's committee to make their best possible offer for a settlement. In explanation, the Quarrymen's committee stated that they were not empowered under their instructions to make any other proposition than that covered by their original demand, but as a committee, they desire to carryback to their fellow workmen a proposition covering the utmost concessions which the employers were willing to grant.

The quarry owners therefore made a proposal in good faith, and with the understanding before its submission, that it was exactly what the quarrymen desired, i.e., a final offer and not subject to further negotions—which was in effect as follows:

The employers propose to grant a 10 per cent. advance in wages. They also propose to grant an 8-hour day throughout the year, reserving the right, however, to operate an extra hour per day during the months of March, April, May, June, September and October, should business require it, until such time as Barre should grant an 8-hour day, but not after that time. The extra hour to be paid for in addition to the regular day's wages, and at the same sate per hour.

The quarrymen rejected this proposition and came back with a request for further proposals. These the employers declined to submit but expressed a desire to listen to any suggestions which the quarrymen might offer with a view to solving the difficulty. The quarrymen having no suggestions to offer and refusing to recede from their original demand, negotiations were declared off.

As much comment has been heard derogatory to the action of the quarry owners, it may not be out of place to state their principal reason for refusing at this time to accede to the demauds of the workmen, which is as follows:

The volume of granite industry in Quincy would be reduced practically 11 per cent. by cutting off the 9th hour. Assuming that at a low estimate the annual output from Quincy amounts to $1,000,000.00, the city's industries would lose $100,900.00 per annum which would naturally go to other monumental centres. One stone cutter in nine would be thrown out of employment through inability to secure stock, as the quarries are even now unable to produce stock enough to supply the demand, and the result would be to throw away trade which could be handled under present conditions. This reduction in the number of wage earners would not only affect the granite business but would also reduce the value of rentable property, and diminish the trade of our merchants.

Every other monumental quarry in New England is being worked 9 hours per day, and it is not considered either fair or just to discriminate against Quincy.

It is a matter of regret that an amicable solution of the difficulty could not have been arrived at, but the arbitary action of the workmen in refusing all concessions offered, leaves apparently but one course open to the quarry owners viz. to negotiate with the workmen individually and conduct his business to the best advantage possible under the circumstances.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT

A Gang Were Helping Themselves to Copper Wire.

George F. Morse, superintendent of construction of the Old Colony street railway, had occasion to visit the power house of the company at Quincy Point about 8 o'clock Saturday night, and was somewhat surprised to find a team backed up to the power house and three men busily engaged in loading the team with copper wire. He did not recognize the men, but they evidently knew him, for they lost no time in making their escape. He reported the matter to Officer Larkin, who after some investigation secured warrants against Alex. R. Scott, Charles F. Redlon and Abram Breen, three linemen employed by the company. These men he located, and before morning had them under arrest and locked up. He also secured a search warrant and searched the premises occupied by Breen and found a quantity of railroad wire.

The three men when arraigned in court pleaded guilty and their cases were continued until Wednesday for judgment.

Inspector McKay and Officer Larkin visited the junk dealers places of Joseph Silber, David Silverman and Simon Silverman to whom it is alleged the men have been selling copper wire. Street railway material was found at the two latter places.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Harvard university undergraduates have started an open subscription for the relief of Boer women and children at present confined in concentration camps.

The well known stallion, J. B Shedd, was burned to death, together with 11 other horses, in a fire which destroyed the livery stable of John Chadwick at Penacook, N. H. The loss is about $3000.

Schooner James R. Talbot, which was in collision with the steamer State of Maine off Cape Elizabeth, has been towed to Thomaston, Me. Her bow is badly stove and her head gear gone.

It is understood that Frank P. Sargent, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Fremen, will accept the office of commissioner of immigration in the United States treasury department.

Major Blake L. Woodson, a former member of the legislature of Virginia, prominent as a soldier in the Confederate army and one of the foremost members of the Kansas City bar, died at Kansas City of apoplexy, aged 66 years.

A section of the naval arsenal at Valpariso has been destroyed by fire. The loss is placed at $1,000,000.

Mother St. Gabriel, known in the world as Annette McAndrews, died at the Ursuline academy, Cleveland, aged 72 years. She had been a member of the Ursuline order for 45 years.

The jute storage warehouse of the American Manufacturing company at Brooklyn was burned, with an estimated loss of $60,000.

Dr. George W. Warren, pofessor of music at Columbia university, died of apoplexy. He was born at Albany in 1828, and was a grandson of Lieutenant Warren of the Revolutionary army, who was killed at the battle of Bunker Hill.

General B. F. Tracy, who was suddenly overcome by illness in court at New York, is reported to be steadily improving.

A gift of $25,000, provided $75,000 also is raised, is promised to the Franklin Square House, a Boston institution. The donor's name is not made known. The Franklin Square House is the New England Conservatory of Music, which is to be vacated July 1, to be reoccupied as a home for working young women.

Coal Schooner Probably Lost

Baltimore, March 17.—It is believed in local shipping circles that the schooner Bertha Dean, which sailed from Baltimore for Boston Feb. 18 with a cargo of coal, foundered in one of the recent heavy gales, with all on board. Since that date, not a word has been heard from her.

TWAIN ON MEDICINE.

Mark Discusses the Progress Made In the Science.

POKES SOME FUN AT DOCTORS.

Famous Humorist In a Speech at the Medical Jurisprudence Society Dinner In New York Tells Them They Only Began to Learn Something Fifty Years Ago.

Mark Twain was the principal speaker at the Hotel Savoy, in New York, the other night at the dinner in celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the foundation of the Society of Medical Jurisprudence, says the New York Times. He said at the outset of his remarks that it was a pleasure to watch a company of gentlemen "in that condition which is peculiar to gentlemen who have had their dinners." That was a time, said Mr. Clemens, when the real nature of man came out.

"As a rule," he continued, "we go about with masks, we go about looking honest, and we are able to conceal ourselves all through the day. But when the time comes that man has had his dinner then the true man comes to the surface. I could see it here this evening. I noticed the burst of applause when Judge O'Brien got up to speak, and I knew that he was either an exceedingly able man or else that a lot of you practice in his court. [Laughter.] You have been giving yourselves away all evenings. One speaker got up here and urged you to be honest, and there was no response.

"Now, I want you to remember that medicine has made all its progress during the past fifty years. One member of this society sent me a typewritten judicial decision of the year 1809 in a medical case, with the suggestion that this was the kind of medicine to live and that the science of medicine had not progressed, but gone back. This decision went on and described a sort of medicine I used to take myself fifty years ago and which was in use also in the time of the Pharos, and all the knowledge up to fifty years ago you got from 5,000 years before that.

"I now hold in my hand Jaynes' Medical Dictionary, published in 1745. In that book there is a suggestion as to what medicine was like a long time ago. How many operations that are in use now were known fifty years ago? They were not operations—they were executions. [Laughter.]

"I read in this book the case of a man who 'died from a severe headache.' Why 'severe?' The man was dead. Didn't that cover the ground? [Laughter.]

"This book goes on to say: 'A certain merchant about fifty years of age, of a melancholy habit and deeply involved in affairs of the world, was during the day days'—with a capital D—'seized with a violent pain of his head, which some time after kept him in bed. I being called'—remember, this man was a regular—'ordered venisection in the arms, bleeding; I also ordered the application of leeches to the vessels of his nostrils; I also ordered the application of leeches to his forehead and temples, and also behind his ears.'

"Now, you see," continued Mark Twain, holding the old medical book in his hand, "he has got him fringed all over with leeches. But that was not enough, for he goes on to say, 'I likewise ordered the application of cup glasses, with scarification on his back.' Now, he has township maps carved all over him, and all this is for a headache. But notwithstanding these precautions the man dies, or, rather, perhaps I might have said because of these precautions the man dies. [Laughter.] Now this physician goes on to say, 'If any surgeon skilled in arterial anatomy had been present, I should also have ordered an operation.' [Laughter.] He was not satisfied with what he had done, with the precautions he had already taken, but he wanted apparently to put a pump into that man and pump out what was left. [Laughter.]

"Now all that has passed away, and modern medicine and surgery have come in. Medicine was like astrology, which did not move for centuries. When a comet appeared in the heavens, it was a sign that a prince was going to die. It was also a sign of earthquakes and of pestilence and other dreadful things. But they began to drop one thing after another. They finally got down to earthquakes and the death of a prince as the result of the appearance of a comet until in 1818 a writer in The Gentleman's Magazine found at least one thing that a comet was sent for, because it was on record that when the comet appeared in 1818 all the flies in London went blind and died. [Laughter.] Now they had got down to flies. [Laughter.]

"In 1829 a clergyman found still one thing that a comet was sent for, because while it was in the heavens all the cats in Westphalia got sick. But in 1868 that whole scheme was swept away, and the comet was recognized to be only a pleasant summer visitor, and, as for the cats and flies, they never were so healthy as they were then. [Laughter.] From that time dates the great step forward that your profession has taken." [Laughter and applause.]

A Novelty In Lights.

"Boullottes," or card table lights, are new, artistic and useful, although rather expensive. They are low, three lights in each and so arranged by having metallic shades over each light as to throw all the light upon the table. These lights are easily moved about and can be used with electricity or candles.

When Run Down

The system needs, like a clock, to be wound up again, and the best key is the new iron tonic,

Peptiron

Good at all times and especially good at this time.

Peptiron restores strength, courage, vim, good digestion, appetite, and the ability to rest well at night. It is both medicine and food for the nerves and brain, which it nourishes and strengthens, benefiting the whole system.

Prepared from Mr. Hood's own scientific formula by C. I. HOOD CO., Lowell, Mass. Price, $1.

Note.—Peptiron is guaranteed to do what we say; if it does not, money will be refunded.

WOMAN IN THE CASE

Led to Exposure of Traitorous Doings of a Russian Army Officer

Vienna, March 17.—About 60 arrests have been made in connection with the condemnation to death by a court martial at Warsaw of a Russian colonel by the name of Grimm for the systematic revelation of military secrets to a foreign power. Among the persons apprehended are a number of Russian officers of high rank. Colonel Grimm has not yet been executed.

It is asserted that Colonel Grimm, during 10 years, has revealed to Germany every plan prepared by Russia in the eventuality of war between the two countries. The discovery was due to Colonel Grimm's wife, who denounced her husband in revenge for his having paid court to another woman.

Miles Won't Go to Philippines

Washington, March 17.—The Post says: Lieutenant General Miles made a specific request to the war department to be sent to the Philippines, and in connection therewith submitted a plan by which, in his opinion, the war could be brought to an end without further loss of life to either side. He proposed to employ methods similar to those used by him so successfully in his Indian campaigns. Secretary Root denied General Miles request, and disapproved the plan submitted. The president subsequently concurred in the secretary's action. In effect, President Roosevelt and Secretary Root hold that the war in the Philippines is already at an end, or virtually so and that the adoption of General Miles plan would be unfair to those officials, whose work has brought about almost complete pacification.

Inmates Rescued Unharmed

Denver, March 17.—St. Vincent's orphan asylum, situated in the northern part of the city, was destroyed by fire. There were 200 orphans in the institution. All were rescued unharmed. The asylum was conducted by the Catholic Sisters of Charity.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER IX—CONTINUED.

"Now let us talk of what we ought to do. I assure you I have no intention of remaining a prisoner to these Tartars for an indefinite time."

"Nor I either."

"We will escape on the first opportunity?"

"Yes, if there is no other way of regaining our liberty."

"Do you know of any other?" asked Blount, looking at his companion.

"Certainly. We are not belligerents; we are neutral, and we will claim our freedom."

"From that brute of a Feofar-Khan?"

"No; he would not understand," answered Jolivet; "but from his lieutenant, Ivan Ogareff."

"He is a villain."

"No doubt, but the villain is a Russian. He knows that it does not do to trifle with the rights of men, and he has no interest to retain us. On the contrary. But to ask a favor of that gentleman does not quite suit my taste."

"But that gentleman is not in the camp, or at least I have not seen him here," observed Blount.

"He will come. He will not fail to do that. He must join the emir. Siberia is cut in two now, and very certainly Feofar's army is only waiting for him to advance on Irkutsk."

"And, once free, what shall we do?"

"Once free, we will continue our campaign and follow the Tartars until the time comes when we can make our way into the Russian camp. We must not give up the game. No, indeed; we have only just begun."

The event so much wished for by Jolivet and Blount, so much dreaded by Michael, occurred on the morning of the 12th of August.

On that day the trumpets sounded, the drums beat, the cannon roared. A huge cloud of dust swept along the road from Kalyvan. Ivan Ogareff, followed by several thousand men, made his entry into the Tartar camp.

At the first flourish of the trumpets several officers of high rank, followed by a brilliant escort of Usbeck horsemen, moved to the front of the camp to receive Ivan Ogareff.

Arrived in his presence, they paid him the greatest respect and invited him to accompany them to Feofar-Khan's tent.

Imperturbable as usual, Ogareff replied coldly to the deference paid to him. He was plainly dressed, but from a sort of impudent bravado he still wore the uniform of a Russian officer.

As he was about to ride on to pass the enclente of the camp, Sangarre, passing among the officers of the escort, approached and remained motionless before him.

"Nothing?" asked Ivan Ogareff.

"Nothing."

"Have patience."

"Is the time approaching when you will force the old woman to speak?"

"It is approaching, Sangarre."

"When will the old woman speak?"

"When we reach Tomsk."

"And we shall be there"—

"In three days."

A strange gleam shot from Sangarre's great black eyes, and she retired with a calm step. Ogareff pressed his spurs into his horse's flanks and, followed by his staff of Tartar officers, rode toward the emir's tent.

Feofar-Khan was expecting his lieutenant. The council, composed of the bearer of the royal seal, the khodja and some high officers, had taken their places in the tent.

Feofar-Kahn was a man of forty, tall, rather pale, of a fierce countenance and eyes with an evil expression. A curly black beard flowed over his chest. With his war costume, coat of mail of gold and silver, cross belt glistening with precious stones, scabbard curved like a yataghan and set with sparkling gems, boots with golden spurs, helmet ornamented with an aigret of brilliant diamonds, Feofar presented an aspect rather strange than imposing for a Tartar Sardanapalus, an undisputed sovereign, who directs at his pleasure the life and fortunes of his subjects, whose power is unlimited, and to whom at Bokhara by special privilege the title of emir is given.

When Ivan Ogareff appeared, the great dignitaries remained seated on their gold embroidered cushions, but Feofar rose from a rich divan which occupied the back part of the tent, the ground being hidden under the thick velvet pile of a Bokharian carpet.

The emir approached Ogareff and gave him a kiss, the meaning of which he could not mistake. This kiss made the lieutenant chief of the council and placed him temporarily about the khodja.

Then Feofar addressed himself to Ivan Ogareff.

"I have no need to question you," said he. "Speak, Ivan. You will find here ears very ready to listen to you."

"This is what I have to make known to you," answered Ogareff.

Ivan Ogareff spoke in the Tartar language, giving to his phrases the emphatic turn which distinguishes the language of the orientals.

"This is not the time for unnecessary words. What I have done at the head of your troops you know. The lines of the Ichim and the Irtish are now in our power, and the Turcoman horsemen can bathe their horses in the now Tartar waters. The Kirghiz hordes rose at the voice of Feofar-Khan, and the principal Siberian route from Ichim to Tomsk belongs to you. You can therefore push on your troops as well toward the east, where the sun rises, as toward the west, where he sets."

"But the armies of the sultan of St. Petersburg?" said Feofar-Khan, designating the emperor of Russia by this strange title.

"You have nothing to fear from them, either from the east or from the west," replied Ivan Ogareff. "The invasion has been sudden, and before the Russian army can succor them Irkutsk or Tobolsk will have fallen into your power. The czar's troops have been overwhelmed at Kalyvan, as they will be everywhere where yours meet them."

"And what advice does your devotion to the Tartar cause suggest?" asked the emir after a few moments' silence.

"My advice," answered Ivan Ogareff quickly, "is to march to meet the sun. It is to give the grass of the eastern steppes to the Turcoman horses to consume. It is to take Irkutsk, the capital of the eastern provinces, and with it a hostage the possession of whom is worth a whole country. In the place of the czar the grand duke, his brother, must fall into your hands."

This was the great result aimed at by Ivan Ogareff. To listen to him one would have taken him for one of the cruel descendants of Stephen Razine, the celebrated pirate who ravaged southern Russia in the eighteenth century. To seize the grand duke, murder him pitilessly, would fully satisfy his hatred. Besides, with the capture of Irkutsk, all eastern Siberia would pass under the Tartar dominion.

"It shall be thus, Ivan," replied Feofar.

"What are your orders?"

"Today our headquarters shall be removed to Tomsk."

Ogareff bowed, and, followed by the housch-begui, he retired to execute the emir's orders.

As he was about to mount his horse to return to the outposts a tumult broke out at some distance, in the part of the camp reserved for the prisoners. Shouts were heard and two or three shots fired. Perhaps it was an attempt at revolt or escape, which must be summarily suppressed.

Ivan Ogareff and the housch-begui walked forward a few steps, and almost immediately two men, whom the soldiers had not been able to keep back, appeared before them.

The housch-begui, without more information, made a sign which was an order for death, and the heads of the two prisoners would have rolled on the ground had not Ogareff uttered a few words which arrested the sword already raised.

The Russian had perceived that these prisoners were strangers, and he ordered them to be brought up to him.

They were Harry Blount and Alcide Jolivet.

On Ogareff's arrival in the camp they had demanded to be conducted to his presence. The soldiers had refused. In consequence, a struggle, an attempt at flight, shots fired which happily missed the two correspondents, but their execution would not have been long delayed if it had not been for the intervention of the emir's lieutenant.

The latter observed the prisoners for some moments, they being absolutely unknown to him. They had been present at the scene in the posthouse at Ichim in which Michael Strogoff had been struck by Ogareff, but the brutal traveler paid no attention to the persons then collected in the common room.

Blount and Jolivet, on the contrary, recognized him at once, and the latter said in a low voice: "Hello! It seems that Colonel Ogareff and the rude personage of Ichim are one!"

Then he added in his companion's ear:

"Explain our affair, Blount. You will do me a service. This Russian colonel in the midst of a Tartar camp disgusts me, and although, thanks to him, my head is still on my shoulders, my eyes would exhibit my feelings were I to attempt to look him in the face."

So saying, Alcide Jolivet assumed a look of complete and haughty indifference.

Whether or not Ivan Ogareff perceived that the prisoner's attitude was insulting toward him, he did not let it appear.

"Who are you, gentlemen?" he asked in Russian in a cold tone, but free from its rudeness.

"Two correspondents of English and French newspapers," replied Blount laconically.

"You have doubtless papers which will establish your identity?"

"Here are letters which accredit us in Russia from the English and French chancellor's office."

Ivan Ogareff took the letters which Blount held out to him and read them attentively. Then said he:

"You ask the authorization to follow our military operations in Siberia?"

"We ask to be free; that is all," answered the English correspondent dryly.

"You are so, gentlemen," answered Ogareff, "and I shall be curious to read your articles in The Daily Telegraph."

"Sir," replied Harry Blount, with the most imperturbable coolness, "it is sixpence a number, including postage."

And thereupon Blount returned to his companion, who appeared to approve completely of his replies.

Ivan Ogareff, without frowning, mounted his horse and, going to the head of his escort, soon disappeared in a cloud of dust.

"Vell, M. Jolivet, what do you think of Colonel Ivan Ogareff, general in chief of the Tartar troops?" asked Blount.

"I think, my dear friend," replied Alcide, smiling, "that the housch-begui made a very graceful gesture when he gave the order for our heads to be cut off."

Whatever was the motive which led Ogareff to act thus in regard to the two correspondents, they were free and could rove at their pleasure over the scene of war. Their intention was not to leave it. The sort of antipathy which formerly they had entertained for eachother had given place to a sincere friendship. Circumstances having brought them together, they no longer thought of separating. The petty questions of rivalry were forever extinguished. Harry Blount could never forget what he owed his companion, who, on the other hand, never tried to remind him of it. This friendship, too, assisted the reporting operations and was this to the advantage of their readers.

"And now," asked Blount, "what shall we do with our liberty?"

"Take advantage of it, of course," replied Alcide, "and go quietly to Tomsk to see what is going on there."

"Until the time—very near, I hope—when we may rejoin some Russian regiment."

"As you say, my dear Blount, it won't do to Tartarize ourselves too much. The best side is that of the most civilized army, and it is evident that the people of central Asia will have everything to lose and absolutely nothing to gain from this invasion, while the Russians will soon repulse them. It is only a matter of time."

The arrival of Ivan Ogareff, which had given Jolivet and Blount their liberty, was to Michael Strogoff, on the contrary, a serious danger. Should chance bring the czar's courier into Ogareff's presence the latter could not fail to recognize in him the traveler whom he had so brutally treated at the Ichim posthouse, and, although Michael had not replied to the insult as he would have done under any other circumstances, attention would be drawn to him, and at once the accomplishment of his plans would be rendered more difficult.

This was the unpleasant side of the business. A favorable result of his arrival, however, was the order which was given to raise the camp that very day and remove the headquarters to Tomsk.

This was the accomplishment of Michael's most fervent desire. His intention, as has been said, was to reach Tomsk concealed among the other prisoners—that is to say, without any risk of falling into the hands of the scouts who swarmed about the approaches to this important town. However, in consequence of the arrival of Ivan Ogareff and in the fear of being recognized by him, he questioned whether it would not be better to give up his first plan and attempt to escape during the journey.

Michael would no doubt have kept to the latter plan had he not learned that Feofar-Khan and Ivan Ogareff had already set out for the town at the head of some thousands of horsemen.

"I will wait, then," said he to himself; "at least unless some exceptional opportunity for escape occurs. The adverse chances are numerous on this side of Tomsk, while beyond the favorable increase, since I shall in a few hours have passed the most advanced Tartar posts to the east. Still three days of patience, and may God aid me."

ADD UP THE GAINS.

The virtue of one dose is so small you can't see any change. But add together all the little virtues from all the little doses and the effect is very marked.

In consumption, as in other cases, the results secured from continued treatment with Scott's Emulsion come from the accumulation of many small gains. A little gain in strength each day—a little gain in weight each day—if continued for weeks, amounts to something.

The fact that Scott's Emulsion can be taken for so long a time without the slightest inconvenience is greatly in its favor as a medicine for consumptives. Such a medicine gives itself time to do good.

It makes new flesh and strengthens the lungs.

A CORRECTED ACCOUNT

Of Disaster Which Overtook Methuen's Forces

MADE A GALLANT STAND

After the Mounted Troops Had "Got Completely Out of Hand"—Every Man of One Battery Was Hit and Its Lieutenant Finally Killed

London, March 17.—The war office has received the following communication from Lord Kitchener at Pretoria:

"Lord Methuen has sent me a staff officer with a dictated dispatch, from which it appears that certain particulars previously given are inaccurate. The rear screen of mounted troops was rushed and overwhelmed at dawn. There was a gap of a mile between the ox and the mule convoys. The mounted supports to the rear of the screen, with General Methuen immediately reinforced by all the available mounted troops and a section of the Thirty-eighth battery, maintained themselves for an hour, during which the convoys were closing up without disorder.

"In the meantime 200 infantry were being disposed by Lord Methuen, to resist the Boer attack, which was outflanking the left of the rear guard. The Boers pressed that attack hard, and the mounted troops, attempting to fall back on the infantry, got completely out of hand. Two guns of the Thirty-eighth battery were thus left unprotected, but continued in action until every man, with the exception of Lieutenant Nesham, was hit. Lieutenant Nesham was called on to surrender and upon refusing to do so was killed.

Lord Methuen, with 200 of the Northumberland fusiliers and two guns of the Fourth battery, then found himself isolated, but held on for three hours. During this period the remaining infantry, namely, 100 of the Lancashires with some 40 mounted men, mostly Cape police who had occupied the kraal near the wagons, also continued to hold out against the repeated attacks of the Boers.

"By this time Lord Methuen was wounded and the casualties were exceedingly heavy amongst his men. Their ammunition was mostly expended and the surrender was made at about 9:30 in the morning.

"The party on the kraal still held out and did not give in until two guns and a pom-pom were brought to bear upon them at about 10 o'clock, making their position untenable. The report that most of the Boers wore our khaki uniforms is confirmed. Many also wore our badges. Even at close quarters they could not be distinguished from our own men.

"It is clear the infantry fought well, and the artillery kept up the traditions of their regiment. In addition to the 40 members of the Cape police already mentioned, a few parties of imperial yeomanry and Cape police continued to hold their ground after the panic had swept the bulk of the mounted troops off the field."

Friends Out In Force

Chicago, March 17.—Representatives of all classes of people in Illinois joined yesterday in a final tribunte of respect to ex-Governor Altgeld, who was buried in Graceland cemetery. In accordance with the wishes of Mrs. Altgeld there was no military display. The funeral procession was headed by a platoon of police. The G. A. R., the Cook county judiciary, members of the county board, county and city officials, United Turner societies organized labor bodies, civic and fraternal societies and hundreds of citizens took part in the pageant.

A Terrible Threat

Pittsburg, March 17.—The Dispatch says: Repeated threats to abduct his three children unless a ransom of $25,000 was left in a certain spot and a warning that murder would follow the placing of detectives on the case have caused Alexander B. Peacock to remove his family temporarily fom his home here to the Holland house, New York. The case was put in the hands of detectives and it is said arrests of the guilty parties is now practically certain.

Givera Takes Lukban's Place

Manila, March 17.—Givera, the insurgent leader, has issued a proclamation in the island of Samar declaring he has succeeded General Lukban, who was captured by the Americans, and that consequently all orders now standing in the name of Lukban are void. Givera says he has been compelled unwillingly to issue this proclamation.

Messenger and Money Missing

Mattoon, Ills., March 17.—Larry McKee, a messenger in the employ of the Adams Express company, is missing. A package containing $30,000 was sent from Brazil, Ind., to St. Louis, in McKee's charge. When the train arrived at St. Louis both the package and McKee could not be found.

Two Killed In Senseless Quarrel

Reno, Nev., March 17.—Reese Evans and A. A. Smith fought a duel with Winchesters at eight feet distance yesterday at Purdy. Each received injuries from which death resulted. The quarrel was over a strip of almost worthless land.

Canal Traffic Held Up

Suez, March 17.—The canal is at present blocked by the British petroleum steamers Nerite and Bulysses. The former is on fire and the latter is ashore and abandoned.

FEMININE CHAT.

Mrs. Edward Gilchrist Low has opened at Groton, Mass., a college of horticulture for women.

The Southern Homeopathic association, which met in Atlanta recently, elected as its president a woman, Dr. Susan M. Hicks.

Miss Norah Bryant McCue of Madison, Wis., has been elected president of the senior class of the state university. She is the first woman to be so honored in the entire history of the university.

Miss Mary Stewart of Gobshealach, Ardnamurchan, has just died at the age of 100 years. She managed to live in the reigns of George III., George IV., William IV., Victoria and Edward VII. without learning the English language, for she spoke only Gaelic.

Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew calls every afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Grand Central station for her husband when he is in New York. She drives up to the directors' entrance of the station and enters. In half an hour the door is opened by Senator Depew, who escorts his wife to the carriage door, and they both drive away.

Friends who have recently visited Mrs. McKinley at Canton say that she is in good health—better, in fact, than she has been in many years past. She is strong enough to sign all her checks, writes autograph letters and transacts a considerable amount of business. Formerly she was unable to attend to any of these matters.

Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker, the last surviving child of the Rev. Dr. Lyman Beecher, has just celebrated her eightieth birthday at her home in Hartford, Conn. Mrs. Hooker is the widow of John Hooker, the sixth in descent from the Rev. Thomas Hooker, who was the founder of the state of Connecticut and inspired its first constitution.

BETWEEN HEATS.

PULPIT AND PEW.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph D. Newlin, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation, Philadelphia, for forty-two years, has resigned on account of advanced age.

Rev. J. Harris Knowles, senior curate of St. Chrysostom's, a chapel of Trinity, New York city, organized the first surpliced choir of boys in Chicago and personally trained them.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale of Boston, who will celebrate his eightieth birthday on April 3, persists in refusing to be called a clergyman. He wishes to be designated only as a "Christian minister."

The drapery on President McKinley's pew in the First Methodist church of Canton, O., was removed the other day. Although all pews in the church are free, the McKinley pew has not been occupied by any one since the funeral. It is to be permanently marked by a plate.

EDUCATORS.

Alexander H. Rice has been appointed to take charge of the Latin department of the College of Liberal Arts, Boston. He is at present in Rome, where he has been studying during the past year at the American School For Classical Studies.

Professor Basil Lanneau Gildersleeve of Johns Hopkins university has had presented to him by former pupils a volume of original work done by them during his professorship at the University of Virginia and at the Johns Hopkins. It is a neat book of 571 pages.

William A. Gardner, whose gifts are scattered all about the grounds of the Groton school, is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Jack Gardner of Boston. He spends all his time at the school, where he regards himself as a simple instructor, yet his income is rated something like $3,000 a day.

TWELVE MEN DROWNED

By Capsizing of Lifeboat Off Monomoy Station

SEVEN WERE LIFESAVERS

Who Had Taken Other Men From a Stranded Barge—Hard Efforts to Reach Shore In Tremendous Sea—But One Survivor of Disaster

Chatham, Mass., March 18.—Seven brave lifesavers, practically the entire crew of the Monomoy station, on the south end of Cape Cod, met death yesterday at their post of duty, and with them in the treacherous sea which capsized the lifeboat went five men from the stranded barge Wadena, whom they vainly tried to bring in safety to the shore. One man, Lemuel Ellis, through the heroic work of Captain Mayo of another stranded barge, the John C. Fitzpatrick, was rescued from the bottom of the upturned boat just as he was about to follow his companions to their watery grave.

Among those lost was William N. Mack of Cleveland, who was on the barge representing his company, the Boutell Towing and Transportation company of that city, while Captain Marshall N. Eldredge, one of the oldest life-savers on the coast, went down with his men. All the life-savers came from Chatham and Norwich, and all leave families. There is no government pension for those whose husbands and fathers are lost in the lifesaving service, so that the lot of these families is a hard one. The names of those who were lost yesterday are as follows:

Lifesavers—Marshall N. Eldridge, keeper; Edgar Small, Elijah Kendrick, Osborn Chase, Arthur Rogers, Isaac T. Foye and Valentine Nickerson. From the barge—William H. Mack, Cleveland; Captain Christian Olsen, Boston; Robert Molanux, Boston; Walter Azeved and Manuel Enos, both of Cottage City.

The scene of the accident was in the well known tide rips off Monomoy Point, which make down from Chatham into Nantucket sound. Last Thursday the barges Wadena and John C. Fitzpatrick, on the way up to Boston with cargoes of coal, stranded on the Shovelful shoal, about three quarters of a mile off Monomoy Point. Sunday night the tug Peter Smith ran alongside the Wadena and told those on board that a storm was coming on. All the wreckers were taken on board the tug with the exception of the five men who met their fate yesterday. Mr. Mack refused to leave. About 8 o'clock the captain decided to run into Hyannis, a distance of about 15 miles, leaving the barges still stranded.

Captain Eldridge, who had been watching the barges very closely, thought he sighted signals of distress on the Wadena yesterday forenoon. At that time the captain was about a mile below the station, near the point. He at once sent word to the station for the crew and the surfboat and about 10 o'clock the men came down the beach. At that time the wind was blowing nearly a gale from the southeast. The crew had no difficulty in getting off, and it was a comparatively easy pull until they rounded the point. There they met the full force of the wind and the sea, but as the tide was running to the westward, the last of the ebb, the water was not particularly rough. Nevertheless it took the crew nearly an hour to reach the barge. By that time the tide had turned to the eastward and a fierce cross-sea had been kicked up by the gale.

Captain Eldridge steered the tossing lifeboat under the lee of the Wadena, and one after another the five men dropped into the boat. With the wind astern it seemed comparatively easy to gain the smooth waters behind the point, but finally a tremendous sea caught the boat under the stern and she went over, throwing all the men into the water. The lifesavers clung to the boat and managed to pull the Wadena men along with them. An attempt was made to right the boat, but the lifesavers only managed to get her partially cleared. They had some hope, however, of finally reaching land, until another wave capsized her again and left them all struggling in the water.

Mr. Mack was the first to succumb, and one by one they dropped away until there were only four left, and these by the utmost exertions managed to clamber up on the bottom of the overturned boat. All were fearfully exhausted and were being constantly swept by the heavy seas. The four men drifted down in the direction of the Fitzpatrick, where Captain Mayo of that boat caught sight of them. With great daring he dropped a dory overboard and jumping into it started after the exhausted men. Before he reached the boat three of them had fallen off into the sea and had been carried away, but Ellis managed to hold on and caught the rope which Captain Mayo threw to him. He was dragged aboard and then Captain Mayo pulled around the point into the smooth water and landed the only survivor of the 13 who started from the barge. Ellis was too exhausted to give any account of his experience for two or three hours after getting ashore.

The disaster is one of the worst that ever happened to a lifesaving crew on Cape Cod. All the men were very well known in this vicinity and, like most families on Cape Cod, were more or less related, so that the blow is keenly felt.

New Bills For New Banks

Washington, March 18.—The comptroller of the currency received from the bureau of engraving and printing and issued yesterday the first delivery of the new national bank notes known as the series of 1902. These notes will be issued only to banks organized since Jan. 1, 1902, and those extending or re-extending their charters. Only the denominations of $10 and $20 are ready yet for issue.

Work For Snow Shovelers

St. Paul, March 18.—Specials indicate a general suspension of all work in the northwest except the shoveling of snow. At Bismarck, N. D., the thermometer registered 12 below zero yesterday. After 60 hours of the fiercest blizzard known in this section for 20 years, the storm has abated and efforts are being made to resume business.

Concha Succeeds Silva

Washington, March 18.—Jose V. Concha, the newly appointed minister from Colombia, presented his credentials to President Roosevelt yesterday. Mr. Concha declared that the only reason he was succeeding Minister Silva was because the doctor's services in another important post of duty were deemed indispensable by his government.

A Sensational Discovery

Vienna, March 18.—A plot to destroy the Austro-Hungarian warships Habsburg and Arpad, which are stationed at Pola, has been discovered. A large quantity of dynamite was recently stolen at Trieste, and the government has been informed that the Habsburg and Arpad were imperilled. These vessels have since been rigidly guarded.

Serious Situation in Ireland

Rome, March 18.—The Vatican has received confidential news that the Fenians in Ireland have for some months been engaged in an active propaganda, with a view to organizing for a general rising. It is believed the Vatican will instruct the Irish clergy to hold aloof from the revolutionary agitation.

Evans to Have Better Job

Washington, March 18.—There is no longer any doubt that Pension Commissioner Evans will within the next few months, at the latest, sever his connection with the pension bureau to accept from the president a position which will be a substantial promotion, but which has yet been definitely selected.

Pauncefote In Poor Health

Washington, March 18.—Lord Pauncefote has returned to Washington from a visit to George Vanderbilt at Biltmore, N. C. The ambassador expected to recuperate in some measure from attacks of asthma and rheumatic gout, but on his return he finds his health still far from the best.

The Condor Probably Lost

London, March 18.—The admiralty last night officially announced that all hope of finding the British sloop of war Condor had been given up. The Condor left Victoria, B. C., Dec. 2 for Honolulu. She has not been heard from since her departure. She carried a complement of 130 men.

Chinese Administration at Tientsin

Pekin, March 18.—A conference of the ministers of the powers yesterday decided on restoring the Chinese government at Tien Tsin, thus reversing the decision of the military commanders. No time for the transfer has yet been fixed.

Not In Good Standing

London, March 18.—The Sportsman this morning announces that the jockey club has refused "Tod" Sloane's application for a license to ride on English tracks this season, except for training and trials.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Wednesday, March 19.
Sun rises—5:51; sets—5:58.
Moon sets—2:58 a. m.
High water—7 a. m.; 7:45 p. m.

The storm centre has passed to the northeastward beyond the field of observation. The cold wave continues in the Dakotas, the upper Mississippi valley and upper lake region and has extended through the Ohio valley and lower lake region.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

SOUTH BOSTON CELEBRATES

Anniversary of the Day That the British Troops Skedaddled

Boston, March 18.—Both state and city, together with the patriotic citizens of South Boston, united yesterday in the celebration of the evacuation of Boston, with the unveiling of a tablet in a newly erected marble monument on Dorchester Heights, where the American redoubts compelled the British to leave Boston, as a special incentive to the occasion. The tablet was unveiled by Governor Crane after a military parade through the principal streets of South Boston, and following it came appropriate exercises in a school hall with an oration by Senator Lodge.

One of the guests of the South Boston citizens was Rear Admiral Schley, who rode with the mayor during the parade, receiving an ovation along the line of march. Last evening, at a banquet of the citizens, Admiral Schley was present and was one of the speakers.

Yesterday was a holiday in South Boston, the streets being decorated, while sports, music, band concerts and fireworks added much to the festivities.

Alleged Freight Thieves Caught

New Haven, March 18.—The New Haven police have been at work trying to locate the thieves that have broken open freight cars and taken from consignments of a variety of goods. Suspicion fell upon the train crew of the Northampton division of the N. Y., N. H. and H., and detectives last night arrested four of the crew. Emerson Haight, a telegraph operator, was also arrested. The five men are held on the charge of theft. Their bail is fixed at $1000.

Perseverance Rewarded

Boston, March 18.—Elisha Greenhood, who was disbarred in March, 1894, will be restored to the office of an attorney by a decree sent down yesterday by Chief Justice Mason of the superior court. This will be the first time in the history of the bar that a lawyer once removed has been reinstated. The decision of the court is the result of a stubborn, persevering fight of a young man for restoration to a profession from which he had been removed.

Milk Price Not Fixed

Boston, March 18.—The directors of the New England Milk Producers' union and the contractors doing business with the union met here yesterday, and discussed the matter of prices of milk for the coming year. The object of the meeting was to agree on a price for milk during the next six months, but after a lengthy discussion no price was set. The meeting adjourned without date.

Councilmen Charge Bribery

Fall River, Mass., March 18.—At a meeting of the city government last night, an order that a committee be appointed to investigate the charges of bribery recently made by Councilmen Riley and Costigan was adopted. The charges referred to are those made against City Clerk Brayton, who is charged with offering money for the votes of the two councilmen named.

Woman Dying, Husband Locked Up

Boston, March 18.—Mabel Weston, 29 years old, of 56 Temple street, is at the relief hospital in Haymarket square, where her death is momentarily expected, suffering from opium and chloral poisoning. Her husband, Walter S. Weston, spent the night in a cell at Division 3, pending an investigation. He, too, is suffering from the effect of drugs.

Trouble at Trinity

Hartford, March 18.—Trinity freshmen last night put their class flag on the campus flagpole. The sophomores tried to tear it down at chapel hours and a fierce fight ensued, in which two students were somewhat seriously injured and several others were badly bruised. By order of the faculty the freshmen took down the flag.

Good News From Sugar Camps

Pownal, Vt., March 18.—In the past week roads have been broken into the maple sugar groves in southern Vermont and the season is now in full swing. An excellent run of sap is reported. From the present outlook the crop will probably exceed that of the last two years.

NEWS IN BRIEF

As a result of the lockout declared by the masters of Newark, N. J., fully 350 union plumbers are out of employment.

The marine engineers have won their strike against the Rutland Transit Steamboat line, which operates eight freight steamers, besides "wild" boats, between Ogdensburg, N. Y., and Chicago.

The G. H. Hammond company has decided to abandon its big packing plant at Hammond, Ind., and establish a new one at the Chicago stock yards, to employ 3000 men. The plant will cost $1,500,000.

Captain Benjamin F. Tilley, formerly naval governor of Tutuila, Samoa, has been assigned to duty as captain of the yard at Mare Island, Cal.

The Bath, Me., board of trade passed a resolution urging Congressman Littlefield to do all in his power to aid liberal reciprocal measures between the United States and Cuba.

Joseph H. Manley of Augusta, Me., is being pressed by the administration to accept the office of first assistant postmaster general.

THE CLOSING CHAPTER

Freight Handlers Return to Work at Boston

NEARLY ALL REINSTATED

Conditions of Employment Are but Slightly Changed From Those Previously Existing—An Independent Strike of a Few Longshoremen

Boston, March 18.—The great strike of last week, involving 20,000 union men, was completely wiped out yesterday, when practically every man went back to his work under conditions but slightly changed from those existing when the trouble began. The only incident in the labor situation is the strike of 75 longshoremen at the Clyde line wharves. This is not actually an offshoot of the big strike, but an independent strike brought about by two disgruntled workmen. On Sunday night the meeting of the Longshoremen's union was so warm and the attitude of the men so threatening that the forecast was for trouble at the wharves of several of the coastwise steamer docks. Yesterday practically all the longshoremen applied for and got work, thus solving the freight problem on the water front.

At the freight sheds of the railroads the number of men left without immediate employment was less than 500, but during the day most of the men were used in one way or another, somewhere, in the effort to move freight expeditiously. The state board of arbitration was in touch with every point and wherever a question arose between the men and their employers good offices were exercised.

About noon 75 men on the Clyde line struck because two men taken back did not get their old places, although given work. The board of arbitration does not consider this a part of the general strike, but is endeavoring to settle it.

Last night the board issued a review of the day, with the expectancy that it has closed up the biggest labor trouble in the east for many years. The bulletin follows:

"The strike situation continues to improve. There have been numerous conferences with both employers and employes which have resulted in many misunderstandings being cleared up and a number of men have returned to work.

"The difficulty of the longshoremen employed by the Clyde Steamship company was adjusted by the reinstatement of all their former employes, who returned to work at noon. After working two hours the men expressed dissatisfaction, claiming that two of their number had not been given their old positions, and struck work until the matter could be adjusted. A further conference in the early evening was without result, but the matter will be resumed in the morning in the hope of an early settlement.

"Controversies are of course likely to happen at any time, and perhaps now more frequently than would be the case if friendly relations had not been ruptured. The above controversy is something new and, though following the recent sympathetic strike, it has no necessary connection with it, and is not an example that should be followed.

"The statement previously made concerning the coal teamsters' difficulty was accurate, notwithstanding contradiction.

"The efforts of the prominent business men, labor representatives and the state board have for their object the reinstatement of the largest possible number of men who participated in the strike. Continued patience is still necessary in order that their object may be successfully accomplished."

Hanna to Lend a Hand

Knoxville, March 18.—Local machinists are informed that the strike of machinists on the Southern railway is soon to be settled and that Senator Hanna is to represent their interests in arbitration. Their information is that Senator Hanna and President Spencer of the Southern will hold a conference and talk over the differences and they expect that an agrement will be reached by which all the men who went out several months ago shall return to work.

Norfolk Strike Petering Out

Norfolk, March 18.—Strikers are returning to work, 13 of them having signed. The strike breakers are leaving by twos for other places where their services are needed. The Norfolk and Portsmouth militia companies are supposed to respond to an emergency call.

Women In a Campaign

Niles, Mich., March 18.—A movement has been started here to organize the widows and unmarried women of the state for the purpose of applying to the state legislature for exemption from the personal tax on property not to exceed $5000. The women declare that inasmuch as they have no representation they must band together and appeal to the legislature to grant them the exemption from the personal tax.

Burial of General Stanley

Washington, March 18.—The late Major General David S. Stanley, retired, was buried with full military honors yesterday in the Soldiers' home cemetery. The Loyal Legion, the society of the Army of the Cumberland, the G. A. R. and the United States army were represented in the ceremonies.

Higher Insurance Rates

Cleveland, March 18.—Fire insurance rates on all manuacturing and mercantile risks were advanced 25 percent yesterday through out the country east of the Rocky mountains by the underwriters. New York city is the only point in the territory named not affected by the new schedule.

Americans Advised to Yield

Yokohama March 18.—United States Minister Buck has advised Americans to pay the house tax, under protest. The government has officially announced that it will submit the question to arbitration, but, in the meantime, it is determined to collect the tax.

Hawkins Gets Life Sentence

Nashua, N. H., March 18.—Charles Hawkins, charged with the murder of Mrs. Eva L. Brooks of this city, pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree at Manchester yesterday, and was given a life sentence.

Out of Gubernatorial Race

St. Albans, Vt., March 18.—The Messenger announces that Dr. W. S. Webb has withdrawn as a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor.

Ten Thousand In a Riot

St. Petersburg, March 18.—Student riots here Sunday, in which over 10,000 people participated, kept a small army of police and cavalry busy throughout the day. Probably 100 arrests were made. While many persons were injured, no fatalities were reported.

At Mercy of Tempest

Morehead City, N. C., March 18.—An unknown steamship on Cape Lookout shoals will probably go to pieces. It is impossible to reach her on account of high seas and winds. The lifesaving crew have tried in vain to rescue the crew.

Preparing to Resist Attack

Panama, March 18.—Active measures are being taken for the defense of this city, and the iron entrenchments are being strengthened. Extreme vigilance is exercised day and night.

Good Afternoon.

It is unusual for legislative bodies composed of twenty or more, for every member to attend the meetings, but it frequently happens, like this week, that every member of the City Council was present. It shows attention to business.

The business manager of the Quincy Adams Sawyer and Mason Corner Folks Company was in town today looking over the field, but did not receive a very good impression of Quincy as a show town. The city misses some first class productions because our people seem to prefer to spend their money out of town.

Councilman Fallon makes a mistake when he claims that Ward Four people are being taxed for the sewers and receiving nothing. Thus far the assessments upon abutters have practically paid all the cost of sewer extensions and maintenance. This may not be good news to the abutters who are furnishing the wherewithal, and in a few years when there are but few assessments, must pay more in taxes.

The annual appropriation order before the City Council took a singular course this year. The estimates of the Mayor and City Treasurer were referred to the Finance Committee. Nevertheless, at the next meeting, a councilman offered an order for the annual appropriations, and at the meeting this week the Finance Committee reported that said order ought to pass. A question might be raised, whether the President having referred a matter to a committee, should receive an order from a councilman. It establishes a bad precedent, and it will be in order in the future for any councilman, who gets tired of waiting for a report, to offer an order himself. To be sure, Councilman Freeman who offered the order was chairman of the Finance Committee, but he did not offer it as coming from the committee.

The comments of Rev. Dr. Todd on the strike existing in the Quincy quarries are timely, and show how one outside views the situation. His suggestion for a speedy arbitration of the difficulties is one which should be adopted. It could be either by the State Board of Arbitration, by a local board made up in part by both sides with Mayor Bryant or some one else as the chairman. It might be asking too much of Gov. Crane, to go to him, but if he is the only one upon whom both sides can unite, go to him by all means. As Barre let Quincy fight it out alone last year, there is a feeling that Quincy should let Barre have the disturbance of business this year. Let the Quincy quarry owners and quarrymen return to work immediately and agree to abide by any agreement which may be reached in Barre, which is a dangerous rival.

Sewer Commissioner Badger was at the meeting of the City Council Monday evening and informs the Ledger that he was ready to enlighten the Council as to the proposed extensions this year. Had the members received this information the vote on the appropriation for sewers would probably have been unanimous. As it was, a bare two-thirds voted for the appropriation. It is to be regretted that there is a disposition to put many large appropriation orders through blindly, to limit investigation and debate, and to raise, unnecessarily, questionable points of order. On a motion to suspend the rules, debate on the main question is always in order, although the ruling was otherwise. The City Council will have less faith in the reports of committees since the remarks of Councilman Stewart, that as a member of the Committee on Sewers he knew nothing about the order.

THE COAL STRIKE.

Both Sides Claim to Have Made Gains.

The striking coal handlers of the city are happy because of a settlement with the firm of A. J. Richards & Son of Weymouth and Quincy. The teamsters claim that the firm recognized their union and gave them all they asked.

The Ledger has been unable to get an interview with Mr. Richards, as he has been in Boston, but learns that he did not recognize the union, and that the settlement was a compromise on the Boston bill of prices.

The grain teamsters of A. J. Richards & Co., who went out last night returned to work this afternoon.

Alex Pitts, the driver employed by C. Patch & Son who yesterday delivered coal during the forenoon, explained his action by saying that he was unaware the men had gone out. As soon as he knew the men were out he also ceased work and took steps to become a union man.

It is reported that one of large dealers endeavored to deal with the men individually, agreeing to give more pay, but his efforts were unsuccessful.

Two of the striking coal handlers at Sheppard & Son's Braintree wharf returned to work this morning. They were later called upon by a committee from the Union who demanded their union buttons.

It is reported that other teamsters of Quincy are also organizing.

On Washington street yesterday, the absence of the usual continual stream of coal teams, going and coming from the wharf, was very noticeable. The serene quietude of the street reminding one of a Sunday or a holiday.

Still Room on the Earth.

Yes, said the western man, there are several patches of country still left out our way that will support a few million people each. There is a little section up in Wyoming, for instance, known as the Big Horn Basin, which has just been opened up by a new line of the Burlington railroad. It covers about 50,000 square miles. It's larger than New York State. Three times as large as Denmark. Twice as large as Bavaria. It is covered with beautiful streams, a never-failing water supply and the soil is as rich as any in the world. The possibilities for irrigation there are enormous and three big irrigation ditches are built already. Oh! yes, there are a few scraps of real good country left. We won't be crowded off the earth yet awhile.

CITY COUNCIL.

Appropriation for Sewers Has a Close Call.

Annual Appropriation Order Advanced.

Money for Houghs Neck Hose House Held Up.

Every member was present at Monday night's meeting of the City Council. There was quite a flow of oratory during the meeting, and it would appear that orders in the future will not be rushed through as rapidly as they have been in the past, and that members intend to seek information on all matters.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication was received from T. F. Gourley giving notice of damages done his property Feb. 28. To Committee on Finance.

The Mayor sent in these appointments: Sealer of Weights and Measures, George Weston; Inspector of Animals, E. P. Henderson. Confirmed.

Mrs. James E. Eaton in a communication asked that the end of Eaton street be accepted. To Committee on Streets.

The School Committee forwarded the annual budget which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

PETITIONS.

A petition was received asking that Quarry street extension be laid out as a public way. To Committee on Streets.

A petition was received asking for paved gutters on the east side of Independence avenue and on both sides of Goddard and Bennington streets and that the sidewalks be graded, and that an appropriation of $2,200 be made. To Committee on Streets.

Several petitions for minor licenses and State aid were received and referred.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported an amendment to the order for remodelling City Hall, making the amount $11,000 instead of $10,000. To Committee on Finance.

The Committee on Streets, reporting on the matter of a street railway waiting room in City Square said in their opinion the present waiting room was not adequate and suggested that the Mayor be requested to confer with the railway officials in relation to the matter. Alopted.

The Committee on Streets reported orders for public hearings April 7, on the petition of the street railway for a change of location of tracks in City Square, and on Washington street near the bridge.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the New England Telephone Co. a location for poles on School and Putnam streets. Order recommitted.

HOUGHS NECK FIRE STATION.

The joint committee on Finance and Fire Department reported a slight amendment to the order for $4,000 for the purchase of land and the erection of a fire station at Houghs Neck. Accepted.

Moved that the rules be suspended.

Councilman Fallon,—Have you got a plan of the land to show and a sketch of the house?

President Alden,—The order states that plans are in possession of the city.

Councilman Fallon,—I claim it is business to have plans presented. It was wrong to burden the taxpapers with unnecessarily large appropriations. He was here to protect the taxpayers. He had seen money appropriated and gobbled up by spongers, soakers and loafers who had lived on the city all their lives.

Councilman Freeman raised the point that the speaker was out of order as he was not speaking to the subject, and the point was sustained.

Councilman Stewart agreed with the gentleman from Ward Four. It was not necessary to expend so much money. There was no necessity of suspending the rules so frequently.

Councilman Meyer—The object of suspending the rules is that the land may be purchased before the option runs out April 1.

Councilman Nichols—The tendency of this Council is to rush things with undue haste. Members should have an opportunity to investigate for themselves and not take the report of committees blindly.

Councilman Freeman—The price given for the land is low, and we should not allow option to expire. It is at the assessed value, and the option expires April 1. The plan for the building is that from which the Ward Two house was built.

Councilman Fallon—If he claims it necessary for such an order to go through, why did he not present plans and specifications?

Councilman Bass—There will have to be a meeting next Monday, and the order can lay over until then without jeopardizing interests.

The motion to suspend the rules was lost by a vote of 12 in favor and 10 against, a two-thirds vote being necessary to suspend the rules.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The Committee on Finance reported ought to pass on the annual appropriation order.

Upon motion of Councilman Freeman the following items were amended: For interest on City debt from $15,139.45 to $15,281.20; for interest on Water debt from $29,286.13 to $29,811.13.

The order then took its second reading.

MOTIONS, ORDERS, ETC.

Upon motion of Councilman Freeman it was voted that when the Council adjourn it be until next Monday.

Councilman Nichols offered an order for $700 for paving the gutters on the north side of Lincoln avenue. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Meyer offered an order for $200 for a tar concrete sidewalk on the east side of Washington street between Coddington street and the street railway office. To Committee on Streets.

SEWER APPROPRIATION.

The order for appropriating $27,984.46 from the receipts from the sale of the pumping station to sewer construction took its second reading and the question was on suspending the rules.

Councilman Fallon would like to have the Sewer Commission explain what they intended to do with the money. Certain people get a great benefit while others like my ward get no benefit. He would like the items presented. He moved the "superintendent" of the sewers present items.

The chair ruled the motion out of order.

The rules were then suspended. Councilman Fallon voting no.

Councilman Nickerson said the matter was in the hands of the Sewer Commissioners to extend the sewers where needed. He thought it would be impossible to state what was to be done with the money.

Councilman Fallon—If they come here and ask for the money they know what they intend to do with it.

Councilman Freeman raised a point that no one had a right to speak while roll call was in progress.

Councilman Fallon claimed if the Commissioners have got the figures they should be here and show where these lateral sewers are to be built. We have got an engineer loafing about doing nothing. Let him come here and give us the figures.

Councilman Stewart thought the last speaker was right. Here I am a member of the Committee on Sewers and Drains, and I never heard anything about the order. It has never come to my committee. I should like to know where the money is to go.

The order was passed to be ordained by the following vote:

YEAS—Adams, Elcock, Faxon, Freeman, Gassett, Hadlock, Hughes, Langelier, Meyer, Newcomb, Nickerson, Piper, Polk, Smith, Thompson,—15.

NAYS—Bass, Craig, Diack, Fallon, Nichols, Stewart, Whiton,—7.

Adjourned at 8.30.

The Wheels of a Railroad.

On the Burlington railroad system of 8,000 miles, over 385,000 wheels are in service under the various passenger, freight and way cars, locomotives and other rolling stock. An average of 40,000 wheels are purchased each year and they are very carefully inspected, as they are bought with a guarantee.

According to the stipulation, each is warranted to last six years or cover seventy-five thousand miles. All the wheels are numbered and a careful record kept. When they fail to do the work they are returned to the manufacturer, who is compelled to make the loss good.

False Alarm.

The alarm from Box 172 at 2.35 this morning was a false alarm. When the department arrived at the box they found that the door had been smashed with a rock. About this same time Officer Goodhue placed John F. Lyons under arrest for sounding the alarm. Lyons has been suspected for some time of giving false alarms of fires, and the circumstances connected with the giving this alarm were such as to warrant the officers placing him under arrest. Lyons was arraigned in court this morning and was held until Wednesday morning for trial.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To the Quarrymen of the City of Quincy.

The Operators and the Operatives.

Have You Pondered Sufficiently upon Terrible Consequences?

Gentlemen:

The report is abroad that you have at your recent conferences failed to reach an agreement concerning the differences between you, and therefor intend to continue the struggle which has now been in existence for over two weeks. As a citizen interested in the highest welfare of this community, and as a minister of the gospel of peace, I take the liberty of addressing this letter to you on your attitude to each other, and to the community, ere the strike be any longer continued.

I pray you to earnestly consider that a strike is a mode of civil warfare between capital and labor; whether the offensive party be capital or labor; and that the consequences thereof are terrible in the extreme. The late General Sherman said: "War is Hell." And to the extent that a strike produces suffering, loss and misery, it creates hell in the portion of society affected by it. No one can deny it is war against society in which the innocent suffer with the guilty and it ought to be prevented whenever possible, and stopped as soon as it is begun. Merchants and mothers, wives and children, are sometimes greater sufferers (though innocent) than any of those actively engaged in the strike, and they always suffer equally with the defeated. Besides, the loss in wages and in trade is a loss to the community at large, though often the smallest one.

It may be considered that there is still something manly in a fight, but it is generally conceded that every effort should first be put forth to avoid it. At least, when a fight injures others than the combatants (and what fight does not?) it reveals by so much the barbaric and devilish, but not the manly. Therefore on humanitarian considerations I appeal to you, gentlemen, to cease no effort to prevent the continuance of the strike.

Nor can it be said that, for either capital or labor, are strikes an unmixed blessing, no matter which side wins. Quincy granite workers (and I include in the term "Workers" both capital and labor) have earned the reputation for being in the vanguard of the granite industrial wars of the past. It is also stated, with what truth I am not aware, though the statement is a logical one, that the granite industry elsewhere has as a consequence prospered, while that of Quincy has suffered much from these strikes; while the conditions of the trade here, are no more favorable to either employer or employed than they are where differences have been settled amicably. Quincy men have fought the battles and impoverished themselves, besides creating a feeling of distrust between the parties interested, while others in the trade looked on and shouted "siccem," and profited by the warfare.

Gentlemen, ought these things so to be among sensible men? And yet, are you not threatening to repeat this alleged folly and crime by proposing to prolong the strike?

Quite a few workmen have already left town to find work elsewhere. About 3000 men are threatened with idleness by the further continuance of your strike. The pinch of poverty will soon be felt among the innocent and helpless, and many more workmen will leave town never to return, besides other evil results which I need not mention.

Indeed, it may well be asked, have you pondered sufficiently upon these terrible consequences before taking action which is sure to invite them. Moreover it may be fairly and kindly asked, by what right do you threaten the community with such an affliction, before having involved arbitration. Capital has its rights; but it has also its duties to society. Labor has its rights, but it should show how it respects the rights of a community. The helpless in society who shall be affected by your strike have a right to demand that they shall not suffer unnecessarily.

Strikes may, like war, be of necessity; but surely they should not be entered upon until every conciliatory means has been exhausted in attempting to settle difficulties. As this has not been done in your case, I appeal to you to submit the questions at issue to arbitration before prolonging this struggle. If you cannot confide in the State Board of Arbitration, surely there are three or five men in this city whom you can trust to settle them. If not permit me to suggest that you call in Mr. Earley of the Federation Board and Governor Crane. Should these alone not prove satisfactory each party might appoint a representative to confer with these gentlemen as counsellors and arbiters. But whatever be the method adopted, I pray you let an impartial effort be made.

Were you to aim at this I believe before 48 hours a satisfactory settlement could be arrived at, with the desirable results that the credit due high minded men would be yours, and an added illustration of the never failing value of the principles of the Prince of Peace when applied to any phase of life, would be given.

I remain

Most sincerely yours,

(Rev.) James Todd, D. D.

Women Remonstrate.

The public call for women interested in a reform of the present customs regulations in regard to personal baggage, brought together a large number of representative Boston women at Perkins hall, 264 Boylston street, Friday noon. Mrs. Henry Whitman presided. A letter to be sent to the Secretary of the Treasury was approved. The letter sets forth the burden of the complaints which have led up to the matter, dwelling especially on the hardship entailed to travellers by the existing tariff laws, restricting the value of personal baggage allowed to come in free of duty to $100. The extreme smallness of the value allowed was shown to be particularly onerous and the requirements by which clothing repaired abroad is assessable for its full value to be unjust.

The letter continues: "The present law cannot be otherwise than burdensome no matter how well it is administered. We believe, however, that something can be done by a liberal and lenient administration of its provisions to mitigate the evils inseparable from its existence." Suggestions are made whereby this may be accomplished, including respect by the inspectors for the oath made by passengers or at least the use of discretion, for the provision of an expert packer to replace the contents of baggage emptied to ascertain its contents, and for the appointment of a special to oversee the examination by the inspectors and thus to insure courtesy and respect to the travelling public and a hearing to the remonstrances of passengers, which are under the present system often unnoticed.

Massachusetts First.

A portion of the speech of ex-Congressman McNary at South Boston on Evacuation day is of local interest. He said:

"I believe this is the day, of all days, that should be recognized in the American revolution. (Applause.) For as a matter of fact, if the halls of the Old State House are where independence was born, as John Adams said, then on these heights is where it attains its full manhood. After the British had slid down to Nantasket roads, there never was any question about the issue of the war, notwithstanding that in those days were two men that George III, said never should be pardoned, Sam Adams and John Hancock.

"But the evacuation of Boston was really the end of the American revolution. It is true the British might overrun New York and the Carolinas and Georgia. But when you think that Massachusetts was free—the brain of the Union—whatever George III could gain otherwise was a weak and barren victory. Without Massachusetts he could not control America. She was the state that established in America the first school, built the first academy, founded the first university, set up the first printing press, printed the first book, edited the first newspaper, planted the first apple tree, caught the first whale, coined the first money, hoisted the first national flag, made the first railroad, invented the first washing machine and sewing machine, and fired the shot heard round the world."

The Carpenters Demand.

A meeting of the master builders was held Monday evening to consider the recent demand made by the carpenters of Quincy. The demand was that after the first of April eight hours should constitute a days work; that the minimum wages should be $2.50 per day, and weekly payments. No definite action was taken at the meeting but another meeting will be held Saturday evening.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

It is unusual for legislative bodies composed of twenty or more, for every member to attend the meetings, but it frequently happens, like this week, that every member of the City Council was present. It shows attention to business.

The business manager of the Quincy Adams Sawyer and Mason Corner Folks Company was in town today looking over the field, but did not receive a very good impression of Quincy as a show town. The city misses some first class productions because our people seem to prefer to spend their money out of town.

Councilman Fallon makes a mistake when he claims that Ward Four people are being taxed for the sewers and receiving nothing. Thus far the assessments upon abutters have practically paid all the cost of sewer extensions and maintenance. This may not be good news to the abutters who are furnishing the wherewithal, and in a few years when there are but few assessments, must pay more in taxes.

The annual appropriation order before the City Council took a singular course this year. The estimates of the Mayor and City Treasurer were referred to the Finance Committee. Nevertheless, at the next meeting, a councilman offered an order for the annual appropriations, and at the meeting this week the Finance Committee reported that said order ought to pass. A question might be raised, whether the President having referred a matter to a committee, should receive an order from a councilman. It establishes a bad precedent, and it will be in order in the future for any councilman, who gets tired of waiting for a report, to offer an order himself. To be sure, Councilman Freeman who offered the order was chairman of the Finance Committee, but he did not offer it as coming from the committee.

The comments of Rev. Dr. Todd on the strike existing in the Quincy quarries are timely, and show how one outside views the situation. His suggestion for a speedy arbitration of the difficulties is one which should be adopted. It could be either by the State Board of Arbitration, by a local board made up in part by both sides with Mayor Bryant or some one else as the chairman. It might be asking too much of Gov. Crane, to go to him, but if he is the only one upon whom both sides can unite, go to him by all means. As Barre let Quincy fight it out alone last year, there is a feeling that Quincy should let Barre have the disturbance of business this year. Let the Quincy quarry owners and quarrymen return to work immediately and agree to abide by any agreement which may be reached in Barre, which is a dangerous rival.

Sewer Commissioner Badger was at the meeting of the City Council Monday evening and informs the Ledger that he was ready to enlighten the Council as to the proposed extensions this year. Had the members received this information the vote on the appropriation for sewers would probably have been unanimous. As it was, a bare two-thirds voted for the appropriation. It is to be regretted that there is a disposition to put many large appropriation orders through blindly, to limit investigation and debate, and to raise, unnecessarily, questionable points of order. On a motion to suspend the rules, debate on the main question is always in order, although the ruling was otherwise. The City Council will have less faith in the reports of committees since the remarks of Councilman Stewart, that as a member of the Committee on Sewers he knew nothing about the order.

THE COAL STRIKE.

Both Sides Claim to Have Made Gains.

The striking coal handlers of the city are happy because of a settlement with the firm of A. J. Richards & Son of Weymouth and Quincy. The teamsters claim that the firm recognized their union and gave them all they asked.

The Ledger has been unable to get an interview with Mr. Richards, as he has been in Boston, but learns that he did not recognize the union, and that the settlement was a compromise on the Boston bill of prices.

The grain teamsters of A. J. Richards & Co., who went out last night returned to work this afternoon.

Alex Pitts, the driver employed by C. Patch & Son who yesterday delivered coal during the forenoon, explained his action by saying that he was unaware the men had gone out. As soon as he knew the men were out he also ceased work and took steps to become a union man.

It is reported that one of large dealers endeavored to deal with the men individually, agreeing to give more pay, but his efforts were unsuccessful.

Two of the striking coal handlers at Sheppard & Son's Braintree wharf returned to work this morning. They were later called upon by a committee from the Union who demanded their union buttons.

It is reported that other teamsters of Quincy are also organizing.

On Washington street yesterday, the absence of the usual continual stream of coal teams, going and coming from the wharf, was very noticeable. The serene quietude of the street reminding one of a Sunday or a holiday.

Still Room on the Earth.

Yes, said the western man, there are several patches of country still left out our way that will support a few million people each. There is a little section up in Wyoming, for instance, known as the Big Horn Basin, which has just been opened up by a new line of the Burlington railroad. It covers about 50,000 square miles. It's larger than New York State. Three times as large as Denmark. Twice as large as Bavaria. It is covered with beautiful streams, a never-failing water supply and the soil is as rich as any in the world. The possibilities for irrigation there are enormous and three big irrigation ditches are built already. Oh! yes, there are a few scraps of real good country left. We won't be crowded off the earth yet awhile.

Eruptions
Dry, moist, scaly tetter, all forms of eczema or salt rheum, pimples and other cutaneous eruptions proceed from humors, either inherited, or acquired through defective digestion and assimilation.
To treat these eruptions with drying medicines is dangerous.
The thing to do is to take
Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills
Which thoroughly cleanse the blood, expelling all humors and building up the whole system. They cure
Hood's Sarsaparilla permanently cured J. G. Hines, Franks, Ill., of eczema, from which he had suffered for some time; and Miss Alvina Wolter, Box 212, Algona, Wis., of pimples on her face and back and chafed skin on her body, by which she had been greatly troubled. There are more testimonials in favor of Hood's than can be published.
Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

CITY COUNCIL.

Appropriation for Sewers Has a Close Call.

Annual Appropriation Order Advanced.

Money for Houghs Neck Hose House Held Up.

Every member was present at Monday night's meeting of the City Council. There was quite a flow of oratory during the meeting, and it would appear that orders in the future will not be rushed through as rapidly as they have been in the past, and that members intend to seek information on all matters.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication was received from T. F. Gourley giving notice of damages done his property Feb. 28. To Committee on Finance.

The Mayor sent in these appointments: Sealer of Weights and Measures, George Weston; Inspector of Animals, E. P. Henderson. Confirmed.

Mrs. James E. Eaton in a communication asked that the end of Eaton street be accepted. To Committee on Streets.

The School Committee forwarded the annual budget which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

PETITIONS.

A petition was received asking that Quarry street extension be laid out as a public way. To Committee on Streets.

A petition was received asking for paved gutters on the east side of Independence avenue and on both sides of Goddard and Bennington streets and that the sidewalks be graded, and that an appropriation of $2,200 be made. To Committee on Streets.

Several petitions for minor licenses and State aid were received and referred.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported an amendment to the order for remodelling City Hall, making the amount $11,000 instead of $10,000. To Committee on Finance.

The Committee on Streets, reporting on the matter of a street railway waiting room in City Square said in their opinion the present waiting room was not adequate and suggested that the Mayor be requested to confer with the railway officials in relation to the matter. Adopted.

The Committee on Streets reported orders for public hearings April 7, on the petition of the street railway for a change of location of tracks in City Square, and on Washington street near the bridge.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the New England Telephone Co. a location for poles on School and Putnam streets. Order recommitted.

HOUGHS NECK FIRE STATION.

The joint committee on Finance and Fire Department reported a slight amendment to the order for $4,000 for the purchase of land and the erection of a fire station at Houghs Neck. Accepted.

Moved that the rules be suspended.

Councilman Fallon,—Have you got a plan of the land to show and a sketch of the house?

President Alden,—The order states that plans are in possession of the city.

Councilman Fallon,—I claim it is business to have plans presented. It was wrong to burden the taxpapers with untecessarily large appropriations. He was here to protect the taxpayers. He had seen money appropriated and gobbled up by spongers, soakers and loafers who had lived on the city all their lives.

Councilman Freeman raised the point that the speaker was out of order as he was not speaking to the subject, and the point was sustained.

Councilman Stewart agreed with the gentleman from Ward Four. It was not necessary to expend so much money. There was no necessity of suspending the rules so frequently.

Councilman Meyer—The object of suspending the rules is that the land may be purchased before the option runs out April 1.

Councilman Nichols—The tendency of this Council is to rush things with undue haste. Members should have an opportunity to investigate for themselves and not take the report of committees blindly.

Councilman Freeman—The price given for the land is low, and we should not allow option to expire. It is at the assessed value, and the option expires April 1. The plan for the building is that from which the Ward Two house was built.

Councilman Fallon—If he claims it necessary for such an order to go through, why did he not present plans and specifications?

Councilman Bass—There will have to be a meeting next Monday, and the order can lay over until then without jeopardizing interests.

The motion to suspend the rules was lost by a vote of 12 in favor and 10 against, a two-thirds vote being necessary to suspend the rules.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The Committee on Finance reported ought to pass on the annual appropriation order.

Upon motion of Councilman Freeman the following items were amended: For interest on City debt from $15,139.45 to $15,281.20; for interest on Water debt from $29,286.13 to $29,811.13.

The order then took its second reading.

MOTIONS, ORDERS, ETC.

Upon motion of Councilman Freeman it was voted that when the Council adjourn it be until next Monday.

Councilman Nichols offered an order for $700 for paving the gutters on the north side of Lincoln avenue. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Meyer offered an order for $200 for a tar concrete sidewalk on the east side of Washington street between Coddington street and the street railway office. To Committee on Streets.

SEWER APPROPRIATION.

The order for appropriating $27,984.46 from the receipts from the sale of the pumping station to sewer construction took its second reading and the question was on suspending the rules.

Councilman Fallon would like to have the Sewer Commission explain what they intended to do with the money. Certain people get a great benefit while others like my ward get no benefit. He would like the items presented. He moved the "superintendent" of the sewers present items.

The chair ruled the motion out of order.

The rules were then suspended. Councilman Fallon voting no.

Councilman Nickerson said the matter was in the hands of the Sewer Commissioners to extend the sewers where needed. He thought it would be impossible to state what was to be done with the money.

Councilman Fallon—If they come here and ask for the money they know what they intend to do with it.

Councilman Freeman raised a point that no one had a right to speak while roll call was in progress.

Councilman Fallon claimed if the Commissioners have got the figures they should be here and show where these lateral sewers are to be built. We have got an engineer loafing about doing nothing. Let him come here and give us the figures.

Councilman Stewart thought the last speaker was right. Here I am a member of the Committee on Sewers and Drains, and I never heard anything about the order. It has never come to my committee. I should like to know where the money is to go.

The order was passed to be ordained by the following vote:

YEAS—Adams, Elcock, Faxon, Freeman, Gassett, Hadlock, Hughes, Langelier, Meyer, Newcomb, Nickerson, Piper, Polk, Smith, Thompson,—15.

NAYS—Bass, Craig, Diack, Fallon, Nichols, Stewart, Whiton,—7.

Adjourned at 8.30.

The Wheels of a Railroad.

On the Burlington railroad system of 8,000 miles, over 385,000 wheels are in service under the various passenger, freight and way cars, locomotives and other rolling stock. An average of 40,000 wheels are purchased each year and they are very carefully inspected, as they are bought with a guarantee.

According to the stipulation, each is warranted to last six years or cover seventy-five thousand miles. All the wheels are numbered and a careful record kept. When they fail to do the work they are returned to the manufacturer, who is compelled to make the loss good.

False Alarm.

The alarm from Box 172 at 2.35 this morning was a false alarm. When the department arrived at the box they found that the door had been smashed with a rock. About this same time Officer Goodhue placed John F. Lyons under arrest for sounding the alarm. Lyons has been suspected for some time of giving false alarms of fires, and the circumstances connected with the giving this alarm were such as to warrant the officers placing him under arrest. Lyons was arraigned in court this morning and was held until Wednesday morning for trial.

Many Go to Colorado.

Fifty thousand people spent their vacations in Colorado last summer. At least the railroads report that many tourist tickets sold.

☞ On Thursday, March 20, there will be a large sale of horses and carriages, also of real estate of John J. Higgins at South Weymouth. Frank F. Crane, the popular Quincy auctioneer, will sell the property.

Popular Priced Carpetings.
The manufacturers have fairly out done themselves in spring carpet designing. The most delightful blending of colorings you have ever seen in soft reds, greens and browns.
We have hundreds of patterns that will please you—first in design—second in price—but best of all, in service.
You can enjoy safe choosing in buying here. Our word on carpetings is as good as a gold bond. We measure for, and lay all carpets. Our prices are always as low, and invariably lower than those of Boston stores.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To the Quarrymen of the City of Quincy.

The Operators and the Operatives.

Have You Pondered Sufficiently upon Terrible Consequences?

Gentlemen:

The report is abroad that you have at your recent conferences failed to reach an agreement concerning the differences between you, and therefor intend to continue the struggle which has now been in existence for over two weeks. As a citizen interested in the highest welfare of this community, and as a minister of the gospel of peace, I take the liberty of addressing this letter to you on your attitude to each other, and to the community, ere the strike be any longer continued.

I pray you to earnestly consider that a strike is a mode of civil warfare between capital and labor; whether the offensive party be capital or labor; and that the consequences thereof are terrible in the extreme. The late General Sherman said: "War is Hell." And to the extent that a strike produces suffering, loss and misery, it creates hell in the portion of society affected by it. No one can deny it is war against society in which the innocent suffer with the guilty and it ought to be prevented whenever possible, and stopped as soon as it is begun. Merchants and mothers, wives and children, are sometimes greater sufferers (though innocent) than any of those actively engaged in the strike, and they always suffer equally with the defeated. Besides, the loss in wages and in trade is a loss to the community at large, though often the smallest one.

It may be considered that there is still something manly in a fight, but it is generally conceded that every effort should first be put forth to avoid it. At least, when a fight injures others than the combatants (and what fight does not?) it reveals by so much the barbaric and devilish, but not the manly. Therefore on humanitarian considerations I appeal to you, gentlemen, to cease no effort to prevent the continuance of the strike.

Nor can it be said that, for either capital or labor, are strikes an unmixed blessing, no matter which side wins.

Quincy granite workers (and I include in the term "Workers" both capital and labor) have earned the reputation for being in the vanguard of the granite industrial wars of the past. It is also stated, with what truth I am not aware, though the statement is a logical one, that the granite industry elsewhere has as a consequence prospered, while that of Quincy has suffered much from these strikes; while the conditions of the trade here, are no more favorable to either employer or employed than they are where differences have been settled amicably. Quincy men have fought the battles and impoverished themselves, besides creating a feeling of distrust between the parties interested, while others in the trade looked on and shouted "siccem," and profited by the warfare.

Gentlemen, ought these things so to be among sensible men? And yet, are you not threatening to repeat this alleged folly and crime by proposing to prolong the strike?

Quite a few workmen have already left town to find work elsewhere. About 3000 men are threatened with idleness by the further continuance of your strike. The pinch of poverty will soon be felt among the innocent and helpless, and many more workmen will leave town never to return, besides other evil results which I need not mention.

Indeed, it may well be asked, have you pondered sufficiently upon these terrible consequences before taking action which is sure to invite them. Moreover it may be fairly and kindly asked, by what right do you threaten the community with such an affliction, before having involved arbitration. Capital has its rights; but it has also its duties to society. Labor has its rights, but it should show how it respects the rights of a community. The helpless in society who shall be affected by your strike have a right to demand that they shall not suffer unnecessarily.

Strikes may, like war, be of necessity; but surely they should not be entered upon until every conciliatory means has been exhausted in attempting to settle difficulties. As this has not been done in your case, I appeal to you to submit the questions at issue to arbitration before prolonging this struggle. If you cannot confide in the State Board of Arbitration, surely there are three or five men in this city whom you can trust to settle them. If not permit me to suggest that you call in Mr. Earley of the Federation Board and Governor Crane. Should these alone not prove satisfactory each party might appoint a representative to confer with these gentlemen as counsellors and arbiters. But whatever be the method adopted, I pray you let an impartial effort be made.

Were you to aim at this I believe before 48 hours a satisfactory settlement could be arrived at, with the desirable results that the credit due high minded men would be yours, and an added illustration of the never failing value of the principles of the Prince of Peace when applied to any phase of life, would be given.

I remain

Most sincerely yours,

(Rev.) James Todd, D. D.

Women Remonstrate.

The public call for women interested in a reform of the present customs regulations in regard to personal baggage, brought together a large number of representative Boston women at Perkins hall, 264 Boylston street, Friday noon. Mrs. Henry Whitman presided. A letter to be sent to the Secretary of the Treasury was approved. The letter sets forth the burden of the complaints which have led up to the matter, dwelling especially on the hardship entailed to travellers by the existing tariff laws, restricting the value of personal baggage allowed to come in free of duty to $100. The extreme smallness of the value allowed was shown to be particularly onerous and the requirements by which clothing repaired abroad is assessible for its full value to be unjust.

The letter continues: "The present law cannot be otherwise than burdensome no matter how well it is administered. We believe, however, that something can be done by a liberal and lenient administration of its provisions to mitigate the evils inseparable from its existence." Suggestions are made whereby this may be accomplished, including respect by the inspectors for the oath made by passengers or at least the use of discretion, for the provision of an expert packer to replace the contents of baggage emptied to ascertain its contents, and for the appointment of a special to oversee the examination by the inspectors and thus to insure courtesy and respect to the travelling public and a hearing to the demonstrances of passengers, which are under the present system often unnoticed.

Massachusetts First.

A portion of the speech of ex-Congressman McNary at South Boston on Evacuation day is of local interest. He said:

"I believe this is the day, of all days, that should be recognized in the American revolution. (Applause.) For as a matter of fact, if the halls of the Old State House are where independence was born, as John Adams said, then on these heights is where it attains its full manhood. After the British had slid down to Nantasket roads, there never was any question about the issue of the war, notwithstanding that in those days were two men that George III, said never should be pardoned, Sam Adams and John Hancock.

"But the evacuation of Boston was really the end of the American revolution. It is true the British might overrun New York and the Carolinas and Georgia. But when you think that Massachusetts was free—the brain of the Union—whatever George III could gain otherwise was a weak and barren victory. Without Massachusetts he could not control America. She was the state that established in America the first school, built the first academy, founded the first university, set up the first printing press, printed the first book, edited the first newspaper, planted the first apple tree, caught the first whale, coined the first money, hoisted the first national flag, made the first railroad, invented the first washing machine and sewing machine, and fired the shot heard round the world."

The Carpenters Demand.

A meeting of the master builders was held Monday evening to consider the recent demand made by the carpenters of Quincy. The demand was that after the first of April eight hours should constitute a days work; that the minimum wages should be $2.50 per day, and weekly payments. No definite action was taken at the meeting but another meeting will be held Saturday evening.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Women Remonstrate.

The public call for women interested in a reform of the present customs regulations in regard to personal baggage, brought together a large number of representative Boston women at Perkins hall, 264 Boylston street, Friday noon. Mrs. Henry Whitman presided. A letter to be sent to the Secretary of the Treasury was approved. The letter sets forth the burden of the complaints which have led up to the matter, dwelling especially on the hardship entailed to travellers by the existing tariff laws, restricting the value of personal baggage allowed to come in free of duty to $100. The extreme smallness of the value allowed was shown to be particularly onerous and the requirements by which clothing repaired abroad is assessible for its full value to be unjust.

The letter continues: "The present law cannot be otherwise than burdensome no matter how well it is administered. We believe, however, that something can be done by a liberal and lenient administration of its provisions to mitigate the evils inseparable from its existence." Suggestions are made whereby this may be accomplished, including respect by the inspectors for the oath made by passengers or at least the use of discretion, for the provision of an expert packer to replace the contents of baggage emptied to ascertain its contents, and for the appointment of a special to oversee the examination by the inspectors and thus to insure courtesy and respect to the travelling public and a hearing to the demonstrances of passengers, which are under the present system often unnoticed.

Massachusetts First.

A portion of the speech of ex-Congressman McNary at South Boston on Evacuation day is of local interest. He said:

"I believe this is the day, of all days, that should be recognized in the American revolution. (Applause.) For as a matter of fact, if the halls of the Old State House are where independence was born, as John Adams said, then on these heights is where it attains its full manhood. After the British had slid down to Nantasket roads, there never was any question about the issue of the war, notwithstanding that in those days were two men that George III, said never should be pardoned, Sam Adams and John Hancock.

"But the evacuation of Boston was really the end of the American revolution. It is true the British might overrun New York and the Carolinas and Georgia. But when you think that Massachusetts was free—the brain of the Union—whatever George III could gain otherwise was a weak and barren victory. Without Massachusetts he could not control America. She was the state that established in America the first school, built the first academy, founded the first university, set up the first printing press, printed the first book, edited the first newspaper, planted the first apple tree, caught the first whale, coined the first money, hoisted the first national flag, made the first railroad, invented the first washing machine and sewing machine, and fired the shot heard round the world."

The Carpenters Demand.

A meeting of the master builders was held Monday evening to consider the recent demand made by the carpenters of Quincy. The demand was that after the first of April eight hours should constitute a days work; that the minimum wages should be $2.50 per day, and weekly payments. No definite action was taken at the meeting but another meeting will be held Saturday evening.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER XI.

IT was 2 o'clock in the afternoon on the 12th of August, under a hot sun and cloudless sky, that the toptschi-baschi gave the order to start.

Alcide and Blount, having bought horses, had already taken the road to Tomsk.

Among the prisoners brought by Ivan Ogareff to the Tartar camp was an old woman, whose taciturnity seemed to keep her apart from all those who shared her fate. Not a murmur issued from her lips. She was like a statue of grief. This woman was more strictly guarded than any one else and, without her appearing to notice or even to suspect, was constantly watched by the gypsy Sangarre. Notwithstanding her age, she was compelled to follow the convoy of prisoners on foot, without any alleviation of her suffering.

However, a kind Providence had placed near her a courageous, kind hearted being to comfort and assist her. Among her companions in misfortune a young girl, remarkable for her beauty and a taciturnity equal to that of the Siberian, seemed to have given herself the task of watching over her. No words had been exchanged between the two captives, but the girl was always found at the old woman's side just when her help was useful. At first the mute assistance of the stranger was not accepted without some mistrust. Gradually, however, the young girl's clear glance, her reserve and the mysterious sympathy which draws together those who are in misfortune thawed Marfa's coldness.

Nadia—for it was she—was thus able without knowing it to render to the mother those attentions which she had herself received from the son. Her instinctive kindness had doubly inspired her. In devoting herself to her service Nadia secured to her youth and beauty the protection afforded by the age of the old prisoner.

On the crowd of unhappy people, imbittered by sufferings, this silent pair—one seeming to be the grandmother, the other the granddaughter—imposed a sort of respect.

After being carried off by the Tartar scouts on the Irtish Nadia had been taken to Omsk. Kept a prisoner in the town, she shared the fate of all those captured by Ivan Ogareff and consequently that of Marfa Strogoff.

Thanks to her young companion, Marfa Strogoff was able to follow the soldiers who guarded the prisoners without being fastened to a saddlebow, as were many other unfortunate wretches, and thus dragged along this road of sorrow.

"May God reward you, my daughter, for what you have done for my old age!" said Marfa Strogoff once, and for some time these were the only words exchanged between the two unfortunate beings.

Nadia also, if not completely silent, spoke little.

However, one day her heart overflowed, and she told, without concealing anything, all the events which had occurred from her departure from Wladimir to the death of Nicholas Korpanoff. All that her young companion told intensely interested the old Siberian.

"Nicholas Korpanoff?" said she. "Tell me again about Nicholas. I know only one man, one alone, among all the youth of the time in whom such conduct would not have astonished me. Nicholas Korpanoff! Was that really his name? Are you sure of it, my daughter."

"Why should he have deceived me in this," replied Nadia, "when he deceived me in no other way?"

Moved, however, by a kind of presentiment, Marfa Strogoff put questions upon questions to Nadia.

"You told me he was fearless, my daughter. You have proved that he has been so," said she.

"Yes, fearless indeed," replied Nadia.

"It was just what my son would have done," said Marfa to herself.

Then she resumed:

"Did you not say that nothing stopped him, nothing astonished him, that he was so gentle in his strength that you had a sister as well as a brother in him and that he watched over you like a mother?"

"Yes, yes," said Nadia; "brother, sister, mother—he has been all to me."

"And defended you like a lion?"

"A lion indeed," replied Nadia. "Yes, a lion, a hero."

"My son, my son!" thought the old Siberian. "But do you say that he has submitted to a terrible affront in the posthouse of Ichim?"

"He has borne with it," answered Nadia, lowering her head.

"Has he submitted to it?" murmured Marfa Strogoff, trembling with fear.

"Mother, mother," cried Nadia, "do not condemn him. There is a secret there of which God alone is the judge at the present time!"

"And," said Marfa, raising her head and looking at Nadia as though she desired to read the depth of her soul in this hour of humiliation, "have you despised this Nicholas Korpanoff?"

"I have admired him without understanding him," answered the young girl. "I have never felt him to be more worthy of respect than he is at the present moment."

The old woman was silent for a moment.

"Was he tall?" she asked.

"Very tall."

"And very handsome—is it not so? Come, tell me, my girl."

"He was very handsome," answered Nadia, blushing deeply.

"It was my son! I tell you it was my son!" exclaimed the old woman, embracing Nadia.

"Your son!" said Nadia, amazed. "Your son!"

"Come," said Marfa, "let us get to the bottom of this, my child. Your companion, your friend, your protector, had a mother. Did he never speak to you of his mother?"

"Of his mother?" said Nadia. "He spoke to me of his mother—as I spoke to him of my father—often, always. He adored her."

"Nadia, Nadia, you have just told me about my son," said the old woman.

And she added impetuously:

"Was he not going to see his mother, whom you say he loved, on his way through Omsk?"

"No," answered Nadia; "no, he was not."

"Not!" cried Marfa. "You dare to tell me not?"

"I have said it, but it remains for me to inform you that from motives unknown to me and which had to guide him before every other consideration I was given to understand that Nicholas Korpanoff had to traverse the country in the most absolute secrecy. It was for him a question of life and of death and, more sacred still, a question of duty and honor."

"Of duty in reality, of imperious duty," said the old Siberian, "of that kind for which a person sacrifices everything, for the accomplishment of which he would deny himself everything, even the joy of coming to give a kiss, the last perhaps, to his old mother. All that you do not know, Nadia, all that I did not know myself at this moment I know. You have made me understand all. But the light which you have thrown into the deepest darkness of my heart, that light, alas, I may not cause to enter your own. The secret of my son, Nadia, since he has not told it to you, I must keep for him. Forgive me, Nadia. The good deed you have done me I cannot return to you."

"Mother, I ask nothing from you," answered Nadia.

All was thus explained to the old Siberian, all, even the inexplicable conduct of her son with regard to herself in the inn at Omsk in presence of the witnesses of their meeting. There was no doubt that the young girl's companion was Michael Strogoff and that a secret mission, some important dispatch to be carried across the invaded country, obliged him to conceal his quality of the czar's courier.

"Ah, my brave boy!" thought Marfa. "No, I will not betray you, and tortures shall not wrest from me the avowal that it was you whom I saw at Omsk."

Marfa could with a word have paid Nadia for all her devotion to her. She could have told her that her companion, Nicholas Korpanoff, or, rather, Michael Strogoff, had not perished in the waters of the Irtish, since it was some days after that incident that she had met him, that she had spoken to him. But she restrained herself, she was silent and contented herself with saying:

"Hope, my child. Misfortune will not overwhelm you. You will see your father again. I feel it. And perhaps he who gave you the name of sister is not dead. God cannot have allowed your brave companion to perish. Hope, my child, hope. Do as I do. The mourning which I wear is not yet for my son."

INDIVIDUALISM

To Be Practiced by Cotton Mills Hereafter In Regard to Wage Question

Fall River, Mass., March 18.—An advance in wages amounting to 10 percent went into effect in all the Fall River mills, excepting one, yesterday. That one mill is the Sagamore, where there has been a strike for two months. The weavers were granted the 10 percent increase with the rest, but as the question for which they have been fighting for the past 10 weeks, the length of cuts, was not settled, the members of the Weavers' association refused to return to work yesterday. Information from the office of the Sagamore mill states that some 540 looms are running. The rest of the departments are running, not in full, but just enough to keep the weavers busy.

No manufacturer now pretends to say what the ultimate outcome of Saturday's work will be. The thing which seems more probable than anything else is that for some time to come each mill will settle its own wage troubles, as its other troubles, without regard to anything that may be agreed upon by manufacturers acting on general propositions. Individualism will be the practice and the mill that cannot stand the strain will have to go to the wall. For several months to come at least ther is nothing to be feared, as trade is exceedingly good and the product is sold ahead for some time.

INQUIRY ASKED FOR

But British War Office Not Likely to Grant Request at Present

London, March 18.—In the house of commons yesterday, Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader, urged the appointment of a select to investigate the whole commercial history of the South African war, including the contracts for the purchase of remounts, meat and forage, and the contracts for freight and transportation, saying that in so doing he was only fulfilling a moral duty and echoing a sentiment deeply felt throughout the country.

War Secretary Brodrick replied that the government did not fear an investigation. It was true that in operations of the magnitude of those in South Africa there must have been mistakes and shortcomings, and the war office would demand an investigation at the proper time. But British operations in all parts of the world would be paralyzed if an inquiry was forced now. Had the war office been in the condition in which Campbell-Bannerman left it, the war could not have been carried on for two months, owing to the shortage of guns, ammunition and all the supplies requisite for a compaign.

Premier Salisbury was called on to defend the government in the house of lords, by a motion of Earl Spencer (Liberal) demanding detailed information regarding martial law, courts' martial and executions in Cape Colony.

Lord Coleridge (Liberal), who followed, declared that martial law was imposed over a vast area of South Africa where not a shot had been fired and where there is no resistance to government authority.

Lord Salisbury said martial law was a mere fashion of speech. What everyone admitted was that it was necessary to defeat the designs of the king's enemies in South Africa. This the government determined to do, and, he added naively, there was plenty of armed resistance in Cape Colony to fully justify the application of martial law.

Can't Collect Big Bill

St. Louis, March 18.—The United States circuit court of appeals yesterday denied the claim of Dwight Brauman of Boston, former receiver of the St. Louis, Kansas and Southwestern railroad, for $11,346. Brauman turned in a claim for $11,346 for services of disbursements, in addition to $16,699. The lower court refused to grant more than the last claim and the former receiver appealed.

And Still No Agreement

Washington, March 18.—The arbitrating conference on the Cuban tariff lasted until 5:30 p. m. yesterday and at its close Chairman Payne authorized the statement that there was no change in the situation and no agreement. The conferees stated privately that the situation in the conference amounted to a deadlock and that they were no nearer to an agreement than they had been at the outset.

Chinese Should Keep Out

Washington, March 18.—Senator Penrose, chairman of the committee on immigration, yesterday submitted a report on the Chinese exclusion bill which he reported a few days ago. He says the sentiment of the American people is crystalized against the admission of Chinese laborers to compete with the working men of the United States.

Sagasta Still at the Head

Madrid, March 18.—The composition of the new cabinet is practically settled. Sagasta is to be the premier; Weyler, minister of war; Moret, minister of the interior; the Duke of Almodovar, minister of foreign affairs, and Canalejas, minister of public works.

Will Cruise In British Waters

London, March 18.—It is officially announced that King Edward will not go abroad this year. He will cruise in British waters on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert.

A Medicine for Old People.

Rev. Geo. Gay, Greenwich, Kas., is past 83 years of age, yet he says: "I am enjoying excellent health for a man of my age, due entirely to the rejuvenating influences of Dr. Miles' Nervine. It brings sleep and rest when nothing else will, and gives strength and vitality even to one of my old age."

"I am an old soldier," writes Mr. Geo. Watson, of Newton, Ia., "and I have been a great sufferer from nervousness, vertigo and spinal trouble. Have spent considerable money for medicine and doctors, but with little benefit. I was so bad my mind showed signs of weakness. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I know it saved my life."

Dr. Miles' Nervine

Saved me from the insane asylum," Mrs. A. M. Heifner, of Jerico Springs, Mo., writes. "I was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself, could not sleep nor rest, would even forget the names of my own children at times. I commenced using Dr. Miles' Nervine and it helped me from the first, and now I am perfectly well."

CONFLICT OF AUTHORITY

Civil Officials Resent Military Interference

CHAFFEE ISSUES AN ORDER

Impressing Upon His Subordinates the Necessity of Non-Interference In Civil Affairs—No Excuse For Alleged Disorderly Conduct of Soldiers

Washington, March 18.—Rumors of cases of conflict of authority between the civil and military authorities in the Philippines find substantial confirmation in an order recently issued by General Chaffee to the commanding officer of the Fifth separate brigade, operating in Iloilo. The order is as follows:

"There appears to be some misunderstanding as to the extent and under what circumstances the military may act of its own motion in provinces where civil government has been put into operation by the Philippine commission.

"The division commander desires to avoid friction with the civil authorities, and you are informed that the civil government entertains a strong suspicion that the army, in many instances wilfully and for ulterior motives, unnecessarily interferes with the civil officials in their prescribed duties, making arrests when they should not do so, usually on suspicion rather than for just cause; if not for cause, then unwarranted arrests because of the fact that civil authority, not military, should act.

You are advised also that the vice-civil governor has been informed by the constabulary and others that the presence of the army is not longer necessary or advisable at a very large majority of the stations now occupied by it in what are known as pacified provinces. The division commander desires that a strict interpretation be put upon paragraphs of general orders which embrace the idea of non-interference by the military in civil affairs.

"The military will be upheld in attacking all armed bodies which officers believe are intended to disturb the orderly and peaceful authority of the United States in the islands. It will be well, however, to determine in advance whether it is the United States authority aimed at or whether a mere local disorderly band is out for robbing, the suppression of which the civil authorities may prefer to deal with singlehanded, unaided by the army of the United States.

"You are advised also that many complaints are received by the civil governor to the effect that soldiers are disorderly in the communities where stationed; that they are harsh and illtreat the inhabitants. No excuse can be accepted for complaints of this sort, if true, from any station of our troops in the pacified provinces. It is the duty of every officer to maintain good discipline of his troops and to redress at once every disorderly act committed by soldiers on the inhabitants. Military necessity is one thing—lawlessness is another and quite a different matter."

Ship Subsidy Bill Passed

Washington, March 18.—After prolonged debate, the senate yesterday passed the ship subsidy bill, the final vote on the measure being 42 to 31. Senators Allison, Dolliver, Spooner, Quarles, Proctor and Dillingham, Republicans, voted against final passage of the bill, and Senator McLaurin, Democrat, voted for it. Some amendments to the bill were adopted, but they were all agreeable to those in charge of the measure, the friends of the bill voting down all other amendments.

The house began consideration of the river and harbor bill. Mr. Burton made an extended speech in explanation of the measure. Several other members spoke briefly to the measure.

Funston Remains In America

Washington, March 18.—The statutory retirement of Major General Otis March 25 will vacate the commands of the military departments of the lakes, at Chicago, and of Dakota, at St Paul. Major General MacArthur, now in command of the department of Colorado, will be transferred to Chicago, and Brigadier General Funston will command the department of Colorado. Brigadier General Kobbe will be assigned to command the department of Dakota.

Philadelphia Leaves Guayaquil

Washington, March 18.—The navy department has received a cablegram from Captain Reisinger of the U. S. S. Philadelphia, announcing his departure aboard that vessel from Guayaquil, Ecuador, for Panama. The Philadelphia was sent to Guayaquil to investigate claims of illegal arrest and imprisonment of American citizens, but as yet no report of the outcome has been received here.

Clayton Denies Reports

Washington, March 18.—A telegram has been received by Secretary Hay from Powell Clayton, United States ambassador to Mexico, declaring that the charges preferred against him connecting his name with the ownership of Mexican mining stock are false.

Hundred Million For Good Roads

Washington, March 18.—Representative Otey of Virginia yesterday introduced a bill appropriating $100,000,000 as a "good road fund" to improve the highways of the country.

FRILLS OF FASHION.

White mohair makes a durable and pretty shirt waist.

Costumes of white or opal gray broadcloth are just now very much in evidence at all smart functions.

Crepe de chine promises to be a decidedly popular fabric in the making of handsome afternoon and evening gowns for the spring and summer.

Among new canvas and grenadine fabrics square meshed weaves will be very much favored, particularly those with the one-third inch block and a tiny square mot.

Applique decorations in lace, jet, cut velvet or cloth and bits of otter, sable or mink in leaf designs, scrolls and various conventional patterns are increasingly in evidence on every sort of elegant gown.

Hats decorated with large crush roses and full ostrich plumes or choux of chiffon or tulle will be as much the fashion as ever the coming season, and so also will be the fancy for having the boa match the plumage on the hat.

For the making of shirt waists are set forth hand hemstitched taffetas and light wools, charvet silks, corded swiss silks, white and colored linens and piques, oxfords, silk ginghams, French zephyrs, chambrays and cotton cheviots.—New York Post.

CURTAIN CALLS.

Thornhall Steyne's new play, "A Country Editor," will be produced in April by Frank L. Goodwin.

Duse will give ninety performances in America next season instead of fifty, as was at first contemplated.

William Morris, one of the cleverest character actors on the stage today, is to star next season in "Checkers."

Mrs. Le Moyne will produce Browning's "A Blot In the Scutcheon" at a series of special matinees in New York.

Daniel Frohman's projected New Lyceum theater will be among the smallest in New York. It will seat only about 900.

Another big revival is announced. This time it is "The Comedy of Errors," with Stuart Robson and William H. Crane in their original roles, the two Dromios.

Hoyt's farce comedies are still very popular in various parts of the country, particularly in the west. The royalties for one recent week are said to have reached $3,500.

THE WRITERS.

Gilbert Parker, the novelist, has given a collection of portraits of the governors of Canada to Queen's university, at Kingston, where he was formerly a teacher of elocution.

Joel Chandler Harris, the author, lives in a little frame cottage in Atlanta, Ga. He writes from six to seven hours a day, turning out from 1,500 to 2,000 words, using a typewriter.

Wallace Budge, the well known authority of the British Museum on Egyptology, is about to begin the publication of a complete history of prehistoric Egypt down to the time of Cleopatra.

Mascagni, the author of "Cavalleria Rusticana," has agreed to write two operas within two years for the well known firm of Ricordi of Milan. He is to receive for his work £1,600 on delivery and 40 per cent on the proceeds realized by the performance of the operas during the next eighty years.

PERT PERSONALS.

Admiral Evans scored again. He had more gold lace on his uniform than was on that of Prince Henry.—Pittsburg Times.

Ex-Governor Hogg, who won't put on knee breeches to meet King Edward, evidently doesn't play golf or he wouldn't "shy" even at a red coat.—New York World.

John L. Sullivan says he will quit the stage and engage in farming. If he should prove as successful in raising crops as he has been in raising hellaboloo, he may in time become a hayseed aristocrat.—Denver Post.

Queen Wilhelmina's physicians have decided that she must go away for a long rest. Perhaps she would find South Dakota a good place in which to recuperate.—Chicago Record-Herald.

OUR FOREIGN COUSINS.

Undoubtedly the kaiser is the boldest suitor Miss Columbia has ever had.—New York World.

England should not become jealous. This country will be just as polite to any British prince who feels like running over here for a visit.—Washington Star.

Our other friends in Europe should not be disturbed or excited. The fact that we respond enthusiastically and generously to the advances of Germany does not at all mean that she is to have a monopoly of our good will. We want no friendship with any power that shall exclude the possibility of friendship with all the other powers.—Indianapolis News.

TOWN TOPICS.

Boston is at last getting even. President Eliot says New York is squalid and ugly. Is that the reason why Boston people like to visit the metropolis?—New York World.

A municipal inspector of electric wiring, who knows good electric wiring when he sees it and knows how to inspect, is an imperative need in Syracuse.—Syracuse Post.

New York and Philadelphia are now eighty-six minutes apart by regular railway schedule, and each of these cities may claim the acquisition of an interesting suburb.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"Shut your eyes, open your mouth and see what luck will bring you."

The mother smiles at the childish game, and doesn't realize that it is a game she as a woman has perhaps played for a great many years.

Many a woman is weak and sick, nervous and discouraged. She suffers from headache, backache and other ills. She wants to be well, but all she does is to shut her eyes and open her mouth for medicine and trust to luck for results. She "doctors" month after month, often year after year, in this same blind, hap-hazard fashion, and receives no permanent benefit.

Women take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with their eyes open to the fact that it cures womanly ills. It cures irregularity. It dries debilitating drains. It heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. There is no trusting to luck by those who use "Favorite Prescription."

"My disease was displacement and ulceration of the uterus, and I was in a terrible condition with pain and weakness and had given up all hopes of ever being well again," writes Mrs. Harry A. Brown, of Orono, Penobscot Co., Me. "Had doctored with four different doctors within four months, and instead of getting better was growing weaker all the time. I decided to try your 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' as I had heard of the many cures resulting from their use. I bought five bottles and felt so much better after taking them that I kept on until I am as well as ever in my life, and to Dr. Pierce all the praise is due. I cannot say enough in favor of his medicines. Before I began taking your medicines I only weighed one hundred and twenty pounds. I now weigh one hundred and sixty pounds. I gained forty pounds in six months. I shall doctor no more with home doctors, as it is only waste of money. I am now in perfect health, thanks to Dr. Pierce."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the muddy complexion.

Prince Henry Had Pleasant Trip Across the Ocean

RECEIVES WARM GREETING

From Kaiser and Municipal Officials Upon Landing at Cuxhaven—A Last Word to America Expressing Gratitude For Kindness Shown Him

Cuxhaven, March 19.—The return of Prince Henry of Prussia to German soil was safely accomplished yesterday afternoon amid all the pomp and circumstance with which the prince's imperial brother has seen fit to mark the successful ending of Prince Henry's American mission.

The same good fortune of freedom from untoward incidents, which characterized the prince's trans-Atlantic journey, continued until the end, and the landing occurred during a period of brilliant sunshine, after an overcast day.

The steamer Deutschland, from Cherbourg, having on board the prince and his suite, was first sighted at 5:30 yesterday afternoon. The German battleship Kaiser Wilhelm II steamed down the roads to meet the Deutschland and returned escorting the big liner. The Deutschland tied up to the new stone quay and was the first ship to dock there.

Emperor William stood upon the quay, surrounded by high naval and municipal officials. As representative of the American embassy at Berlin, Commander Bechler, the naval attache to the embassy, stood at the emperor's side.

The quay was decorated with the flags of all the states of the empire, and the thousands of spectators who covered the roofs of the great warehouses and the wide slopes overlooking the scene cheered wildly as Prince Henry walked down the gangway from the steamer. Emperor William kissed his brother upon both cheeks and shook hands with the members of his suite, saying a few cheerful sentences to each. In the meantime the guns of the squadron saluted.

Side by side his majesty and Prince Henry then passed down in front of the marine guard, which stood at salute.

After this the marine guard passed in review, while the band of the imperial yacht Hohenzollern played the national anthem.

The passengers on the Deutschland crowded to the steamer's rail and cheered heartily during the ceremony. Some of the American passengers waved little American flags; otherwise the Stars and Stripes were not flying.

After the inspection of the guard of honor and the veterans by Emperor William, his majesty and his party, Prince Henry and his staff and Commander Bechler boarded a tender, and amid fresh salutes, music and cheering, proceeded to the battleship Kaiser Wilhelm II. Upon arriving there the crew of that vessel manned their ship to receive the royal personages.

As the Deutschland drew near to Cuxhaven, Prince Henry received the correspondent of The Associated Press in his cabin. The prince said:

"I desire to send a last word through you to America, to say how deeply grateful I am for the measureless kindness which I received while there. I tried to say this before I left, but I want to say again that I am grateful for the cordial and generous manner in which the people and the President of the United States received me. I met and talked with as many individuals as I could, but, of course, I saw most of the people in crowds, and sometimes only from the railroad car platform, and only long enough to touch my cap to them. I wish to thank all those thousands for the trouble they took."

Concerning his speech at Philadelphia, Prince Henry added: "It seemed proper I should make some such utterance for there are always some undercurrents running that have to be taken into account. What I said in my Philadelphia speech was precisely the truth. It might have been thought that during my talks with President Roosevelt, and my ride with him alone, I might have said or word or two of political character, but such was not the case. No political topic was alluded to on either side.

"I shall tell his majesty exactly what I have told you; namely, how I appreciate the kindness shown me by the people of America. I wish to add a special word of thanks for the sympathetic way in which the American papers treated me."

Murrell Jumps His Bond

St. Louis, March 19.—When the case of John N. Murrell, indicted for bribery in connection with the suburban franchise deal, was called in the circuit court yesterday, the defendant failed to appear and his bond of $5000 was held forfeited. To every city in the United States a description of Murrell has been telegraphed with orders to arrest him.

LOSS OF $1,000,000

Lives Probably Sacrificed In Big Water Front Fire at Hoboken

New York, March 19.— A swift and, in many of its details, picturesque fire last night destroyed the pier of the Phoenix Steamship line on the Hoboken, N. J., river front, with many bales of cotton and hay; burned that company's vessel, the British Queen, to a hulk; consumed several lighters and their cargoes, damaged a dock belonging to the Barber Steamship line and for a time threatened the property of the Holland-America line and the huge Campbell stores. The loss will approximate $1,000,000.

Whether any lives were lost is most difficult to learn. Rumors are rife that several men perished. It is tolerably certain that Chief Engineer Scott of the British Queen was burned to death on her and that a sailor named Jansen met the same fate. One of the men who escaped the rapidity of the flames says that he saw several men leap into the water when the steamer became enveloped in fire and he saw few if any of these rescued.

The quartermaster of the ruined ship says that the crew were in her forecastle and he surmises that if all escaped they did so with difficulty. It is not unlikely that some of the longshoremen and stevedores who swarmed about the vessel may still have to be accounted for.

Alleged Theft of $100,000

New York, March 19.—Max C. Mayer, formerly a member of the brokerage firm of Rathborne, Mayer & Rathborne, was arrested yesterday at Bayonne, N. J., charged with embezzlement of funds said to amount in all to $100,000. The charge was made by C. L. Rathborne & Son, the successors of the firm of which Mayer was formerly a member. He was taken before Judge Blair of Jersey City, who released him on $25,000 bail. Subsequently an indictment was found against him by the grand jury of New York county.

Banquet In Moody's Honor

Haverhill, Mass., March 19.—The first of a series of banquets and celebrations scheduled to be held in this city in honor of Congressman Moody, the newly appointed secretary of the navy, was held last evening by the Pentucket club, of which the congressman is a member. Seth Bassett officiated as toastmaster, and 220 prominent citizens were in attendance.

Merion a Fine Vessel

Boston, March 19.—The new Dominion line steamer Merion, from Liverpool March 8, reached quarantine last night. This is her maiden trip. She 550 feet long and of 11,633 tons, and in construction is one of the finest ever entering this port. She experienced heavy head winds for several days. She proved herself to be a good sea boat.

Operators Won't Meet Workmen

Shamokin, Pa., March 19.—The most important convention of hard coal miners since that which resulted in the memorable strike of 1900, began here yesterday. The failure of the operators to meet the officials of the Miners' union was the principal topic of discussion. Many are insistent in their demand for recognition of the union, but the impression prevails that if other concessions are made by the operators the matter of recognition will be permitted to rest for the present.

To Freeze Out American Tobacco

London, March 19.—The Imperial Tobacco company has issued a circular offering large bonuses to its customers who undertake not to sell American goods for a term of years.

BACK IN OLD PLACES

But Very Few of Hub Strikers Left In the Cold

CLYDE COMPANY SETTLES

Its Longshoremen Will Return to Work on Monday—Italians Who Took Places of Strikers In Freight Houses Nearly All Withdrawn

Boston, March 19.—Matters are running more smoothly at the various freight houses and steamship docks than at any time since the great strike was formally declared off. The strikers are gradually getting back into their old places and many of those who have thus far not been so fortunate will undoubtedly secure their former positions in a very short time. Probably not more than 300 or 400 out of the 20,000 men who originally went on strike are at present out in the cold, and there is good reason for believing that they will eventually be provided for.

Negotiations for the reinstatement of those who had not already been taken back are in progress, and, while they have not resulted in a manner perfectly satisfactory to the respective unions, concessions have been made by the different companies involved which have greatly lessened the bitterness that had previously been expressed against them by labor leaders, and given the latter reason to believe that all grievances will soon be adjusted.

Late yesterday afternoon Judge Reed, chairman of the state board of arbitrathion, gave out the following statement of what had been accomplished by the board:

"The difficulty with the Clyde Steamship company, involving 75 men, was settled by agreement of parties in a manner satisfactory to all concerned through the efforts of the state board of arbitration and conciliation. The settlement was the result of several conferences, and it was agreed that the strikers will resume work next Monday, when the Carib, from New York, is expected.

"The dissatisfaction expressed by the men when they struck for the second time was caused by the disappointment of two of their number who, it is alleged, had not been given their usual positions. The board succeeded in obtaining an assurance from the management that the men should be given the same jobs as they had previous to their strike a week ago.

"All the Knights of Labor employes of the Boston and Maine railroad and East Boston employes of the Boston and Albany, as well as the Knights of Labor longshoremen engaged on the deep sea vessels, have resumed work. There are a few members of the K. of L. local assembly No. 628, employes of the N. Y., N. H. and H. road, that have not returned to work."

Many additional freight handlers have gone to work in the N. Y., N. H. and H. railroad and freight is being handled in a more satisfactory manner than at any time since the strike began.

The Italians who have been taking the places of the strikers have nearly all been withdrawn and the freight houses are rapidly assuming their usual appearance.

Fitchburg Weavers Satisfied

Fitchburg, Mass., March 19.—Although labor men from Providence have been here for the purpose of influencing the 425 weavers in the two mills of the American Woollen company to strike in sympathy with the striking weavers at Providence and Olneyville the local operatives declare that they are satisfied with the conditions in Fitchburg and have no grievance against the company. At last night's meeting of the weavers no action was taken regarding a sympathetic strike.

Positions Forfeited

Lynn, Mass., March 19.—The employes of the American Express company who struck last week in sympathy with the freight handlers in Boston, and who have been refused reinstatement by the company, as they had secured new men to take their places, received an ultimatum yesterday to the effect that they will not be taken back unless the company has places for them in the future.

Manufacturers to Meet Operatives

New Bedford, Mass., March 19.—The treasurers of the New Bedford cotton mills met yesterday to consider the weavers' request for an advance in pay and a conference relative to a standard list. A reply was made designating Saturday next for a conference. Immediately after that conference the request for an advance of wages will be taken up by the session.

Prison Sentence Restored Peace

Norfolk, March 19.—The strike of the street car men is dying a natural death. There has been a cessation of demonstrations on the part of the strikers and their sympathizers. It is the general opinion that this was brought about by the sentence of J. W. Jenkins to two years in the penitentiary on the charge of attempting to wreck a car.

Berlin, March 19.—Five hundred returned immigrants, disappointed with life in the United States, have passed through Berlin on their way to their old homes in Posen, the provinces of East and West Prussia, and in Russia and Austria.

Sagasta Fixes Up Cabinet

Madrid, March 19.—It was expected that the members of the new ministry would take the oath yesterday afternoon, but after seeing the queen regent, Premier Sagasta announced that serious difficulties had arisen in regard to the composition of the cabinet. Later he reappointed the former ministry, with a few changes, they being the ministers of justice, finance and agriculture.

Call Turned to Snub

Chicago, March 19.—The church committee of the Union Park Congregational church of this city returned unopened to Dr. W. T. McElveen of Boston a letter in which, presumably, he declined the call to come to Chicago. The committee was deeply chagrined at Dr. McElveen's reported action in announcing his decision to his Boston congregation before he told the committee.

Soldiers and Civilians In Conflict

Mobile, Ala., March 19.—In a riot which occurred between soldiers and civilians at Fort Morgan Michael Kuhn, a discharged soldier, was killed and a dozen participants in the difficulty were wounded. About 50 soldiers were drinking in a saloon outside the reservation when an altercation arose between Sergeant Finnegan and Private Newby and a general fight followed.

Whiskey Deal Involving $1,000,000

Cincinnati, March 19.—What is considered the largest single deal in whiskey on record was closed here yesterday. All of the holdings of the Tyrone distilleries, over 40,000 barrels, was bought by D. K. Weiskopf for a Cincinnati house. The price aggregated $1,000,000.

Good Afternoon.

To humor the petitioners for a greater Boston by the appointment of a recess committee is going further than the people desire. There seems to be no popular demand for any such bill, and the movement has lost ground the last few years instead of gaining in favor.

With the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. as the contractors for the new Quincy Point bridge, a well built structure is assured. The company has a local as well as a national reputation at stake, and will feel the responsibility of doing their best work.

If all were as persistent as Rev. Dr. Todd, all differences in the Quincy granite industry would be adjusted this week, and the city would enjoy the prosperity which seemed to be coming our way. Suggestions from outsiders will divert the mind from one idea, where a mole hill is often magnified into a mountain, and should lead up to a settlement. An early settlement is not impossible, and the sooner it is consumated the better for all.

It would seem from all reports that the employes of the local coal merchants had made a mistake in organizing and making a demand. Had they individually or collectively petitioned for an increase of pay, they would probably have been successful, in view of the present offer of J. F. Sheppard & Sons to pay from $11 to $13 per week. Messrs. Sheppard and Messrs. Patch have had the reputation of using their employes like men. At Christmas turkeys have been presented, and other kindnesses extended, and shortcomings overlooked. Employers like employes dislike to be driven, and there are always two sides to every question. Better wages should be paid than in the past to laborers, and we hope they will secure increases, but let it be by petition or arbitration rather than by demands and strikes.

Drift of Opinion.

☞It seems that London is unduly stirred by the report that the Boers at the last fight were dressed in British khaki. To wear the enemy's uniform in order to deceive him and by way of masquerade is not permissible. But this offense it does not seem that the Boers can have committed. It is quite another thing to wear the enemy's clothes because you have no other. And this is what the Boers seem to have been doing. During the last year of our civil war every captured Confederate who wore anything to speak of wore the union blue. But no confederate was ever punished on that account.—New York Times.

☞We agree with the editor of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle in thanking Prince Henry for occupying so much pace in the newspapers. With some exceptions scarcely worth noting, the emotions excited by his reception are humane and generous. Good feeling is stirred, and the baser passions sleep. Many people love excitement, and consider themselves defrauded if the first page of the daily paper contains no stirring news. They do not care what it is; but they want something to happen, something that will stir their own blood, quicken their torpid imagination, and make them feel the impulse of life. Their own lives are too barren to give the variety they seek, and they do not generate moral energy enough to impel them to action. They wish to be played upon, to be stirred up, to be interested. As a result, the editors furnish what they demand. They prefer to provide innocent sensations, and the royal prince is a godsend to them. But if they cannot have real princes to exploit, they will serve up whatever comes to hand, from war news down to the bestial affairs of harlots and murderers. One way to improve the newspapers is to make things happen which are worth recording.—Christian Register.

☞Mayor Hurley, who has announced himself as a congressional candidate, has given a forecast of his platform to a Boston Post reporter. As for trusts, he says, "Smash 'em." On the currency question he wants "good money and declares himself to be a 14 carat solid gold man." He doesn't know or care anything about ship subsidies, and is content to let that pass. Nor does he want to discuss the Philippines. He is willing that Cuba shall be free and have every trade privilege, leaves civil service reform entirely to President Roosevelt, wants to grab all the harbor improvements for Massachusetts that he can, is a hummer for Nicaragua, admits that we need new trade treaties but confesses that he doesn't know enough about the subject to discuss it, wants publicity for corporations and better labor organizations to meet monopoly of capital with monopoly of labor. Above all he wants to smash rings, particularly the Essex county ring, and when he gets through with the building of the platform he wants a chance to tell people that he isn't a millionaire and that his rivals trot in that class. If present indications do not mislead the Hurley campaign will be largely upon the money question.—Haverhill Gazette.

Testimonial and Presentation.

Last night a large number of the members and adherents of the First Presbyterian church met at the home of the pastor, Rev. Dr. Todd, to do honor to Mrs. Daniel Ross, who has been for years the diligent organist of the church, superintendent of the primary department of the Sunday school, and secretary of the Woman's Missionary society.

Owing to the illness of Mr. Ross it will be necessary for a time for them to leave Quincy, and seek a change of climate, and Mrs. Ross is about to leave for Prince Edward Island, where her husband now is.

It was therefore considered a fitting time to recognize valuable work for the Master and express the sympathy of the congregation for loved ones in trial. So Mrs. Ross was invited to the manse, and the house was filled with appreciative people, the pastor told briefly the circumstance which brought them together. He read a very complimentary testimonial to Mrs. Ross, prepared by the session and expressing the mind of the congregation concerning her worth and work. He then presented Mrs. Ross with a handsome gold watch, and in a neat speech spoke of the pleasure it gave him in so commending her, in the name of the congregation.

Mrs. Ross was so overcome that she could not reply more than to say "I thank you."

A very happy evening was spent socially in song, and recitation and story. Speeches were made by Messrs. Donald MacKenzie, Alex. Clark and A. Bishop. Dainty refreshments were served and the company said "goodby" to Mrs. Ross after singing together "Auld Lang Syne."

BRIDGE BUILDING.

Added to Works of Fore River Company.

Awarded Contract for New Bridge.

Between Quincy Point and North Weymouth.

Bids for building the new bridge between Quincy Point and North Weymouth, were opened Tuesday at the office of the County Commissioners at Dedham. This is the second time that bids have been received for building this bridge. The first time was some weeks ago, and at that time both of the two bids were rejected as they exceeded the amount the County Commissioners could expend.

Alterations were then made in the plans and new proposals asked. These were opened Tuesday. There were but two bidders, the United Construction Co. and the Fore River Ship and Engine Co.

The Fore River Co. was the lowest bidder and as their bid was within the amount the commissioners could expend it was awarded to them. They agree to complete the bridge in 250 days, so that the prospects are good for a new bridge this year.

TELL TALE BOXES.

The New Police Signal System Doing Good Work.

Officer Frank J. Daveron was suspended at roll call by Chief Hayden Tuesday night, for neglect of duty. The neglect in this case was failure to pull his boxes Sunday night between the hours of 9.55 P. M. and 2.10 o'clock A. M.

On Saturday night the box in front of the house where Officer Daveron lives was pulled seven times during the night while the other boxes on his beat were only pulled twice each. He was given a call down by Chief Hayden for this, but apparently it did no good, for the very next night he neglected to pull his boxes, as noted above, for four hours. The officer's excuse was that he probably failed to pull the hook down far enough. This excuse, however, will hardly hold water. This is the second time this year that Officer Daveron has has been suspended.

The frequent suspensions and changes of the beats of the officers in the Police department is evidence that it is receiving the shake up and discipline it has so long needed. There is good material in the force but it had been allowed to reach that stage where some of the men had got the idea that they could do about as they pleased. There have been frequent rumors of certain officers being under the influence of liquor when they were supposed to be guarding the citizens' property but there was no method of keeping track of a man's whereabouts after he left the station at 7 o'clock at night.

Since the police signal system has been put in, it is possible to keep a close watch upon the men for they are under orders to pull certain boxes at certain hours, and if they do not do it they must be prepared with an excuse that will hold water.

It will not do to say that the boxes failed to record as they should, for they are accurate and if any officer thinks he can get the best of a box he will soon find out his mistake.

Heart Party.

Miss Ruth W. Pratt of Winter Hill, Somerville, gave a very pretty Heart party to her many young friends of Atlantic at the residence of her uncle, Mr. Edward C. Wales on Saturday evening. The first prizes were taken by Miss Lulu E. Phelan and Walter Nichols, the second by Miss Martha Jenkins and Adin Wilde, the third by Miss Helen Curtin and David Moffat. After the awarding of the prizes a pretty and dainty lunch was served. Then dancing and games were enjoyed for the remainder of the evening.

TODAY'S COURT.

John Doe was arraigned for being a tramp at Braintree. Case continued until Thursday.

The continued case of John F. Lyons for giving a false alarm of fire at Quincy was called, Lyons retracted his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty. The cases was then continued for sentence until May 1.

PICKWICK CLUB.

The Story of an Oratorio Presented Last Night.

The meeting of the Pickwick club, postponed from the night of the recent blizzard, was held Tuesday evening at the attractive home of Mrs. Elizabeth Alden, on Chestnut street. Guests had been invited and an audience of seventy-five assembled to listen to "The Story of an Oratorio."

The evening's program had been arranged by a committee consisting of Miss Josephine Simonton and Mrs. J. O. Hall, Jr., and after brief introductory remarks by the president of the club the subject was left in their hands.

The first part of the program consisted of a series of papers on various phases of oratorio production. Mrs. Wilson Marsh read a paper on "The development of the oratorio." "A characterization of Handel as a man and a musician," was presented by Miss Isaac. The hostess, Mrs. Alden, read an interesting paper on "Incidents of various presentations of the Messiah," and the first half of the program closed with a brief statement, from the president of the club, of the instruments used in Handel's time.

The particular oratorio chosen was Handel's "Messiah," and the second part of the evening's entertainment consisted of musical selections illustrative of the beauties of Handel's composition. In introducing the musical numbers, Mrs. Hall gave a synopsis of the leading passages of the oratorio. The music was rendered by Miss Florence Emery, soprano, and an orchestra of four pieces. This orchestra consisted of Miss Sara Whicher, pianist; Mr. Robert Porter, first violin; Mr. Arthur Hall, second violin; and Mr. Herbert Barker, cello. It was directed by Mr. J. B. Buckingham.

The following selections were given:

(a) Overture and fugue, by the orchestra.

(b) Solo, "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace," by Miss Emery, with orchestral accompaniment.

(c) Pastoral Symphony, by the orchestra.

(d) Solo, "Come unto him" by Miss Emery, with orchestral accompaniment.

Miss Emery's singing, which is always most pleasing was made doubly effective by the accompaniment of the orchestra. The Pastoral Symphony was received with high favor. Much interest has been aroused by the performance of the orchestra. The members have been playing together weekly during the winter and it is rumored that they are soon to give a public concert. Those who heard them play are ready to assure the success of such an entertainment.

At the conclusion of the program a delightful social hour was spent and refreshments were served by the hostess.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

BY Virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Mabel Ramsdell and John B. F. Ramsdell, her husband, to the Quincy Savings Bank, dated Nov. 9, 1900, and recorded in Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 887, fol. 211, will be sold at public auction for breach of the conditions of said mortgage, on the premises hereinafter described, on WEDNESDAY, the Sixteenth day of April, at two o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular, the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, and therein described substantially as follows:

A certain lot of land containing about 9,002 square feet, with the buildings thereon, situated in that part of said Quincy, called Atlantic, and bounded as follows, viz: Beginning at a point three hundred eighty and 55-100 feet westerly from Squantum street; thence running northerly one hundred twenty and 52-100 feet; thence turning and running westerly seventy-five feet to lot No. 6 on a "plan of house lots at Atlantic Station, North Quincy," drawn by L. Briggs & Co., dated April, 1871, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds; thence southerly and bounded westerly on said lot No. 6, one hundred twenty and 60-100 feet to Billings street; thence easterly on said Billings street, seventy-five feet to the point of beginning.

This property will be sold subject to all unpaid taxes, tax titles and assessments.

Terms, $200 cash at sale, balance cash in ten days from said sale on delivery of deed.

"A SMALL PEG"

Upon Which the Quarry Strike Hangs.

Arbitrate and Settle Immediately.

The Earnest Desire of the People of Quincy.

To the operators, and operatives of the quarries in Quincy, now on strike.

Gentlemen:—The reason for my second letter to you is, that, as a result of my first one, I have been asked by individuals of both parties if I would suggest a basis for the arbitration of the questions at issue. After due consideration I reluctantly comply with the request, as I do not wish to discuss publicly the merits of the question. Only in the hope that it may be helpful in having negotiations between you resumed, I suggest the following:

That the difference between the last propositions made, by each party to the other, form a basis upon which the question of settlement might with profit to all, and without loss of dignity to any, be reopened, and adjusted.

As I am informed, the operatives ask for an eight-hour day, with the wage they received for nine hours.

The operaters offer an eight hour day, with ten per cent. advance in wages on the former price per hour; with a condition, and a promise attached.

The condition is, "If necessary the men will work an extra hour during March, April, May, June, September and October."

The promise is, "That the above condition shall be withdrawn should an eight hour day be granted to the quarrymen of Barre."

The difference stated briefly seems to be that between a 10 per cent. increase, and that of one-ninth of a days' pay upon the former rate of wages. Gentlemen, this difference is so little that you might dismiss it with a laugh.

The other part of the difference is, that between an eight-hour day for six months of the year, and one for the whole year.

These in my judgment form a resonable basis upon which you might easily confer, and, if necessary, agree to the adjustment of the whole question by arbitration.

The difficulty may seem to you a formidable one, but surely it is not insurmountable, and no doubt would become less so if competent and impartial parties were invited to assist in its solution. Indeed, it seems to be the one opinion, so far as I have heard it expressed among our citizens, that it is rather a small peg upon which to hang a disastrous strike.

Moreover, gentlemen, there is an apparently strong desire on the part of many of yourselves involved in the strike, that an amicable settlement be earnestly attempted immediately. This desire increases manifold the awful responsibility of leaders should either side decline to submit the matter for adjustment to arbitration.

In the hope this suggestion may be received in the same spirit in which it is offered, and therefore may bear good fruit, I remain

Most sincerely yours,
(Rev.) James Todd, D. D.

THE COAL STRIKE.

Quincy Dealers Are Not Doing Any Carting.

The coal situation is comparatively unchanged. Quite a number of firms are carting their own coal, all of them being users of soft coal, the firms O. T. Rogers & Co. and Field & Wild are using their teams of oxen.

Tuesday forenoon a coal team belonging to Sheppard & Sons delivered a load of coal in South Quincy. At first it was thought that the firm had secured a driver, but enquiries showed that the team had only been loaned for that particular load.

C. L. Prescott has two double and one single team delivering coal today for the Quincy Electric Light Co.

One two-horse team belonging to Sheppard & Sons is carting soft coal fo the Fore River Engine Co.

Disabled Veterans.

Representative Drinkwater was successful in the Legislature Tuesday in having substituted for an adverse report a bill providing that the State pay a pension of $12 per month to veterans of the Civil war who lost a leg or an arm as the result of wounds. Mr. Drinkwater spoke at length in favor of his motion to substitute, and was supported by Mr. Hayes of Lowell. It was opposed by Mr. Gardner of Norwell and Mr. Hagberg of Worcester. The vote was 130 yea to 59 nay for substitution.

Teamsters Misinformed.

To the Quincy Daily Ledger:

The news which appeared yesterday that two of Sheppards teamsters had returned to work we wish to contradict. They were informed by one of the firm that they had settled and would pay the schedule, but when they learned they were misinformed they quit work.

We would like to have the firms of Sheppard & Son and Patch & Co. give the public the scale of wages they are paying at present, and the conditions they pay it under. Teamster.

Horse Thieves at Weymouth.

Horse thieves were about North Weymouth Tuesday night. They visited the stable of Stephen Delory and drove off a bay mare. They also carried away a harness. From Delory's barn the parties evidently went to Poland's blacksmith shop where they took a team that had been left there for repairs. They also stole a set of dies valued at $15 from the blacksmith shop.

AGAINST IT.

No Bill for a Greater Boston to be Reported.

The committee on Metropolitan Affairs of the legislature told the advocates of the Greater Boston scheme to save their powder at the hearing on Tuesday, informing them almost at the outset that the committee was opposed to reporting a bill this year, but that they might report a resolve in favor of a special recess committee to consider the question and report to the next legislature.

Before the hearing closed Dr. Henry O. Marcy of Boston spoke in favor of the bill, and Marcus A. Cook read a letter from Andrew H. Green of New York.

Whether the legislature favors a recess committee, if recommended, is another question.

SIXTY-FIVE YEARS OLD

Grover Cleveland Has a Birthday Chat With a Press Correspondent

Princeton, N. J., March 19.—Ex-President Grover Cleveland, who is now the only living ex-president of the United States, was 65 years old yesterday. Mr. Cleveland spent the day indoors with his wife and children. When seen by an Associated Press correspondent last evening Mr. Cleveland appeared to be in a happy frame of mind and talked freely on several questions. When asked how he had spent the day he said:

"Very quietly and pleasantly, with my family and in entertaining a few neighbors who called."

In reply to a question on the agitation for the construction of the Panama canal he said: "I notice the question has already been debated and passed one of the houses and I see no reason why it should not go through. Much care should be exercised, however, that we do not make the thing merely a grab-bag for ourselves."

Mr. Cleveland said he had not carefully looked over Henry Watterson's recent letter in which he assails the present administration at Washington and makes the accusation that things are politically in a bad shape there with the Republican party. Commenting on it, Mr. Cleveland said: "Well, the party may get badly mixed up with itself at times, but it seems to have the faculty of pulling together at convenient times."

Mr. Cleveland expressed the opinion that much good would come out of the meetings of the National Civic Federation's arbitration committee whenever emergencies arose sufficient to warrant the calling of the members of the committee together.

Steamer's Crew Barely Saved

Wilmington, N. C., March 19.—The United States revenue cutter Algonquin has arrived at Moosehead City with Captain Garay and crew of 27 men from the Spanish steamship Ea. When off Cape Lookout shoals on March 15 she went aground. The steamer broke in two yesterday and is a total loss with her cargo of rosin and phosphate. By a combination of the efforts of the lifesaving station and the revenue cutter the crew was taken at the last minute from off the bridge of the vessel after having remained without food and drink since Saturday.

To Fill Martyrs' Places

Chatham, Mass., March 19.—Superintendent Sparrow of the lifesaving service announces that he has temporarily appointed Seth N. Ellis as captain of the Monomoy lifesaving station, with the following crew: George N. Eldridge, Walter Eldridge, George I. Crowell, Anthony Thatcher, Lincoln Wing, Lester Patterson, D. D. Bloomer and Walter Bloomer. They will take the place of the lifesavers lost in the surf on Shovelful Shoal while attempting to rescue the men from the stranded barge Wadena.

☞On Thursday, March 20, there will be a large sale of horses and carriages, also of real estate of John J. Higgins at South Weymouth. Frank F. Crane, the popular Quincy auctioneer, will sell the property.

LAUNDRY LINES.

Never use brown soap when washing woolen goods.

Salt rubbed on the bottom of a sticky iron will smooth the surface.

Calicoes, ginghams and chintzes should be ironed on the wrong side.

Delicate cotton goods which might be spoiled by starch may be stiffened by wringing them out in milk.

Lace handkerchiefs should be washed with castile soap in warm water, in which are a few drops of ammonia.

Fabrics that are inclined to fade should be soaked and rinsed in very salt water to set the color before washing in suds.

If old kid gloves are worn when ironing or a layer of kid or leather put in the iron holder, the laundress' hands are not so apt to become calloused.

Paraffin wax in starch is frequently employed to give a brilliant finish to the starched article and also to prevent the iron from sticking. Add a piece the size of a walnut to the boiling starch.

Children's Appetites.

To promote children's appetites take care that they have plenty of outdoor exercise and that they have only such simple, homely food as they can digest. If this be done, there will seldom if ever be any cause for anxiety on the score of their lack of appetite.

If children are fed on highly seasoned and rich foods and are allowed to eat between meals, their little stomachs are overtaxed, and not only do they lose all healthy appetite, but the food they take does not nourish them as it should do.

Illness is a most expensive and in most cases a preventable nuisance, and the best way to keep children happy and good is to keep them well, which is usually easily managed by attending to simple rules of health.

A child's appetite is a pretty fair indicator of health, so if it fails and the failure is not due to indiscretion in diet see whether it is worried over lessons and has enough sleep. Keep it from reading sensational stories and, if needed, give it a short holiday from school.

Philadelphia Women.

"Philadelphia, for a city of its size, is singularly lacking in prominent women—women of national reputation and importance," said one of her clubwomen. "Of course there are many women here who are identified with various movements that tend to give them local prominence, but that is all. They are scarcely known outside their native city.

"Dr. Hannah W. Longshore, who was the first woman to practice medicine in America, and Mrs. E. D. Gillespie belonged to the class I have in mind, but they are dead. I might also mention Agnes Repplier and Florence Earle Coates in literature, Cecilia Beaux in art and Mrs. Cornelius Stevenson in archæological research, but even these women are prominent only as appealing to a limited class. What I mean is we have no great leaders."—Philadelphia Record.

Venetian Lace Work.

Venetian point lace differs from royal battenberg and other laces in that it is worked on the right side of the pattern instead of the reverse side and because there are no braids used in its construction. The work also proceeds from left to right after the manner in which a picture is drawn. The pattern is drawn on muslin, which in turn is basted on a heavier material and outlined with heavy linen thread and heavier cord, which add raised effects to the pattern and are buttonholed over very closely, thus giving a solid foundation for developing the numerous fine stitches, which are worked in very closely together.

Exercise.

"I get all the exercise I need in going about my household duties," many women assert, but that is the greatest mistake possible. Under ordinary circumstances a few sets of muscles are called into activity, and the mind at the same time is fully occupied.

For physical exercise to be helpful the mind should be at rest. A walk of twenty minutes' duration in the open air is an absolute daily necessity and should be at a reasonably brisk pace. Deep breathing should be practiced on these walks until it becomes a fixed habit.

Dining Room Decoration.

An appropriate overmantle decoration for a dining room is the following, done in burnt and illuminated work. An inscription in quaint lettering reads, "Cheer and great welcome make a merry feast." A border of pomegranate blossoms encircles this, and an extremely pretty effect is secured by outlining a Cupid standing beside a fagot fire, over which hangs a steaming pot, which the graceful little god stirs with a wand. The vapor floats over the panel in sweeping lines.

Bathing.

Bathing, like eating and sleeping and exercising, should be done regularly. It should also be regarded as a pleasure and a luxury. The girl who thinks of a bath as small children contemplate washing dishes or doing some other disagreeable task does not get the real, full, jolly benefits of the tub. Those who find the daily bath restful, stimulating and pleasant cannot get along without it.

Mackintoshes.

Mackintoshes, when dirty, can be easily cleaned at home. Spread out the garment flat on a table, and scrub it with warm water and yellow soap in which a little carbonate of ammonia has been dissolved. Rinse in cold water and hang in the air to dry. On no account put it near the fire.

To Head Off Monopoly

Berlin, March 19.—The government is drafting a bill to regulate wireless telegraphy and tending to a uniformity of service. The effect of this bill will be to exclude the Marconi system from Germany. Newspapers say that this bill will thwart Marconi's efforts to monopolize the wireless telegraphy business of the world.

Totally Wrecked on Reef

Key West, Fla., March 19.—The four-masted schooner Monhegan, hailing from Bath, Me., bound from Havana to Delaware breakwater with 10,000 bags of sugar, is a total wreck on Molasses reef, Florida coast. Captain Murphy, his wife and crew were landed here safely yesterday by the steamer Olivette.

Liberals Must Help Pay For War

Panama, March 19.—By a government decree published here yesterday, war taxes of $70,000 and $30,000 are imposed upon the Liberal residents at Panama and Colon respectively. These taxes are the corresponding shares of the tax of $750,000 imposed upon the department of Panama by the national government.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

The cold wave now extends through the Atlantic states exceept New England and temperatures continue low westward to the Mississippi river, ranging from 5 to 24 degrees below the seasonal average. It will be fair and colder in New England. On the coast winds will be high northwest to north. Storm warnings are displayed from New Haven to Boston.

SOME FOOLISH PEOPLE

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it will wear them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 25c. and 50c. Trial size free. At all druggists.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER XI—CONTINUED.

Such was now the situation of Marfa Strogoff and Nadia toward each other. The old Siberian had understood all, and if the young girl was ignorant of the fact that her companion so much regretted still lived she knew at least the relationship which he held toward her whom she had made her mother, and she thanked God for having given her that joy and pleasure thus to be able to replace at the side of the prisoner that son whom she had lost.

But that which neither the one nor the other could know was that Michael Strogoff, taken at Kalyvan, was one of the same convoy and was bound like themselves for Tomsk.

At length, on the 15th of August, toward evening, the convoy reached the little town of Zabedeiro, some thirty versts from Tomsk. At this place the route again lay along the course of the Tom.

All this night the prisoners were to camp on the banks of the Tom. The emir, in fact, had deferred until the next day the entry of his troops into Tomsk. It had been decided that a military display should mark the inauguration of the Tartar headquarters in this important city. Feofar-Khan already occupied its fortress, but the body of his army bivouacked under the walls, waiting for the moment to make a solemn entry.

Ivan Ogareff had left the emir at Tomsk, where they had both arrived the evening before, and he returned to the encampment at Zabedeiro. Next day he had to start from this place with the rear guard of the Tartar army. A house had been placed at his disposal where he could stay the night. At sunrise, under his command, horse and foot set out for Tomsk, where the emir wished to receive them with all the pomp and display of an Asiatic sovereign.

When the orders for a halt had been given, the prisoners, worn out with a three days' journey, a prey to the most burning thirst, could at length quench their thirst and take some repose.

The sun had already set, but the horizon was still lighted up by the twilight, when Nadia, supporting Marfa Strogoff, reached the banks of the Tom. The two had not been able so far to penetrate the ranks of those who thronged the high bank, and they came to drink in their turn.

The old Siberian bent over the fresh stream, and Nadia, having plunged her hands into it, carried it to the lips of Marfa. Then she refreshed herself in her turn. The cold water of the pure stream seemed to give back life to the old woman and the young girl. Suddenly Nadia, as she left the banks, straightened herself. An involuntary cry escaped her lips.

Michael Strogoff was there and only some paces from her! It was he!

At the cry of Nadia Michael Strogoff had started, but he had sufficient command of himself not to utter a word which could compromise him.

And yet at the very moment that Nadia had recognized him he had recognized his mother. Michael Strogoff at this unexpected meeting, not feeling himself to be any longer master of himself, raised his hand to his eyes and immediately left the spot. Nadia was instinctively hastening forward to rejoin him when the old Siberian whispered these words in her ear:

"Stay, my daughter!"

"It is he!" answered Nadia in a voice trembling with emotion. "He lives, mother! It is he!"

"It is my son," answered Marfa Strogoff; "it is Michael Strogoff, and you see that I do not take one step toward him. Follow my example."

Michael Strogoff had just experienced one of the most violent emotions which it is ever given to man to feel. His mother and Nadia were there. Those two prisoners, each of whom seemed to hold the first place in his heart, were there joined with him in one common misfortune. Did Nadia know who he was? No, for he had seen the gesture of Marfa Strogoff holding her back at the moment she was about to rush upon him. Marfa Strogoff had understood all and kept her secret.

Michael Strogoff could then hope that this fresh and unexpected meeting at the camp of Zabedeiro would have no injurious consequences neither for his mother nor for himself, but he did not know that certain particulars of that scene, rapidly as it had passed, had been gained by Sangarre, the spy of Ivan Ogareff.

The gypsy was there, a few paces from the bank, watching as ever the old Siberian, without her suspecting it. She had not been able to perceive Michael Strogoff, who had already disappeared when she turned round, but the gesture of the mother, withholding Nadia, had not escaped her, and a light from Marfa's eyes told her everything.

There was no longer any doubt that the son of Marfa Strogoff, the courier of the czar, was now at Zabedeiro among the prisoners of Ivan Ogareff.

Sangarre did not know him, but she knew he was there. She did not then attempt to discover him, a thing which would have been impossible in the midst of this numerous crowd.

As for again spying after Nadia and Marfa Strogoff, this was equally useless. It was evident that these two women would be on their guard, and it would be impossible to seize by surprise anything of a nature to compromise the courier of the czar.

The gypsy had then only one thought—to warn Ivan Ogareff. Wherefore she immediately left the camp.

A quarter of an hour afterward she arrived at Zabedeiro and was shown into the house occupied by the lieutenant of the emir.

Ivan Ogareff immediately received the gypsy.

"What do you wish, Sangarre?" he asked.

"The son of Marfa Strogoff is at the camp," answered Sangarre.

"A prisoner?"

"A prisoner."

"Ah," cried Ivan Ogareff, "I knew"—

"You knew nothing, Ivan," said the gypsy, "for you do not even know him."

"But do you know him? You have seen him, Sangarre?"

"I have not seen him, but I saw his mother betray herself by a movement which has told me everything."

"Do you not deceive yourself?"

"I do not."

"You know the importance I attach to the arrest of this courier," said Ivan Ogareff. "If the letter which was sent to him from Moscow reaches Irkutsk, and it should be handed to the grand duke, the grand duke would be on his guard, and I should not be able to catch him. I must have this letter at any price. Now, you have just told me that the bearer of this letter is in my power. I repeat it, Sangarre, do you not deceive yourself?"

Ivan Ogareff had spoken with great animation. His emotion bore testimony to the extreme importance he attached to the possession of this letter. Sangarre was not at all troubled with the persistency of the fresh inquiry.

"I am not deceived, Ivan," she answered.

"But, Sangarre, there are at the camp several thousand prisoners, and you say you do not know Michael Strogoff?"

"No," answered the gypsy, whose face lighted up with a savage joy. "I indeed do not know him, but his mother does. Ivan, we must force the mother to speak."

"Tomorrow she shall speak!" said Ogareff.

Then he held out his hand to the gypsy, and she kissed it, without there being in this act of respect habitual to the people of the north anything degrading or servile.

Sangarre returned to the camp. She found the place occupied by Nadia and Marfa Strogoff and passed the night in watching them both, with her ears open for any information. She could hear nothing. By an instinctive feeling of prudence not a word was exchanged between Nadia and Marfa Strogoff.

Union Official Killed at Work

Leadville, S. D., March 19.—George W. Holvey, president of the Lead Miners' union, was killed yesterday by a premature blast at the Homestake mine. He was firing block holes and one of the charges exploded while he was directly over it, blowing his head entirely off.

Rumor Discredited

Paris, March 19.—The reported resignation of the Waldeck-Rousseau cabinet, mentioned yesterday in the Nationalist organ l'Eclaire, is so devoid of probability that it is not even reproduced or discussed here.

THAT CHAPTER.

A chapter on Scott's Emulsion often holds a prominent position in the histories of weak children.

The gist of that chapter usually reads like this—"child weak, pale, thin, no appetite, fretful, weakness left over from grippe or other disease. Began small doses Scott's Emulsion three times a day after meals. No apparent change first week. Then appetite improved, then strength increased, then child more lively, slept better, a decided gain in weight, better color in the face."

And so it goes till the child is reported well and strong.

Sounds simple enough and it is simple—Scott's Emulsion is just what the weak child needs.

VOTE ON SHIP SUBSIDY

Eliminates It as a Strict Party Measure.

OPPOSITION IN THE SENATE

Gives House Republicans a Chance to Divide on the Measure According to Individual Preferences—The Hanna Anti-Trust Amendment

Washington, March 19.—Seldom has the passage of a bill in the senate by a majority of 11 been so generally looked upon as a practical defeat. While the six Republican votes cast against the Frye ship subsidy bill do not represent all of the senators who have privately expressed their misgivings, this number is large enough to take away all taint of mugwumpers from any house Republicans who see fit to vote the same way. A bill is deprived of standing as a strict party measure when it meets the open opposition of senate leaders of the calibre of Allison, Spooner and Proctor, and of the three younger men who, for new senators, have made an excellent record.

House Republicans will now feel free to divide on the measure according to their individual preferences, and on this basis the Republican majority would speedily vanish. The northwestern members who in the last congress maintained an effective opposition, are said to be much encouraged by this vote and more determined than ever to accomplish the bill's defeat.

Senator Frye's professed aim of drawing a bill which would disarm Republican opposition, even though at a sacrifice of what he regarded as desirable, has apparently failed of its purpose. The surprise was the votes of Proctor and Dillingham. It is understood that, while not from the start suspicious of the subsidy measure, as were Spooner and Allison, they became convinced by the arguments presented in the senate that this was a bad bill.

Mr. Dillingham is said to have come to the conclusion that it would not open new and desirable lines, but would merely distribute gratuities among existing companies, and so accomplish little toward the restoration of the American merchant marine.

Allison and Dolliver in the same way, while not necessarily opposed to all subsidies, regard this bill as too sweeping and not sufficiently likely to open such new routes to South America and Asia as it is desirable to have established, rather than to increase the profits on lines on which transportation facilities are already abundant. Mr. Spooner's views are not made clear in his recent speech.

One curious feature of the bill as passed, and which apparently was not discovered at the time, is the virtual repetition, through an amendment offered by Mr. Hanna, of so much of the Sherman anti-trust law as applies to ocean shipping. The clause reads as follows: "Provided, however, as that nothing contained in this act or in any other act of congress shall be construed to preventany citizen or corporation of the United States or any state from contracting for, acquiring, holding or operating any interest in one or more steamship lines engaged in foreign commerce." Of course this will be materially modified in the house committee.

In Congress

Washington, March 19.—For three hours yesterday the senate had under consideration the bill providing for the protection of the President of the United States and for the punishment by United States courts of those who commit assaultson him. Mr. Bacon opposed the bill and Mr. Hoar and Mr. Mason supported it. Mr. Mason denounced an amendment to the bill offered by Mr. Bacon as opening the door to special pleading for the benefit of assassins of the president. Mr. Bacon considered Mr. Mason's criticism a personal reflection on himself and resented it with heat. An explanation by the Illinois senator cleared the atmosphere.

The general debate on the river and harbor appropriation bill in the house was enlivened by Mr. Hepburn, who made his annual onslaught on the measure. Contrary to his usual custom, Mr. Hepburn found several things in the bill to commend, although some of his criticisms were quite severe.

Cuban Reciprocity Agreement

Washington, March 19.—The ways and means proposition for reciprocity with Cuba to the extent of a 20 percent reduction of duties, modified by the Sibley amendment limiting the life time of the reduced rates to December, 1903, was adopted by the Republican conference last night by a vote of 85 to 31.

Manley's Mind Not Made Up

Washington, March 19.—Joseph H. Manley left for his home in Augusta, Me., yesterday, and will not give his answer to the proffer of the office of first assistant postmaster general until later.

Stringent Anti-Anarchy Measure

Albany, March 19.—The Elsberg anti-anarchy bill was passed by the senate yesterday. It provides penalties for those who hold anarchistic meetings or permit them to be held in any hall or house.

Week's Losses For Boers

London, March 19.—Lord Kitchener's weekly report shows that during the week ending yesterday 11 Boers were killed, 7 were wounded, 158 were made prisoners and 125 surrendered.

STUDENTS FEEL SORE

Over What They Consider Unjust Action of Williams College Faculty

Williamstown, Mass., March 19.—There is considerable excitement among the students at Williams college over the action of the faculty in suspending four members of the sophomore class and two of the senior class. It has developed that on last Friday night several freshmen attempted to haze two sophomores in their rooms. The latter shouted to their classmates for assistance. The sophomores hastily gathered and made an attempt to rescue their fellows who were in the hands of the freshmen. The trouble continued for several minutes, and some damage was done to the building. A member of the faculty arrived on the scene, and took the names of four sophomores and two seniors who were considered responsible for the affair. The six students were summoned before the faculty and as a result were suspended. The six students are sons of prominent men.

The college at large thinks the penalty too severe, but no direct action has yet been taken by the students. Those suspended say they have been unjustly treated, as they were no more concerned in the affair than a large number of others, and especially the freshmen, who were responsible for the affair and from whom no names were taken.

Mayor's Recommendation Ignored

Boston, March 19.—The aldermen yesterday ignored Mayor Collins' recommendation for a cut in the appropriations as originally recommended by himself. They passed a bill carrying a total of $15,330,005, which was just the amount named in his first estimate. He made, however, another request later, that certain appropriations be cut down, the total reduction amounting to almost $300,000. This second recommendation was ignored.

No Proof of Bribery

Fall River, Mass., March 19.—The committee appointed by the city government to investigate the charges of bribery made against City Clerk Brayton by President Riley of the common council and Councilman Costigan, gave a hearing last night and after hearing three witnesses voted unanimously not to sustain the charges. The three witnesses were the two councilmen who had made the charges and Brayton.

Trolley Car Went Astray

Fall River, Mass., March 19.—A large vestibule electric car jumped the track in Portsmouth, R. I., last night, with 21 passengers aboard, and several of them were injured, but none seriously. The car left the track without warning and pounded over the ground for 60 feet, bringing up with terrific force against a stone wall. The running part of the car was considerably stove up.

Hingham Has a Firebug

Hingham, Mass., March 19.—While the barn of Patrick Whalen was burning yesterday the firemen discovered a bag filled with hay which had been saturated with kerosene, and nearby was a candle that is supposed to have been lighted. The building was destroyed. Whalen has been burned out five times and there have been other incendiary fires here of late.

Mrs Munsey Bailed

Concord, N. H., March 19.—Bail was secured for Mrs. Martha S. Munsey yesterday and she left the Merrimack county jail for her home in Pittsfield. Mrs. Munsey is wanted in Massachusetts for the alleged uttering of forged wills and her case is to come before the supreme court on the question of the legality of the Massachusetts indictment.

Police Under Fire

Barre, Vt., March 19.—The board of aldermen last night voted to hold an investigation regarding the conduct of the police in not giving an alarm on Monday morning when the river was rising rapidly. This action was taken at the request of merchants, on the ground that they lost heavily by not being warned at the time the river was rising.

Convicted of Manslaughter

Boston, March 19.—Antonio Francis was convicted by a jury in the superior criminal court yesterday of manslaughter in causing the death of Giovanni Celia. The defendant shot Celia Dec. 31 at a house in Leverett street. The men had had some trouble over a woman. Francis was given eight to ten years in state prison.

For Brave Men's Families

Boston, March 19.—It does not take Boston long to start a fund for a worthy cause, and the news of the bravery of the men at Monomoy who lost their lives in trying to save others and who left families in distress was no sooner read than a move for relief was started. Lee, Higginson & Co., are receiving subscriptions.

Death From Poison

Boston, March 19.—Mrs. Mabel Weston, who was taken to the city hospital relief station suffering from the effects of a dose of poison, died there yesterday. Her husband, Walter S. Weston, is held by the police, pending an investigation.

Visiting Around Boston

Boston, March 19.—Rear Admiral Schley yesterday visited the South Boston high school, where he spoke briefly to the pupils. Later he called on Mayor Collins and was given a reception by the city government. He also visited the legislature.

In Prison For Life

Concord, N. H., March 19.—Ellsworth F. Hawkins of Nashua entered the state prison yesterday for a life sentence, having pleaded guilty at Manchester to a charge of murder in killing Mrs. Eva L. Brooks at Nashua.

THE MONOMOY HEROES

Fund For Their Families Has a Good Start.

ALMOST $10,000 RAISED

But So Many Are In Need of Assistance That Appeals Are Made to to Swell the Total—People Along the Cape Expected to Aid In Work

Boston, March 20.—In order to obtain unity of all the different organizations which have started funds for the relief of the families of the brave men who lost their lives off Monomoy on March 17, Senator Nye of the Cape district called a meeting of the representatives at the state house yesterday and the result was the appointment of a committee to take charge of the entire matter. The committee was as follows: William A. Nye of Bourne, senator from the Cape, chairman; Henry L. Higginson, of Lee, Higginson & Co., treasurer; Charles P. Curtis, Jr., secretary of the humane society of Massachusetts; Elwin G. Preston, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; Thomas C. Day of Barnstable, and William U. Swan of The Associated Press, secretary.

The committee later called upon the governor, and his excellency heartily approved of the movement. At the outset the committee decided to use every endeavor to obtain a good sum and it was settled that the administration of it should be placed in the hands of the humane society of Massachusetts, which organization took charge and still distributes the income of the fund raised nine years ago for the benefit of the families of the Cuttyhunk lifesavers.

Lee, Higginson & Co. will receive all contributions, but in order to give the residents of Cape Cod an opportunity to contribute to this memorial, responsible parties in each town have been requested by Senator Nye to take charge of the collection in that part of the state. The committee will have daily meetings for a few days in the office of Mr. Higginson.

Much to the satisfaction of the committee the subscription list grew rapidly, yet in view of the condition of these families, five of whom are known to be practically destitute, the response of sympathy and money, while most generous, is capable of further extension. The $10,000 mark is already in sight, but nine years ago over $25,000 was raised for the Cuttihunk lifesavers and the present committee earnestly desires to do better than that.

One of the first acts of the committee yesterday was to send to the Cape for something more in detail of the actual condition and the future prospects of the families of the dead heroes. That report, received last night, showed that the subscription movement is of the most worthy nature.

Including the family of Captain Eldredge, the seven men of the ill-fated crew of the Monomoy station left six widows and 14 children, and with the exception of two sons of Captain Eldredge and the wife of one of the surfmen, all relied solely on the little monthly stipend which the husband and father received by almost daily risking his life in the treacherous waters of Cape Cod. Of the 14 children 10 are below 16 years of age, and one 15-year-old girl is helpless and mildly insane.

All the men bore good Cape Cod names, but none of them left relations whose circumstances would enable them to render any material assistance, so it must come from the outside.

The movement for numerous mass meetings in the various towns on Cape Cod is expected to be one of the chief features, for no one knows better the actual danger and the heroism required of the lifesavers than those who live beside the raging sea. Letters were sent to some prominent man in every village on Cape Cod, earnestly urging the calling of mass meetings and the circulation of subscription papers.

Kaiser Wouldn't Accept Presents

Berlin, March 20.—The presents given Emperor William by Prince Chun, who came from Pekin to Berlin to make atonement to Germany for the murder in Pekin of Baron Von Ketteler, have been in storage here since Emperor William refused to accept them. The presents, which consist of costly silks and objects of art, will, upon the second request of the Chinese prince, be sent to certain German museums.

Twenty Millions For Fair Children

San Francisco, March 20.—The supreme court of this state, in a decision handed down yesterday, declares the trust clause in the will of the late Senator James G. Fair invalid and the property will at once be distributed among the children of the deceased senator. It is estimated that the estate is worth upwards of $20,000,000.

LITTLE ODDS AND ENDS

All That Now Remains to Be Cleared Up In the Boston Strike

Boston, March 20.—The grievances of the longshoremen against the Metropolitan Steamship line, which have thus far been the chief stumbling block in the way of a complete settlment of the big strike, have been greatly lessened, according to reports made at a very largely attended meeting of the Longshoremen's union last night.

That company has now offered to take back 50 of the strikers at once and others as fast as vacancies occur, the men to be paid the same wages as before the strike. There are eight weighers, however, whom the company refuses to reinstate, but the union officials are hopeful that this point may be satisfactorily adjusted.

Team Drivers' union 25, at its meeting last night, was addressed by officers of several unions, whose remarks encouraged the members to believe that the strike was really over and that a few minor issues remaining would gradually straighten themselves out.

That Governor Crane is not slackening his efforts to secure a complete reconciliation between the strikers and their employers is shown by the announcement that he has called to his assistance in this work the services of Lieutenant Governor Bates, who will act on behalf of the governor when the latter is interrupted by the pressure of official business.

Self-Constituted King Dead

Paris, March 20.—Achilles I, known as the "King of Patagonia and Araucanta," died of pneumonia, yesterday. Achilles succeeded Antoine I in 1878. The latter went from France to South America and claimed to have become King of Patagonia in 1861. Achilles, who accompanied Antoine in his travels, returned to Paris and assumed royal title on Antoine's death. Achilles surrounded himself with a court here, appointed functionaries and lavishly distributed high sounding titles and decorations.

Statesmen's Sympathy Would Help

New York, March 20.—Messrs. Wolmarans and Wessels, the Boer envoys, sailed this morning for France. Mr. Wolmarans said in the course of an interview: "We know that the people of the United States are with us heart and soul and we believe that a few words of sympathy from the United States senate and house of representatives would go a great way in helping us with the nations of the old world."

Sixty-Eight Years With Oberlin

Oberlin, O., March 20.—Ex-President Fairchild, for 33 years president of Oberlin college, died last night. He was connected with Oberlin college for 68 years and had served longer than any college official in the United States. He was born in Stockbridge, Mass., in 1817. His parents came to Ohio on the first steamer to carry passengers on Lake Erie.

More Trouble For Turkey

Vienna, March 20.—Serious troubles are anticipated in Macedona and it is said that the porte has ordered 35,000 men to be sent to Macedonia and Albania. There seems to be no doubt that the agitation is the work of Boris Sarafoff, former president of the Macedonian committee, who is using Miss Stone's ransom in his efforts.

Identified as Notorious Crook

Halifax, March 20.—Edward Carter, who shot and killed Thomas Keefe, a policeman of Everett, Mass., last month, has been identified as George Hughes, a notorious Halifax criminal who was recently released from Dorchester penitentiary. He has served terms in prison for arson, burglary and shooting with intent to kill.

Devaux to Be Renominated

Washington, March 20.—The president has decided to give another nomination to J. H. Devaux, the colored collector of customs at Savannah, Ga. A fight was made on Devaux by the "lily white" Republicans of Georgia. Devaux had no opposition from the white Democrats of Savannah.

France Feels Relieved

London, March 20.—In a dispatch from Cannes, the correspondent of The Daily Mail says he thinks the French government is greatly relieved that King Edward's visit to France has been cancelled, as Boer agents in France were busy organizing demonstrations against his majesty.

Bribery Trials Begun

St. Louis, March 20.—The case against J. N. Murrell, member of the house of delegates, for bribery, was called in court yesterday. The defendant did not respond. The case against Emil Meysenburg, former member of the council, also indicted for bribery, was called, and his trial was begun.

Rhodes Slightly Stronger

Cape Town, March 20.—A bulletin issued early this morning said that Cecil Rhodes had taken nourishment, that he was slightly stronger and that at that time he was sleeping.

NEW MEASURE FRAMED

Cuban Reciprocity Bill Introduced In House

PRESIDENT HAS AUTHORITY

To Negotiate an Agreement Granting Twenty Percent Concessions on All Goods—Limit to Treaty's Duration—Opponents May Fight It

Washington, March 20.—Chairman Payne of the ways and means committee yesterday introduced a bill entitled "To provide for reciprocal trade relations with Cuba" which authorizes the president, after the establishment of an independent government in Cuba, to negotiate for the arrangement of a commercial agreement in which reciprocal and equivalent concessions may be secured in favor of the products and manufactures of the United States by rates of duty which shall be less by an amount equivalent to at least 20 percent ad valorem upon such products and manufactures than the rates imposed upon the like articles when imported into Cuba from the most favored of other countries, and shall not be greater than the rates imposed by the United States upon the like articles imported from Cuba. Whenever the government of Cuba enacts the necessary immigration and exclusion laws and enters into the commercial agreement with the United States the president is authorized to proclaim the facts; and thereafter, until the first day of December, 1903, the imposition of the duties now imposed by law on all articles imported from Cuba, the products thereof into the United States shall be suspended and in lieu thereof shall be levied, collected and paid upon all such articles imported from Cuba 80 percent of the rate of duty now levied on like articles imported from foreign countries. The president shall have power, whenever he may be satisfied that the laws or agreement mentioned in the act are not being fully executed by the government of Cuba, to notify the government. Thereafter there shall be levied, collected and paid upon all articles imported from Cuba the full rate of duty provided by law upon articles imported from foreign countries.

The "steering committee" of the element which has opposed the ways and means committee reciprocity plan, met yesterday at the call of Representative Tawney of Minnesota, and, with several other leaders in the movement, canvassed the situation carefully. Individually, most of those present expressed a desire to carry the contest to the floor of the house. It was considered desirable, however, to take no action until all of those who voted in conference against reciprocity were called into conference. This meeting will be held later in the week. Beyond this decision no action was taken.

Provisional Government First

Washington, March 20.—Although the details of the program for the acquisition of the Danish West Indian islands have not been perfected, the discussion of the subject by the cabinet has indicated a purpose on the part of the president to erect a provisional government in the islands at the outset. A scheme for a permanent government will be submitted to congress and if this is favorably acted upon a permanent government will be installed before the end of the fiscal year.

In Congress

Washington, March 20.—During the entire session of the senate yesterday the bill providing for the protection of the President of the United States was under consideration. Messrs. Hoar, Teller and Bailey spoke on the subject.

The house made fair progress with the river and harbor bill. After the close of general debate, 27 of the 110 pages of the bill were disposed of. The general debate was featureless.

To Force Sympathy For Boers

Washington, March 20.—The Democratic members of the house, at a caucus last night, unanimously adopted resolutions declaring that congress should express the sympathy of the American people for the struggling Boer republics and pledging themselves to use their utmost endeavors to "force" the committees to report resolutions expressive of such sympathy that congress might have an opportunity to act.

Aldrich Opposes French Treaty

Washington, March 20.—The senate committee on foreign relations yesterday listened to an argument by Senator Aldrich, in opposition to the ratification of the French reciprocity treaty. He said that, in his opinion, it was a pernicious agreement and calculated to work great injury.

McKinley's Doctors Send In Bills

Washington, March 20.—The bills of the physicians who attended the late President McKinley have been received here and will be transmitted to congress at an early day. From good authority the information is obtained that they are in nowise excessive.

Storer to Return to Spain

Washington, March 20.—Bellamy Storer, minister to Spain, yesterday paid his respects to Secretary Hay. The minister will soon leave for his home in Ohio, going thence to California. He expects to return to his post at Madrid within 90 days.

One Feudist Less

Knoxville, March 20.—Thomas C. Howard, a policeman, was shot and killed yesterday by Josh R. Jones and Moultrie Jones. Six bullets entered his body. The shooting was the result of a feud in which five lives have been lost.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The hero of the hour is Governor Crane. The breaking of the great strike in Boston which threatened to cut short Boston's food and fuel supplies is due solely to Governor Crane. And yet he promised only his best efforts to secure certain advantages which the strikers wanted. But so great is public confidence in him, so well known are his direct methods, and so successful is he in his undertakings, that the strikers took his word for it and went back to work. It was a great triumph for Governor Crane.—Concord N H. Monitor.

☞ Minnesota's direct nominations law never had the unanimous assent of the people of that state, so that before the law has had a fair chance for operation a special session of the legislature with practically no opposition has exempted municipal and school officers in cities of 10,000 population or less from the workings of the statute. Precisely what the grounds of dislike to to the law are we do not know, but it appears that the representatives from the rural districts are unanimous in entertaining that dislike. What they say is that the law is not suitable to the smaller cities and towns, an objection which is capable of wide variations of interpretation. Possibly the legislature went too fast and too far at the beginning. There is some danger in that—a danger which the legislature of Massachusetts should think of when it takes up the subject.—New Bedford Standard.

Prizes for Winners.

On Wednesday evening, at the regular meeting of Clan McGregor Bicycle club, the winners of the whist tournament held during the winter months were presented with their prizes. John Gauld won first prize with a total of 492 points for the series of twelve nights. David Drummond was second with a total of 423 and Mr. Harley Smith was presented with the consolation prize. After the presentation the members were served with a collation which was heartily enjoyed.

To Jail for Assault.

Shortly after 10 o'clock Wednesday night Ellen Fitzgerald, who resides on the corner of Centre and West streets, ran down Copeland street shouting for help. Her face and clothing were covered with blood, and her face badly bruised. To Officer McCarty she said that her husband, Andrew Fitzgerald, had come home drunk and beat her. The officer placed Fitzgerald under arrest and in court he was fined $15 assault and put under $300 bonds to keep the peace for three months. As he could not get bonds he went to jail.

TODAY'S COURT.

Andrew Fitzgerald was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. He was fined $15 and was put under $300 bonds to keep the peace for thirty days.

Walter Costello was fined $3 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Jeremiah Delong was fined $2 for trespass at Weymouth.

John Doe was sent to the State farm at Bridgewater for being a tramp at Weymouth.

THE NEW CAR BARN

Will Have Accommodations for Fifty Cars.

Also Well Appointed Offices

And a Large Room for Conductors and Motormen.

The new car barn of the Old Colony street railway to be erected on Hancock street just south of Merrymount park and upon which work has already been commenced, will when completed be a modern building in every way, and will not be an unsightly building as many supposed it would be.

The building will be of wood, one story high and have a frontage on Hancock street of 230 feet. That part of the building on the street will be occupied by the offices of the company and and rooms for the motormen and conductors.

The offices will be located on the southerly end in what might be called a wing or L 23 feet wide. This will contain three private offices and a main receiving room. Next to this is the men's room which is 100 feet long and fifteen feet wide. This will contain 67 lockers, tables and other conveniences.

The balance of the street front will be used as a carpenter's shop and stock room. The car barn proper is directly back of these offices and attached to it. The dimensions of the car barn are 171 feet long and 135 feet wide. It will be in two sections with a brick fire wall between them.

Each section will contain five tracks, making ten in all, and will accommodate fifty cars of the average size. In the first section or that nearest the street there will be a machine shop, repair pits and a wash stand. The second section although adjoining and a part of the main building will be three feet lower. This is because of the lay of the land. In the basement of this section will be the heating apparatus. The offices will be heated by steam and the car barn by hot air.

Directly back of the executive offices will be an elaborate track lay out similar in nature to that in the South Terminal yard, Boston, for here are the switches by which the cars entering from the street can be shunted into any track desired, this will do away with travelling table used in most car barns to move cars from one track to another, and is the modern method of constructing car barn layouts.

This in case of a fire would enable cars to be readily moved from the building, whereas if the travelling table was used so much time would be used in shifting that it would be impossible to get but a portion of the cars out. An illustration of this was shown at the fire some time ago in the present car barn in City Square, when a number of cars were burned owing to the inability of getting them onto the track leading to the street.

From the street a curved track from the north and a curved track from the south merge into one track near the sidewalk, so that it is crossed by but one track, all the switching being done in the yard back of the executive offices.

It is expected that the company will be able to use the car barn by the first of July. When completed all of the offices of the company will be removed to the new building and the present buildings in City Square will be abandoned.

The architect of the building is E. H. Kilfield, and the contractor is George Howard of Brockton.

62 YEARS MARRIED.

Major and Mrs. Henry A. Snow Celebrate Anniversary.

While Quincy boasts of several golden wedding couples, the honors for long married life probably belongs to Maj. and Mrs. Henry A. Snow, who reside with their son, Mr. William H. Snow of Faxon road, Atlantic. They were married in Boston March 19, 1840, by Rev. Chandler Robbins, pastor of the Second Unitarian church, Mrs. Snow's maiden name being Sarah A. Keith. Mr. Snow is in his 85th year, having been born in Boston, Aug. 26, 1817, while Mrs. Snow is a few years his junior.

The 62d anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Snow was observed Wednesday evening, when guests were present from Boston, Waltham, Everett, Revere and elsewhere, including a delegation of the Boston Fusilier Veteran Association. They were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. William H. Snow, while the ushers were L. W. Coler, H. C. Ryerson, L. F. Johnson and Harold H. Snow. The house was prettily decorated with palms and ferns, and festoons of red white and blue.

Rev. J. H. Whitaker of the Atlantic Memorial church, presented the aged couple on behalf of relatives and friends a comfortable easy chair and other gifts. Miss Pauline Fontarive contributed vocal selections and Mr. Allen P. Hunter piano solos during the evening.

Mr. Snow's military life began in 1841 in the M. V. M. He enlisted in the Civil war at the outbreak and was mustered in as captain of Co. G, but was soon discharged for physical disability. In 1870 he again enlisted in militia and was captain of the Fusiliers. In 1884 he joined the Fusilier Veteran Association and was for ten years its commander.

Mr. Snow entered the employ of a wholesale house at the age of 13, later he was a bookkeeper and partner. Then agent and treasurer of a bleachery in Somerville, and later in the same business for himself in Danvers. Since 1870 he has been associated with the Bradstreet Mercantile agency. While in Somerville he was elected on the board of Selectmen.

Maj. and Mrs. Snow have resided but a short time with their son at Quincy, having previously lived at Waltham for 20 years.

THE FINLANDERS.

To the Editor of the Daily Ledger:

A misleading paragraph in your issue of yesterday relative to the Finlanders of this city gives, doubtless unintentionally on your part, a very erroneous impression as to the characteristics of our citizens of that nationality.

From a personal experience of several years I am glad to testify to the intelligence, industry and thrift of the Finlanders. The schools of their country compare favorably with our own, so that they generally come to this country fully as well educated as our native farming and industrial population.

Their artisans are quite the peers of our own craftsmen, and their workmen in other lines of industry are the equal of other nationalities, and in many cases superior to them.

The pretty church on Buckley street, West Quincy, recently built by the Finnish Congregationalists, is a standing example of the energy of this people, who have come to this country from Finland in order to better their condition and escape Russian oppression.

I feel entirely safe in saying that the Finlanders of Quincy, numbering, with their families, I believe, about 500 people, are as orderly and law-abiding as any similar number of any other nationality represented here.

COAL MOVING.

The Quincy Merchants Are Making Some, Deliveries.

The fourth day of the coal strike opened this morning with a few changes. The dealers have now five or six teams at work. Two are carting soft coal from Braintree to the Fore River Engine Co.

Messers. Patch have two single teams at work, one being driven by Alex Pitts, the driver who left work last Monday and joined the union but has evidently repented of his action and returned to work.

Frank Mitchell, the collector for J. F. Sheppard & Sons, is driving a single team during the emergency.

A driver of a double team met with harsh treatment at the shipyard on Wednesday, and discharges are reported because thereof.

Neponset dealers meanwhile are carting considerable coal into Quincy.

DR. TODD THANKED

For Efforts to Bring About a Settlement.

$100,000 Worth of Work Lost.

The Labor Trouble in Granite Industry Uncalled For.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

It is with great pleasure that I read the open letter of Dr. Todd in your issue of Tuesday. I heartily second his suggestion to get this unfortunate, and I might say uncalled for, labor trouble or strike settled. I term it uncalled for, because I believe if the quarrymen had asked for more wages (and anyone of them knows that he has more need of that than shorter hours for the good of his family) they could have had it without any strike.

But it is not my object to discuss the question, but to lend a word in the interest of a speedy settlement. Let the committees get together again and discuss the question, and if they cannot agree, let them vote to leave it to arbitration and resume work at once, for Mr. Editor, the granite industry is in a critical condition in Quincy.

I think that it is speaking well within the bounds of truth, to say that $100,000 worth of orders have gone from Quincy to other centres, because the Quincy manufacturers could not promise them before Memorial Day. So our men have lost that much work, our merchants have lost their share, and it has affected one-half of the citizens of Quincy directly or indirectly.

The Quincy manufacturer is handicapped in many ways, the stock is harder to quarry than any other, so those that own the quarries have raised the price of the rough stock more than double within a year. The seller of Quincy granite has these facts to face, and they are very stubborn ones too. So it is an uphill fight to sell a large Quincy granite monument at present against Barre or Concord or the Maine granites, which split easier and being softer cut so much faster. Handled by dealers throughout the country that have no interest in our output, the price is a powerful weapon against us. But the continuous labor troubles are worse.

So it should be the earnest endeavor of every well wisher of our city to bring this unpleasantness to a speedy settlement. It is an undisputed fact, Mr. Editor, that for twenty-five years every labor trouble in our city has been settled by a compromise after a long battle.

Now, why in the name of reason, cannot this compromise be made at the start before the men and their families have been deprived of the wages and run into debt, that mortgages every cent for a year to pay what they have run behind while on strike, and before the employer loses his profit to that extent of business lost?

It must be admitted that the employer stands a better chance to reimburse himself than the workman.

Surely, an honest man can be found for an arbitrator, one free from politics and the granite business. But above all things, gentlemen, get together for you can never settle this dispute, or any other, by standing off and making faces at each other. Neither business nor war is settled in any such positions.

So, Mr. Editor, I thank Dr. Todd for his manly and courageous letter, for it is not always easy for men of the best intentions to interfere between two parties in a fight, and the one that attempts it often gets the blow of both for his reward, but I hope that it will not be so with Dr. Todd.

In the interest of all the parties and the city in general I say get together gentlemen, and settle it yourselves if you can, and if not leave it to an arbitration board.

Yours sincereiy,
J. L. Miller.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Three weeks from today the Mechanic Art High school nine will be here to play the Quincy High boys.

An original and illustrated story will appear in the Saturday eight-page Ledger. It is a St. Patrick's day story of three columns.

There will be a Lenton devotional service at the Universalist church, Friday evening at 7.30. Sermon, "Star led to Calvary." J. Edward Greene will sing.

The sub-station of the Quincy post office, which has been located in the store of L. M. Pratt & Co. on School street, will be removed to the corner of Franklin and Water street, in the store of Mrs. Rizzi.

Miss Clara B. Cobb of Elm street entertained friends at whist Wednesday evening. Prizes for the best scores were awarded to Mrs. Emma Stoddard, Mrs. Clara Hayden, Mrs. Marjorie Sprague and George Dexheimer.

It is said that the man who attempted to mail a letter in the new police signal box at the corner of Franklin and Water streets Wednesday morning felt like swearing. Wonder if he has found out what kind of a box it is?

The Edward Hewitson Associates, who are to give the concert in aid of the Woman's Alliance of the First Church, are made up of well known young men residing in Wollaston and Quincy. They have been trained by Mr. H. Y. Eollett and they present a most admirable program.

The third dancing party of a series given by Miss Abbie Gay Barns, Miss Elizabeth Francis Coffin and Miss Grace Ethel Batson was held Wednesday evening in Faxon hall. Poole'so rchestra of Boston, under the direction of Louis S. Poole, rendered the most pleasing and inspiring music. Young people from Cohasset, Hingham, Weymouth, Milton, Dorchester, Newton and Quincy honored the party by their presence. The matrons were Mrs. Harry Earle Winslow, Mrs. Maynard C. King and Mrs. Charles Weeks.

Pay of Teamsters.

Editors of Daily Ledger:

I saw in Tuesday's edition that some writer labors under the opinion that the employes of the coal firms have taken a wrong course to secure an increase in pay. Let me inform the public that one firm has been eighteen years thinking about an increase, and at the eleventh hour states it was about to increase pay, while the other, not long ago, told an all-round man, when he asked for more pay, that he could quit if he did not want to work for price offered. Speaking of the kindness of the firms to employes in giving turkeys at Christmas, that is another mistake; we receive one on Thanksgiving. But the deduction of wages on stormy days makes up for that. I believe that the firm of A. J. Richards & Sons give turkeys and want their men to belong to a union and recognize them as such.

A NEW MARKET.

L. M. Pratt & Son Open Annex to Boston Branch Grocery.

L. M. Pratt & Son have found the Durgin & Merrill block such a desirable location for business that they will make it their main store. On Wednesday the new addition was opened, and the event was celebrated with a banquet to all the employes of the company. After the store was closed at 6 P. M. a table was spread in the grocery and at 8 o'clock twenty-four were seated around the festive board enjoying a good supper served by D. Estabrook. The post prandial exercises were brief, but showed good feeling between the firm and employes.

The market is located to the right of the main store or more correctly speaking in a new building erected in the rear of Pettengill's jewelry store. It is a large store by itself, fitted with blocks, scales, etc. There is also a large shelving space which will hold canned goods. At the westerly end is the ice chest so arranged that it is most convenient. Adjoining the market another large room has been built which will be used as a delivery room. Here the drivers of the order wagons will have their goods put up and placed in baskets and boxes so that they can be readily loaded into the delivery wagons which back up to the rear door. By this method the confusion of clerks running about putting up goods in the main sales room is avoided. There is also a large elevator in the delivery room running from the bakery below.

The offices and cashier are on a raised floor at the rear end of the store, connected with the different counters by a cash carrier system. Taken altogether the store is now up to date in every way.

DEMAND AT BARRE.

Quarrymen Want 8 Hours on April 10.

Time and a Half for Overtime.

Quarry Owners Said to be Against It.

A dispatch from Barre, Vt., to the Globe says: The Barre quarrymen's union, with between 800 and 900 members, has made a demand through its officers on the quarrymen's association for an eight hour day with nine hours' pay and time and a half for all overtime, the new work day to begin April 10.

The demand was the carrying out of a resolution adopted at the quarrymen's meeting in Graniteville, Monday evening. The quarrymen's union has been taking in all the members it could the past few months and now has a membership of nearly 900.

This demand is the same as the Quincy quarrymen have made, and in support of which they are now out on a strike.

The quarrymen's association will meet Friday evening to consider the demand. One of the largest quarry owners on the hill said today they could not grant it.

Monday Evening Club.

It was a large and attentive audience that at the last meeting of the Atlantic Monday Evening Club were edified and instructed by Rev. William S. Jones of Randolph, in a paper given by him on "Emerson and the Transcendental Movement."

His description of the great religious movement in New England, the revolt against Calvinism and the establishment of liberalism, brought about in a measure by the great wave of Kant philosophy which swept from Germany to England where its distinguished interpreter was Carlyle, and from England to America, where its great teacher was the seer of Concord, was exceedingly interesting, as well as his description of Emerson's character and the charming circle of brilliant thinkers, who were or became imbued with the same lofty, ennobling and spiritual ideas of universal and personal communion with God without mediation, recognizing in everything created a part of The Creator even to the leaf of the tree and the water of the gurgling brook, thereby breaking away from the old tradition.

Emerson's voluntary relinquishment of his parish and its duties, his success in the lecture field and his literary work, were parts of his theme interspersed with anecdotes of some of the unpractical individuals connected with the Transcendental Movement, "Fruit Lands," and the "Brook Farm" experiments, and the result of this Movement as it today becomes observed in what might be termed the "New Transcendentalism.

Mrs. Sanford Small read a paper "A Review of Helen's Babies," which was bright, funny and interesting and well calculated to renew one's interest in the diminutive little characters. The club would apparently never tire of Miss Thomas's violin playing and were gratified with her several selections which she played accompanied by Miss Eugenia Hatch of Wollaston. She responded beside to two encores.

Miss Bessie Drew, also a favorite with the club, entertained with two solos, "Sunset" by Dudley Buck and "Swallows" by Cowen and responded to encores. The marked improvement in the strength of the tones of her voice under her recent instruction was worthy the compliments she received from the members of the club. The committee for the evening were Mrs. Charles Safford, Miss Bessie Drew and Mr. George A. Richards. Mr. Richards announced the program.

CHORAL UNION.

A Musical Treat at Wollaston Baptist Church.

The first concert of the Wollaston Choral Union was given at the Baptist church, Wollaston, Wednesday evening. Much might be said in praise of the work of chorus and soloists. The forum sang with vitality and force that must reflect great credit on the able director, Mr. Charles Stevens, and it was gratifying to report a large and appreciative audience. The society had the assistance of Mr. Henry Stevens and Wollaston Glee club, composed of Messrs. Bullock, Sargent, Howard and Hahn.

Mr. Stevens led the singers and the chorus with unusual care. There was much good singing for all the soloists were at their best as well as the Ladies Chorus. Mrs. Rowe did herself great credit in the rendering of her solos. Especially fine was her quality of tone. Mr. Burke delighted all with his bass solos and responded to an encore with "Gypsy John." The tenor solos of Mr. H. A. Stevens were given with expression and feeling. Mrs. Collyers' alto solo was sung with great sweetness.

Mrs. Saxe also gave pleasure in a soprano solo. The soprano and alto duet by Mrs. Keyes and Mrs. Blaisdell was given with unusual sweetness. The director, Mr. Charles Stevens, rendered a solo with fine effect and much feeling. His voice showed evidence of superior culture.

The instrumental interlude by Mrs. Smith elicited much applause as well as the duet for piano and organ by Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Leavitt. Miss Olney and Mrs. Smith's accompaniments were a fine setting to the Choral Union and soloists.

Miss Olney, Mrs. Smith and Mr. Stevens were the recipients of bouquets of pinks by the Choral Union in consideration of the fine service they have given. Altogether the whole concert was satisfactory and the second concert by the society will be looked forward to with still greater interest.

WHITE LOT EGG ROLLING

President's Sons to Join In Easter Sport at Washington.

ROOSEVELTS GOOD AT THE GAME.

White House Youngsters Are Winning a Store of Eggs From Other Lads at the Capital—All Have "Keet" Eggs, Which Are Good In Game of "Picking."

The Easter Monday egg rolling at the white lot back of the White House in Washington this year will be unique in the history of this sport, says the New York World. All the Roosevelt youngsters and their companions will participate. Such an attraction at this great outdoor festival has not been known since the practice began many years ago.

In itself this is a wonderful event. All the children of the city crowd the beautiful lawns, rolling eggs down the slopes and then tumbling after them. Boys in the prettiest and brightest clothes mingle with young newsboys and little street gamins. Girls with nurses and without them help to swell the throng. All Washington comes to look on. The Marine band plays. Thousands of children make it a merry day, and there will be none gayer this year than Kermit, Archibald and Quentin Roosevelt, who are collecting a store of eggs for the occasion.

These boys are now very industrious at a pastime peculiar to Washington and which is preliminary to the egg rolling. Here the boys all "pick eggs." The last two or three weeks of Lent are devoted to this sport. The method is for a boy to select an egg with a good hard shell. This is determined by tapping the egg against the front teeth, by which method and some peculiar knack a boy can tell a hard shelled egg from a weak one. Armed with his egg, the youngster sallies forth.

"Say, will you pick?" he calls when a likely youngster is met.

After all the preliminaries are settled one boy takes his egg, covered in both hands so that only a small portion of the end protrudes between a finger and thumb. He is careful to guard it so that the other cannot possibly strike except against the extreme tip of his egg. The other then taps his egg against it until the point of one is broken. The same method is used with the other end, and when one egg is cracked at both ends its owner loses it. The egg is still in good condition to be boiled hard preparatory to being rolled down the lawns of the White House on Easter Monday.

The boys resort to many ruses, the best of which is to get hold of a guinea hen's egg. The boys call these "keet" eggs. No hen's egg ever laid can break a keet egg. All the Roosevelt youngsters have keet eggs, and their store of Easter spoils grows day by day. The regular Washington youngster would not give 2 cents a dozen for eggs bought in a store. He must win them if he would be entirely happy on Easter Monday when he rolls them at the White House.

Baby McKee used to be the great attraction on this day, and before him the Hayes children took part in the fun. The young Garfields only passed one Easter in the White House. President Cleveland never approved of his children mixing with the throng, but the young Roosevelts are not hampered by any misgivings on their father's part. On Easter Monday the whole squad of these boys and their chums will add life and zest to the proceedings. They have been promised full liberty.

It is not unlikely that Miss Ethel may be permitted to join in the merriment for a time.

SAW THE POINT.

How Speaker Henderson Won a Vote For Cuban Relief.

This illustrates the way Speaker Henderson won over beet sugar insurgents to the support of the tariff reduction, says the New York World: He sent for a certain representative.

"John," he said, "why are you interested in this beet sugar business?"

"Because," replied John, "one of my most powerful constituents owns a lot of stock in a beet sugar factory out west. I have got to be for it."

"Ah," replied the speaker. "I see. By the way, you are wanting a river improvement this year for your district, as I understand it."

"Yes, sir."

"And how many of your constituents are in favor of that improvement?"

"Why, all of them, Mr. Speaker. Every one of them."

"Well, John," and the speaker was very deliberate, "you just think over the proposition whether you would rather stay with beet sugar and please one constituent or get your river improvement and please all of your constituents."

Inasmuch as the speaker can control legislation, John saw the point very clearly and left off being an insurgent at that moment.

Minutes From Christ's Birth to April 29.

The ingenious calculation has been made by Professor Schubert of Hamburg that at 10:40 a. m. on April 29 next exactly a milliard (1,000,000,000) of minutes will have elapsed since the birth of Christ.—Koelnische Zeitung.

Unique School Strike.

The pupils in the West Hazleton (Pa.) Grammar school went on a strike the other morning because of the failure of their teacher, John Madden, to read a passage from the Bible after the school had been opened.

THE SENIORS' PLAY.

Place aux Dames and The Mouse Trap Presented at High.

A large number of the pupils of the High school returned last evening to witness the two plays given under the auspices of the class of 1902. The settings and the acting were excellent. All who had parts deserve great credit for the careful, thoughtful preparation which made the evening a success. It was one of the most enjoyable of the social evenings which have been held at the school during the year. One of the features of the evening was the singing of the male quartet, Messrs. Brown, Barbour, Hayward and Wright.

The first play was entitled "Place aux Dames, or the ladies speak at last," the scene being a reception room in a sanatorium of a famous hydropathic cure in the latter part of nineteenth century, with this cast:

Juliet	Eleanor M. Nelson.
Portia	Corinne L. Hayward.
Lady Macbeth	Mary W. Patterson.
Ophelia	Sara Litch.

"The Mouse Trap" by William Dean Howells, was the other play with the following cast:

Mrs. Agnes Roberts	Mary H. Ferguson.
Mrs. Miller	Mildred H. Tavender.
Mrs. Curwen	Mary Hunt.
Mrs. Lou Bemis	Florence S. Greer.
Jane	Margaret Sibley.
Mrs. Amy Somers	Edna L. Smith.
Mr. Willis Campbell	Harris Barbour.

RUSSIA AND FRANCE

Reserve the Right to Defend Certain Interests In the Far East

St. Petersburg, March 20.—The Official Messenger prints the text of a Russo-French conjoint declaration, sent March 16 to the Austrian, Belgian, British, American, Spanish, German, Italian, Dutch, Chinese and Japanese governments. The declaration is as follows:

"The allied Russo-French governments are wholly pleased to discern that the Anglo-Japanese convention supports the essential principle which, according to the reiterated statement of France and Russia, constituted and still constitutes the foundation of their policy. Both governments believe that the support of these principles is also a guarantee of their interests in the far east. They are compelled, however, not to lose from view the possibly inimical action of other powers, or a repetition of disorders in China, possibly impairing China's integrity and free development to the detriment of their reciprocal interests. They therefore reserve to themselves the right to take measures to defend these interests."

The prefatory remarks say that Russia desires the maintenance of the status quo and the attainment of complete tranquility in the far east.

Opposition to Sale of Islands

Copenhagen, March 20.—The lansthing (upper house) in executive session yesterday voted to ratify the treaty providing for the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States. The treaty's opponents yesterday held a meeting which was largely attended. Fresh proposals were submitted to start a direct Danish West Indies line of steamers and to establish large sugar plantations. The meeting subscribed 3,500,000 crowns for these enterprises.

Going After Gaynor and Green

Washington, March 20.—The legal officers who have been examining the question presented by the flight of Gaynor and Green from Savannah to Canada have practically reached the conclusion that they can be reached under the extradition treaty. A prolonged struggle in the Canadian courts is expected before the fugitives can be secured.

Spanish Statesmen's Plans

Madrid, March 20.—The program of the new cabinet includes the formation of a labor department, the reform and eventual abolition of octroi taxes, the reorganization and strengthening of the Spanish fleet, the reduction of the number of bishops from 63 to 49 and the strengthening of the state against the encroachment of the church.

McCarren and Hill In Harmony

Albany, March 20.—Senator McCarren, who has been mentioned as a candidate for chairman of the Democratic state committee, held a long conference with former Senator Hill yesterday. They allowed it to be understood that they are making plans for the fall campaign and that they would work in harmony.

Tried to Influence Juror

Boston, March 20.—Nathan Klarfield has gone to jail for 20 days under a sentence imposed by Judge Aiken yesterday for contempt of court. Klarfield was found to have approached Myer Butersky, a juror, and to have made statements which the court found were intended by him to influence the action of Butersky as a juror.

During Tuesday night a very severe storm moved up the Atlantic ocean apparently near and to the westward of the island of Bermuda. Its centre is probably not far from the south New England coast. It has caused a decided fall in the pressure along the Atlantic coast and severe north to northwest gales from Hatteras to Eastport. There were rains and snows in New England. It will clear in this district today. On the coast high north winds will diminish slowly. Storm warnings are displayed from Wilmington to Eastport.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER XII.

THE next day, the 16th of August, the loud tongued trumpets sounded through the camp. The Tartar soldiers sprang at once to arms.

Ivan Ogareff, after having quitted Zabedeiro, arrived, accompanied by a numerous staff of Tartar officers. His face was more serious than usual, and his contracted outlines indicated a great anger, which was only waiting for some object on which to hurl itself.

Michael Strogoff, lost in a group of prisoners, saw this man pass by. He had a presentiment that a great calamity was about to happen, for Ivan Ogareff now knew that Marfa Strogoff was the mother of Michael Strogoff, captain in the corps of the couriers of the czar.

Ivan Ogareff arrived at the center of the camp, dismounted from his horse and the horsemen of his escort formed a large circle around him.

At that moment Sangarre approached and said:

"I have nothing new of which to inform you, Ivan."

Ivan Ogareff answered only in giving a short command to one of his officers. Immediately the ranks of the prisoners were traversed in a brutal manner by the soldiers. These unfortunate ones, urged on with blows and pushed with the wood of the lances, quickly arranged themselves along the outer edge of the camp. Four lines of infantry and cavalry drawn up at the back rendered all escape impossible.

Order for silence was at once given and at a sign from Ivan Ogareff Sangarre directed her steps toward the group in the middle of which was Marfa Strogoff.

The old Siberian saw her coming. She understood what was about to happen. A disdainful smile played on her lips. Then, turning to Nadia, she said to her in a low voice:

"You do not know me any longer, my daughter. Whatever happens and however trying may be this examination, not a word, not a gesture. It is for him, not for me, they search."

At this moment Sangarre, after having looked around for an instant, placed her hand upon the shoulder of the old Siberian.

"What do you wish from me?" said Marfa Strogoff.

"Come," answered Sangarre.

Michael Strogoff kept his eyelashes half closed in order that the brightness of his eyes should not betray him.

"Are you indeed Marfa Strogoff?" demanded Ivan Ogareff.

"Yes," answered the old Siberian, with calmness.

"Have you changed your mind as regards the statement you made to me when, three days ago, I interrogated you at Omsk?"

"No."

"So you are ignorant of the fact that your son, Michael Strogoff, courier of the czar, has passed through Omsk?"

"I am ignorant of it."

"And that the man that you believed to have recognized as your son at the posthouse was not he—was not your son?"

"He was not my son."

"And have you not seen him since among the prisoners?"

"No."

"And if he were shown to you would you recognize him?"

"No."

At this answer, which showed an inflexible determination to avow nothing, a murmur of approbation arose from the crowd.

Ivan Ogareff could not restrain a menacing gesture.

"Listen," said he to Marfa Strogoff. "Your son is here, and you go at once to point him out."

"No."

"All these men, taken at Omsk and at Kalyvan, are going to defile before your eyes, and if you do not point out Michael Strogoff you shall receive as many blows of the knout as there shall be men who have passed before you."

Ivan Ogareff had now realized that, whatever threats he might utter and to whatever tortures he might subject her, the indomitable Siberian would not speak. To discover the courier of the czar he now counted not upon her, but upon Michael Strogoff himself. He did not believe it possible that when the mother and the son should be brought into the presence of each other an irresistible impulse would not betray them. Certainly if he had only wished to gain possession of the imperial letter he could simply have given orders for all these prisoners to be searched. But Michael Strogoff might have destroyed this letter after learning its contents, and if he were not recognized and he should gain Irkutsk the plans of Ivan Ogareff would be all frustrated. Wherefore it was not only the letter which he must have from the traitor; he must have the bearer of it.

Nadia at length understood all, and she now knew who was Michael Strogoff and why he had wished to traverse, without being known, the invaded provinces of Siberia.

On the order of Ivan Ogareff the prisoners passed one by one before Marfa Strogoff, who remained immovable as a statue and whose regard expressed only the most complete indifference.

Her son was in the last ranks. When in his turn he passed before his mother, Nadia shut her eyes in order not to see him.

Michael Strogoff had remained apparently impassible, but his hands were bleeding from the pressure of the fetters.

Ivan Ogareff was conquered by the son and the mother.

Sangarre, placed near him, only said one word—"Knout!"

"Yes," cried Ivan Ogareff, "let this old jade have the knout and let the punishment continue until she die!"

A Tartar soldier, carrying that terrible instrument of torture, approached Marfa Strogoff.

The knout is composed of a certain number of leather thongs, to the ends of which are attached twisted iron wire. One can easily understand that to be condemned to receive a hundred and twenty blows from such a whip is the same thing as to be condemned to death. Marfa Strogoff knew it, but she also knew that no torture upon earth could make her speak, and she had already offered the sacrifice of her life for her son's safety.

Marfa Strogoff, having been seized by two soldiers, was thrown on her knees on the ground. Her robe, having been torn, exposed her naked back. A saber was fixed before her breast at the distance of only a few inches, and in case she should bend under the pain her breast would be pierced with the sharp point.

The Tartar raised the lash.

He was waiting.

Go on!" said Ivan Ogareff.

The whip hissed in the air, but before the blow had fallen a powerful hand had wrenched it from the hands of the Tartar.

Michael Strogoff was there! He had leaped before this horrible scene! If at the posthouse of Ichim he had restrained himself at the blow from Ivan Ogareff, here before his mother, who was about to be struck, he was not able to master himself.

Ivan Ogareff had succeeded.

"Michael Strogoff!" he cried.

Then, advancing, he said:

"Ah, was this done by the man of Ichim?"

"Himself!" said Michael Strogoff, and, raising the knout, he tore with it the face of Ivan Ogareff himself.

"Blow for blow!"

"Well given!" cried the voice of a spectator, who fortunately hid himself in the tumult.

Twenty soldiers threw themselves on Michael Strogoff, and they were about to kill him. But Ivan Ogareff, from whom a cry of pain and rage had escaped, stopped them with a motion of his hand.

"This man is reserved for the justice of the emir!"

The letter to the imperial armies was found in the breast of Michael Strogoff; who had not had time to destroy it, and it was handed over to Ivan Ogareff.

The spectator who had uttered aloud those words "well given" was no other than Alcide Jolivet. His companion and himself, having halted at the camp of Zabedeiro, were present at this scene.

Repudiated by Church Committee

Boston, March 20.—The pulpit supply committee of the Union Park church, Chicago, last night sent a message to Rev. W. T. McElveen of the Shawmut Congregational, disowning the act of a member in returning unopened a letter from McElveen. The committee said it was this member's individual act.

Murder Charge Against Dixon

Providence, March 20.—Death relieved the sufferings of Amos D. Perrin, the Burrillville citizen who was assaulted in a house in that township Sunday night. Albert Dixon, the self-confessed assailant, who is in jail, now stands charged with murder. Dixon claims that he acted in self-defense.

Gems Brought $5550 at Auction

Burlington, Vt., March 20.—An auction sale of 294 unset diamonds, seized from the person of Hierst Stavitsky by the United States authorities while Stavitzsky was en route from Montreal, was held yesterday. The gems were sold for $5500 to Stern Brothers of New York.

Firebug at Work

VALIDITY OF THE TITLE

Held by New Panama Canal Company Is Questioned

THE $40,000,000 BARGAIN

Offered by Men Who Are Alleged to Have Defrauded Frenchmen of Many Millions of Dollars—Reports of the Isthmian Commission

Washington, March 20.—Senator Morgan, from the committee on isthmian canals, yesterday presented to the senate the majority and minority reports of that committee on the question of the validity of the title of the new Panama Canal company and its right to transfer the Panama canal property to the United States for $40,000,000. The objections of the majority to the title held by that company are based largely on the relations of the canal company to the governments of France and Colombia, but the committee also discusses at length many other phases of the question. Among these is the relation of the shareholders who subscribed $260,000,000 to the old Panama company whose interests, the report holds, cannot be lightly regarded. On this point the report says:

"The spectacle of the United States congress authorizing the president, as the agent of our government, to conduct a trade with such a corporation (the new Panama Canal company) without consulting France as to the claim of independence it (the new Panama company) asserts, will be entirely new in the history of nations and its consequences cannot be lightly disregarded. Unfortunately the report of the isthmian canal commission reveals the fact that men who make this offer are chief among those who defrauded these 600,000 or 800,000 Frenchmen of $250,000,000."

Speaking further of the obligations of the new company to the old, the majority says: "If Mr. Eifell and his associates get $40,000,000 from the American people it is well that they are sheltered from the claims of these defrauded and despoiled bondholders and stockholders by the alleged despotism of French courts. They would never escape justice in American courts and would be compelled to account for every dollar of the money to the bondholders and to the stocks bearing interest, before applying any of it to the profits of their speculation."

The minority report, which was prepared by Senator Kittredge, completely upholds the title of the new Panama company, as will be seen from the following extract which constitutes its opening paragraph:

"The title of the new Panama company to its concessions and other property appears, from the facts and documents which have been laid before the sub-committee, clear and free from any complications. For a transfer of its concessions to the United States the consent of Colombia is requisite, but this consent has been given by the government of that country as fully as it can now be given. In case of the purchase of the canal by the United States, definite concessions and definite rights must be obtained by treaty between this country and Colombia, and such a treaty would necessarily involve a consent to the sale by the company of its rights and property on the isthmus to the United States. Such a treaty Colombia has shown and declared its readiness to make. On every point the right of the new Panama Canal company to transfer its property to the United States is perfectly clear. Every link in the chain of its title and every step in the course by which it became in a position to sell its property, free and clear, is plain and satisfactory.

The report then reviews the entire origin and history of the Panama Canal company and finds that the affairs of the old company were disposed of by a French court in a straightforward way when that company became insolvent, and that the court had a perfect right not only to appoint a liquidator or receiver, but to confer upon him, as was done, power "to grant or contribute to any new company all or part of the corporate assets."

The various objections to the new company's title are then considered and replied to. As a reason why the new company should desire to sell it is explained that "since the company could not raise the money to complete the canal, the only practicable course was to sell the property."

Has Gymnasium and Grill

New York, March 20.—The new twin-screw passenger steamer Moltke, on her maiden voyage from Hamburg, arrived this morning. She is one of the two new steamers built for the Hamburg-American line. The most novel features on the vessel are the gymnasium and grill room.

Kaiser Hears Prince's Story

Berlin, March 20.—Prince Henry landed at Kiel at dusk last evening and joined Princess Henry and his sons. The emperor and Prince Henry had a talk yesterday lasting several hours, and Prince Henry told the emperor his experiences from the beginning to the end of his trip.

Wolcott May Succeed Hitchcock

Washington, March 20.—The Post says that it is understood that Senator Wolcott of Colorado is being considered by the president as the possible successor of Secretary Hitchcock, who, it is understood, will soon retire from the cabinet.

TWO BARGES SANK

Rescue of Those on Board Under Very Difficult Circumstances

New London, Conn., March 20.—Buffeted by the northerly gale and incased in a shroud of ice, the Lehigh Valley railroad tugs Shawanese and Luzerne limped into this harbor with two tows of barges. Two of the barges of the Luzerne's tow, the Baltimore and Barnegat, were hardly within the comparatively calm waters of the harbor before they sank while still connected by two tow lines with the tugs. The Brilliant, another of the Luzerne's tow, was kept above the surface by the big pumps of the tugs.

There were three men on board each of the sunken barges, while Captain Douglass of the Barnegat had with him on this trip his wife and two small children. All were taken safely off the barges after reaching this harbor, but for several hours it was an even chance that the barges would plunge beneath the waters before the tugs could approach them, owing to the heavy seas.

The Luzerne and Shawanse left New York Tuesday morning, each bound for Newport, R. I., with five coal-laden barges behind them.

Had Saved Many Lives

Hull, Mass., March 20.—Captain Joshua James of the Point Allerton lifesaving station dropped dead yesterday while drilling his men. Death was due to heart failure. Captain James was in his 77th year, and was one of the best known lifesavers in the country. He was given a medal by the government for his splendid service during one winter, when with his men he saved the crews of several vessels driven ashore. He had many narrow escapes from death.

Haverhill People Feel Proud

Haverhill, Mass., March 20.—Congressman Moody was tendered a public reception in city hall last night, there being about 2000 people in attendance. The city government presented Mr. Moody with an engraved testimonial. At the close of the oratorical exercises many shook hands with Mr. Moody and wished him success during his administration of the affairs of the navy department.

Hetty Green's Husband Dead

Bellows Falls, Vt., March 20.—Edward Green, husband of Hetty Green, died at his home here yesterday. Mr. Green, who was 70 years old, had been an invalid for several years. He was a pioneer in the East India trade and made a fortune. He married Harriet H. Robinson, daughter of a New Bedford Quaker, who, dying, bequeathed millions to her.

Looking a Long Way Ahead

Amesbury, Mass., March 20.—A branch of the International Carriage and Wagon Makers' union was organized here last evening with a membership of 200. One of the objects of the local organization is to ask for a nine-hour day, and a minimum increase of 10 percent on piece work. The request will not be made before Jan. 1, 1903.

Killed Cats and Himself

Amesbury, Mass., March 20.—Charles W. Randall, a prominent G. A. R. man, aged 62, committed suicide in his house here yesterday by shooting. Randall lived alone and had of late been despondent. He chloroformed eight cats he had in the house.

Murderer's Head Yanked Off

Aberdeen, Miss., March 20.—Will Lance, a murderer, was hanged yesterday. He said the cause of his downfall was gambling and illicit whiskey making. When the drop fell Lance's head was jerked from his body.

Efforts Crowned With Success

New York, March 20.—The Sportsmen's show at Madison Square Garden closed last night. The management announced that for the first time in eight years the undertaking had been a financial success.

PATRIOTISM

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia.

The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier, and a fault finder.

A sound stomach makes for good citizenship as well as for health and happiness.

Diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are promptly and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It builds up the body with sound flesh and solid muscle.

"After I received the advice which you gave me in regard to my treatment," writes Geo. Dorner, Esq., of 1915 Pulaski Street, Baltimore, Maryland, "I used your 'Golden Medical Discovery' according to directions. After using four bottles I considered myself cured, as I have not felt any symptoms since. Had tried almost all remedies that I heard of that were good for dyspepsia, but without relief. Finally, I became discouraged, and wrote to you for advice, with the above result."

The dealer who offers a substitute for the "Discovery" is only seeking to make the little more profit realized on the sale of less meritorious preparations.

Mortgagee's Sale.

BY Virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Charles McKenzie of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to John Reed of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth, dated March 1, A. D. 1899, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, book 837, page 87, will be sold at public auction upon the premises in said Quincy, (for breach of condition contained in said mortgage deed and for the purpose of foreclosing the same) on SATURDAY, the 29th day of March, 1902, at 9.15 o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, to wit:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in said Quincy, and being lot No. 44 on a plan of house lots on Cranch Hill, by H. T. Whitman, Surveyor, dated January 20, 1897, and recorded with Norfolk Plans, libro 777, page 538, said lot is bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at a point on the northerly side of Cranch street, at the southeasterly corner of lot No. 45 on said plan and thence running in an easterly direction along said Cranch street, fifty (50) feet to a stake; thence running in a curved line to a stake on private street, fifteen and seventy-one one hundredths (15.71-100) feet to a stake; thence turning and running in a northeasterly direction along said private street, ninety (90) feet to a stake; thence turning and running in a northwesterly direction along lot No. 25 on said plan sixty (60) feet to a stake; thence turning and running in a southwesterly direction along lot No. 45 on said plan one hundred (100) feet to the point of beginning; containing five thousand nine hundred seventy-eight (5,978) square feet of land.

Said estate will be sold subject to any unpaid taxes.

$200 will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser at the time and place of sale.

MRS FRENCH IS DEAD

Achieved Notoriety by Bringing Lawsuits

WIDOW OF WEALTHY MAN

Who Lived Alone In Fashionable District of Boston and Had Figured In Courts In Various Parts of the Country—Death Came as Result of Fall

Boston, March 21.—Mrs. Julia B. French, wealthy, eccentric, and famous throughout the country because of her many and varied lawsuits, was found dead in her Back Bay residence, 10 Newbury street, yesterday afternoon. Her body, badly disfigured, lay on top of the elevator, which was on the basement floor, and had evidently been there three or four days.

There is no suspicion of foul play, as Medical Examiner Draper, after making an examination of the body, reported death due to an accident.

Mrs. French, who was 70 years old, and lived alone, apparently fell from the third floor in the elevator well to the elevator canopy. A patrolman reported yesterday his suspicion that something was wrong in the house from the fact that a light in the third floor front room had burned continuously for three days. A message was sent to Wilfred A. French, the son, who immediately referred the matter to Mrs. French's lawyer, for mother and son had not been on good terms through lawsuits. The result was that two men were sent to the house to force an entrance, which was done.

They found the elevator door wide open and an upturned white enamelled chair, with a cushion seat, was almost directly in front of the door. On the floor was a small wrench. The body of Mrs. French was then seen and removed. The conditions suggest that Mrs. French was trying to tighten a loose nut on the elevator well door, standing on the chair at the time. A misstep threw her headlong into the well.

The condition of the body indicates that she must have died about Monday. Mrs. French did not engage servants or maids. She preferred to be alone in her house. The lower apartments, such as the parlors, were never used, and the curtains or draperies were drawn. Their condition showed plainly that the eccentric woman was not particular about their appearance.

Mrs. French is said to have had more lawsuits brought against her, and had appeared as plaintiff more times than any other person brought to public notice. The litigation territory extended from the Atlantic coast to the Rocky mountains.

In fact she had such a tendency to going to law that in November, 1900, Dr. Bloomer, superintendent of the Butler insane asylum at Providence, testified as an expert that Mrs. French was afflicted with a mania for bringing lawsuits.

This testimony was based on the actual court record which she was known to have established, coupled with knowledge obtained as to her eccentric habits and mode of life.

Mrs. French was twice married. Her first husband was Augist W. Frenzel, from whom she was divorced on the ground of desertion on Sept. 25, 1861. She married Benjamin French on Nov. 25, 1862.

At the time of his death he was the head of a firm dealing in photograph materials here. His will made her heir in full, his son, Wilfred, being cut off with $5. The estate was worth over $500,000, and the suit was to prevent her acting as executrix of it. At the instance of her son Mrs. French was placed under the temporary guardianship of Judge Bumpus as an insane person. Nurses and private detectives were employed to watch her, and gave testimony as to her actions and conversation.

The case dragged on through several months and Judge Grant of the probate court decided that Mrs. French was sane. Two months later the will contest was decided in her favor by the supreme court.

Among other famous lawsuits Mrs. French sued a Denver firm over a disputed bill and a counter action for $20,000 damages on the ground of malicious prosecution was brought. The firm got a verdict of $4600, and then got out a warrant charging Mrs. French with perjury. Mrs. French eluded the sheriff and started east. She was arrested at various points along the route, but came off victorious and finally reached Boston.

These two cases, however, were only incidents in Mrs. French's legal career. She always had a number of contests on hand. Usually she retained a new attorney for each case.

Curious contrasts present themselves in the career of this woman. She was parsimonious and yet she was generous. Stories were told in court of her living in two or three rooms in her big house; of her living without servants and doing the work of the house herself, of her cooking in the bathroom and being too poor to have the gas turned on in her house. But to offset these tales are known instances where Mrs. French made valuable and unexpected gifts to people for whom she had some liking.

NORMAL CONDITIONS

Appear to Have Been Restored In Business Districts of Boston

Boston, March 21.—Labor matters are unusually quiet and but few traces of the strike are now visible. The strikers have nearly all returned to their former places and business is following its old ruts. The state board of arbitration is still at work smoothing out what few wrinkles remain upon the surface, and Governor Crane expresses himself as well pleased with the progress that is being made. Secretary Innis of the National Team Drivers' union and local labor leaders are devoting more of their time at present to the strike of the American Express company's drivers in Lynn than they are to matters in this city, they evidently regarding the strike here as virtually settled.

John J. Buckley, national organizer of the Team Drivers' union, was found guilty of assault and battery on William McCarthney, a non-union man, yesterday, and sentenced to the house of correction for six months. He appealed. Judge Bragg said that when an officer of a union took into his own hands the authority which the supreme court of Massachusetts could not delegate to an officer of the commonwealth, he was doing something which the law could not uphold.

Strike In Hosiery Mill

Laconia, N. H., March 21.—Twenty-seven employes in the knitting department of the Tilton hosiery mill went out yesterday because their demand for an increase of wages was not granted. If a settlement is not reached within a few days the plant will be obliged to shut down and 80 other employes will be thrown out of work.

Virginia Miners May Strike

Huntington, W. Va., March 21.—The annual convention of the United Mine Workers closed last night. But little information is given out, but the prevailing opinion seems to be that unless the operators shall make some concessions that are demanded, a general strike in the two Virginias will be ordered by May 1.

Strike Threatened at Passaic

Passaic, N. J., March 21.—The police announce that fully half the mill employes of this city are planning a strike for higher wages, to start April 1. Labor leaders from the coal regions of Pennsylvania are here forming the plans. About 7000 persons are interested.

Seven Weeks' Strike Ended

Thompsonville, Conn., March 21.—At a meeting yesterday of the dye workers of the Hartford Carpet company, who went on strike seven weeks ago, it was voted to declare the strike off. The company officials say that they made no concessions.

To Demand Higher Wages

New Bedford, Mass., March 21.—The Textile council last night decided to make a formal demand on the manufacturers for an advance in wages before March 30.

Lost Anchors In Gale

Boston, March 21.—Schooner Adelene, from St. John for New York, lumber laden, put into this port yesterday to procure new anchors. Captain Williams says that his vessel, while riding at anchor off Chatham during a stiff gale, parted both chains, losing the anchors and considerable chain, besides carrying away the bobstay. Not deeming it prudent to venture over Nantucket Shoals the captain decided to bear up for this port.

Hits the Right Spot

St. Thomas, D. W. I., March 21.—The newspapers here are gratified at the suggestion, contained in dispatches from the United States, that separate government will be given, at least provisionally, to the Danish West Indies.

Prince Again In Command

Berlin, March 21.—Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia hoisted his pennant at noon yesterday on the battleship Kaiser Friedrich III, as commander of the squadron in Kiel waters.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Saturday, March 22.
Sun rises—5:46; sets—5:58.
Moon sets—4:42 a. m.
High water—10 a. m.; 10:30 p. m.

The pressure continues low in the middle and north Atlantic states. The weather will clear in New England. On the coast winds will be fresh and possibly brisk north.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

MILES' IRE IS AROUSED

Says He Will Resign If Root Army Bill Is Passed

DESTROYS UNITY OF ARMY

Illustrates Beneficial Effect of One Head In Time of Emergency—General May Have Exposed Himself to Disciplinary Treatment

Washington, March 21.—General Nelson A. Miles yesterday told the senate committee on military affairs that if the bill introduced by Senator Hawley at the instance of the war department for the organization of a general staff for the army should become a law he would decline to longer hold his commission. The reason he gave for the statement is that the bill is utterly subversive of the interests of the military establishment, and he said that he would not be a party to such a proceeding to the extent even of continuing to hold his place. The statement was made in the course of a prolonged hearing by the committee which was conducted behind closed doors, and in which General Miles touched upon a variety of subjects connected with the army.

The portion of the bill to which he directed his especial criticism is that contained in section 7, reading as follows: "That from and after the passage of this act the senior officer of the army shall be assigned to command such portion of the army as the president may direct, or be detailed to duty in the general staff corps. All duties prescribed by law for the commanding general of the army shall be performed by the chief of the general staff or other general officer designated by the secretary of war; provided that so long as the present lieutenant general of the army continues in the active list he shall be the chief of the general staff, and upon the separation from active service of said lieutenant general of the army, said office, except as herein provided, shall cease and determine."

General Miles said that if this provision should become a law it would have the effect of destroying the unity of the army, and he read numerous authorities, including Napoleon, Wellington, Washington, Cass and Grant to show the necessity of having one head to the army and of controlling authority. His own experience and observation had, he said, had the effect of confirming those views, and he gave an illustration of its beneficial effect in time of emergency, instancing the beginning of the war with Spain.

"I heard at midnight," he said, "that the Spanish fleet had been located definitely at Santiago, and I hastened to the home of Secretary Long, where the news was confirmed. Shafter was then at Tampa, and I sat down there in the secretary's house and wrote a dispatch directing him to start immediately for Santiago, with the result that the army was soon on its way to the point where its presence was needed."

He added, exhibiting the message which he had sent to General Shafter, "suppose I had been compelled to get around to a dozen or more majors, as many colonels and any number of generals constituting a general staff?"

The news of General Miles' statements before the military committee of the senate excited great interest at the war department when it beame known there late in the day. There was a very general inquiry as to whether Miles had not exposed himself to disciplinary treatment. The answer to this must be based on the exact amount of privilege which attaches to testimony given before a committee of congress.

Secretary Root exhibited little feeling when his attention was called to the proceedings before the committee. He remarked quietly that he was very sorry General Miles opposed this bill. He pointed out that under section 7, of which General Miles complained, the lieutenant general would have greatly enlarged powers in army management, instead of being restricted in his functions as he supposed. As to the question whether General Miles had said anything which would require action at the hands of the department or the president, the secretary firmly declined to express any opinion, for the present at least, preferring to await an official copy of the committee hearing before reaching any decision.

In Congress

Washington, March 21.—Throughout yesterday's session of the senate the bill providing for the protection of the President of the United States was under discussion. The principal point made by the opponents of the measure was that federal officials ought to be treated in the courts precisely as are other citizens.

The house made slow progress on the river and harbor bill. The river and harbor committee again succeeded in defeating every amendment offered.

To Look Up Ho Yow's Record

Washington, March 21.—Minister Wu Ting Fang has been informed of the preference of charges against his brother-in-law, Ho Yow, the Chinese consul general at San Francisco, and has instituted a searching investigation to learn the facts.

Military Bill Reported

Washington, March 21.—The military appropriation bill was yesterday reported by the military affairs committee. It carries $90,905,940 as against estimates of $101,905,940 and appropriations last year of $115,734,049.

Questioned Chamberlain's Veracity

London, March 21.—John Dillon, Irish Nationalist, was suspended in the house of commons yesterday for calling the colonial secretary, Joseph Chamberlain, "a d——d liar."

Compliment From Kaiser

Wilhelmshaven, March 21.—Emperor William has directed that a former torpedo boat, now used as a guardship here, shall be renamed "Alice Roosevelt."

Anti-Mosquito Measure Killed

Trenton, March 21.—The house bill appropriating $10,000 for experimenting on the extermination of mosquitos was defeated, 8 to 10, by the senate yesterday.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The National India Rubber factory, located in Bristol, R. I., will be closed for two weeks, beginning March 29, for the purpose of making general repairs.

Dr. Reuben O. Evans, a well known eye specialist of Malden, Mass., dropped dead in his office while he was fitting eyeglasses to a customer. Death is supposed to have resulted from apoplexy.

A man supposed to be Thomas J. Seavey of Boston was struck and killed by a train at Madbury, N. H.

Hardman, Peck & Co., piano manufacturers, suffered a loss of $300,000 or possibly more, by the destruction by fire of their plant at New York.

Peru has officially accepted the invitation to participate in the St. Louis exposition.

A gift of $15,000 will be made Athol, Mass., for a library by Andrew Carnegie, under the usual conditions, which the town will accede to.

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. Among the tens of thousands who have used it for the grip, not one case has ever been reported that did not recover. For sale by all druggists.

Street Railway Hearings.

Good Afternoon.

Don't read the long advertisement of the street railway hearing in this issue. If you do you will not know so much about it as you now do. It is, however, an important hearing relative to double tracking of portions of Hancock, Washington and Saville streets, and the discontinuance of the tracks on Temple street.

That no hard feelings have engendered in the present quarry strike is evident from the handsome tribute of Mr. L. S. Anderson, manager of the Granite Railway quarry, in defence of the Finns, many of whom the company employ. Such expression of appreciation and good will at this time, is better than unkind remarks which may never be forgotten.

As we supposed, from a communication today, there is preferred and common stock in the new trust—the Co-operative store. Perhaps not literally speaking, but nevertheless, there is an "inner chamber," called the "Co-Workers Fraternity," which controls ninety per cent. of the stock. It is made up, too, largely of theoretical rather than practical men.

A communication from representatives of the Teamsters' union has been received, but it deals too much with rumors, personalities, and private affairs. There are things which may be true which should never be published. Malicious and unkind words against employers as well as employes, should be suppressed. It is a settlement that the men and the merchants, the Ledger and the people, devoutly desire, and no scars should be left when this is reached.

While the Boston papers are commenting on possible candidates for Congressional honors in the Tenth district, they should not limit their vision on the Republican side to Dr. Pierce of Dorchester, formerly of Milton, the defeated candidate of 1900. We doubt if he is thinking seriously of seeking a renomination, but the Boston papers regard him as a candidate. The landslide which buried the Milton man should convince him and his friends that he has no possible chance of an election to Congress.

The chances are not good for the election of any Republican, but probably there are a few able and popular gentlemen who might win. Senator Sprague was urged by some to enter the field, but we understand his business demands his attention.

In ex-Mayor Hall, however, the Republicans have a candidate who might be successful. He was twice elected Mayor of Quincy, his majority the second year being the largest ever given a mayoralty candidate. Of sterling character, and ability as a speaker, and knowledge of public affairs, he would make an ideal Congressman, and would take high rank in the Massachusetts delegation.

Mr. Hall's support does not come wholly from Quincy; in fact it is because of favorable comment from South Boston and other parts of the district that his Quincy friends regard his nomination as possible. Mr. Hall has no "barrel" for campaign expenses, but his character and ability would invite support from the National Congressional committee, the Republican State Committee and others who would take pleasure in rallying about a worthy candidate.

MILTON.

The monthly ladies night of the Unquity club was held Wednesday evening. Whist was the main number on the program. Prizes for the best score were awarded Mrs. John Graham and James Gibbs.

A sale of cake and candy will be held Saturday evening at the residence of Mrs. J. M. Hill on Brackett street.

The annual fair of the Episcopal Mission will be held at Ellsworth hall on the afternoon and evening of April 2.

Arthur W. Gardner has a new trotter which he will race at the fairs next fall.

The marriage of Miss Lillie Clarke, daughter of W. H. Clarke, and Mr. Richard Bishop of Quincy, will be solemnized April 2.

Harry Elden, who was severely burned some weeks ago by electricity, is home from the hospital.

The Thursday Evening club will move into its new rooms the first of the month. The furnishings of its present quarters will be sold by auction.

The selectmen have appointed Edward A. McCue superintendent of streets, who will succeed Charles Mitchell.

A whist party for members and friends was held at the Unquity club rooms Thursday evening.

No-License League.

The Massachusetts No-License League which has been under consideration for some months, is now inaugurated and ready for business. It consists of the various organizations working for No-License in the different parts of the Commonwealth, and is intended to form a bond of union between them. At the initial formal meeting, held March 19th, organizations were represented from Brighton, Brockton, Cambridge, Chelsea, Dedham, Dorchester, Everett, Fitchburg, Haverhill, Ipswich, Malden, Quincy, Waltham and Woburn, and also individuals intimate with the work in Beverly and Somerville. Regrets were sent, by persons unable to reach the meeting, from Amesbury, Framingham, Gloucester, Lawrence, Lowell, Lynn, Needham, Newton, Northampton, Orange, Revere, Salem, Scituate, Taunton, Uxbridge, Watertown and Worcester.

A form of constitution was adopted, and officers chosen as follows: president, Frank Foxcroft, of Cambridge; vice-president, C. H. J. Kimball, of Dedham; secretary, Alfred Noon, of Everett; treasurer, Delcevare King, of Quincy; additional members of the executive committee, Arthur Gates, of Chelsea, Henry C. Leach, of Salem, and Perley A. Stone, of Haverhill.

The Des Moines.

The United States cruiser Des Moines, which is building at Fore River shipyard is rapidly nearing completion, the steel work being practically finished, and the only delay arising from the interference with the construction of wooden sheathing by unfavorable weather. Each plank of the sheathing has to be fitted to the hull with great accuracy, and this work on the broad bottom of the cruiser is hampered by the cramped and awkward quarters in which it must be done, so that its difficulties are very considerable.

If it had not been for the sheathing the Des Moines might have been in commission before this, but the most difficult part of the work has now been passed, and from the bilge keels to the waterline the progress will be comparatively rapid. The Des Moines engines are being set up in the machine shop, and nearly all of her machinery is ready for assembling. Both the shafts and crank shafts have been forged and turned, and her boilers are ready to be installed.

Would Wreck Business.

Among the Washington gossip in the Boston Advertiser of Wednesday was this paragraph:

"The officials of the Fore River Works, one of the infant industries of Massachusetts, have communicated their views on the proposed establishment of a national eight-hour law. They state if such a bill is passed it will wreck the business they are trying to build up at Quincy, and that if the bill becomes a law every shipyard which, like theirs, builds both government and merchant vessels, must adopt the eight-hour day for both classes of work, as it would be impossible to make any distinction between the working hours of men working on the two classes of ships. The concern now employes about 1200 men and within a year the expectation is that 2500 names will be on the pay-rolls."

Matinee Whist.

Mrs. B. Porterfield of Granite street held her last matinee whist party on Thursday. Prizes were won by: Mrs. R. R. Smith, Mrs. James Pierce, Mrs. King, Mrs. Annie Pratt, Mrs. C. Fletcher, Mrs. McTier, Mrs. Philips, Mrs. Krocker. Mrs. Langhorn received the consolation. The special prizes for the series were won by Mrs. James Pierce and Miss Dora Good. A dainty lunch was enjoyed by all.

Rain and sunshine today.

Less than two weeks to April 1.

And this is the first day of spring.

John T. White, a machinist, is a petitioner in bankruptcy.

A social dance will be held by the North Quincy club tonight.

Now is the time to advertise to get your share of the spring trade.

A State House hearing relative to blasting in cities is advertised today.

An entertainment will be given at Wollaston Yacht club house Monday night.

A private whist party of twenty-three tables will be held at Odd Fellows hall tonight.

Thayer's ball team opens its practice on Monday under the direction of a new coach.

At the prayer service at Bethany church this evening, Rev. E. S. Tead of Boston will speak.

Mrs. Frank Page of Kennebunk, Maine, is the guest of Mrs. Schumacher of Beach street, Wollaston park.

All of the Edward Hewitson associates should make a special effort to be present at Monday evening's rehearsal.

The Quincy members of the Ancients report a jolly time at the Dutch supper, reception and theatre party Thursday evening.

The prizes at the Granite City club whist tournament Wednesday evening were awarded to W. M. Mitchell and George Wendell.

The brick work of the section of the sewer on Greenleaf street has been completed, and all that now remains is to clean up the street.

Saturday bids fair to be a busy day at the district court as there are 26 continued cases to come up, aside from new business.

It is possible that the way in which the quarrymen's strike is settled at Barre will have a bearing and hasten the settlement in Quincy.

There were very few who weathered it Thursday night for the Wollaston Unitarian church social. However, a delightful evening was spent.

Warren Munroe, manager of Hartwell's news agency who was called to Kansas by the illness and death of his mother, is expected home this week.

Nathaniel A. Thayer of the class of 1902 of Lawrence Scientific school, who has been confined to his home with illness has returned to his college duties.

There will be an indoor meet at the White gymnasium, Thayer academy, Saturday afternoon. It will undoubtedly be more interesting than previous ones.

Mayor Bryant's biddies are laying eggs by the hundreds these days, and Johnson Bros. are having a big sale. Rhode Island Red eggs fresh from the House Rock farm are all right.

The funeral of Mrs. Comfort A., wife of Mr. George A. Tripp, was held this afternoon from her home on Safford street. The services were conducted by Rev. Preston Gurney. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston.

The horse and wagon found in the yard of Maurice DeCosta on Independence avenue Wednesday, proved to be the turnout stolen from North Weymouth the night before. The horse belonged to Mr. Delory and the wagon was one undergoing repairs at Poland's blacksmith shop. DeCosta and Delory are cousins.

TODAY'S COURT.

John Anderson was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Peter Fowler was arraigned for attempting to seine smelts at Weymouth. He was fined $50 and the net was forfeited. Appealed.

Thomas B. Bowker and Sadie M. Qualey were arraigned for adultery at Quincy. Cases continued until April 30.

YACHT RACING.

The yachting season will practically open and close in Quincy waters this year, as there will be but two open races previous to that of the Wollaston club in June, and that of the Quincy club will be held Sept. 6. The Squantum club will have an open race in July and already 34 dates for open races have been assigned, viz:

*Classes to be divided.

The annual meeting of the Yacht Racing Association of Massachusetts was held Thursday evening at Youngs hotel, Boston. Ex-Commodore Henry M. Faxon of the Quincy club declined a reelection as vice president, and a unanimous vote of thanks was extended for his services. These officers were elected: President, A. H. Higginson; Vice President, Sumner H. Foster; Secretary, A. T. Bliss; Treasurer, I. H. Wylie; Executive Committee, A.H. Higginson, A. T. Bliss, Walter Burgess, Louis M. Clark, J. E. Robinson.

The new table of percentages in open races depending on the number of yachts entered, was adopted. Regardless of the number the first yacht gets 100 per cent. The more entries the larger the per cent. for second place, viz: 50 when but two; 75 when four, 90 when ten, and 95 when twenty.

The sail area amendment was adopted, and that about flat bottoms defeated.

BODIES STILL MISSING

No Trace of Victims of Disaster on Shovelful Shoal

Chatham, Mass., March 21.—None of the bodies of the lost lifesavers or of the crew of the barge Wadena has yet been recovered. Charles O. Higgins of Cleveland arrived here yesterday and offered a reward of $500 for the recovery of the body of William H. Mack, the official of the Boutelle Transportation company, which owns the barges, who was one of the victims of the disaster. Higgins also established a patrol service by four men, who have instructions to patrol the beach for at least two weeks in search of the body.

Captain Eldredge of the Chatham station says that in his opinion some of the bodies may be imbedded in the sand on Shovelful Shoal, where they were drowned, and if the conditions are favorable today boats may go out to see if any can be discovered on the bottom.

The Wadena and Fitzpatrick are still ashore and the life saving station reports that the former is in bad condition and looks as if bilged. The Fitzpatrick, however, seems to be all right, and wreckers will float her today.

A Partial Success

Washington, March 21.—A practical test of wireless telephony was conducted on the Potomac river yesterday. A wire was grounded on the shore and wires from a small boat stationed a third of a mile across the water were dropped over the stern. With the instruments in operation, those who participated in the test recognized the sound of a harmonica, though it was partially indistinct, and also heard human voices at the other end. Similar experiments overland were conducted with more satisfactory results.

Where Negroes Stand Poor Show

Paducuh, Ky., March 21.—Two negroes were killed by white men and three were probably fatally beaten at Maddid Bend yesterday. One was caught stealing chickens, it is claimed, and was driven into the Mississippi river and shot dead. The white men then attacked four other negroes, who showed fight. One was killed and the other three negroes almost beaten to death.

Not Exempt From Taxation

Trenton, March 21.—The senate yesterday defeated a bill to exempt the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York from the payment of the 5 per cent collateral inheritance tax on certain property in New Jersey left to the museum by Jacob Rogers. The total amount left the museum was $300,000, making the inheritance tax $15,000.

Oil Came With a Rush

Barnesville, O., March 21.—The Unity Oil company struck an oil gusher a few miles southeast of here yesterday. The oil shot up 50 feet above the derrick and is flowing at the rate of 300 barrels a day.

COOPERATION.

Moral Character Being Undermined by Business Methods.

To the Editors of The Ledger:

I have before me your issue of March 14, containing an editorial on the paper read by me in your city on the thirteenth instant.

That the people of Quincy may have the facts regarding this matter, will you kindly find room for the following in your columns?

The Quincy Co-operative store is organized as the Massachusetts Co-operative Association. This corporation is, in a way, distinct from, and yet directly affiliated with the Co-operative Association of America, hence it is a vital part of the same movement. It is federated with the Lewiston organization as closely and as organical as any two distinct corporations are when combined under one trust.

In your reference to the preferred and common stock of the company you have certainly been misled. The company has not issued any preferred stock whatever, and it has issued only one thousand dollars of common stock. The law requires that every director shall own at least one share of stock and for this reason each director does own one share for which he has paid ten dollars. Ninety shares of the stock are owned by the Co-workers Fraternity Company, a college organization with headquarters at Boston, which has been organized for the specific purpose of preventing the directors or officers of the association from making any illegitimate profits.

The peculiar nature of this whole organization is that the members receive the profits which the association earns, and herein it is diametrically opposite to what your editorial would lead people to think. A little investigation of the literature published by this association will show that every legal precaution has been taken to prevent the officers and incorporators from making any personal gain.

In order to buy in large quantities and thus get the benefit of the cheapest rates, the associations will buy their goods together; but the business in Quincy will be managed by Quincy people for the benefit of Quincy people.

The plan is simple and anyone can understand it. The goods are bought by the money obtained from the purchasing members. A purchasing member is one who invests $25 and purchases at the store, always paying cash. At the end of six months each purchasing member receives a portion of the profits of the business, the amount depending upon the amount of his purchases. In addition to this he is paid five per cent. annual interest on his investment. Experience has demonstrated that this is the best method by which to secure a just division of the profits.

In your editorial you say: "It is not for the benefit of Quincy to drive merchants out of business and have one corporation do all the grocery business, and one the boot and shoe business, etc., and then all unite and one concern do all the business of the city."

You make a statement concerning the effect of a condition of things which has never existed and therefore has never been tried. Hence, you have no data upon which to base your conclusions.

I cannot enter into details concerning the probable effect of general co-operation upon a community or state. This would require the writing of a book, which is not necessary; for the shelves of our public libraries are supplied with literature giving in detail the good results of this kind of co-operation so far as it has been tried. Let me advise all who wish to obtain reliable information on this subject to read Henry Demerest Lloyd's book, entitled "Newest England." It is a description of the goverument and institutions of New Zealand where nearly all business, including the cultivation of land, is co-operative.

I do not condemn nor in any way criticise those who are engaged in competitive business. This method has obtained since the birth of trade and commerce, and, until recently, no one, except a few of the world's thinkers, has questioned its justice or morality. The adage "Competition is the life of trade" has been accepted by most people as a truism, notwithstanding the evidence furnished by statistics that ninety-five per cent. of all new business enterprises fail. So we see that facts prove that competition is not the life but the death of trade.

The great trusts are demonstrating this truth; for the trust is competition in which the number of competitors is reduced, and in which the companies who once competed have combined to control not only the price of commodities but their amount and quality.

Small dealers protest against the action of these competitors, saying, "Give us a chance,—give us a chance to do on a small scale." The motives of both are the same and doubtless a request from a trust magnate to a small dealer for exchange of places would not in many cases be refused.

The trust has done a good work in that it has shown us the wisdom and economy of combination and has made conspicuous the heinousness of competition. The tryanny of trusts can be met and overthrown in only one way, and that is, by the organization of a trust of, for, and by the people, a trust in which all the people are partners and share the profits. Such a trust can and will, sometimes include all the avocations of life.

It is a lamentable truth that the moral character of the people is being undermined by our present business methods. A course of action which is acknowledged to be morally wrong is claimed to be right when applied to business. This robs the moral law of its validity by confounding the principles of right and wrong and causing men unconsciously to mistake expediency for righteousness. Our imperfections are an evidence that aspiration and effort for higher attainments, and struggles for intellectual, moral and spiritual growth are and ever will be a necessity; but all effort and struggle must end in comparative failure so long as the affairs of life compel men to use methods which make obedience to moral law and faithfulness to high ideals impossible.

The Coal Strike.

J. F. Sheppard & Sons report that they have five teams on in Quincy today, delivering coal, and have a number of men at work on their wharf. At their Braintree wharf they have three teams.

Messrs. Patch have on but two teams today, as the driver of their other team was injured Thursday on the wharf by lifting. Both firms expect to put on more teams tomorrow and Monday.

In conversation with a representative of the Ledger, Mr. Sheppard said that both he and Mr. Patch had been considering the matter before the strike of voluntarily increasing the pay of their men and had a new schedule made up when the men began to organize a union.

Then the matter was dropped for a time, to await the outcome of the strike. Last week a paper was drawn up giving the employes an increase in wages, and had the men continued at work last Monday, instead of going on a strike, the schedule would have been posted and have gone into effect this week.

Death of a Veteran.

Mr. Samuel B. Turner, a long and well known resident of Quincy, died this morning at his home on Quincy avenue, aged 57 years. He was taken sick less than a week ago with pneumonia. Coupled with this he had heart trouble which was the cause of his death.

Mr. Turner was born in Baltimore, Md., but has lived in Quincy since a young man. His trade was that of a stone cutter which he followed for many years. For the last few years, however, he has been employed as janitor of the High school building.

When the call came in the early sixties for volunteers to defend the Union he enlisted in the 6th Battery, and later in Co. E. 56th regt. He served his country faithfully during the war and received an honorable discharge at its close.

He was a member of Paul Revere Post, 88, G. A. R., and had served as its commander. He leaves a widow, a son, and a daughter.

Husband Found Her.

Thomas B. Bowker and Sadie M. Qualey were arrested in a boarding house at Quincy Point, Thursday night, by Inspector McKay and Officer Larkin, where it is alleged they were living together as man and wife. Mrs. Qualey, who belongs in Dover, N. H., left her husband a week ago, and came to Quincy to join Bowker. When her husband found she had left home he made some investigation and learned that she had checked her trunk for Quincy, Mass. He came to Quincy two days ago, and with the aid of the police she was located and arrested late Thursday evening as they came home from an entertainment. In court this morning they were arraigned. The case was continued, and Sadie returned to Dover, N. H., with her husband.

Surprise Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McNeil of Wharf street, were very pleasantly surprised by a number of their friends on Wednesday night, it being the fourteenth anniversary of their marriage. They were presented with a very handsome sideboard. The presentation speech was made by Mr. Warren Dunbar in a very pleasing manner. Although Mr. and Mrs. McNeil were taken by surprise they responded in a few well chosen words. There was an ample supply of ice cream, cake, and fruit. The remainder of the evening was spent in singing and dancing. The company broke up at an early hour in the morning by singing "Auld Lang Syne."

McNARY VS NAPHEN.

The Congressman in Tenth District to Have a Contest.

Boston dailies predict a hot contest among the Democrats of Ninth and Tenth Congressional districts for the nominations this year. The districts are made up almost entirely of Boston wards, except that Quincy and Milton are in the Tenth. The Boston Advertiser says:

"The Democratic leaders who, under Donovan, were welded into a mammoth 'Prince Rupert drop,' which brought about the election of Gen. Collins, are ready to fly apart at the tap of a hammer. With a municipal campaign a full year away, they will not stir on that issue, but the congressional elections this fall have offered the inducement, and a program is completed. It calls for two special changes. The defeat of Congressman Conry in the ninth. The defeat of Congressman Naphen in the tenth. J. A. Keliher, now purchasing agent of the street department, is to wage war against Conry.

As for the Naphen contest, W. S. McNary of ward 15, Naphen's own ward, is to make the campaign. McNary is an old campaigner in the 10th district. Years ago he made the running against various forces, and his very defeat had a brilliancy to it. The congressional bee long ago was supposed to have departed from his bonnet, but now, when he holds a good share of the South Boston wards, it is buzzing again, and with a louder note of confidence than ever.

The agitation against Naphen began before his last election. At that time Senator Baldwin of ward 15 tried to make a campaign. For a time it looked as if he might gain success, but McNary was on, at least, passing terms of friendship with Naphen, and would not lift his hand against a man from his own ward. Politically, he could not have afforded to take that step Since that time conditions have changed. An open rupture has taken place between the two, and last fall Naphen was not even named as a delegate to the state convention from the ward which he represents as congressman. There was some talk, but it was explained then that he did not care to go."

THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

Campaign of 1904 Through Henry Watterson's Spectacles.

In a letter written from Washington and received at Louisville, Ky., Henry Watterson says, according to the New York World:

"To a hayseed like myself, who comes to Washington to pick up a little information and polish, the outlook is discouraging. Chaos everywhere—in society, which has not quite recovered its equipose, though the prince has been gone a fortnight; in politics, where a broncho buster in the White House is making fingers and thumbs of things so that no man can foretell 'what next.'

"There is but one thing that at this moment stands out bold and clear upon the horizon of the national capital before the eyes of all intelligent men. That is that the Democratic party has in front of it a great opportunity if it but knows how to improve it. For the first time these thirty years it is the Republicans who are at sea. Their boat may not have yet sprung a leak. Both compass and rudder may be still intact, but there are two pilots aboard and rocks ahead.

"In the first place, on the Republican side the situation revolves about the succession. It is Teddy and anti-Teddy. Little of this yet appears about the surface. Both factions are out in submarine boats. But these will be loaded with explosives.

"Observe that sleek, smooth shaven gentleman crossing the rotunda between the house and senate. His step is light, jaunty, even springy. Not a cloud across his brow, not a care in his eyes. You might take him for a prosperous professor, and so he is, of the shoals and depths of party management, for that is the chairman of the national Republican committee, the junior senator from Ohio, Mr. Hanna—Mr. Mark A. Hanna, and don't let it escape your memory. What he doesn't know about ritual and sign manual is hardly worth knowing.

"Gradually but surely Roosevelt has been weeding out the distinctively McKinley element from the cabinet. In the fulness of time they will all go. He is filling each vacated post with a practical politician made in the Roosevelt image—that is to say, with a politician who knows how to work the civil service racket for all it is worth.

"Broncho buster though he be, there is a method in his broncho busting. Mindful of the fate of John Tyler and Andrew Johnson, he draws the line about where Grover Cleveland left it. That he is a clean, honest man of good impulses and the best intentions should go without saying. But he is an inconsiderate man, combative and aggressive, and while much heartier and more genial than Mr. Cleveland less coldly reserved and selfishly resolute.

"There is just one thing for the Democrats on the Philippines committee—there are five of them—to do, and that is to force the Republicans—there are eight of them—to a showdown. A subcommittee should be at once sent to Manila. It could go and come between now and the middle of June, making its report to the present session of congress. If the Republicans refuse this, let the five Democrats constitute each and one another a subcommittee and go themselves. Doubtless General Chaffee would arrest them on their arrival. Bully!"

M'KINLEY POSTAL CARD.

Bears Portrait of Late President In Place of Jefferson's.

The first official postal cards have just been printed in the government printing office at Rumford Falls, Me. The official description of the new postal card, now in process of printing at the bureau of engraving and printing, is as follows:

"In the upper right hand corner is a portrait of President McKinley, three-quarters face, looking to the left, with the words 'Postage one cent' above and '1843—McKinley—1901' below the stamp, following its elliptical contour. The portrait used for the subject of the stamp is one which was preferred by Mrs. McKinley herself. The stamp is practically devoid of ornament. To the left of the portrait are three straight lines of lettering, the top line being one and one-sixteenth inches below the upper edge of the card and containing in small capital letters the words, 'The space above is reserved for postmark.'

"The second line is made up of the words 'Postal Card' in large plain capitals. The third line is in the same type as the first and reads, 'The space below is for the address only.' In the upper left hand corner is a coat of arms of the United States, its position balancing that of the stamp in the upper right hand corner. Above the coat of arms, in the same style of capital used above the stamp, are the words 'United States' and below the words 'of America,' following the contour of the coat of arms. Black ink will be used in printing this card. The card will be the same size, 3¼ by 5½ inches, as the old one bearing Jefferson's portrait."

King Edward's Coronation Portraits

It is stated that the king has ordered the execution of 100 medallion portraits of himself. These, richly mounted, are intended for presentation to distinguished guests at the coronation, including the leading representatives of the colonies and India, says the London Globe. His majesty is being specially photographed for the purpose.

Camping In the Rockies.

Camping in the Rocky mountains is to be one of the inducements offered Colorado and Utah tourists this year, says the Indianapolis News. The idea was suggested by the inability of the Colorado resort hotels to care for the business and the popularity of some experiments made in that direction by tourists last year.

Seat Declared Vacant

Washington, March 21.—In the contested election case of Horton vs. Butler, from the Twelth Missouri district, the Republican members of election committee No. 1 have decided to recommend that the seat be declared vacant. The hearings disclosed that the registry lists contained about 14,000 names which could not be located at the places of residence designated.

Critical Time For Castro

Willemstad, March 21.—The Venezuelan revolution headed by General Matos seems to be taking form. Eight hundred revolutionists are besieging Carupano, and the revolutionists under General Monagas have surrounded Barcelona. The revolutionists have cut the cable to Barcelona. The situation is said to be critical for President Castro.

Engineer and Conductor Blamed

Auburn, N. La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use or these ailments. Far sale by all druggists.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

"My God," said he to Harry Blount, "these people of the north are rough men! Do we not owe some return to our companion of the journey? May Korpanoff or Strogoff succeed! What splendid revenge for the affair of Ichim!"

"Yes, revenge indeed," said Harry Blount. "But Strogoff is a dead man. For his sake it would perhaps be better not to remember him any longer."

"And allow his mother to perish under the knout?"

"Do you believe that he has acted better by his rash haste than his mother and his sister?"

"I don't believeanything; I knownothing," answered Alcide Jolivet, "only had I been in his place I should not have acted otherwise. What a slash! Eh, what—the devil, we must boil over sometimes. God would have placed water in our veins and not blood had he wished us to remain always and everywhere imperturbable."

"What a splendid incident for a newspaper article!" said Harry Blount. "If Ivan Ogareff would only communicate to us the contents of that letter!"

Ivan Ogareff, after having wiped off the blood which covered his face, had broken the seal of the letter. He read it again and again for a long time, as if he wished to fathom its contents.

Then, having given his orders that Michael Strogoff, strongly fettered, should be sent on to Tomsk with the other prisoners, he took command of the troops encamped at Zabedeiro, and amid the deafening sounds of drums and trumpets he marched to the town where the emir was awaiting him.

They had not long to wait for the lieutenant of Feofar. Resounding bugles announced his arrival.

Ivan Ogareff—the Hashed, as they already begun to call him—dressed this time in the uniform of a Tartar officer, arrived on horseback before the tent of the emir. He was accompanied by a body of the soldiers from the camp of Zabedeiro, who drew up along the sides of the plateau, in the middle of which he remained only during the time allotted to the amusements. One could see a deep gash cutting obliquely the face of the traitor.

Ivan Ogareff presented to the emir his principal officers, and Feofar-Khan, without departing from the coldness which was the main foundation of his dignity, received them in a manner which made them satisfied with their reception.

Alcide Jolivet and Harry Blount then joined the crowd and looked on in such a manner as not to lose any detail of a feast, which was to furnish a hundred good lines for the newspapers. They gazed with astonishment on Feofar-Khan in his magnificence, his women, his officers, his guards and all this oriental pomp, of which the ceremonies of Europe can give no idea. But they turned away with disdain when Ivan Ogareff presented himself before the emir, and they waited, not without some impatience, for the feast to begin.

"Do you see, my dear Blount," said Alcide Jolivet, "we are come too soon, like good citizens who must needs come or lose their money. All this is only the rising of the curtain. It would have been better taste to have arrived only for the ballet."

"What ballet?" asked Harry Blount.

"The obligatory ballet, faith. But I think the curtain is about to rise."

Alcide Jolivet spoke as if he were at the opera, and, taking his glass from its case, he prepared to have a look at, as a connoisseur, the first subjects of Feofar's troop.

But a tedious ceremony was to precede the amusements.

Meanwhile most of the prisoners had passed before the emir, and in passing each of them had to prostrate the forehead to touch the very dust as a sign of servility. It was the slavery which commenced with humiliation. When the unfortunates were too slow in bending, the rude hand of the guards cast them violently to the earth. Alcide Jolivet and his companion could not assist at such a spectacle without feeling the greatest indignation.

"This is cowardly! Let us go away!" said Alcide Jolivet.

"No," replied Harry Blount; "we must see all."

"See all! Ah!" cried Alcide Jolivet suddenly, seizing the arm of his companion.

"What is the matter with you?" asked the former.

"Look! Blount, it is she!"

"She?"

"The sister of our fellow traveler. Alone and a prisoner! We must save her!"

"Restrain yourself," coldly replied Harry Blount. "Our intervention in behalf of this young girl would be more hurtful than useful to her."

Alcide Jolivet, ready to rush forward, stopped himself, and Nadia, who had not perceived them, being half veiled by her hair, passed in her turn before the emir, without attracting his attention.

In the meaptime, after Nadia, Marfa Strogoff had arrived, and as she did not throw herself quickly enough into the dust the guards brutally pushed her.

Marfa Strogoff fell.

Her son made a terrible movement, which the soldiers who were guarding him could with difficulty master.

But old Marfa raised herself, and they were about to drag her when Ivan Ogareff intervened, saying:

"Let this woman remain."

As for Nadia, she was thrown back among the crowd of prisoners. The look of Ivan Ogareff had not fixed itself upon her.

Michael Strogoff was then led before the emir, and there he remained erect, without lowering his eyes.

"Your face to the ground!" Ivan Ogareff cried out to him.

"No!" replied Michael Strogoff. Two guards wished to force him to bend, but it was they who were thrown to the ground by the hand of the robust young man.

Ivan Ogareff advanced toward Michael Strogoff.

"You are about to die," said he.

"I shall die," fiercely answered Michael Strogoff, "but your face of traitor, Ivan, will not the less bear and forever the infamous mark of the knout!"

Ivan Ogareff at this answer became horribly pale.

"Who is this prisoner?" demanded the emir in a voice the more menacing because of its calmness.

"A Russian spy," answered Ivan Ogareff.

In making out Michael Strogoff a spy he knew the sentence pronounced against him would be the more terrible.

Michael Strogoff moved toward Ivan Ogareff.

The soldiers stopped him.

The emir then made a gesture before which the whole crowd bent their heads. Afterward he motioned with his hand for the Koran, which was brought to him. He opened the book and placed his finger on one of the pages.

It was chance, or, rather, as these orientals think, God himself, who was about to decide the fate of Michael Strogoff. The people of central Asia give the name of "fal" to this practice. After having interpreted the sense of the verse touched by the finger of the judge they apply the sentence, whatever it may be.

The emir had left his finger resting on the page of the Koran. The chief of the ulemas, then approaching, read with a loud voice a verse which finished with these words:

"And he shall see no more the things of the earth." "Russian spy," said Feofar-Khan, "you came to see what is passing in the camp of the Tartars! Look, then, with all your eyes! Look!"

(To be continued.)

Dark Side of the Hub

Boston, March 21.—While his parents were in another part of the house Lester Williams, aged 3½, was strangled last evening while at play. The child put his head in a roller towel and then turned himself around until he choked to death.

Tired of living, Maurice Foster, 34, sought death by taking a dose of laudanum on the street last night. He was given prompt treatment, but his physician says recovery is doubtful.

An unknown man jumped into Dorchester bay last night, but was rescued by J. F. Higgins, who had seen the act. Higgings had to belabor the unknown in order to effect the rescue. The would-be suicide was sent to a hospital.

Thomas F. O'Brien was found on the street with a broken skull, and his condition is pronounced serious. The police believe he was given a beating by west end thieves.

BODY AND BRAINS:

Whether the brains of men are being developed at the expense of the bodies is not a question that we can settle, but there is no question that there are many individual cases where the body is weaker than it ought to be.

To produce big healthy brains and big healthy bodies take Scott's Emulsion. Childhood is the time to commence.

The effort of Scott's Emulsion is to make nature do her best with the materials on hand. It checks all those little weaknesses and faults of nourishment which result in imperfect development.

Nothing more strengthening for weak children.

BANGOR FLOODED

Much Damage Already Done and Worst May Not Be Over

Bangor, Me., March 21.—The flood disaster which has long been feared on the Penobscot came last night, when a great mass of ice that had hung for days between the toll bridge and the waterworks dam moved down and, forming another jam just opposite High Head wharves, caused the river to back up rapidly.

The jam started at 5 o'clock and the water came up rapidly, until at 7 o'clock the lower end of Broad street was a foot under water, so that boats were used to get in and out of the stores in Broad street and lower Main street, Central street, West Market square, lower State street and Hammond street, where those thoroughfares cross the Kenduskeag, were flooded three to eight feet deep, and although most stocks of goods had been removed from basements, many thousands of dollars worth were ruined.

The greatest damage came at 5 o'clock, when a mass of ice and logs swept down against the Maine Central railroad bridge across the Penobscot, carrying out its middle pier and letting two spans into the river. The mass swept on against the old wooden toll bridge, a short distance below, carrying away the middle span of that structure. Many people were on this bridge when the bridge above went down, but it is thought that all escaped to the shores, some to Brewer and some to Bangor. The carrying away of the bridges breaks all communication Bangor and Brewer and the eastern part of the state, and the damage cannot be repaired in months. The loss on the bridges is probably $50,000.

The water began to fall slightly at 11 o'clock, and excitement has somewhat subsided, but a greater danger yet menaces the city in the form of a jam above the waterworks dam. Should this come down before the ice leaves from below the city, the result would be immense damage to property of all kinds, and probably loss of life.

There is a stretch of solid and broken ice below the city extending six miles, to Hampden, and it is this that holds the water up. Should it hold where it is, and the upper jam come down upon it, the whole business section would be under water in short order.

Trains from the east have not been able to get into Bangor, stopping half a mile above the east side station. The Maine Central tracks on both sides of the city are under water, the waterworks and lighting plant are shut down, the stations being flooded out, and the city's water supply is limited to the capacity of the standpipes.

Flood Causing Damage

Lubec, Me., March 21.—The heavy rain that has prevailed in this section continues, and the streams are rapidly rising. Bell's lumber and shook mill at Whiting was worked from its foundation yesterday and is a complete wreck. Telegraph poles have been levelled and communication with other places is almost impossible. The flood will cause serious damage to the town of Whiting and its residents.

Serious Shooting Scrape

Cambridge, Mass., March 21.—William J. Jordan, the well-known colored boxer, is at the Cambridge hospital in a dangerous condition and William E. Lowe, also colored, is locked up. Both men had until recently been employed as waiters in the Harvard dining hall, and it is claimed they engaged in a fight last Saturday. The police say that Lowe purchased a revolver yesterady and waited near the Memorial hall last evening, when he opened fire on Jordan as he made his appearance in coming out of the building.

Woman and Child Cremated

New London, Conn., March 21.—Mrs. Alfred A. Brown, aged 30, is believed to have caused the death of her son, Alfred, aged 1 year, and to have committed suicide yesterday by setting fire to her clothing. The bodies were found smouldering on the floor. Mrs. Brown had been showing signs of mental aberration.

Wanted Excitement—and Got It

Meriden, Conn., March 21.—Fire that broke out in the bakery at the state school for boys last night did $3000 damage to the building. Edward Knapp, a Bridgeport lad, one of the oldest inmates, confessed to setting the fire in the flour room. He had no reason for doing it other than for a little excitement.

Liquor Men Disband

Portland, Me., March 21.—The Cumberland county Liquor Dealers' association, which has been in existence several years, has collapsed. According to an officer of the association, ill feeling arose between several of the prominent members during the last year and it was decided to disband.

Murder Charge Against Dixon

Providence, March 21.—Albert Dixon, who admits that he assaulted Amos D. Perrin Sunday night at Dixon's house near Glendale, inflicting a wound from which Perrin died, will be arraigned on a warrant charging murder. The warrant alleges that the implement used was an axe.

Milkmen Form a Union

Milford, N. H., March 21.—At a meeting of the milk producers in this section of the state, held here last night, a local branch of the New England Milk Producers' union was organized, and it was unanimously voted to stand for a 34-cent straight price.

Strychnine Killed Baby

New Haven, March 21.—Emma Benson, 18 months old, swallowed two strychnine pills yesterday afternoon and died soon after. The child found the pills during the absence of her mother and ate them for candy.

STATUS QUO AND PEACE

Declared to Be Russia's Policy In China

THE ANGLO-JAPANESE PACT

Professed to Have Been Received With Perfect Calm—Desires to Aid In Extension and Commerce For the Benefit of the Whole World

St. Petersburg, March 21.—The Official Messenger makes the following official statement in regard to the Franco-Russian declaration relative to the Anglo-Japanese convention:

"The imperial government received with the most perfect calm the announcement of the Anglo-Japanese agreement. The principles which have guided Russian policy since the beginning of the disturbances in China remain, and will remain, invariable. Russia insists on the maintenance of the independence and integrity of China, a friendly neighboring country, as well as that of Korea.

"Russia desires the preservation of the status quo and general peace in the far east. By the construction of the great Siberian railroad, together with its branch line through Manchuria, towards a port always ice free, Russia aids in the extension in the regions of the commerce and industry of the whole world. Would it be to her interest to put forward obstacles at the present time?

"The intention expressed by Great Britain and Japan to attain those same objects, which invariably have been pursued by the Russian government, can meet with nothing but sympathy in Russia, in spite of the comments in certain political spheres and in some of the foreign newspapers, which endeavor to present in quite a different light the impassive attitude of the imperial government toward a diplomatic act, which in its eye does not change in any way the general situation of the political horizon."

Germany Holds Aloof

Berlin, March 21.—The extension of the Franco-Russian alliance to eastern Asia has caused a great amount of comment and conjecture in the circles here which follow international politics. The text of the declaration was shown to Chancelior Von Buelow by the Russian and French ambassadors here, who together called upon Count Von Buelow for that purpose. It does not appear that Germany was invited to participate in the Franco-Russian declaration and it is absolutely certain that she would not have had anything to do with it, Germany's policy, at present, being to keep entirely clear of entanglements in China that might lead to acute controversies.

How Washington Views It

Washington, March 21.—The Franco-Russian note, relative to China, which was published yesterday, was handed to Secretary Hay by Ambassador Cambon for France and Count Cassini for Russia. The note is regarded officially as simply another pledge on the part of the signatory powers to maintain the "open door" in China. On this basis it will be accepted in a memorandum indicted by the president when the note shall have been duly considered.

President Gets Pro-Boer Resolution

Washington, March 21.—Representative Ryan of New York yesterday handed to President Roosevelt a copy of the resolution adopted at a meeting held in Buffalo March 3, expressing sympathy with the Boers and calling on the government of the United States to put an end to the shipment of mules from New Orleans to South Africa. The president said he would give them consideration.

Turkey Not Asked to Settle

Washington, March 21.—The persistent circulation of reports that the state department has made a demand upon Turkey for reimbursement of the money expended in the ransom of Miss Stone is causing a good deal of annoyance to the officials of that department. It can be stated as a fact that the state department has made no such demand upon Turkey.

Many Exposed to Smallpox

Fitchburg, Mass., March 21.—Five new cases of smallpox were discovered here yesterday, all in one family. The family lives in a tenement house where about 30 people reside, of whom 14 work in the mills, so that there has been considerable exposure.

Turkey Wants Powers to Act

Constantinople, March 21.—The Turkish government has directed the ottoman ambassadors to solicit the friendly intervention of the powers at Sofia, concerning the differences between Turkey and Bulgaria in relation to Macedonian affairs.

Fishermen to the Rescue

Millville, N. J., March 21.—Schooner Milton E. Studams, loaded with over 100,000 bushels of oyster shells, sank during a gale in the Delaware bay last night. The members of the crew were nearly exhausted when rescued by fishermen.

Twenty-Five Thousand In Camps

Manila, March 21.—The two reconcentrado camps in Batangas province are most carefully maintained. The Filipinos in the camps are healthy and contented. There are 6000 Filipinos in one of the camps and 19,000 in the other.

BEDSTEAD DRAPERIES.

A Tasteful Device Which Does Not Interfere With Ventilation.

The prejudice against the drapery of bedsteads caused by the old fashioned "four poster" is now disappearing in favor of a light and tasteful style, which causes in no way discomfort to the sleeper. This drapery may be arranged in such a way that it will not interfere in the least with the free circulation of air in the bedroom, and for the purpose of illustration we select an ordinary metal bedstead.

HOW THE DRAPERY IS ARRANGED.

For the successful carrying out of the design a round piece of wood five inches in diameter and two inches thick is required.

In the center of this a hole must be bored through large enough to take a round piece of wood of a length to suit the width of the drapery to be used. A portion of an ordinary broom handle will answer the purpose. This is fixed to the wall by four nails at the desired height above the head of the bed. It would be as well if the holes for the nails were bored in the wood first. The drapery is thrown over this and looped back to the wall as depicted. This is an extremely simple and effective drapery and can be made in almost any light material.

Making an Omelet.

A frequent cause of failure in making omelets is in the use of too many eggs at a time. Four eggs make an omelet easy to handle. If more are needed, it is better to make a second or even a third one.

To make a plain omelet beat the eggs thoroughly, not separating whites and yolks. Add a tablespoonful of milk and a saltspoonful of salt for every egg. Put a teaspoonful of butter on the end of a knife (a palette knife is best, but a case knife will do) and oil the omelet pan thoroughly on bottom and sides. Turn in the egg mixture and keep the pan in motion on a hot part of the stove so that one part will not cook faster than another. When the eggs have become sufficiently firm on the bottom of the pan, run the knife carefully under and loosen the omelet so that it will easily slide to and fro. Then cover for a minute or two and raise the pan a trifle from the stove, so that the bottom will not scorch while the top is "settling." Slide the knife under, fold the omelet over and serve at once.

Women of Today.

The women of today are better educated and hence superior in every way as wives, mothers, housekeepers and members of the community to those of a century ago, and they are treated with far more respect by the men of the household than formerly. Women's influence in all directions steadily increases with their higher development. Naturally they are far more contented and happy with all the privileges they now enjoy than they were under the old restraints. There is nothing that could be borrowed from the past which would improve their present condition.

When woman fully awakes to the beauty and value of science, philosophy and government, then will the first note of perfect harmony be touched; then will the great organ of humanity be played on all its keys, with every stop rightly adjusted, and the louder, loftier strains, the march of civilization will be immeasurably quickened.

In Wearing Veils.

"How many women are persistently ruining the 'bloom' of their lips and the contour of cheeks and all pleasant 'expression' by pinning their veils too tightly across the face," said a woman. "Observe the women on the streets, and you will see any number of them at frequent intervals 'pouting' out their lips so as to push off the pressure of the tightly drawn veil and all unconscious that the peculiar action has grown into a fixed habit or that it makes a perfect caricature of their faces every time they do it."

Little Things.

It is the little things of life often that prove the most trying. Bureau drawers that stick are sometimes more difficult to endure than a serious trouble. It is worth while to stop and remember that to rub the offending edges with a cake of hard soap, a bit of stove blacking or even a soft lead pencil will make life worth living again. If the windows of our poorly built houses rattle at night aggravatingly, a few slips of folded newspaper will stop the noise and bring peace and slumber.

A Useful Cement.

Gin and gelatin make a very good cement, which is so clean it leaves no mark afterward. Dissolve a small quantity of gelatin in some gin until it is of the consistency of thick gum. Wash the edges of the china or glass to be joined, then apply the cement and allow it to dry.

GETTING TOGETHER.

Working for Settlement of Quarrymen's Strike.

State Board Make an Investigation.

Meeting of Quarrymen's Union Held Last Evening.

Mr Barry of the State Board of Arbitration made an unofficial visit to Quincy Friday afternoon in connection with the strike among the quarrymen. Mr. Barry's visit was at the request of some citizens who called upon the board in relation to the strike.

He came unattended and unannounced Arriving in Quincy he made his way to West Quincy where he looked over some of the quarries and interviewed parties on both sides. He then departed for Boston as quietly as he came.

Whether any good results will come from his visit remains to be seen.

From what can be learned it would appear that there is a growing feeling on the part of the more intelligent quarrymen that the last proposition of the Quarry Owners' committee was a fair one, and did not cover up any trick or scheme to get the best of the workmen.

A largely attended meeting of the Quarrymen's Union was held at Farnum's hall Friday evening. Several citizens were invited to be present at the meeting to talk over the situation. What the outcome of the meeting was or what action was taken, could not be learned, although it would not be at all surprising if the two committees had a joint meeting tonight and endeavored to reach an understanding.

Many Friends.

Brasee's hall, Wollaston, was the scene Thursday night of a surprise party and dance, in honor of Miss Georgia Pitts, a popular young lady of Wollaston, by about one hundred and fifty of her friends. A very enjoyable concert was given from eight until nine o'clock, including song by Mr. E. E. Bullock; piano solo, Miss Ethel Parker; stump speech and Irish comedy songs, Mr. Gallagher; song, Miss Celina Beliveau. Each was heartily encored, and the artist graciously responded. At the close of the concert Elmer Baker of Quincy, presented Miss Pitts with a handsome chatelaine bag, to which she responded. After this feature of the evening a grand march took place, led by Miss Georgia Pitts and Mr. Paterson.

Dancing was enjoyed until 12.30 Mr. Wilson of South Quincy, the well known pianist, presided at the piano. Refreshments were served during the evening. The party was in charge of Mrs. O. A. Minot, Mrs. F. Taylor, Miss Georgia Miner, Miss Lucy Shunk of Wollaston; Mr. Ernest Hayden, Mr. Arthur Paterson of Quincy. Friends were present from Boston, Atlantic, Roxbury, Milton, Quincy, Wollaston and Somerville.

BEFORE THE MAYOR.

Two Policemen Will Have a Hearing Next Week.

Chief of Police Joseph W. Hayden has preferred charges against officers Frank J. Daveron and Carl Nicol. for neglect of duty. The specific charges against Officer Daveron are failing to patrol his route for several hours; failing to attend a session of the district court without justifiable cause; and failing to properly operate his call boxes.

Those against Officer Nicol are for neglect of duty, and failure to properly operate his call boxes.

A hearing will be held at City Hall before Mayor Bryant next Wednesday evening.

WILL NOT CONSIDER.

Eight Hours Out of Question in Barre Quarries.

The Quarrymen's Association meet last night to consider the demand of their workmen presented a few days ago, but they evidently consider eight hours out of the question, for it was voted to refuse to consider the demands for an eight-hour day with nine hours pay. The letter from the union demanded that the new schedule go into effect April 10.

The Coal Strike.

It is reported that all of the drivers at Sheppard & Sons Braintree wharf returned to work this morning. At Quincy, Sheppard & Sons have a number of teams delivering coal, and Patch & Sons also have several teams on.

Parents' Meeting.

A Parents' meeting will be held in the Unitarian Chapel next Thursday evening, March 27, under the auspices of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school who desire to stimulate general interest in the work. Two very interesting speakers are to be present: Rev. John H. Applebee of West Roxbury, who is an earnest advocate of Sunday school work, and very able in general methods, and Miss Maud Louise Parker of Boston, who will illustrate Primary teaching for young children. Miss Parker's manner of presenting this subject is most original and pleasing. The meeting will be called to order promptly at 7.30. After the speaking there will be an opportunity to meet the speakers and to enjoy a social hour, during which tea will be served in the ladies' parlor.

Heavy Fines.

Abraham Breen, Charles F. Ridlan and Alex B. Scott, the three employes of the Old Colony street railway who were arrested last week for attempt at larceny of the company's copper wire, and Joseph Silber the junk dealer who it is alleged purchased the wire from the men, received sentences in the district court this morning that will cause them and others to think twice before they take any more railroad wire. Silber was fined $100, and Breen, Ridlan and Scott were fined $50 each.

How to Cure the Grip.
Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. FISH OR FLESH

A ST. PATRICK'S DAY STORY...

By Peter McArthur

Copyright, 1901, by Peter McArthur

ELLEN CALLAHAN was standing at the door of her father's house watching the St. Patrick's day procession file past on its way to the church, where there was to be a special mass for the United Descendants of the Irish Pioneers. Suddenly a joke flashed into the head of Tim Carson, and he couldn't hold it in, though he well knew what the result would be.

"See that you don't make fish of one and flesh of the other, Ellen, darlint," he called to her. Everybody in the procession roared, Ellen blushed furiously and Will Ryan, who was carrying the banner of the order, stiffened himself straighter than ever and registered a vow to thrash Tim Carson.

Inspired by the success of Carson's joke, Mike McGrath thought he, too, would have his fling and bawled:

"Ellen, remember it must be the whole hog and all or none at all!"

While the crowd was laughing at this fresh sally Dan Halloran, who was riding at the head of the procession, gave the patient horse he bestrode a vicious cut with his switch and swore under his breath that Mike McGrath would carry his features in a sling for at least a month after this blessed day. At the second gibe Ellen had darted back into the friendly shelter of the house, where her mother was laughing fit to kill herself.

"Sure, it is your own fault, Ellen, if they do be joking with you. Why don't you make up your mind which one of them you want?"

"Perhaps I'd better wait till I'm asked," said Ellen.

"Tut!" said her mother, with asperits. "Everybody in the whole settlement knows that Will Ryan and Dan Halloran are just crazy after you, and you needn't tell me, as often as you have been to picnics and olios with one or the other of them or have come home from the church with them, that they have never asked you."

"Well, I have never given them my promise, then." And she tossed her crown of bushy red hair defiantly.

"Oh, of course, I don't want you to take any one you don't want to, but Dan Halloran is a fine boy."

"He's all right when he's working in the coalyard in the winter, but he is always dead broke in the summer when the extra men are laid off."

"Well, Will Ryan always has enough when the fish are running in the summer time."

"Yes, and all winter he would want me to live on 'potatoes and point,' as his folks before him did in Ireland."

But, despite her objections, these two young men occupied more of Ellen's thoughts than she would confess even to herself. She well knew that her happiness depended on making a choice between them, but which would she have? While she was in the city working as a housemaid for the past few months, it being her duty to help support the still growing family of Callahans, Dan had his fat months and was able to pay her several visits, on which occasions he urged his suit vehemently. The same months were Will Ryan's lean months; but, though he could not go to see her, he could write letters, and he devoted his leisure to writing such fine ones that he kept his rival from gaining an undue advantage, and, now that Ellen had come home to spend St. Patrick's day under the family roof, they stood on a fairly equal footing, and each was resolved to wrest a final decision from her before she returned to the city. But as each was a distinguished member of the United Descendants of the Irish Pioneers they were unable to call on her until the day's performance was over, and now each had a prospective fight on his hands that might make all the difference in the world in the result of his plans. But in order that the gibes that gave such offense may be properly understood something must be told of the town in which they all lived as well as of the high opposing parties themselves.

Ongiara is a sleepy little town on one of the great lakes, one of the rapidly increasing number of whose inhabitants it is said that they live for nine months of the year on fish and three months on the summer residents. At least three generations have elapsed since it was first settled by Irish fisher folk who followed in the new world the art that had been practiced for untold generations by their ancestors in the ever loved island. They fished prosperously every summer and starved cheerfully every winter till the development of the town and surrounding country gave rise to new industries. The clearing away of the forests made it necessary to have a coalyard, and when one was established Dan Halloran had been induced to work in it every winter. It is true that he might have fished in the summer and so have been prosperous all the year round; but, with the fatuity of a certain class of laborers, he looked on his work of handling coal as something of a profession, and when he was laid off in the summer he disdained to do anything else. In this he was no worse than all his friends and neighbors, who regarded their occupations in the same way, and Will Ryan really could not think of himself as doing anything else but ishing. This accounted for their months of poverty and prosperity, and as every one else in the town was of much the same shiftless disposition no one thought of reproving them for their foolish idleness.

Another thing that they inherited from their fathers was an intense love for the customs of "the ould sod," and in consequence St. Patrick's day was always celebrated with processions made gay with the most wonderful regalias that could be devised from green cloth. And on the year we have in mind Tim Murphy, the grocer, had added a touch that seemed half Irish, half Yankee, and that was a "hog guessing." He announced months in advance that the huge barrow he was fattening would be slaughtered on St. Patrick's day and that the man who guessed nearest to its exact weight would get the hog. Each was to pay 25 cents for a chance to guess, and on St. Patrick's day the hog was to be placed on exhibition in an open stall, where all could see it and have a fair chance to estimate its weight. At 4 o'clock the guessing would end, and then it was to be killed and weighed.

When the "hog guessing" was first announced, Dan and Will had expressed a lively interest, and each had told his best friend what he was thinking about, with the result that the whole town soon knew.

"If I can guess its weight," said Dan confidentially to his leaky friend, "I'll have the foundation of the summer's living, and, with what I have saved this winter, I can start housekeeping with Ellen."

"I could sell that pig for enough ready money to give Ellen and me a start," Will confided to his babbling friend. "We will soon have plenty of fish again, and I never cared much for pork anyway."

So each for a different reason made up his mind that he really needed that pig to complete his scheme and at once took steps to get it. Each of them haunted the pen where he was laying on such a wonderful amount of flesh that he could hardly walk and did a lot of thinking about his probable weight. But neither had a very good standard to go by.

"A lump of coal as big as that pig would weigh almost a ton," said Dan to himself. "But coal is heavier than pork, and it is the only thing that I am any judge of the weight of."

Will really had a better standard to go by, for fish and pork are much the same weight, though the shapes in which they are put up by nature are entirely different. To figure out how many two pound whitefish or hundred pound sturgeon he would need to make a bulk equal to that of Murphy's barrow was a problem far above a man who had never gone beyond vulgar fractions in the public school. But each in his different way figured as closely as he could, paid the necessary quarter to be allowed to guess at the weight of the animal and so entered into competition with at least 120 other villagers and farmers from the surrounding country. But, like true and loyal descendants of the Irish pioneers, they both deferred going around to the grocery store to make their guesses until the ceremonies for the day were over. And while marching in the procession, as already told, their friends had thought fit to make merry with them. But just wait.

Tim Carson was one of the first to reach the grocery store after the Descendants had disbanded, and, with the instinct of a true Irishman, he knew what was going to happen. He made his guess and then stood with his back to the wall, where no one could take him unawares. Then Will Ryan marched sternly up to the grocer and recorded his guess with the air of a man who had something else on his mind and immediately stripped off his coat and regalia. In the meantime Carson had done the same, and a moment later there was a howling ring around them ready to see fair play. There was no need of any explanations, for both Ryan and Halloran had been teased unmercifully about their devotion to Ellen and the part that Murphy's pig might play in winning her decision provided she wished to start housekeeping. Both men clinched after a couple of futile swings that missed their mark, and for the next few seconds the fight was a snarling jumble of legs and arms, out of which Ryan's face finally emerged with a bloody nose and cut lip. But he was on top, and a moment later was perilously bestriding his enemy, sitting on his stomach and smashing his gnarled knuckles into his face.

"Enough, enough!" roared Carson, and the crowd closed in and separated them, for that was their idea of fair play. The fighters then washed off the blood as best they could, shook hands and adjourned with their friends to Donnelly's saloon to have a drink with the victor, which the saloon keeper kindly hung up until the first lucky day of fishing. But before they had finished this ceremony with much laughter a shout told them that Halloran was attending to the case of the other joker. As in the first case, the man who was battling for the love of his lady came out victorious and made merry with his friends.

By this time the last guess for the hog had been received, and the grocer and his assistants were busy with the work of killing and dressing it. Dan's interest in this was so keen that he couldn't help waiting to see the carcass weighed, and the treatment he had given Mike McGrath made every one else who might feel humorous keep a civil tongue in his head. But while Dan was watching the weighing Will had taken time by the forelock and had hurried away to see Ellen.

"If I win, I'll hear of it soon enough," he said, and he counted every minute not spent with his idol as worse than wasted.

"For the love of the saints," exclaimed Mrs. Callahan as she opened the door, "what happened to you?"

Will smiled a thick, swollen smile and carried himself with the air of the man in the picture who says, "But you ought to see the other fellow," as he replied:

"I just had a bit of an argument with Tim Carson for being so fresh with Ellen this morning."

"But what did you do to McGrath for his impudence?" asked Ellen after shaking hands and laughing at his war worn appearance.

"Oh," said Will, with a frown, "Dan Halloran thought it was some of his business to look after him."

"Well," said Ellen saucily, "I guess it was as much of his business as it was of yours." Then she realized that Dan had not come to see her, and she exclaimed, with an exasperating air of alarm:

"But he didn't get hurt, did he? Oh, he didn't get hurt?"

Will smothered his wrath as best he could and assured her that Dan was all right, for he knew she would be for running away to nurse him if he said he was hurt, such being the way of woman.

"Oh, he's all right," he said, with a fine show of irony, "but he had to stay and spark the pig at Murphy's while I thought it more to my taste to come and spark you."

"Spark the pig?" asked Ellen. "I have heard enough about you wanting that pig yourself."

"True for you, but I only wanted to sell it. But Dan is like the fellow in the old schoolbook:

"He could not love you, dear, so much Loved he not short ribs more."

At this sally Ellen made a laughing rush at him with a broom in her hand, and he dodged into the woodshed. Her mother heard a short struggle in the darkness into which Ellen had followed him and laughed quietly, for she had been young herself. A minute or so later Dan burst into the house, yelling: "I won the pig! I won the pig, Ellen, I won the pig!"

"You can't fool him on pigs!" called Ryan's voice out of the darkness. "He was raised among them." Ellen's laughter was heard applauding this honored jest, and when they appeared a moment later arm in arm Dan knew it was all over.

"I guess, Dan," said Mrs. Callahan, "that this is a case of fish, not flesh."

"I'll see you before you get home tonight, William Ryan!" Dan exclaimed menacingly as he started toward the door.

"I shall be delighted to have some conversation with you," answered Ryan politely. Then he and Ellen received the blessings and congratulations of her mother and the rest of the family.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For Week Beginning March 23—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Missions; a meeting in the interest of home missions. "Our Own For Christ."—Ps. lxxxv, 1-13.

In the Eighty-fifth Psalm, which is the basis of our study, the psalmist acknowledges the blessings of God vouchsafed to his nation in the past and appeals to God for the continuance of these divine favors, that the land may be full of spiritual and temporal blessings. "Lord, Thou has been favorable unto Thy land; Thou hast brought back the captivity of Jacob; Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of Thy people; Thou hast covered all their sin. * * * Shew us Thy mercy, O Lord, and grant us Thy salvation." Thus the psalmist acknowledged the presence and favor of God, and thus he prayed for the continuance of His mercy and for the salvation of His land. His heart's desire was for the salvation of his land. With Paul he might have said, "My heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved."

The desire for the salvation of one's own land is a worthy and laudable desire. Christ Himself wept over the city of Jerusalem when He realized that it would not be saved because of its unbelief. He sent His disciples in the first place "to the lost sheep of the house of Israel," and in His plan for the evangelization of the world the apostles were to begin "at Jerusalem and Judæa." Paul's heart burned for the salvation of his people, and he made it a subject of prayer to God. The scenes of the missionary labors of Peter and James and John were practically entirely among the Jews, their own people. The Jews should want Jerusalem saved, the English should desire the salvation of England, the Germans the salvation of Germany, and Americans should desire and pray for the salvation of America.

Our interest in the salvation of our land should not end in desire. We should pray and labor for the realization of this desire. The ancient Jew prayed for the salvation of Israel. Paul's heart's desire and prayer for Israel were that they might be saved. Nor should our desire end in prayer; it should continue to service. God only can save the land, but God works through means. "Prayer and pains," declared John Eliot, the apostle to the Indians, "through faith in Jesus Christ can accomplish anything." Prayer must be supplemented by pains. The test of the genuineness of our prayers is service. We must do as well as ask God to do. We must pay as well as pray. Prayer, pains, payments—these will win our land for Christ.

How anxiously we should desire and pray that our land may be won for Christ. God has been favorable unto our land. It is "Immanuel's land" in a peculiar sense. But many in it are still unsaved—250,000 Indians, 300,000 Mormons, 250,000 Mexicans and millions of freedmen, mountain whites and foreigners! Let us do our part in winning the land for Christ.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. lii. 7; Nah. i. 15; Matt. v. 11, 12; xxviii. 18-20; Acts i. 6-14; Rom. ix, 1-5; x, 14, 15; I Cor. iii. 5-10; II Cor. xi, 23-33; Rev. xxii. 17.

Let Your Light So Shine.

Jesus does not say that men should put the unlighted lamp upon the lamp stand; that would be to expose it to derision and mockery, and He would not have men assume the name of Christian while their spirit is still unkindled by the flame of divine love. He declares the fact that when the love has come to their spirit it will of its own spontaneity manifest itself in those actions and words of love which have been forever the love of God showing itself through man to man, to be a light in the darkness to lead to greater light beyond; by those actions and words of love, moreover, God has transmitted His life from man to man, as in the ancient Greek races one runner lighted his torch at the flame of his who ran before him, and as he bore it on lighted that of the one who came after him. So the light of God's enkindled in one man's soul, diffusing itself into other lives, has become by the laws of propagation the light of the world. Can one of us, then, be so unmanly as to refuse to bear or bestow that light lest some idle spectator mock him if he stumble and fall?—Church Standard.

The Smile of Greeting.

Why do we not always smile whenever we meet the eye of a fellow being? That is the true recognition which ought to pass from soul to soul constantly. Little children in simple communities do this involuntarily, unconsciously. The honest hearted German peasant does it. It is like magical sunlight all through that simple land, the perpetual greeting on the right hand and the left between strangers as they pass by each other, never without a smile.—Helen Hunt.

At Sea.

The wind is like an armed foe
  Drawn up to bar the way;
The strong seas smite us blow on blow;
  The decks are lashed with spray;
High crested tower above the ship
  The waves with lips afoam,
But welcome every plunge and dip
  Which brings us nearer home.

The dear west beckons from afar
  With gold gleams in her eyes;
The glinting stars familiar are
  High hung in clear, cool skies.
We send an answering smile for smile
  Up to the airy dome
And welcome every weary mile
  So it but bring us home.

Sweet hope which lifts the dull, long hour
  And makes it light to bear;
Sweet waiting welcome which has power
  To make the dark seem fair;
Sweet hands held out across the sea
  To reach us where we roam,
We can bear hardest things since we Have turned our face toward home.

—Congregationalist.

Bicycle Prophecy.

To hear some folks talk you might think that bicycle riding was a thing of the past. Not so, for more wheels will be sold this year than ever before.

We expect to sell five times as many wheels during the season as we did last year. Every indication points to it. We have the finest bicycles ever manufactured, at a price so low that even the humblest workman can own one and ride to and from his work. Just call and look at the greatest wheel value on earth.

THE SHAWMUT, $17.75.

We carry also—Daytons, Iver Johnson, Orients, Crawfords. Good Tires, $1.50.

TO PROTECT PRESIDENT

Senate Passes Bill, With but Fifteen Negative Votes

A FAR-REACHING MEASURE

Makes Accomplices of Assassins or Would-Be Assassins Equally Guilty With Principals—Bill Repealing War Revenue Taxes Also Passed

Washington, March 22.—Two important measures were passed by the senate yesterday, the bill for the repeal of the war revenue taxes and that for the protection of the President of the United States.

The bill for the protection of the president was under discussion during the greater part of the session. Mr. Patterson made an extended speech in opposition to it and Mr. Fairbanks supported it. All amendments to the measure were rejected and it was passed by a vote of 52 to 15.

The bill provides that any person within the United States who shall wilfully and maliciously kill the president or any officer on whom the duties of president may devolve, or any sovereign of a foreign country, or shall attempt to kill any of the persons named, shall suffer death; that any person who shall aid, abet, advise or counsel the killing of any of the persons named, or shall conspire to accomplish their death, shall be imprisoned not exceeding 20 years; that any person who shall threaten to kill or advise or counsel another to kill the president or any official on whom the duties of president may devolve, shall be imprisoned not exceeding 10 years; that any person who shall wilfully aid in the escape of any person guilty of any of the offenses mentioned shall be deemed an accomplice and shall be punished as a principal. The secretary of war is directed to detail from the regular army a guard of officers and men to protect the president "without any unnecessary display" and the secretary is authorized to make regulations as to the dress, arms and equipment of such guard.

The revenue bill was passed without division and after only one short speech. Mr. Tillman embraced the opportunity afforded by the consideration of the bill to protest against the repeal of the duty of 10 cents a pound upon tea.

The house passed the river and harbor bill, which has been under consideration throughout the week. Although several minor amendments were adopted, not a single dollar was added to the measure and, as passed, it carried exactly what it did when it came from the committee—$60,688,267, including authorizations.

Cable Will Be Kept Open

Washington, March 22.—The state and navy departments have been informed of the purpose of the government of Colombia to censor all dispatches passing over the cables between diplomatic and consular officers on the isthmus and their home governments. Not much importance is attached to the notice. Our government, being under the obligation to protect isthmian transit, undoubtedly would hold that the free use of the cables and telegraphs is necessary to the exercise of that power and would not permit any interference with it. With a war vessel on either side of the isthmus there is little doubt of the physical ability of our government to protect its cable commnication.

Argument For Pure Food

Washington, March 22.—The house committee room of the committee on commerce presented the appearance of a laboratory yesterday, as Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry of the agricultural department, presented many samples of adulterated foods, in connection with his advocacy of the Hepburn pure food bill. It was well known, he said, that the basis of certain jellies is apple skins and cores. Dr. Wiley maintained that it is not fair that those making pure goods should be undersold by those making adulterated goods, and he urged that the agricultural interests deserved the protection of pure food laws.

Lottery Doesn't Exist All Schley Bills Postponed

Washington, March 22.—The Mexican ambassador has issued a statement denying the existence of a lottery in San Luis Potosi, Mex., and says the tickets are forged and the list of prizes false. He asks the press to assist the potoffice authorities in denouncing by means of publicity this fraud.

Washington, March 22.—The house committee on naval affairs, by a vote of 7 to 4, yesterday adopted a resolution concurring in the conclusions of President Roosevelt as to terminating the agitation of the Schley controversy, and indefinitely postponing all bills and resolutions on the subject.

Hayti on Verge of Revolution

Kingston, Ja., March 22.—Letters from Port Au Prince, Hayti, say that the whole country is disturbed owing to the bad political situation. The government is making numerous arrests, principally at Jacmel, where it is feared a revolutionary outbreak is imminent.

Because He Lost Son's Love

New York, March 22.—Joseph Liebenguth, 70, shot and dangerously wounded his daughter-in-law yesterday, and then killed himself. He complained that the young woman had taken his son's love from him.

HATS FOR EASTER.

They Are Generally Trimmed With Flowers, Chiffon and Malines.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, March 18.—If there is any young lady who wishes to make for herself a very dainty and youthful appearing summer dress, she can do so if she will follow the lines laid down in this letter. First the simplicity of the style is a recommendation, and secondly the real beauty of the whole garment makes it one to desire and, desiring, copy. And it is one of those adapted to all seasonable materials. The square neck and elbow sleeves make it rather more suitable for a summer gown, except when it is intended for a semigrand occasion like a dinner, or it can be worn as a tea gown, for quite young ladies do not as a general rule go about in those long and loose dresses, heretofore so popular. Tea gowns are naturally to be seen, but not to the same extent they were some three seasons ago.

This dress is made of cream mistral over a slip of taffeta of the same shade. There is a shaped flounce scarcely held full and joined to the bottom by a silk covered cord. The waist is a simple blouse shape, with a rich lace application like a pointed yoke down the front and around the shoulders in the back. The sleeves end just below the elbows and are finished off with rows of lace applique insertion. A violet velvet belt encircles the waist, and to this is fastened a scarf of wide ribbon in the new soft quality and printed with large but vaguely outlined flowers in shaded violet.

All the violet and helio shades are to be very prominent in all things this season. Violets are seen on so many of the new hats that I should not be at all astonished to see the fancy grow to a rage before spring fairly opens.

Speaking of violets reminds me that the Easter hats are now on view, and some of them are really worthy of the name of "creations," for surely human hands could not have produced such wonders. Tip tilted hats and those set at an acute angle, also dipped down over the face and set back from it so as to leave the forehead exposed, we see among the shapes.

As to materials there is no limit, for everything has been utilized for lovely woman's headwear. Straw naturally is the foundation, at least for the crowns, and some of the brims have straw of some kind on the upper side, while the lower one is a mass of ruffled, shirred or folded chiffon. Chiffon, that useful and almost ubiquitous filmy stuff, is even more than ever popular for all sorts of hats in trimming or as component parts of the whole. And it deserves the favor it receives.

To particularize, I will mention a yellow straw. Nearly all the straws are coarse. This is trimmed by a loosely draped chiffon scarf in which are twined and twisted any number of lovely tea roses with their buds and foliage. Under the brim, which is tilted sharply at the left side, is a bunch of the roses set very closely. This is very dainty.

A black chiffon is shirred over a wire frame, and the left side is raised so high that the hat seems ready to fall from the head, and it would were it not for the velvet band placed along the side, which forms the foundation for a full rosette of black chiffon edged with narrow gilt braid. On the left side of the hat is an enormous bunch of yellow roses and half opened buds. Very little foliage is put among these bunches of roses; but, on the other hand, there are some hats with nothing but foliage. I saw one fine and smooth straw with a great mass of shaded green rose leaves. Another had shaded violet leaves. A twisted band of violet velvet surrounded the crown.

One or two hats had loops of velvet ribbon about an inch wide placed at the back, where they could droop over the hair. Violet and heliotrope shades are always pretty for millinery and, judiciously placed, are not unbecoming to anybody, even the sallow complexioned women.

A handsome hat is one where the rather large crown is of yellow straw, and the brim—well, it is impossible to say of what this is, as it is completely covered with white malines.

One very stylish affair has a rough black straw faced with black velvet and around that four extremely narrow lines of white chiffon shirring. At the left side is an immense rosette of the chiffon edged with a shirring of the white. Chiffon, black and white, takes such a great place in the spring millinery that one can scarcely go astray in using it.

OLIVE HARPER.

BANGOR IS SAFE

But Serious Floods Are Feared In Other Portions of Maine

Bangor, Me., March 22.—The great ice jam that formed in the Penobscot at and below Bangor on Thursday afternoon, and caused the river to back up into the streets, broke at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and passed down. The water, which had reached a higher point than on Thursday night, immediately began to fall and in less than an hour was down to the usual spring freshet pitch.

All day long the merchants in the low lying streets were engaged with all the help they could get in moving stocks to high land or to upper floors. This work, accompanied with much damage in many cases to the goods, had scarcely been finished when the jam broke and the flood was over.

The losses are many, but the aggregate is not so large as was at first supposed. Damage to stocks of goods may be anywhere from $15,000 to $25,000; to the two bridges partially carried away, $50,000, and on logs and lumber carried away perhaps $25,000.

Flood news of an alarming nature comes from the Aroostook, Machias and Union rivers. On the Aroostook it is reported that the new mill of the Ashland Manufacturing company at Ashland and 30,000,000 feet of logs are in danger of being carried out. Should this occur, the loss would be from $300,000 to $400,000. On the Machias the water is very high and crews have been sent up river to open all gates in order to relieve the dams of pressure. There is no ice in the Machias river. On the Union river the water is also very high and fears are felt that the Green lake dam will go out, which would cause general disaster along the river.

Challenge For Airship Race

Chicago, March 22.—A challenge for an airship race in Chicago to be held as a preliminary event to the $200,000 aerial steeplechases at the St. Louis World's fair of 1903 was sent last night to Santos-Dumont at Paris, France, by Theophilus Williams of Chicago. Rules and regulations similar to those that are to be in vogue at the St. Louis fair grounds will govern the contest. Several successful tests of the Chicagoan's machine are said to have been made.

The Thunderer's Warning

London, March 22.—The Times, in an editorial this morning, assumes that at the cabinet meeting yesterday the question of enforcing the crimes act was again discussed, and expressed impatience with the government's timorousness in dealing with the growing power of the United Irish league. The Times says it will be perilous for the ministers any longer to shut their eyes to the serious conditions in Ireland.

Gotham's Troublesome Tunnel

New York, March 22.—Park avenue was again the scene of an accident yesterday which, while it entailed no loss of life, caused a property loss of considerable proportions. The fronts of several four-story private houses sank into the earth on account of undermining of the foundations by excavations for the rapid transit tunnel. The financial loss is estimated at $75,000 to $100,000.

Admits Eleven Men Were Killed

Manila, March 22.—The court martial appointed to try Major Littleton, W. T. Waller and Lieutenant Day of the marine corps, on the charge of executing natives of the island of Samar without trial, proceeded yesterday to try the accused officers. Major Waller pleaded "not guilty" to the charge of murder, but admitted that 11 men had been killed.

Rhodes Losing Strength

Cape Town, March 22.—The weather here is cooler and it is raining. Last night Cecil Rhodes was breathing better and took nourishment, but his heart was weaker and this caused renewed anxiety. According to the latest report the patient was restless and decidedly weaker.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The executor of the estate of Mrs. Susan P. Lee of New York announces that a legacy of $30,000 has been left Washington and Lee university by her will.

Mrs. Robrts, widow of the late Charles Roberts of Philadelphia, will present Haverford college with a new assembly hall in memory of her husband. The building is to cost $50,000. She will also give the college Mr. Roberts' choice collection of autographs, worth about $50,000.

William H. Frost, dramatic editor on the New York Tribune for the past 15 years, is dead. He was born at Providence in 1863, and was graduated from Brown university.

Mrs. Mary L. P. Ames, a botanist of world-wide fame and whose name is an honored one in the royal botanical directory of Austria, died at her home in San Jose, Cal., aged 57 years.

W. L. Bennett has been appointed temporary receiver of the Driggs-Seabury Gun and Ammunition company of Derby, Conn.

The Franklin Automobile and Vehicle Tire company of New York city was incorporated at Albany with a capital of $500,000.

William A. Lukeman, aged 22, died at New Bedford, Mass., as the result of a fall while turning somersaults in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium there.

Malwatchin, on the borders of Russia, is the only city in the world peopled by men only. Chinese women are forbidden to live in this territory. All the Chinese of this border city are exclusively traders.

A transatlantic steamer, carrying what is called "a full mail," usually has 200,000 letters and 300 sacks of newspapers for London, to say nothing of the 500 and odd sacks for other places.

Good Afternoon.

While some observance of "Old Home Week" meets with favor, a leader is necessary to take the initiative.

As candidate for Congress ex-Mayor Hall should receive a complimentary vote in this city such as was given to Marshall P. Wright last fall for County Commissioner,—2218 to 804. At the last Congressional election Dr. Pierce led Congressman Naphen by 78. Should Mr. Hall go out of Quincy with over 1000 majority he would have a chance of election.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The method of winning and maintaining genuine newspaper strength is to deal fairly and honestly with the reader always; to print the new without regard to the opinions of the newspapers; to be clean; to have solicitude for accuracy; to print the truth alway, and to comment on it with the single purpose of advancing the true interests of community and country. The Ledger has always believed that a great responsibility rests upon the newspaper and is now more confident than ever that the truest and soundest newspaper success is founded in the long run on devotion to duty and unswerving fidelity to the people. —Philadelphia Public Ledger.

New Stone Docks.

A Washington dispatch to the Herald says: Plans will shortly be completed by the navy department for the construction of two of the largest stone dry docks in the country, to be located at the New York and Norfolk navy yards, and capable of taking from the water the heaviest warships built or under construction. They will cost about $1,100,000 each, and will be similar in design to the great stone docks now being established at Boston and Portsmouth, N. H.

Strikers Endorsed.

At a meeting of the Quincy Central Labor Union held Thursday evening the following motion was carried: "That the C. L. U. of Quincy, Mass., endorse the demands of the Coal Handlers' Union and Quincy Quarrymen's Union, and consider their demands are just and approve of all honorable means to effect a settlement."

Concert.

All our citizens who wish to encourage young people in doing good work should lend the stimulus of their presence at the concert of the Edward Hewitson Associates next Tuesday evening in the chapel of the First church. The young men who will take part have given much time to rehearsals, and the result is understood to be highly pleasing. The concert will be given under the auspices of the Woman's Alliance of the First church.

FOUND GUILTY.

Peculiar Verdict at Mock Trial at Wollaston.

The mock trial held at the Unitarian church, last evening went off perfectly.

It was ludicrous throughout, and afforded considerable merriment to the large audience.

The Great Libel case was laid in a county court in Kentucky just after the war of the rebellion. The personal appearance as well as the different remarks of characters, caused much laughter.

All present were supplied with fire arms, and constantly quarrels arouse and the chaos was so great and repeated that the clerk's cries of order were hardly heard in the confusion.

Before commencing the trial the judge consulted the jury as to the objections of the different jurors to be present. Their excuses were ridiculous and disregarded with contempt by the judge.

However, the man, who claimed his two children had just died and his wife was at home dying of diphtheria, found his way out before he had anticipated.

Joseph Choake, the plaintiff's attorney, accused James D. Penman of publicly slandering denouncing and ostracising Col. Hosa Bird, planter by means of the press as a public impostor.

After cross examination of plaintiffs whose statements were fabulous and defendant and plaintiff's witnesses. Abe Howl Hummer ordered Professor Socrates Rawbones, a scientific anatomist, to hold a diagnosis as to the wound in leg of the plaintiff, who had already, on being ordered, refused to show his wound, a thing which the defendant claimed was immodest in a court room.

Prof. Rawbones, first decided it was impossible to make a clean hole through the leg without necessitating amputation and that two shots should go through the same wound he declared as unheard of.

The judge at this point addressed the jurors who had just awakened from their trance and referred the case to them.

They decided that the defendant be obliged to pay the sum of 6 cents, for they claimed as it was written by his arm, and his arm was only one of his limbs, that the whole person should not be punished for what part o it does. The jury and judge agreeing to the decision the session adjourned.

MR. FAXON'S WORK.

To Be Continued by Miss Eva M. Brown.

Well Posted on Temperance Measures.

Tributes to Her Ability and Success at State House.

The most prominent news in the Globe this morning, if one may judge by the big double column scare head is the announcement that Henry H. Faxon of this city has withdrawn as active temperance apostle, and yields the scepter to Miss Eva M. Brown, long his secretary. Half tones of both appear prominently. The encomiums of the Globe and of Mr. Faxon of the work of Miss Brown are worthy of production, and are given in full:

Miss Brown is especially well known at the state house, where she passes a great deal of time during the legislative sessions looking after the different bills affecting the liquor question, the Sunday laws and other questions in which Mr. Faxon has always taken a great interest. At the opening of the present session she registered as the legislative agent of Mr. Faxon, thereby obtaining the privilege of conducting hearings and cross-examining witnesses.

In 1896 Miss Brown conducted one of the most important hearings ever held at the state house when the bill authorizing the paying to the state of fees received from liquor licenses was being considered. So far this year she has been concerned in 30 matters brought to the attention of the legislature. Not only does she keep track of all these legislative matters, preparing hearings and summoning witnesses, a task busy enough in itself, but she also conducts the head office of the Massachusetts total abstinence society on Bromfield street, Boston, where she answers hundreds of letters written by those who desire information on the liquor laws. She likewise takes care of all the routine work of the office.

It is safe to say that there is not a law on the statute books pertaining to the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, nor a decision on the same, with which Miss Brown is not familiar.

A notable work that she has complied is a volume entitled. "The Laws of Massachusetts Relating to Intoxicating Liquors." This book contains all the decisions on liquor questions which have been given in this state and to collect them together was an undertaking that required a careful study of the cases tried as well as all the laws passed by the legislature. In this book, also, are many valuable suggestions to those whose duty it is to enforce the laws. It has been published by Mr. Faxon, who has expended thousands of dollars upon it and to all who desire it a copy is freely given.

Miss Brown was born in Camden, Me., and at the age of two years moved to Augusta with her parents. While attending the schools of that city she was the classmate of the daughters of the late James G. Blaine. She has been an advocate of temperance ever since she was a little girl and, at one time, was a member of a cold water chapel in Augusta which was organized by Gen. Joshua Nye, now of the Boston custom house.

Miss Brown began her duties with Mr Faxon in 1879 as an assistant clerk. Later she became his private secretary. She assisted Mr. Faxon in the famous campaign when John D. Long was brought out as a candidate for governor by the temperance party. During that campaign Mr. Faxon hired railroad trains to transport the delegates to Worcester and engaged hotels to house them after he got them there. It was heralded far and wide as Faxon's free lunch campaign, but the objects sought by Mr. Faxon were accomplished and a great share of the hard work was faithfully carried out by Miss Brown. Mr. Faxon says that Mr. Long owed his election as governor more to Miss Brown than any other person in Massachusetts.

It was not until six years ago that Miss Brown began her career at the state house. At first she did not like the work, but under the guidance of Mr. Faxon she soon became familiar with the details of legislative routine. The universal courtesy shown her and assistance accorded by the members of the legislature were important factors in her success at the state house and today there is not a person on Beacon Hill whose advise is so much sought after or who enjoys greater confidence than does the woman on whose shoulders has fallen the mantle of the renowned Henry H. Faxon.

In speaking to a Globe reporter tonight of Miss Brown, Mr. Faxon said that if it had not been for the assistance which she gave him during the last 20 years he never would have been able to accomplish half the results which have been attained for the temperance cause.

"While I have been obliged to cease from active work in the temperance line," said Mr. Faxon, "I do so with the knowledge that the work will be carried on by abler hands than mine, so long as it is intrusted to Miss Brown. She knows more law than any woman lawyer and nearly all men lawyers in the state, and it is not an infrequent occurrence for her advice on the liquor laws to be sought by lawyers and legislatars. Why, in one day nine senators came down to my office on Bromfield street looking for points on certain liquor laws. During the hearing on the semi-colon bill and the abutters' bill, she proved an invaluable help.

Every day she receives hundreds of letters asking for information concerning the liquor laws, and this is freely and willingly given. In such cases she has the necessary authorities ready at her finger tips and her advice proves to be of incalculable help to police officers and others interested.

The effects of the temperance question in the city of Quincy alone is something to be proud of. During the past 20 years of no-license the population has increased 120 per cent. while the amount expended for the poor department has decreased 12 per cent. That's a pretty good indorsement for no-license."

Street Railway Hearing.

City of Quincy, In Council, March 17, 1902.

Somebody Must Pay For it.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Regarding the strike now going on between the quarry owners and men, I think the demand of the men is just and should be granted.

My reasons for this are, all the men ask are increase amounting to 11 1-9 per cent.

The Quarry syndicate, (which together with several other quarries controls, practically the entire output of Quincy granite) has raised the price of rough stock from 15 per cent. to 25 per cent within the last six months, without any increase cost of operation, viz:

Dell's quarry, privately owned, 85 cents per cubic foot.

Dell's quarry, syndicate owned $1.00 per cubic foot, increase 14 2-7 per cent.

J. Rheinhalter's quarry, $1.00 per cubic foot.

A. Rheinhalter's quarry, $1.00 per cubic foot.

Syndicate quarry, same quality of stock, $1.25 to $1.50 per cubic foot, increase 25 per cent. and upwards.

Of course private owners have since raised prices to about the same level and are in the same position to pay better wages.

The quarry owners claim that working at nine hours they are unable to meet the demand.

If so, why has the syndicate seen fit on acquiring control, to close several quarries successfully worked by individuals.

Now Mr. Quarry owners, get together, do justice to your men and also to your city.

The rise won't break you, somebody else must pay for it.

The coming summer promises to be the most prosperous for many years and don't let it be blighted, as in the past, by this latest unfortunate difficulty.

Storm Signals.

Large owners of marine property estimate that one severe storm, sweeping the Atlantic coast in the absence of danger signals, would leave not less than $3,000,000 worth of wreckage in its wake.

Unlucky Thirteen.

A New York man saved 1,300 pennies during many years and then had the bulky treasure stolen.

Selenium.

Selenium, one of the cheapest of the rare metals, is worth $22 a pound. It has the property of losing its resistance to the electric current under the influence of light and so is used in certain instruments, such as the telectroscope, which utilizes light rays as a means of conveying signals.

American Pine.

American pine when green weighs 44 pounds 12 ounces to the cubic foot. When seasoned, its weight is reduced to 30 pounds 11 ounces.

German Miles.

The mile in Germany is a somewhat puzzling measure. The explanation is that there are three kinds of miles—the German short mile, 6,859 yards; the German geographical mile, 8,237 yards, and the German long mile, 10,126 yards.

Debtors in Siam, when three months in arrears, can be seized by the creditors and compelled to work out their indebtedness. Should a debtor run away his father, his wife or his children may be held in slavery until the debt is cancelled.

Naval experts put down the active life of a modern battleship at about 15 years. A hundred years ago battleships lasted nearly six times as long and were on active service nearly the time of their commission.

Cochato Club Theatricals.

Cochato hall was packed last evening with club members and their friends, the attraction being the club threatricals. All the available settees and chairs were used and then many people were forced to stand.

First on the program came a farce in one act entitled "Old Cronies." Mr. Laurens Maynard as Dr. Jacks, "a very mild old gentleman with much of the old-fashioned student about him" and Mr. William Mason as Capt. Pigom, "A bluff, passionate old sea officer, short and preemptory in his manner," took their parts to perfection.

Capt. Pigom was in love with a Miss Jones and desired to propose marriage but he did not dare to ask her. He came to Dr. Jacks his old friend for advice.

To verbally propose seemed out of the question and after considerable debate a proposal by letter was rejected. A happy thought struck Capt. Pigom, to propose by telegraph would bring a prompt answer. This was done. A reply came from Mr. Jones stating that his daughter had given her hand that morning.

The play "My Uncle's Will" was presented by following cast: Florence Marigold, Mrs. George O. Wales; Charles Cashmore, her cousin, Robert Belcher; Mr. Barber, D. G. Doane.

The theme of the play is based on the will left by the uncle who bequeathed his property to the cousins provided they married, otherwise to go to Mr. Barber, a confidential friend.

The cousins at first object seriously as they really like each other and don't wish the money to interfere. After signing a renunciation they declare their love for each other and then destroy the papers thus carrying out the provisions of the will and preventing Barber from having the money to care for the "dogs."

Mrs. Wales as Florence Marigold was admirable and her acting of the usual high standard which she has attained. Mr. Doane likewise carried the part of Barber to perfection.

Mr. Belcher took the part originally given to Leonard Newell. Owing to Mr. Newell's illness the part was not assigned until a week ago and thus Mr. Belcher labored under a serious disadvantage.

The audience, however, were unable to discover a blemish in his part. His ease upon the stage was quite visable.

The last one on the program was a farce by John Kendrick Bangs, entitled "A Proposal Under Difficulties."

The characters were Robert Yardsley, Mr. Oscar C. Gallagher, and Jack Barlow, Mr. Walter E. Severance, two irreproachable young men, suitors for the hand of Miss Dorothy Andrews—Mrs. E. H. Haskell. Jennie, the housemaid, Mrs. Jessie Danforth, and Hicks a coachman, who although very violent, does not appear perhaps, very much to the relief of poor Yardsley, whom he threatens to "do up," a wholly unnecessary performance, according to Barlow, who announces that worthy as already "done up."

The scene is laid in a fashionable New York drawing room, empty, save for Yardsley, who has come to offer himself to Miss Dorothy, and who by his own confession has had nerve to get as far as the house and into it, but doubts how much further his courage will take him; he concludes desperately to make a try at it before Miss Dorothy appears, and while apostrophising the sofa, he in reality proposes to and is accepted by Jennie the housemaid, who has entered unperceived.

It is during this wretched contretemps that Barlow is announced, who has come with like intent toward Miss Dorothy, while they are vainly and ridiculously seeking to induce the other to go. Miss Dorothy appears and for the next half hour, devotes herself to pacifying the two belligerents, who are ordinarily the best of friends.

The characters have been well chosen and great praise is due them for the skill with which they managed this scene. Mrs. Haskell as Dorothy, was charming, and sustained her part as peacemaker, admirably.

Messrs. Gallagher and Severance, as rival suitors, fairly divided the honors easily proving themselves no amateurs before the footlights. Mr. Gallagher rose bravely to the occasion and though the lines of the play threw the victory into his hands. Mr. Severance, may unanimously offer himself as second best man, remarking that events of the afternoon had proved his capacity for that.

The part of Jennie, the maid, gave Mrs. Danforth ample opportunity to display a talent which for the stage has been often displayed before a Braintree audience. In her able hands the part was all that could be desired.

Mrs. Wales, who had full charge of the theatricals can feel highly pleased with the success which has crowned her efforts.

The settlement of Ponce de Leon at Caparra, near the site of Pueblo Viejo, across San Juan bay, is now, by more than 55 years, the first town established within the present borders of the United States. Historians, therefore, must give the prestige of antiquity, not to the Spanish town of St. Augustine, Fla., of 1565, as formerly, but to Caparra, founded in the year 1509.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

CHAPTER XIII.

MICHAEL STROGOFF, with his hands bound, was held in front of the emir's throne at the foot of the terrace.

His mother, overcome at last by so many physical and moral tortures, had sunk down, not daring to look or listen any longer.

"Look with all your eyes! Look!" Feofar-Khan had said, stretching out his threatening hand toward Michael Strogoff.

Without doubt Ivan Ogareff, knowing well the Tartar customs, had understood the bearing of that word, for his lips parted for an instant in a cruel smile. Then he went to take his place near Feofar-Khan.

A call of trumpets was heard immediately. It was the signal for the amusements.

"Now we have the ballet," said Alcide Jolivet to Harry Blount; "but, contrary to all custom, these barbarians give it before the drama."

Michael Strogoff had been ordered to look. He did look. A swarm of female dancers came upon the space reserved for them. Various Tartar instruments, united with the guttural voices of the singers, formed a strange harmony. There were a mandolin with a long neck made of the wood of the mulberry tree, with two strings of twisted silk, a kind of violoncello, open at the back, furnished with horsehair and made to vibrate with a bow, a long flute made of a reed, trumpets, tambourines and tomtoms. At once the dances began.

These dancers performed very gracefully various dances, sometimes singly and sometimes in groups. They had their faces uncovered, but from time to time they drew a light veil over their figures, and one would have said that a cloud of gauze was passing over their sparkling eyes like a vapor over the starry heaven.

When this first entertainment was over, a grave voice was heard, which said: "Look with all your eyes! Look!"

The man who repeated these words of the emir, a Tartar of high stature, was the chief executioner of Feofar-Khan. He had taken his position behind Michael Strogoff, and he held in his hand a sword with a broad and curved blade, one of those Damascus blades which had been tempered by the famous armorers of Karschi or of Hissar.

Near him some guards had brought a tripod on which was placed an iron dish, where some redhot coals were burning without emitting any smoke. The light crust which crowned them was due only to the incineration of a resinous and aromatic substance, a mixture of frankincense and benzoin, which had been thrown on their surface.

Meanwhile another group of dancers had succeeded the first, but of a race very different, which Michael Strogoff at once recognized.

And we must believe that the two journalists also recognized them, for Harry Blount said to his confrere:

"These are the Zingari of Nijni Novgorod."

"The very ones!" cried Alcide Jolivet. "I imagine their eyes bring more money to these spies than their legs!"

And in making them out to be agents in the service of the emir Alcide Jolivet, it is well known, did not deceive himself.

In the first rank of the gypsies figured Sangarre, in her superb costume, strange and picturesque as it was, which set off still more her beauty.

Sangarre did not dance, but stood in the middle of her dancing girls, whose fantastic steps partook of all the countries which their race had traversed in Europe, of Bohemia, of Egypt, of Italy and of Spain. They became animated at the noise of the cymbals which clanged on their arms and at the swelling of the "daires," a kind of drum sounded by the fingers.

Sangarre, holding one of these daires, which trembled between her hands, excited this troop of veritable corybantes.

Then came forward a youthful gypsy, some fifteen years old at most. He held in his hand a doutare, the two cords of which he made to vibrate by a simple gliding of the nails. He sang. During the couplet of his song of fantastic rhythm a danseuse came and placed herself near him and remained immovable, listening to him, but each time the burden came to the lips of the young singer she again took up her interrupted dance, shaking her daire near him and deafening him with the sound of her drum.

Then, after the last verse, the dancers enlaced the gypsy in a thousand turnings of their dances.

At this moment a shower of gold fell from the hands of the emir and his allies, from the hands of the officers of all grades, and to the noise of the pieces which struck the cymbals of the dancers were blended the last murmurs of the doutares and tambourines.

"Prodigal as freebooters!" said Alcide Jolivet in the ear of his companion.

And, indeed, it was stolen money which fell in showers, for with the Tartar tomans and sequins rained also Muscovite ducats and rubles.

Then silence was made for an instant, and the voice of the executioner, placing his hand on the shoulder of Michael Strogoff, again spoke those words whose repetition rendered them still more sinister:

"Look with all your eyes! Look!"

But this time Alcide Jolivet observed that the executioner did not hold his naked sword in his hand.

Then suddenly, as if at a given signal, all the fires of the fantasia were extinguished, the dances ceased, the dancers disappeared. The ceremony was terminated, and the torches alone lit up the plateau which some instants before was so full of lights.

At a sign from the emir Michael Strogoff was led into the middle of the square.

Little desirous of assisting at the torture reserved for this unfortunate man, Harry Blount and Alcide Jolivet then re-entered the city.

An hour later they were hastening along the road to Irkutsk, and it was among the Russians they would attempt to follow what Alcide Jolivet called by anticipation "the campaign of revenge."

The emir made a gesture. Michael Strogoff, pushed by the guards, approached the terrace, and then in that Tartar language which he understood Feofar said to him:

"Russian spy, you are come to see. You have seen for the last time. In an instant thine eyes shall be forever shut to the light!"

It was not with death, but with blindness that Michael Strogoff was about to be stricken. Loss of sight, more terrible perhaps than loss of life! The unhappy man was condemned to lose his eyesight.

Nevertheless on hearing the penalty pronounced by the emir Michael Strogoff did not become weak. He remained impassible, his large eyes open, as if he were wishing to concentrate all his life in this one last look.

To ask for pity from these fierce men was useless and, besides, unworthy of him. He did not even think of it. All his thought was concentrated on his mission that had irrevocably failed, on his mother, on Nadia, whom he should never see again! But he did not allow to be seen any of the emotion which he felt.

Besides, the feeling of vengeance, to be accomplished at some future time, carried away his whole being.

"Ivan," said he, with a menacing voice, "Ivan, the traitor, the last threat of my eyes shall be for thee."

Ivan Ogareff shrugged his shoulders.

But Michael Strogoff deceived himself. It was not in looking at Ivan Ogareff that his eyes were to be fixed never more to open.

Marfa Strogoff came and stood before him.

"My mother!" cried he. "Yes, yes, on thee must be turned my last look and not on this miserable man! Remain there before me, that I may still see thy beloved figure; that my eyes may close while looking at thee!"

The old Siberian, without uttering a word, came forward.

"Drive away this woman!" said Ivan Ogareff.

Two soldiers pushed back Marfa Strogoff. She drew back, but remained standing some paces distant from her son.

The executioner appeared. This time he held his naked sword in his hand. That sword, heated to a white heat, he had just drawn from the iron pan where the perfumed coals were burning.

Michael Strogoff was about to be made blind according to the Tartar custom, with a heated blade passed over his eyes!

Michael Strogoff did not seek to resist. Nothing else existed in his eyes than his mother, whom he devoured then with his look. All his life was in this last vision.

Marfa Strogoff, with her eyes wide open and her arms stretched toward him, was looking at him.

The white heated blade passed over the eyes of Michael Strogoff.

A loud cry of despair was heard. Old Marfa fell lifeless to the earth!

Michael Strogoff was blind.

His orders having been executed, the emir retired with all his household.

Soon there only remained on the plateau Ivan Ogareff and the torchbearers.

Did the miserable wretch wish to insult him still more and after the executioner give him the last blow?

Ivan Ogareff slowly approached Michael Strogoff, who heard him coming and at once straightened himself.

Ivan Ogareff drew from his pocket the emperor's letter. He opened it and as the last insult placed it before the eyes of the courier of the czar, before those eyes whose light had been brutally extinguished forever, saying at the same time:

"Read now, Michael Strogoff; read and go and repeat at Irkutsk what you shall have read. The true courier of the czar is myself!"

Having said this, the traitor placed the letter in his breast. Then, without turning round, he left the place, and the torchbearers followed him.

Michael Strogoff remained alone, some paces from his mother, who was lifeless, perhaps dead.

One heard at a distance the cries, the songs, all the noise of the orgies. Tomsk was illuminated and was bright as a city during a great feast.

Michael Strogoff listened. The scene of the late revels and crime was silent and deserted.

He dragged himself by groping toward the place where his mother had fallen. He found her with his hand. He bent down toward her. He brought his figure near to hers. He listened to the beatings of her heart. Then one would have said that he spoke to her in a low voice.

Did old Marfa still live and did she hear the words her son spoke to her?

In any case she did not make any sign of life by movement.

Michael Strogoff kissed her forehead and her white hairs. Then he rose, and, groping with his foot and trying to hold his hands in such a way as to guide him, he walked by little and little to the end of the plateau.

Suddenly Nadia appeared.

She went straight to her companion. A dagger that she held served to cut the cords that bound the arms of Michael Strogoff.

He, blind as he was, did not know who it was who was releasing him, for Nadia had not spoken a word.

But, that done, said she:

"Brother!"

"Nadia," murmured Michael Strogoff. "Nadia!"

"Come, brother," replied Nadia. "Henceforth my eyes shall be your eyes, and it is I who will conduct you to Irkutsk!"

In half an hour after Michael Strogoff and Nadia had left Tomsk.

A certain number of the prisoners on that night were able to escape from the Tartars, for officers and soldiers, all more or less besotted, had unconsciously relaxed the severe surveillance which they had maintained up to that time, both at the camp of Zabedeiro and during the march of the convoy.

Nadia, after having been led out with the other prisoners, had been able to escape and return to the plateau at the very moment Michael Strogoff was being conducted before the emir.

There in the midst of the crowd she had seen all. Not a cry had escaped her when the blade, white with heat, passed over the eyes of her companion. She had the strength to remain motionless and silent. A providential inspiration told her to preserve herself still free to guide the son of Marfa Strogoff to the end which he had sworn to attain. Her heart for the moment ceased to beat when the old Siberian fell lifeless, but a thought soon restored all her energy.

"I will be the dog of the blind man," she said to herself.

After the departure of Ivan Ogareff Nadia had hidden in the shade. She waited until the crowds left the plateau. Michael Strogoff, abandoned as a miserable being to be feared by no one, was alone. She saw him drag himself as far as his mother, bend himself down to her, kiss her forehead, then raise himself up and grope for flight.

Some moments later Michael and Nadia, hand in hand, had descended the steep hillside, and, after having followed the banks of the Tom as far as the extremity of the town, they happily passed out by a gap in the fence.

The route for Irkutsk was the only one that struck eastward. They could not make a mistake. Nadia rapidly pulled along Michael Strogoff. It was possible that early next morning, after some hours of orgies, the scouts of the emir, throwing themselves again on the steppe, would cut off all communication. It was then of the utmost importance to outstrip them and to reach Krasnoiarsk before them, which was 500 versts separate from Tomsk—in one word, only to leave the highway as late as possible.

The next morning, twelve hours after their departure from Tomsk, Michael Strogoff and Nadia reached the town of Semilowskoe, after a journey of fifteen versts.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

RETIREMENT OF MILES

May Follow His Attack on the Root Army Bill

RESTS WITH THE PRESIDENT

Who Takes the Position That Senior Line Officer Should Respect Superiors—Measure Miles Opposed Placed No Restriction on His Power

Washington, March 22.—Appearances now indicate that General Miles has passed the limit of endurance in his conduct toward his official superiors, and that he will be retired by order of the president. The conditions leading to this have been ripening for a good while, but charity toward a man with presidential aspirations has prevented the taking of any radical step up to the present hour. There was always in the foreground, also, the feeling that a great many admirers of Miles might regard him as a martyr.

The necessity preventing the further subversion of discipline will probably make it necessary to put the general on the retired list, where he can draw a salary at his ease while someone else sets the junior officers a better example of respect for authority.

The statements made by General Miles before the senate committee on military affairs were discussed by the president yesterday with a number of his callers, among whom were senators and representatives. The president took the position that the lieutenant general of the army should entertain toward his superiors the same respect that he would expect and demand from his subordinates.

The printed testimony of General Miles has not yet been made public and it is understood that it will be submitted to him for approval. It is well understood that a great deal of what the general said will not appear in the record. Members of the committee say the report published was correct in substance in every particular. At the same time, these senators do not agree that General Miles can be punished for his utterances before the committee, whether they appear in the record or not. Of course the committee could take no action to prevent the retirement of General Miles. That, under the law, is purely an executive act, and needs no confirmation or approval of the senate.

Secretary Root was in consultation for some time with President Roosevelt last night regarding the statement of General Miles before the military affairs committee of the senate. Senator Spooner also was present. Secretary Root declined to talk for publication concerning the matters, saying that he had not read the testimony given by General Miles before the committee.

The printed report of the testimony of Secretary Root before the military committee on this bill was made public yesterday. In his statement the secretary said that the general staff of the army as it is proposed to organize it under this bill would be simply an advisory board, and that its principal duty would be that of an advisory board.

"It proposes," he said, "to create by detail from the officers of the army a body of officers who shall be charged in the first place with the duty of doing the military thinking, of doing what the navy has a board engaged in now, and what we ought to have in the army, and have not today. The primary idea is not to give orders. It is to study and prepare plans for the men who give the orders."

Asked as to the place the commander-in-chief would occupy with reference to this board, the secretary replied that he would accept plans made by the board or not, as might please. The secretary continued as follows:

"The plan of the bill is to have the chief of staff selected by the president as commander-in-chief, and to have it a detail so that he will come in with the president and go out with the president."

Senator Bate—Do I understand that there is a limit to their power, so that they will not interfere with the lieutenant general?

Secretary Root—The proposition is to have the lieutenant general decide.

Peter Gets Another Pounding

Philadelphia, March 22.—Gus Ruhlin and Peter Maher met here last night for a six-round go. In the latter part of the second round Maher went down and out on a hard left on the jaw. The bell found him on the floor and his seconds carried him to his corner completely done for. He revived shortly.

Fitz Wanted Too Much

Los Angeles, Cal., March 22.—The Century Athletic club yesterday wired Tom Sharkey asking under what terms he would take Fitzsimmons' place and fight Jefferies in this city. The club refuses to accede to Fitzsimmons' demands for a larger purse and percentage than they originally offered.

An Alleged Traitor

Vienna, March 22.—The Tageblatt announces the arrest in Warsaw of the Russian general, Prince Varkoff, who is attached to the staff of Grand Duke Sergius, on the charge of complicity in the widespread revolutionary movement.

Gunboats May Have a Scrap

Panama, March 22.—The revolutionary gunboat Padilla was reported last night to be about 20 miles off this port, and the government gunboats Chucuito and Boyaca have left here in pursuit of her.

Mrs French's Lawyers Say She Left No Will—Talk of Foul Play

Boston, March 22.—Both Robert M. Morse and Harrison Dunham, who have acted as counsel for Mrs. Julia French, who was found dead at her Newbury street home Thursday afternoon, declare that it is their belief that Mrs. French died intestate. In this case the estate, valued at $400,000, will be divided between two sons.

Lawyer Dunham told a reporter yesterday that he had suspicions about his client's death, and that he had communicated his suspicions to the police department, but that that tribunal did not see fit to prosecute the case any further, believing that she met her death accidentally.

"The last time I saw her," said Mr. Dunham, two weeks ago, she told me that she felt that she would be murdered in her home, as she had a dream that she had been killed by being thrown into an elevator well, and asked that if she did meet her death in the way described by the dream that I would investigate it carefully. I feel that I ought to take some steps in the matter. How to go about it I hardly know at present.

"The fact that a wrench was found on the floor from which Mrs. French is thought to have fallen seems to me suspicious. It is a well established fact that people who fall grip tightly anything that they have in their hands at the time of their falling. Had Mrs. French been using this when she fell, I think the wrench would have been found in her hand or beside her body in the elevator well, instead of on the upper floor."

Word was sent to police headquarters yesterday that a week ago Tuesday Mrs. French drew $15,000 in cash from her broker's office, and left with the money in her satchel. The police are asked to ascertain what became of this money.

Warner Declared Insane

Boston, March 22.—Willard G. Warner, who has been in custody of the police pending investigation as to the cause of the death of his wife, was adjudged temporarily insane and sent to Deer island yesterday. The police say they have no evidence of an incriminating nature against Warner. Warner and his wife were found suffering from morphine poisoning in their home early in the week and the woman died on Wednesday.

Strikers Vote to Go Back

Thompsonville, Conn., March 22.—The strike in the dyeing department of the Hartford Carpet corporation has been declared off and the struggle between the Dyers' union and the corporation that has been waged seven weeks closed yesterday, when the union voted to allow the men to return to work. The executive council of the United Textile workers refused to sanction the strike.

Miss Stearns Loses Merchandise

Boston, March 22.—By a decree of Judge Lowell in the United States district court yesterday, Miss Francis H. Stearns must forfeit to the United States five packages of tapestries and other goods liable to duties, which were contained in Miss Stearns' personal baggage when she returned from abroad last November, and valued at about $2000.

Reply Thought to Be Unfavorable

Lowell, Mass., March 22.—The mill agents of Lowell met yesterday to consider the recent demand of Lowell Textile operatives for an advance of 10 percent. The agents drew up a letter and sent it to the Textile council, but its contents cannot be learned until tomorrow, when the council will meet. The impression is that the letter contains an unfavorable reply.

No Blame on Police

Barre, Vt., March 22.—The board of aldermen last night voted unanimously to exonerate the police of any blame for their failure to give the alarm Monday night on account of the high water in the river, which did much damage. The investigation was at the request of the local Merchants' association.

Want Ten Percent Increase

Lewiston, Me., March 22.—Committees from the mule spinners, loom-fixers, carders and speeder tenders' unions voted unanimously that it was time to demand an increase of 10 percent in wages, as has been given in other places. A union meeting will be held to consider the matter.

CECIL RHODES STORIES

Side Lights on England's Great Empire Builder.

HOW HE GOT HIS START IN LIFE.

Interesting Reminiscences of Early Days In the Kimberley Diamond Fields—Story of the Noted South African's Fondness For Animals. How He Once Had to Take His Turn.

The Hon. John Studdy, late of Kimberley, South Africa, from a personal knowledge of the subject has described how the first diamond was discovered which led to the building up of the city of Kimberley and how Cecil Rhodes laid the foundation of his colossal wealth and power.

"It was in 1869," he said to a correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "that I first met Herbert Rhodes, the pioneer of the Rhodes family fortune, at Du Toitspan, where we joined in the rush to Old De Beers, and in which latter place we worked together upon very friendly terms. In a short time Herbert Rhodes was followed by Frank, now Colonel Rhodes, when the two brothers entered into a partnership, working a good paying claim upon Road No. 8.

"Both brothers were very popular at the diggings. Herbert was a strong, good all round man, and if he possessed a fault it was his big hearted generosity, which at times carried him to lengths of expenditure perhaps not warranted by the extent of his find and who surely deserved a better fate than that horrible one of being burned to death, which subsequently overtook him when gold prospecting on the coast of Zanzibar.

"I had worked for over a year at Old De Beers with fairly satisfactory results when I went out, in company with a friend, upon that memorable hunting trip which led to the discovery of New Rush, or Kimberley, and incidentally to the making of the fortune and fame of Hon. Cecil Rhodes.

"It was on a Sunday afternoon, I remember, that we had pushed our way across a plain of high Tamboke grass, when, in searching for some partridges I had brought down near a clump of minora bushes, I found a prospect to which I at once called the attention of my companion. On making a careful survey of the ground, seeing that it was of a similar formation to that of Old De Beers, I sat down and sorted out some of the dirt, when in less than five minutes I picked out as many small diamonds.

"With this evidence of an important discovery before us we decided to give up the 'shoot,' and, returning to camp at Old De Beers, I immediately urged upon my partner the advisability of starting for the new ground. My partner, however, happened to be a man of a very conservative disposition and was skeptical of the value of my discovery, asking if there were not enough diamonds right where we stood to satisfy our needs instead of madly rushing all over the country and in the hunt of a shadow perhaps lose the substance.

"Still impressed with the belief that I had made a big find, I went over to the tent of an old Natal friend, Popham by name, with whom at the time was Herbert Rhodes. I told them of my discovery, and we three at once decided to organize a stampede for the new field. Popham and Rhodes got away in less than two hours, and I fully intended to accompany them, but deferred to the wishes of my partner to remain with him at Old De Beers, sending on four Kaffir Zulus, however, to help stake out our claims.

"It was but a few hours after, through the instrumentality of the friend whom I had taken with me on the hunting trip, that the news was spread abroad through the camp, and before 7 o'clock the next morning Old De Beers was deserted, and twenty-four hours later there were from 3,000 to 4,000 men on the ground on which now stands the city of Kimberley.

"In a few days the country all around that clump of minoras where I had shot the partridges was staked out, and it was almost on that spot, right in the center of the crater of the extinct mud volcano now forming the celebrated De Beers mine, that Popham, Herbert Rhodes and myself secured three of the best paying claims.

"It was about five or six months after this, when we had all moved to New Rush, that Cecil Rhodes, the youngest brother, unexpectedly turned up at the diggings. His constitution appeared to be very delicate, and it was generally understood that he had come out more with the idea of building up his health than making a fortune. He took up his abode in a tent close to my own, and for some months, on account of the intimate relations existing between his brothers and myself, I saw a good deal of him, in fact dining with the three almost every night.

"While, as I said before, Herbert and Frank Rhodes were open hearted, generous fellows, Cecil, on the other hand, was of an altogether different character, being very reserved and hard to draw out. He was at first evidently not bubbling over with delight at all he witnessed and heard in his new surroundings, taking rather unkindly to the situation, which did not tend to make him popular in the camp, and even his brothers seemed a little shy of his presence.

"On the morning of his arrival in camp Herbert Rhodes asked me to take his brother Cecil down and show him over the claims, where they were working from eighteen to twenty Zulus. To this request I readily agreed and while in the pit pitched out a small diamond from the side wall and handed it to him, his first stone in South Africa. He was, however, very reticent of all he saw, only remarking that he had no idea it was like this or that and apparently by no means enthusiastic over the prospect of becoming a diamond digger.

"Having made up his mind to stay, he settled down to work with a determination and unflinching purpose that seemed out of keeping with his delicate health and build. From the first he eschewed the convivial habits of his brothers, criticising their actions severely by, saying that he did not see the reason or necessity of squandering money in giving champagne suppers to the other diggers, and that for his part his only object was to make a large enough sum to go home and never set eyes on the beastly place again."

Mr. Studdy here interposes that with regard to Kimberley at that time Mr. Rhodes' criticism was perfectly just.

"It was not long after Cecil Rhodes came upon the scene," Mr. Studdy continues, "that I foresaw that sooner or later there was going to be a split in the camp. In this prognostication I was eventually proved to be right, for Herbert first of all sold out his interest to Cecil, and then Frank did the same, when Cecil, who would hardly spend enough on his food and clothes to keep body and soul decently together, began, with the aid of his savings, to engineer those plans which have raised him to be one of the two foremost men in South Africa."

One important trait in Cecil Rhodes' character, that of his well known fondness for animals, is emphasized by a story related by Mr. Studdy when the former had only been a short time in South Africa. It appeared that upon a certain afternoon, when Cecil Rhodes was returning to his tent, having knocked off work for the day, a mongrel dog, fleeing from the lash of an inhuman Boer, took refuge at Mr. Rhodes' side, jumping up and licking the young fellow's hand and whining piteously for protection.

"Kick that brute over here," shouted the Boer, "and I'll thrash the life out of him!"

"I'm not in the habit of kicking any animal," calmly rejoined Mr. Rhodes. "What has the poor beast done?"

"That's no business of yours," retorted the angry Boer. "He's my dog, not yours, and I'll do what I like with him."

"Will you?" replied Mr. Rhodes, resting his hand upon the dog's head. "I rather think not, at least not while I'm here." And he stood confronting the Boer while the dog cowered at his feet.

"Well," said Mr. Rhodes after a pause, during which the Boer threateningly handled his whip, "what are you going to do? Thrash me and the dog both? I think not. I think perhaps you had better pass him over to my care. Here!" and drawing a coin from his pocket he tossed it over to the Boer. "Take that and leave the dog with me. Come along, doggie." And, with the poor brute at his heels he strode on to his tent.

"And for many a long day," continued Mr. Studdy, "that mongrel dog was probably the only confidant which Mr. Rhodes possessed, the only creature which might have heard whispered many an ambitious design and far-reaching project."

It is said that Cecil Rhodes once tried to impress his importance upon a little German clerk in the government office at Johannesburg and met with signal failure. Rhodes had to stand in line and didn't like it.

"Please attend to me at once," he said; "I can't wait."

"When your turn comes, mister," mumbled the clerk.

"Confound you, sir! Don't you know who I am? I'm Rhodes."

"Oh, yes, I know that, but that does not worry me," was the unruffled reply.

"If you were in Cape Town, I'd have you discharged in a minute," roared Mr. Rhodes.

"Yes, I have heard that they discharged people in Cape Town for doing their duty," answered the clerk, "but we ain't in Cape Town. This is a republic!"

PINGPONG IN WALL STREET

New Game Captures Brokers, Who Play It For High Stakes.

Pingpong has invaded Wall street, says the New York Evening Journal. Some of the brokers have gone almost crazy over the game. Matches for high stakes are often played. In "Skipper" Ames' office in New York, as soon as the day's business is over, the customers' room, overlooking the bay, is stripped of its chairs, the pingpong table is put in place, and the game begins.

Young Mr. De Mauriac, son of the well known broker, is regarded as the champion player, but Charles Schumacher, Jr., is a rival who has many backers. Large sums of money change hands whenever they meet. There is talk of matching them in a game at $1,000 a side.

Kitchener's Regrets.

There's gloom to burn in London town
When Kitchener regrets.
The Britishers all darkly frown
When Kitchener regrets.
Poor Chamberlain is sick at heart;
Although he tries to hide the smart,
He sorely feels the rankling dart
When Kitchener regrets.

You see, they show the pain so much
When Kitchener regrets.
They know it doesn't beat the Dutch
When Kitchener regrets.
It means another sad surprise,
When burghers rush and Briton flies;
Experience can't make them wise
When Kitchener regrets.

And, oh, the list of captured ones,
When Kitchener regrets:
Of men and horses, food and guns,
When Kitchener regrets!
No wonder stricken London town
Now wears a most portentous frown;
Her pride doth tumble weakly down
When Kitchener regrets.

FOR MANY CENTURIES

Seckendorffs Have Been Allied With German Royalty

HENRY II'S LIFE SAVED

By Ancestor of Admiral Who Accompanied Prince Henry on His Visit to America—Family of Many Heroes Since Walter Was Knighted In 1017

New York, March 22.—Next in interest to Prince Henry himself during his recent visit was the court marshal, Admiral Baron Albert Von Seckendorff, who was chief in command of the prince's suite in America, and who is grand master of the prince's household.

The Seckendorffs have been closely allied with the royal family ever since the 10th century. There is a pretty legend, as frequently told today as it was centuries ago, giving the story of the founding of the family. Briefly told it runs like this: In 1017, when Henry II was on the throne, the favorite court pastime was the buffalo hunt. One day the emperor when far ahead of all the other huntsmen came upon a huge buffalo. He hurled his spear, which just grazed the animal, wounding him only enough to arouse his fury. In madness the animal rushed upon him, and the emperor, with nothing but his sword, gave himself up for lost. At that instant a young hunter bounded forward from the forest, hurled his spear into the buffalo, and taking him by the horns bore the massive head down to the ground and held it there. The emperor was too astounded to speak and looked at him long before he could utter a word. Then he embraced him and said, "A man who can do such a brave thing is sure to be the father of heroes." He led him out into the open and under a linden tree and in the midst of all the gathered huntsmen he told of the deed and asked the young hunter's name and the young man simply answered "Walter." Then the emperor reached up into the tree and broke a linden tree bearing eight leaves and bending it into a wreath said: "I have here no golden chain to reward you, so take this wreath as a sign that Emperor Henry II wishes you well and as a pledge of richer reward." Then Walter knelt and the emperor knighted him and thus commanded, "because thou hast risked thy blood for me so be your crest a red linden branch in a white field." He made him a gift of the Seckendorff castle, and to this day the crest of the descendants of Walter is the linden branch, and the name Seckendorff has become illustrious. The motto of the crest commemorates the words of Emperor Henry II, "Thy leaves shall never fade."

The castle Seckendorff is in Franconia, the native home of all the present day Seckendorffs. Every year now, in Staffelstein, the people of that country gather under a linden tree, which they believe is the same under which Walter was knighted, and there perform the legend as a play.

The family has numbered many a hero since the days of Walter, and the characteristics of the family are indeed noble—they are simple of nature and abhor affectation. In history, science, art and politics they have made their name an authority by honest efforts.

Admiral Baron Albert Von Seckendorff, who is entitled to the prefex of "your excellency," has been with Prince Henry ever since the latter's boyhood, when he was selected from among a large number of naval lieutenants by the late Emperor Frederick to act as mentor, tutor and aid of his favorite son.

It is rare that the mentors of youthful royalty manage to retain the friendship of their charges after the latter have grown up and become exempt from their tutelage. Baron Albert Seckendorff, however, succeeded in establishing so strong a hold upon the affectionate regard of Prince Henry that when the latter grew up he insisted on keeping the baron with him, as the chief of his household. The two have been together ever since, their relations having developed into the most intimate friendship. Whenever the prince went to sea the baron was with him and in this way advanced through the various grades of the naval profession to the rank of vice admiral, which he now holds.

The baron is married to a wealthy widow, charming and elegant and she has become as close a friend to Princess Henry as the baron has of the prince, and the baroness holds the position of grand mistress of the household to the princess. The baron has a beautiful estate in Bavaria called "Brand."

The Seckendorff family are loyal to each other. Every two years there is a reunion and a family fund is established for the help of those members of the family who may chance to need a helping hand, and especially it is meant for the education of the sons. Not only is the admiral distinbuished, but his brothers as well. The oldest brother, Gustave, is a general at the head of all the miltary schools in Prussia. The youngest brother, Edwin, has been consul to China, and is now consul at Prague. At the time Li Hung Chang was in Germany, Edwin was commanded to show him all Germany. An in the German army.

Gates Acquires Another Road

Kansas City, March 22.—The foreclosure sale of the Omaha, Kansas City and Western railroad last January was confirmed by the federal court yesterday. By this order the road passes into the control of John W. Gates, the steel magnate.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

A General Improvement Except In the Footwear Industry

New York, March 22.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Evidences of further improvement are numerous. Labor controversies are less threatening. Traffic congestion has subsided until it is possible to deliver goods according to specifications. Aside from some idle footwear shops the leading lines of manufacture are very fully engaged, while jobbing trade is of exceptional magnitude. Retail dealings are also very large, the Easter stimulus being felt in all lines of wearing apparel. With domestic demands so vigorous, it is especially encouraging to notice a gain for the last week in foreign trade at the principal ports.

Both at the east and west there is a little more activity in shoe shops, yet productive capacity is not fully engaged and new orders come forward slowly.

Advanced wages at cotton mills means a higher cost of production and the market has hardened in consequence. Woolens are quiet, with only a fair movement of staple lines, though some fancy grades are fully sold and out of the market.

Grain markets have begun to feel the effects of weather reports and for the next few months it will be a simple matter for speculators to secure erratic fluctuations.

Security and money markets are not materially altered in condition, although the week has brought a slightly higher range of quotations.

Fourth Wife Won't Get Fortune

Cape May, N. J., March 22.—The jury in the Meyers will case yesterday broke the bill under which the widow of Charles Meyers, who was his fourth wife, received nearly all of an estate of $175,000. By the will Mrs. Mary de Roche, a daughter by a second wife, was disinherited except as to $50. Meyers' third wife was Pauline Hall, the opera singer, but she separated from him shortly after marriage. An appeal will be taken.

Jourdain Repudiates Notes

Cape Town, March 22.—The trial of the case of Princess Radziwill, who is charged with forgery in connection with notes purporting to have been signed by Cecil Rhodes, was resumed yesterday. Mr. Jourdain, private secretary to Rhodes, repudiated the promissory notes in question. After other evidence showing the attempts of the accused to negotiate the various bills, the case was remanded for one week.

Miners Reach No Conclusion

Shamokin, Pa., March 22.—Contrary to expectations the convention of mine workers failed to reach a determination yesterday concerning the grievances of the anthracite coal miners. There is much uncertainty concerning the situation, and opinion is about equally divided as to whether the convention will declare in favor of drastic measures to secure an adjustment of their grievances.

Cleveland Not Disturbed

Princeton, N. J., March 22.—"I am not at all troubled about it," was the only comment ex-President Cleveland would make when shown a dispatch yesterday which said that W. J. Bryan, commenting editorially in The Commoner upon Mr. Cleveland's recent letter to a Mississippi editor, denounced him as a "traitor, ingrate and political nonenity."

Disguised Sex For Years

Petersburg, Va., March 22.—John Green, a person who has posed before the world for 35 years as a married man, died yesterday, aged 75, and neighbors who were called in to prepare the remains for burial discovered the body to be that of a woman. The wife in the partnership survives. The women belonged to the laboring class.

Diplomatic Relations Resumed

Vienna, March 22.—The government bill arranging for provisional consular and commercial relations between Austria-Hungary and Mexico was agreed upon in the upper house yesterday. This bill passed the lower house on Tuesday. Diplomatic relations between Austria-Hungary and Mexico had been interrupted since 1867.

Huronian About Given Up

St. Johns, March 22.—Incoming shipping brings no report of the Allan line steamer Huronian, from Glasgow for St. Johns, now about one month overdue. It is generally believed that the Huronian foundered with all hands, or that she sank as a result of colliding with the ice in the north Atlantic.

Getting After Religious Orders

Madrid, March 22.—The minister of the interior has requested the minister of justice to ascertain immediately what religious orders have not yet complied with the registration decree of Sept. 19, 1901. This request was made with a view to enforcing the decree closing the houses of the orders.

One Conviction In Vatican Theft

Rome, March 22.—The trial of the three officials of the Vatican, who were charged with thefts from the Vatican treasury aggregating $80,000, was concluded yesterday. One officer named Scotto was sentenced to eight years' imprisonment, while the two others were acquitted.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, March 23.
Sun rises—5:44; sets—5:59.
Full moon—10:21 p. m.
High water—10:45 a. m.; 11:15 p. m.
Rain has continued in east New England. There has been a still further rise in temperature. There will be rain over west and south New England. On the coast the winds will be light to fresh north to northeast.

Sleeplessness

Is akin to insanity. Many a woman realizes this as she lies awake hour by hour, peopling the darkness with phantoms, starting at the creaking of the bed or the rustle of the bedclothes.

Such symptoms in general point to disease of the delicate womanly organs, and a constant drain of the vital and nervous forces. This condition cannot be overcome by sleeping powders. The diseased condition must be cured before the consequences of disease are removed.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the womanly diseases which cause nervousness and sleeplessness. It is the best of tonics and invigorants, nourishing the nerves, encouraging the appetite and inducing refreshing sleep. Irregularity, weakening drains, inflammation, ulceration and female weakness are perfectly cured by "Favorite Prescription."

"My wife was sick for over eight years," writes Albert H. Fulte, Esq., of Altamont, Grundy Co., Tenn. "She had uterine disease and was treated by two physicans and got no relief. At last I read about Dr. Pierce's medicines and we decided to try his 'Favorite Prescription.' I sent to the drug store and got one bottle and the first dose gave ease and sleep. She had not slept any for three nights. Being sure that it would cure her I sent for five more bottles and when she had taken the sixth bottle she was sound and well."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used with "Favorite Prescription" whenever a laxative is required.

NORFOLK, ss. PROBATE COURT.

TO the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of JOHN Q. McDONNELL, late of Buffalo, in the County of Erie and State of New York, deceased:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Emily A. McDonnell, with certain papers purporting to be copies of the last will and testament of said deceased, and of the probate thereof in said State of New York, duly authenticated, representing that at the time of his death, said deceased had estate in said County of Norfolk, on which said will may operate, and praying that the copy of said will may be filed and recorded in the Registry of Probate of said County of Norfolk, and letters testamentary thereon granted to her.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said County of Norfolk, on the sixteenth day of April, A. D. 1902, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks in the Quincy Daily Ledger, a newspaper published in Quincy, the first publication to be thirty days at least, before said Court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fourteenth day of March, in the year one thousand nine hundred and two.

THE SOCIAL REALM.

Mrs. Margaret Walsh and son John W. Walsh of Quincy avenue have returned from their trip to California.

Miss Audrey Rhines of Bigelow street entertained friends at a whist party on Monday evening.

* * *

W. Stanwood Field of Brookline is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Bent at Braintree.

* * *

The engagement is announced of Miss Alice Blood of Holbrook and Mr. Charles Chubbuck of Brockton.

* * *

A largely attended private whist party was given in I. O. O. F. hall last evening, when six valuable prizes were awarded. The fortunate ladies were: Mrs. Fife, Miss Young, and Mrs. McLennan, while gentlemen's prizes went to J. H. Gillis, W. T. Westland and George Guston.

A Full Mail.

A transatlantic steamer carrying what is called "a full mail" usually has 200,000 letters and 300 sacks of newspapers for London, to say nothing of the five hundred and odd sacks for other places.

A Fish's Tail.

The tail of a fish is his sculling oar. He moves it first on one side and then on the other, using his fins as balances to guide his motion. If the fish is moving fast and wants to stop, he straightens out his fins just as the rower of a boat does his oars.

Dutch Mail Service.

In Holland the extent of the mail service routes is over 30,000 miles. The uniform of the postmen is semimilitary in character, and they themselves are said to be a remarkably handsome body.

Gold In the Bible.

The earliest book which mentions gold is the Bible. It occurs in Genesis ii, 11.

Hair and Wool.

Through the whole range of human, plant, goat's hair and sheep's wool nature shows such close gradations that it would be difficult to draw an exact line or to distinguish beyond a question of doubt between wool and hair.

Baking Powder.

Two ounces of tartaric acid, quarter of a pound of carbonate of soda and six ounces of ground rice flour mixed well together and put in tins make a good baking powder.

A Dog's Attack.

The supreme court of Vermont holds that the question whether an assault by a dog was prompted by playfulness or viciousness will not be considered in imposing liability on his owner for any resulting injuries. The dog of the defendant in the case at issue jumped against the plaintiff, throwing him down and breaking his hip.

Saxon Farmers.

Many Saxon farmers who work in the fields in summer make artificial flowers in winter.

An Old Superstition.

It was once a common article of belief in England that when a maiden ran into the fields early in the morning to hear the first note of the cuckoo, and when she heard it took off her left shoe and looked into it, she would there find a man's hair of the same color as that of her future husband.

BRAINTREE.

The Jonas Perkins school will open Monday.

Henry Ryan was successfully operated on for appendicitis at the Carney hospital, Boston, Wednesday. At present writing he is convalescent.

Fred M. Crocker has purchased the lot of land on Liberty street, owned by Miss Charlotte Hobart and adjoining G. F. Hussey's residence. Work will be commenced immediately upon the foundations and a pretty little house built during the coming season.

The Union Veterans are making extensive arrangements for their "house warming" which is to occur in the near future. They will have as guests the Protector Vets of Brockton and not the Hancock Vets as was erroneously stated last week. A parade and supper will be the main features of the celebration.

The Jonas Perkins school association was pleasantly entertained at the home of Mrs. B. L. Baker on Liberty street, Tuesday evening. At the close of the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed and light refreshments were served. Arrangements are being made to hold the fifth anniversary of the association early in April, providing the progress of the epidemic is arrested.

The fourth and last grand concert in this season's course was given last Wednesday evening before an enthusiastic audience. The concert was given by Herbert Johnson's Quintette club of Boston assisted by Mr. Fred E. Kendall entertainer.

Tuesday afternoon marked the close of the six social afternoons at whist which the ladies have enjoyed at Cochato hall, in connection with the club. Each afternoon three prizes have been awarded for the three highest scores and the sum remaining after the buying of the 18 prizes has been expended for a set of dainty lace curtains and an oval mirror for the ladies' parlor.

The familiar face of Rev. Joseph Kyte is once more seen in town.

Frank, son of Albert Drollett, was taken to the Quincy hospital Friday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. McGowan of Crescent avenue welcomed into their home, last Tuesday, a baby boy.

The Braintree Fife and Drum Corps will move into their new quarters on Summer street, over H. B. Whitman's harness store, next Monday.

The annual ball of Miss Hayward's dancing class will be held this afternoon in Cochato Hall from 3.30 to 6.30.

Governor Crane on Wednesday of this week appointed Robert E. Belcher of this town as Public Administrator for the County of Norfolk. Mr. Belcher will qualify by giving bond for $10,000. He will no doubt have many estates to handle in this section.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Litchfield, who have been employed by the town for several years to care for the poor farm, are preparing to move to Hyde Park. Mr. Litchfield has purchased a milk route there and will move his family as soon as possible.

Rev. Mr. Crathern will occupy the pulpit of the First Congregational church, Sunday morning in exchage with the pastor. The topic for the evening service will be as announced, "Ministering to the Spiritual Life." This will be a discussion of the influence of literature of various kinds on the spiritual life. All are welcome.

Night officer Mr. J. F. Gallivan became suspicious of a tramp Tuesday evening and closely watched his movements. It was midnight when the tramp, apparently to get warm, started a bonfire near Vinton's store. Mr. Gallivan arrested him and in court the next day the tramp was ordered to Bridgewater. He is an Italian and could not, when arrested, speak English.

The County Commissioners have settled upon plans for street widening in Braintree acting under a petition by citizens of this town. White & Wetherbee are making the necessary surveys and marking out the final plans.

On the west side of Washington street from Summer street to a point near C. H. Hobart's store a strip about twelve feet in width will be removed by the town.

From Pearl street to Crescent avenue on the east side of Hancock street several feet will be removed and the corners rounded. When these changes have been made South Braintree square will take on a new appearance.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. Far sale by all druggists.

If man's mouth were as large in proportion as the mouth of a fly, he would have to have a head four feet in diameter to accommodate his lips and teeth.

A Monster Banquet.

At a marriage banquet, when Richard, earl of Cornwall, wedded Cincia, the daughter of Raymond, earl of Provence, the tables groaned beneath the weight of more than 30,000 dishes.

Drawing Checks.

Do not draw a check unless you have the money in bank or in your possession to deposit. Don't test the courage or generosity of your bank by presenting or allowing to be presented your check for a larger sum than your balance.

Old Italian Marriage Contracts.

By the Italian marriage contract a bridegroom of wealth was formerly obliged to give his wife meat to eat for at least one meal a day and to take her on a daily drive.

Reading Books.

It is calculated that it would take a person over 300 years to read all the standard works that are published, and yet we seldom come across a man who will acknowledge that he has not read every one.

Sir Boyle Roche's Famous "Break."

When Sir Boyle Roche made his famous speech, "I smell a rat; I see him floating in the air; but, mark me, sir, I will nip him in the bud," his ideas were clear enough, but he lost sight of rats, air and buds in the thought that was in his mind.

Game and Incubation.

Artificial incubators are used in England for pheasants and other game birds. Nearly all the ostriches on the South African ranches are also raised in incubators.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

Klaw & Erlanger's sumptuous production of "Ben Hur" returned to the Colonial Theatre to renew its triumps here, which was such a sensational feature of the last theatrical season. Monday night it revealed again to the local audiences at the Colonial the dramatic verson of Gen. Lew Wallace's sublime story, and it seemed to impress one with stronger sentiments, and one is amazed anew at the incomparable magnitude and brilliancy of Klaw & Erlanger's production. A new and very taking item on the rise of the curtain after the race is the facing of Ben Hur and the victorious horses and chariot to the audience. "Ben Hur" is interesting and filling with wonderment great audiences at the Colonial, and no one should miss seeing this, the most marvelously impressive play and the almost indescribably beautiful and elaborate production know to the stage of this or any other country.

PARK THEATRE.

Everything is in readiness at the Park Theatre Boston, for one of the most interesting events in amusement circles of the present season. Under the guidance of E. E. Rice the professional production of Barnet's Cadet success, "Cap of Fortune or the Show Girl" will be put on the stage at the Park Theatre Saturday evening, March 22. In the cast will be found two of the principals who were in the Cadet production, Mr. W. S. Hawkins will have his original role of Capt. Armor and Mr. Alonzo Price will again be seen as "Katrina, one of the Maids of Cypress." Mr. Charles Wayne is cast for the role of Dionysius Lye, Mr. Clarence Harvey will be Lord Dyce, and Mr. Charles Guyer, well remembered as one of the best "Lone Fishermen" that "Evangeline" ever had, will be Jhonnie Jhones the Property Man. Mr. Edward P. Temple will be seen in the character of Garrick Forrest Macready, the Juvenile man of the Sophicles Dramatic Co.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The laughable 3 act play "Gloriana," written by James Mortimer, has been selected as the Castle Square Theatre attraction for next week. This comedy was produced by a travelling combination throughout the country about ten years ago and its performances were greatly appreciated by Boston audiences. It has a laughable story as the foundation for its action and the scenes and situations are very cleverly planned. The characters introduced afford many excellent opportunities for a class of dramatic work in which the players of the Castle Square company have gained many honors and some very pretty stage settings will be shown in the production. The principal characters of "Gloriana" will be taken as follows:—

Leopold Fitz Jocelyn, John Craig; Timothy Chadwick, John T. Craven; Count Evitoff, J. L. Seeley; Baron Kronikoff, Edward Wade; Major Stonideff, Louis Thiel; Spinks, James A. Keane; Richard, William J. Hasson; Mrs. Lovering, Eva Taylor; Jessie Chadwick, Marian A. Chapman; Kitty, Mary Sanders.

"Gloriana" is announced for a single week with "Under the Red Robe" as the following attraction. The free distribution of boxes of chocolate bonbons will be continued at the Monday matinees until further notice.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

That woman is a successful factor in music will be demonstrated beyond doubt at Keith's Boston theatre the week of March 24, for the featured attraction is that splendid organization of female instrumentalists, the Fadette Woman's Orchestra, directed by Carolina B. Nichols, the energetic musician who has practically made it her life work to bring this orchestra up to the high place it now holds in the world of music. Almost every member of the orchestra—and there are a score of them—is a soloist, and as a result patrons of Keith's will have an opportunity of enjoying better music than they have heard for a long time. Tom Nawn, "the Edward Harrigan of vaudeville," in his delightful sketch, "Pat and the Genii;" the Quaker City Quartet, comedians and vocalists; Decourcey brothers, wonderful acrobats, are some of the variety entertainers who are on the bill.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.

"Morocco Bound," the big English musical comedy show at the Columbia is now playing the farewell week of its phenominal Boston engagement and on Monday evening next will begin a tour of Canada and the New England States. The "Morocco Bound" company will be followed at the Columbia by the London Garrick theatre comedy company presenting the farcical comedy, "A Brace of Partridges," with Reeves-Smith and Miss Margaret Robinson in the leading roles. The supporting cast will be a very strong one and a delightful treat for the clientele of the Columbia is anticipated. Owing to a new musical comedy production now in preparation the stay of "A Brace of Partridges" at the Columbia is necessarily limited. The seats for the engagements are now on sale.

TODAY'S COURT.

Today was one of the busiest sessions ever held at the district court. There were twenty-eight continued cases to be disposed of and several new cases. The parties directly interested in these cases were more than enough to fill the court room and all not having business with the court were excluded.

Lawrence Lyons was fined $5 for drunkenness at Milton.

The continued case of Samuel F. Barker for the illegal transportation of liquor at Quincy was called and he was fined $50. The liquors siezed from Barker were forfeited.

Arthur Stanley and Earle Dimmock were arraigned for violation of the rules of the Metropolitan Park Commissioners at Quincy, and were fined $2 each.

The liquors siezed from Antiono Capoludico at Quincy were forfeited.

A. J. White of Braintree was arraigned on three complaints for taking registered milk cans. Case continued until next Saturday.

The continued case of Joseph Silber of Quincy, for receiving stolen copper wire, was called. The warrant against the defendant was changed to larceny and he was fined $100.

The cases of Abraham Breen, Charles F Ridlow and Alex B. Scott for attempt to commit larceny, was called and they were fined $50 each.

Twenty-two cases against milk dealers of Quincy, Braintree and Milton, for the unlawful use of registered milk cans, were heard and continued for judgment.

The continued case of Henry A. Haskell was placed on file.

—Secretary Long is the third to retire of the members of the cabinet which President Roosevelt inherited from President McKinley. Postmaster-General Smith was the first to go, and was succeeded by Henry C. Payne. Then Secretary Gage, whose place at the head of the Treasury Department was taken by ex-Gov. Shaw of Iowa. Now it is Secretary Long, who is followed in the Navy Department by another Massachusetts man, Congressman Moody.

BIG STRIKE IMPENDING

Demands of Lowell Operatives Are Refused

BITTER FIGHT IS PREDICTED

Suggestion of Compromise Was Expected by Union Men, but Flat Rejection Was Given Instead—Definite Action to Be Taken Wednesday

Lowell, Mass., March 24.—Lowell is threatened with one of the largest and most disastrous strikes in its history as a result of the communication sent to the Textile union by the mill agents in reply to the official demand of that body for an increase in wages for the textile operatives of the city.

The communication, which was received by President Rafferty Friday night and the contents of which has been kept secret, was read at the meeting of the Textile council yesterday. A positive unconditional refusal of the demands of the operatives was the tenor of the letter.

Nobody but President Rafferty and Secretary Ashton knew what the letter contained until it was publicly read in the meeting and so, although they felt that it was unfavorable, the full weight of the note did not fall upon them until the president had ceased reading.

A suggestion of a compromise was the least the operatives expected, but from the determined stand of their representatives in the Textile council it would seem as though that unless their demands are acceded to, it will be a fight to a bitter finish.

The communication from the mill men is not a joint note as was supposed. Each agent answers for himself, but the language is identical. This proves that the note was framed at a meeting of the mill officials. Several days ago a local mill man stated that the demand of the Lowell operatives was submitted to the treasurers of the various corporations, and it is generally believed that it was at a meeting of these officials in Boston Thursday night that the action was taken that is expressed in the communication to the Lowell Textile council.

President Rafferty refused to make any comment upon the note to the newspaper men, prefering to wait until after the next meeting of the council, which will be held Wednesday night.

The demand of the Lowell council was to have gone into effect this morning, according to their note to the mill agents, but on account of the delay in the reply the various unions represented in the central body have not had an opportunity to express their views on the new aspect to the situation, so it has been decided to postpone final action until Wednesday evening.

In the meantime special meetings of the unions having representatives in the Textile council will be held and a vote will be taken on the question of a strike. There are 10 unions represented in the council.

The first union included in the council to issue a call for a special session to act upon the strike question was the cotton spinners, one of the strongest Textile unions in the state. The meeting will be held tonight. The sentiment of this union seems to be favorable to a repudiation of the communication from the mill agents.

Brewery Workers May Strike

Boston, March 24.—Unless one party or the other recedes from its present position, it is feared that every brewery in Boston will be closed on April 1. The trouble is also to effect the bartenders. The 1500 brewery workmen have requested the master brewers to grant them an eight-hour work day April 1, without reduction of wages. The firemen have asked for 40 cents an hour overtime, and that Sunday and holiday work shall be paid as overtime. The demands of the men have brought the master brewers solidly together in a determination to fight the unions.

Fitchburg Operatives Satisfied

Fitchburg, Mass., March 24.—The conference with Agent Shirreffs of the American Woollen company and committees from the two mills of the company in this city show that the relations between the company and its operatives here are perfectly harmonious, and that the latter are not likely to inaugurate a sympathetic strike to aid the striking weavers in the company's Olneyville, R. I. mills. A committee of Olneyville weavers has been here for several days past endeavoring to bring about a sympathetic strike.

Action at Lewiston

Lewiston, Me., March 24.—The Mule Spinners' union held a meeting and it was voted to demand an advance in wages of 10 percent, to go into effect March 31. It is understood that unless the demands of the mule spinners are complied with, a general strike may follow.

Sense of Cocheco Operatives

Dover, N. H., March 24.—The several associations of operatives of the Cocheco Manufacturing company met Saturday night and voted in favor of an increase in wages similar to that given at Fall River.

Higher Wages For a Hundred

Westerly, R. I., March 24.—The Taylor Manufacturing company, owner of the Hope Valley woollen mill, has granted an advance of from 8 to 15 percent in wages. About 100 hands are affected.

A LABOR QUARREL

Results In the Killing of a Man by an Operative on Strike

Providence, March 24.—A quarrel which had its origin in recriminations because of non-union weaving, resulted in Simon White, 27 years old, being fatally stabbed in a Pascoag saloon Saturday night. Peter Carr, over 50 years old, is held by the officers on a charge of being responsible for the deed.

The affair took place in the Clear River house. Carr is one of the strikers at the Anchor mills of the American Woollen company and he and White had words over "scab" weaving. From words the men proceeded to blows. In the melee which followed White was stabbed, the femoral artery being cut. He fell to the floor, bleeding profusely, and after being carried to a nearby barber shop, died almost immediately. Carr went to his home and was later arrested. He denied having used a knife and said that he did not own one. Yesterday an ordinary pocket knife, the blade and handle bespattered with blood, was found in Carr's yard.

White was married and had a wife and one child. He was the son of Simon White, Sr., and was well known in Burrillville, where he had resided all his life. He also leaves a mother, two brothers and one sister. Carr is also married and has several children.

A Cold-Blooded Murder

Albany, March 24.—John De Tierre, aged 45, shot and killed his brother, William, aged 35, in front of a building on Hamilton street. The murderer, after killing his brother, calmly placed the revolver back in his pocket, and on the afrival of the police gave himself up, calmly remarking that he was glad that he killed his brother. The murder was the culmination of a family feud. The trouble first arose out of the action of the father, who bequeathed his entire estate to his eldest son, resulting in a long litigation which developed the feud.

The Retvizan In Commission

Philadelphia, March 24.—The big battleship Retvizan, which has just been completed for the Russian government at Cramp's shipyard, was officially added to the czar's navy yesterday. The ceremony was conducted by the ship's chaplain. The crew of 750 men and officers were lined up on the main deck with bared heads as the services of the Greek church were read, after which, at a signal from the Retvizan's commander, the blue cross of St. Andrew was hoisted at the stern. The battleship will sail for Cronstadt about April 12.

Exposition Wants Fight

Savannah, Ga., March 24.—Al McMurray, matchmaker for the Southern A. C. of Charleston, left for New York today to make a bid and post a forfeit for the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons contest to be pulled off in Charleston. In this instance McMurray acts as the direct representative of the exposition corporation. It is proposed that the contest shall be held in the exposition grounds, which are beyond the corporate limits of Charleston.

A Professional Bigamist

San Antonio, Tex., March 24.—Sheriff Wiser of Plattsburg, Mo., with Christian Nelson, who is alleged to have married 11 women, in charge, has left for that place. Sheriff Wiser and his prisoner had not been gone two hours before Sheriff Hendrickson of Conway, Ark., who also wanted Nelson for bigamy, arrived with a warrant for him.

Thought a Peace Measure

Pekin, March 24.—There is little discussion here of the Franco-Russian declaration, and this declaration is generally regarded as making for peace. The Chinese newspapers are emphasizing the humiliation of China, saying she is treated by the powers as though she were incompetent to defend her own interests.

Killed Husband For Choking Her

Washington, Ind., March 24.—During a quarrel at the supper table last evening, Liberty Kempf, a well known business man, choked his wife. The woman got a revolver and fired five shots at her husband, one bullet penetrating the brain. He died in a few moments. The wife has not yet been arrested.

A Card.

NORTH ADAMS SHAKEN UP

Explosion In Gas House Wrecks Windows and Injures Two Men

North Adams, Mass., March 24.—An explosion of gas in the gas house at the Arnold Print works last evening shook the city, destroyed the glass in many of the business blocks, and probably fatally injured one man in the employ of the company.

C. W. Lewis, day foreman of the boiler room, and Charles Wicks, the night foreman, went into the gas house with a lantern last evening for the purpose of reading the metre. As they entered the building the explosion took place and the men were blown into the yard. The fire department responded as soon as the explosion occurred and fought a hard blaze and, finally prevented the flames from reaching other buildings and the oil tanks near by.

Wicks was taken to the hospital and his condition is said to be critical. He was terribly burned about the arms, head and back. Lewis wore an overcoat, which protected his body from the flames, but his hands and face were seriously burned.

Nearly every block in that section of the city suffered as a result of the explosion. The print works do not manufacture their own gas, but have two holders which are supplied by the main from the North Adams Gas company.

Prisoner Locked Up Chief

Weymouth, Mass., March 24.—When Patrolman Walsh went to the station last night to report for duty, he found the outside door locked. Upon gaining admission he found Chief Houghton locked in one of the cells, and John Coleran, whom he had arrested and locked up early in the morning on the charge of drunkenness, was missing. It seems that Chief Houghton went to Coleran's cell to carry him some food and when he unlocked the door Coleran forced him into the cell and sprang the lock on him. Coleran then made his escape.

Securities Said to Be Worthless

Portland, Me., March 24.—When Granville W. Leighton, defaulting teller of the National Traders' bank, was arrested, among other property he turned over to the bank was the equity of $10,000 he said he held in certain securities in the office of a Biddeford stock concern. It has been reported that this asset is worthless. The defalcation was $43,000 and Leighton turned in property worth $5000, beside which the bank will get the face of his bond, $10,000.

Heavy Damage by Flood

Bangor, Me., March 24.—The last ice jam on the Penobscot river, which had threatened the city from above the water works dam, has passed down to sea without doing much further damage. The total loss by the flood at Bangor is now estimated at from $200,000 to $300,000, not allowing anything for disturbance of business. Nothing has yet been done toward rebuilding the two bridges that were carried out.

Watching For Dead Bodies

Chatham, Mass., March 24.—The special patrol which has been watching Monomoy beach in the search for bodies of those lost in the barge Wadena disaster report that none has been found. When conditions are favorable boatmen will go out at low tide and look the bottom over carefully to see if any of the bodies are held there by the sand.

Police Scout Murder Theory

Boston, March 24.—Police officials state that there are no reasons to believe that Mrs. Julia B. French, whose body was found on top of the elevator of her home, was murdered. Medical Examiner Draper has stated positively that her death was the result of an accidental fall down her elevator well.

Used Razor on Arteries

Danbury, Conn., March 24.—Walter Shaines, aged 30, an actor, attempted to commit suicide yesterday by cutting the arteries in both wrists with a razor. He was discovered in time to prevent death. Shaines is said to be the son of a wealthy family in New Jersey.

Profitable Branch of Farming

Washington, March 24.—A census report shows that of the 5,739,657 farms in the United States, 5,096,252 reported poultry. The total number of fowls 3 months old and over reported were: Chickens, including guniea fowls, 233,598,085; turkeys, 6,599,367; geese, 5,676,863; ducks, 4,807,358. The eggs produced in 1899 were 1,293,819,186 dozens, against 819,722,916 dozens in 1899. The total income derived by the farmers from their poultry industry in 1899, was $281,178,035.

Twenty-Five Thousand May Strike

Charleston, W. Va., March 24.—Secretary-Treasurer Wilson of the United Mine Workers of America announces that a strike will likely be called soon of the 25,000 miners in this state and Virginia. It is believed that a conference between the operators and the miners of the two states will soon be held, although there are reports that the demands of the miners may be made without further conferences.

Moros Won the Fight

Manila, March 24.—General Davis, stationed at Zamboanga, island of Mindanao, reports that a detachment of the signal corps consisting of 17 men was attacked by 200 Moros near Paran-Paran. One signal corps man was killed. The Moros captured the transportation of the detachment.

UNDER FLAG OF TRUCE

Leading Boers Enter British Military Lines

CONFER WITH KITCHENER

Schalk-Burgher and Other Representatives of Transvaal and Cape Colony Said to Have Been Hard Pressed—Possible Move For Peace

Pretoria, March 24.—Acting President Schalk-Burger, F. W. Heitz, ex-secretary of state of the Transvaal, and Commandants Meyer and Krogh, with their secretaries and attendants, arrived here Saturday afternoon on a special train from Balmoral, about 50 miles east of here. They came into Balmoral under a flag of truce.

Upon arriving here Mr. Schalk-Burger and his party drove immediately to Lord Kitchener's headquarters, where he had an interview with the British general. The Boers afterwards proceeded to the railroad station and started for Kroonstad, whence they will go out under a safe conduct.

For a week past Mr. Schalk-Burger and his colleagues have been stationed at Rhenoster Kop, north of Balmoral, where they have been closely pressed by British columns. Dispatch riders entered Balmoral Friday night and notified the British of the approach of Mr. Schalk-Burger and his party.

It is reported that the Boer position at Rhenoster Kop had become almost hopeless, and that Mr. Schalk-Burger narrowly escaped capture.

London, March 24.—The news that the wandering "Boer government" had entered the British lines is regarded as having but one meaning; namely, that another attempt is being made to negotiate peace. The fact that the censor passed the news of the movement is accepted as confirmation of this opinion.

Nothing is actually known here of the intentions of Schalk-Burger, Reitz, Meyer and Krogh. It is possible they have only sought permission to traverse the British lines in order to consult with Mr. Steyn and the Boer generals, De Wet and De la Rey; but, whatever their object, the news has been welcomed in London as pointing to the possibility of peace.

Some correspondence, which was seized a short time ago when Mr. Steyn narrowly escaped capture, proved that he and Mr. Schalk-Burger were anxious to conclude peace. No extravagant hopes, however, are being built on the outcome of the movements of Mr. Schalk-Burger and his companions, chiefly because it is feared that De la Rey, in the flush of his recent success, will refuse to be a party to any negotiations.

The war office has informed a representative of The Associated Press that it has received no official information either to confirm or contradict the news.

Commandant Krogh is one of the secretaries of the Boer government. He was formerly the administrator of Swaziland and has not been prominent during the war.

Papers here take it for granted that Mr. Schalk-Burger and his companions are on a mission of peace, and again engage in a discussion of possible peace terms, expressing the hope that the overtures will have a successful outcome. The presence of Lucas Meyer is regarded as significant, as he is an intimate friend of Louis Botha.

The Daily News remarks that a settlement would be possible if the Boers were treated like civilized combatants. "But men do not surrender unconditionally just after taking one of the enemy's generals and four of his guns."

Brussels, March 24.—The Petit Bleu, referring to the arrival at Pretoria of Messrs. Schalk-Burger, Reitz and Commandants Meyer and Krogh, says it believes that Schalk-Burger's move is in response to fresh British overtures for peace, made out of gratitude for the release of General Methuen, and predicts that these overtures will lead to no result unless Boer independence is conceded.

Severe Weather In Europe

Odessa, March 24.—After abnormally mild weather, the frost has now closed all the rivers of southern Russia to navigation. The absence of snow promises badly for crops.

Madrid, March 24.—Spain is experiencing extremely cold weather. Heavy snows and hailstorms at Seville and Corunna have destroyed the crops and killed some people.

Berne, March 24.—Traffic here has been greatly interrupted by heavy snowfalls.

End of Shaky Structure

Seneca Falls, N. Y., March 24.—A three-story brick building on Fall street collapsed yesterday without warning and was completely wrecked. The building was occupied by a crockery store and the Hotel Manlin. A number of people had narrow escapes and one of them was badly injured. The loss is $25,000.

Firebug Caused $100,000 Damage

New York, March 24.—The hunting stable of P. F. Collier at Eatontown, N. J., with 16 valuable hunting horses, was burned yesterday, the total loss being about $100,000. It is believed the fire was of incendiary origin and is the third within two weeks, each destroying valuable property.

Lowell Heads Polo League

Boston, March 24.—Lowell ended in the lead at the close of the season of the American Roller Polo league Saturday night, with Worcester second and Lewiston and Clinton closely following in that order. Salem, Lawrence and Portland were far behind.

Good Afternoon.

Appreciation of the services of the soldiers in the Civil war naturally leads one to favor a State pension to those who lost a leg or an arm, but the National government now pays from $30 to $50 per month to these needy veterans. Massachusetts now spends upward of $800,000 for military and state aid and there is no limit whatever to the amount given up to the limit of the actual need of the pensioner. This, it is said, is more than is given by all the other states of the Union combined.

Boston dailies report the Republicans of the Tenth Congressional district to be all at sea for a candidate, and that they are looking for a man who can be nominated by acclamation, one upon whom all factions can unite before the convention. Quincy has that man, and as all the factions are in Boston, it would be the proper thing to nominate Hon. John O. Hall, the ex-Mayor of Quincy.

Nothing which might be said at this time would probably cause a reduction in the annual appropriation order, which comes up in the City Council tonight for passage. It is not easy to make cuts, yet they are possible. An administration which goes to the limit on the amount it can legally raise is not doing much to reduce the tax rate.

We should smile to see a prisoner at the Quincy police station attempt to lock Officer Barry in a cell, as the Weymouth chief was treated Sunday. He might not live to tell the tale. But Quincy has an up-to-date police station, and such opportunities are not offered.

Belgium has a National Society of Street Applied Art which sees that artistic and not ugly signs, lamp-posts, etc., are used. The society offers prizes for beautiful house-fronts, gardens, fences and the like, and town authorities are uniting in the movement.

Representatives of the grocery trade before Congress say that laws against adulterations should not stop at food, but should apply to dry goods, furniture and all other articles of commerce.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The Massachusetts board of trade is an important influence in the affairs of the state. There are seven bills before the legislature at the present time relating to the amendment of the corporation laws of the State, and the matter was brought up before this representative body at their meeting the other day for consideration. After due deliberation it was voted to recommend to the legislature that the corporation laws be so amended as not to drive corporations out of the state. Of course there isn't much left for the legislature to do now.—Haverhill Gazette.

THE LABOR WORLD

Conference of the Quarrymen This Evening.

Coal Merchants Meet Central Labor Union.

The Master Carpenters Grant the Eight-Hour Day.

The indications are that there will be a settlement of the labor trouble with the granite quarrymen inside of twenty-four hours. The visit of the State board of arbitration combined with the work of several citizens, seems likely to bear fruit.

Last week no apparent move was made on either side, and the result was that work in the cutting sheds was looking desperate. Cool heads have been at work, however, and it is believed that a settlement will be reached.

Late Saturday afternoon a delegation of the quarrymen waited in an informal manner upon the chairman of the Manufacturers' committee to see if another conference could be had. The result was that a joint meeting of the two committees was arranged for tonight.

It is understood that the quarrymen have drawn up a proposition which will be presented to the quarry owner's committee at this meeting. Whatever the result of the meeting tonight, it will have to be passed upon by the union as a body at a meeting to be held tomorrow morning.

The Coal Handlers.

Unless all signs fail, the striking coal handlers will soon return to work. Saturday a request was sent Messrs. Patch and Sheppard that they meet the Central Labor Union for a friendly discussion of the differences between them and their employes. The request was granted and the meeting was held Saturday evening. The two coal firms being represented by Eben W. Sheppard and Frank S. Patch.

The dealers informed the Union that they had a schedule of prices which they had intended to voluntarily put into effect but the strike was inaugurated. This schedule was $11.50 per week for single team; $12.50 for double teams and $13.50 for thr horse teams. This is quite an increase over what the men have been receiving and only fifty cents less per week than they asked.

It was also agreed that they would take back all the men as far as possible but Mr. Sheppard would not agree to discharge the three non-union men hired by him during the strike.

Before the meeting adjourned a meeting was arraigned to be held this morning between Messrs. Patch and Sheppard and a committee of the coal handlers union.

The drivers are not satisfied with the increase of pay offered by Messrs. Patch and Sheppard, their claim being that while their pay is increased they will not be as well off as under the former price. Under the proposed schedule the men claim that they must work from 6 A. M. to 6 P. M., and lose holidays, and days when it is too stormy to go out. Messrs. Sheppard have paid their men in the past for holidays and stormy days, but under the new arrangement, as proposed at Saturday night's meeting, the men will not be paid for these days. For this reason the men claim they would not be as well off as before.

It was after 12 o'clock this noon before the conference between the coal dealers and the committee of the coal handlers came to an end. Whether this conference will result in ending the strike depends upon what action the coal handlers take at a meeting to be held this afternoon.

Just what was done at the conference this morning has not been disclosed, although it is understood that the coal dealers did not make any further offers than that of last Saturday night.

It is, however, understood that the great discussion this morning was on retaining the men employed by Messrs. Sheppard to take the place of the strikers. This point is understood to be the only stumbling block in the way of settlement.

An Eight-Hour Day.

At a meeting of the carpenters and builders of Quincy held at the Master Builders and Traders Association rooms, March 22, to consider what action should be taken in reference to the demand of the Carpenters' union, the following resolution was adopted, viz: That eight hours constitute a day's labor, said hours to be from 8 A. M., to 5 P. M., and the maximum rate of wages to be $2.50 per day.

A copy of said resolutions to be sent to the union and also published in the daily paper.

Signed—J. W. Pratt, chairman; J. S. Johnson, W. R. Lofgren, J. McFarland & Son, Ira Litchfield, W. F. McCalder, G. E. Thomas, W. F. Steadman, Julius Johnson, D. J. Roche, L. C. Merrill, G. O. Langley, A. W. Parker, secretary.

INDOOR ATHLETICS.

A Very Successful Meet of Thayer Academy, Braintree.

Never have there been in the school's history so many participants in the indoor athletics as there were at the meet at Thayer Academy Saturday afternoon. Although on same day as interscholastic meet in Boston, the track was well filled. No records were beaten, but good marks were reached.

A surprise was the five foot mark reached by Knight, who before the meet reached his limit at 4 ft., 7 in.

In the vault very good work was done by everybody, and it was not until the winning mark was about reached that so many dropped out at once. Carr, Perry and Arnold had it out for first, and after two failures the former won, while the two latter tied. Carr vaulted 5 ft., 10 in.

There were but three contestants in high dive, so all won points.

In the hitch kick, Winslow reached 7 ft., 9 3-4 in. Arnold and Emerson were easy second and third.

The excitement was mostly in the potato races—Junior and Senior. After several heats in the dashes, Emerson easily won, while second and third places went to Winslow and Perry.

After all the different contests, a basket ball game attracted much interest. It resulted in a defeat of Juniors by Seniors 23—15. Emerson and P. Hammond excelled for Seniors and Whipple and Vinton for Juniors.

Anderson the Champion.

The final game to decide the championship in the pool tournament that has been in progress at the Granite City club during the past winter, was played Saturday night. The championship rested between A. W. S. Anderson and Harold B. Faxon, and as the ability of both players was well established some fine playing was expected and realized. Each man was to make sixty balls, and so evenly were they matched that it was anybody's game up to the last frame.

At the beginning of this frame, Faxon had 54 balls to his credit and Anderson 51. Several miss plays were made by both contestants until the score stood Faxon 58 and Anderson 51. Anderson then got a set up and ran the game out.

The following table will show how evenly the men were matched:

CITY BREVITIES.

Mrs. L. A. Pratt of New London, Ct., is visiting her niece, Mrs. A. Nye of Webster street.

Miss Mabel Sparrow of Wollaston is spending her vacation at New Britain, Conn., with her sister, Mrs. A. M. Coburn formerly of Wollaston.

Miss Eva G. Clare entertained a party of friends at her home on Sagamore street Thursday evening. Whist was played after which a dainty collation was served, followed by a musical program.

Tomorrow evening the concert of the Edward Hewitson Associates takes place in the chapel of the First church under the auspices of the Woman's Alliance. An excellent programme has been prepared.

Rev. Dr. McAllester of the First Baptist church of Randolph who preached Sunday morning in exchange with Rev. E. N. Hardy, gave helpful and able address from the twelfth chapter of Romans.

Tomorrow evening the third degree staff of John Hancock lodge I. O. O. F. of Wollaston will visit Mt. Wollaston lodge and confer the honors of that degree on nine candidates from Mt. Wollaston, John Hancock and Neponset lodges. A cordial reception is extended to all members of the order to be present.

It was particularly noisy Tuesday at the Fore River ship yard, especially in the direction of Hayward's grove. The escaping steam at the power plant seemed to vibrate on the new steel shed which will cover the battleships and the noise was loud and continuous It was deafening to many who journeyed to the foot of Howard avenue, and at the same time mysterious.

Situation Strained at Barre.

The Barre Union hold a meeting this evening to consider the action of the quarry owners. The union men are considerably worked up because they have been ignored by the association.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

REV. C. H. PORTER.

Resigns Pastorate and Will Leave the Ministry.

Quincy friends of Rev. Charles H. Porter, the oldest son of ex-Mayor Porter, will be surprised to learn that he will leave the ministry. A Newport dispatch of Sunday to the Herald says: In a letter in which he said he had learned from experience that he was incapable of carrying out the work of his chosen profession to his own satisfaction and to that of his patrons, the Rev. Charles H. Porter, Jr., presented his resignation, today, as pastor of Channing Memorial church (Unitarian) and gave notice of his purpose to retire from the ministry.

He further stated that in some duties of his profession he felt readily at home, while in others he felt his incapability. He is a very able preacher, but it was not his custom to make pastoral calls, and it is understood that this omission is what he refers to in his letter.

His congregation was much attached to him, and his resignation came as a great shock. He is a young man, a graduate of Harvard University. His first work in the ministery was done in Brooklyn as an assistant of the Rev. Samuel Elliott, the pastor of the Unitarian church. Mr. Porter came to Newport from Hingham, Mass., two years ago. It is understood that he will enter the field of literature, or engage in research in geology.

The Gantry Crane.

The wooden cribs which serve as a dock foundation for the new, big gantry crane are being placed in position along the south side of the fitting-out basin at the Fore River shipyard. The cribs, which are made of 12-inch timbers fastened together with two-foot spikes, are being put together near the enormous pile of lumber on the beach between the Des Moines and the seven masted schooner. When completed they are launched and towed into position and then sunk and concreted. Several of them have already been built and when a sufficient number are in place, the gantry crane, which has already been shipped, will be assembled.

The folding jib of the gantry crane will rise above the top of the main mast of the man-of-war, and will have a lifting power of 75 tons. It will be used for placing the heavy armor on the battleships Rhode Island and New Jersey, for lowering their boilers and engines into position, and for stepping the military masts. The tower-like structure of the crane will travel on double tracks from the machine shop to the opposite end of the fitting-out basin.

New Harbor Lights.

The bill introduced by Congressman Conry to establish lighthouses at the entrance to the new Broad Sound channel was passed in the National House Saturday by unanimous consent. This bill has already passed the senate.

The bill provides for a light and fog signal station on the northeast Graves, which will cost $188,000, and range lights on Lovell's island and Spectacle island to cost $10,000 and $13,000 respectively.

—A Scotch tannery concern is manufacturing and introducing tires for bicycles and vehicles made of hogskin. And there are other manipulations of this material. An exchange says: "So many uses have been discovered for the skin of the hog besides that of covering saddles, that it is probable from this on many more swine will have their pelts removed before reaching the pickling vats.

—Assemblages of all kinds are being prohibited in Turkey, the authorities regarding them as dangerous. A ball which was to have been given by a high Christian official was interdicted after some of the guests had arrived.

THE QUINCY CUP.

Quincy Yacht Club Will Probably Issue a Challenge this Week.

Ex-Commodore Faxon of the Quincy Yacht club does not authorize the statement, but a Boston daily announces it as a fact, that a challenge for Quincy Yacht club cup will be issued to the Manchester Yacht Club this week. That the boat will be designed by Arthur Keith for a syndicate, of which Henry M. Faxon and former Commodore F. B. Rice are members The challenger will be of the scow type, somewhat like the Hostess, but of lighter construction. The cup was won by the Lookout, which showed remarkable speed with sheets eased. Mr. Keith had much to do with the design of the Hostess, and is greatly interested in the match.

Lenten Services.

Special Lenten services will be held at St. Chrysostom's church as follows:

On Wednesday a service and address at 4 P. M.

On Thursday at 7.30 P. M., the Holy Communion, in commemoration of the instituting of the Lord's Supper on the night before the crucifixion.

On Good Friday at 10.45 A. M., a service consisting of the penitential office, prayers and meditations.

New Memorials.

Two memorial monuments have met with the favor of the Ways and Means Committee of the Legislature--$5,000 to mark the site of the Massachusetts troops at Vicksburg, and $25,000 for a monument at Provincetown to commemorate spot first seen by the Pilgrims and the signing of the compact in the cabin of the Mayflower off the Cape Cod shore. This appropriation is to be available only when the Cape Cod Pilgrim Memorial Association raises an equal amount.

The Barry Launched.

The United States torpedo boat destroyer Barry was launched at the Neafie & Levy shipyards at Philadelphia, on Saturday, in the presence of several thousand spectators. The Barry is 245 feet long by 23 feet beam, with powerful triple expansion engines. Thornycroft boilers will furnish the steam to drive her through the water at a speed of 30 knots.

AMAZING IMPLEMENT.

Chicago Inventor's Device Cuts Steel as Easily as Wood.

ELECTRICITY DOES THE WORK.

Carbon Point Applied at an Intense Heat Burns Its Way Through Metal—Apparatus Is Simple and Can Be Operated With a Current of Only Fifty Volts.

Julius E. Haschke, a Chicago electrician, in discovering a way to apply electricity to iron and steel so as to cut or burn the metal as a warm knife blade does a hard chunk of butter, has brought to bankers and other guardians of public treasure a feeling of insecurity, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mr. Haschke did not invent his carbon point, the name given the metal cutting device, for the purpose of opening bank safes nor does he wish, so he says, to aid or abet in any way the dark lantern fraternity, yet he is able to cut into two pieces the thickest iron bar or steel plate.

It makes no difference to Mr. Haschke whether he is called upon to cut in two a big boiler plate in a St. Louis brewery or sever asunder great steel ribs in the Rookery building, Chicago. He goes about his labor with full confidence that he can carry out his part of the contract. Mr. Haschke's experience in Milwaukee a few days ago is being reported far and near as an example of what his carbon point will do. A big boiler foundation was to be removed from the basement of a building. It was almost impossible to get the great mass of metal out as it lay, and then it was equally preposterous to think of cutting the plate in two.

Mr. Haschke's simple invention was mentioned to the interested persons, and he was invited to go to the Cream City. Mr. Haschke ensconced himself in a little steel house, placed two pairs of blue spectacles to his eyes, and after connecting his carbon point he touched the steel plate. Persons standing far back in the basement saw a lurid flame shoot up. It was a white light and produced extreme heat. The light well nigh blinded the spectators, but the operator was well protected and did the work.

At the rate of a foot in five minutes and cutting or burning away a wide space in the plate the carbon point, with its terrible power, worked along. Mr. Haschke had no trouble whatever in handling the work, and those who watched him left the place, although blinded by the light, aware of the value of the discovery of the Chicagoan.

"My apparatus is simple and can be operated with a current of only fifty volts," said Mr. Haschke. "Such a voltage of electricity can be obtained by tapping the wires of almost any large building. The modern building is alive with electric wires, and a shrewd operator could easily find a service main and gather from it all the power needed to use his carbon point. But I have avoided the necessity of tapping wires by inventing a little storage battery, which I use when my work is required in this capacity. This battery has twenty-eight cells, and I am able to get just as satisfactory results as with a direct or alternating current."

The Haschke apparatus is simple. A carbon of electrode is attached to a wood handle by means of a metal clamp. To this clamp a wire is fastened, the other being connected with the object to be operated upon. If a safe, the second wire is attached to a hinge or lock, as the fancy of the operator dictates. The eyes and face of the workman are protected against the glare and the heat by a box of aluminium or sheet iron. The carbon point is thrust through a hole in one side of this box. The box used by Mr. Haschke is small, and its inner sides are lined with asbestus. Drillproof bessemer or crome steel is cut as easily as the softer metals with this remarkable invention.

ROUND LOOP ON A WHEEL.

Cyclist Performs the Daring Feat Head Down at Coney Island.

Visitors to Coney Island the other day saw Robert B. Vandervoort, a daredevil bicycle rider, loop the loop on a wheel, says the New York Evening Journal. With tremendous velocity accumulated by a rush down a steep incline on a perfectly smooth surface the bicyclist rode up the concave surface until he hung head downward and continued down and out of the loop, to dismount a hundred feet away.

The exhibition was in the Sea Beach palace, where an incline and loop were especially constructed. It is movable and will pack in a comparatively small space. At its highest end the incline is thirty-eight feet above the floor, and the inclined surface is a hundred feet long. The loop has a vertical diameter of 21 feet 4 inches and a horizontal diameter of 18 feet. Vandervoort's wheel weighed sixty-five pounds, had pneumatic tires, no pedals, no chain and gearing and no brake.

Rival Burglars Scared Each Other.

While burglars who had driven up to the front door in a carriage were busy packing up the silverware in a house in Ravenswood, N. J., some rival burglars drove up to the back door in a second carriage and tried to get in too. Unconscious of the fact that they were poaching on other thieves' preserves, the second burglars endeavored to "jimmy" the rear door, with the result that their efforts scared away the others, who left in such haste, believing they were detected, that the precipitous exit through the front of the house was heard by those at the rear, who, thinking themselves caught, fled in turn.

The Reporter's Revenge.

"Do you see that man?"

And I observed a rather lonesome person wandering aimlessly about the capitol. Regret was stamped upon his face, and his whole attitude was that of a man who had tried and failed and who had no intention of every trying again.

"Well, that is a former representative who called the correspondent of the leading paper in his district a liar. The correspondent did not pursue the ordinary method of retaliation by attacking him in his articles whenever opportunity offered. He simply refused for two years to mention his name in his correspondence. The people at home began to wonder what they sent a man to congress for anyway and finally came to the conclusion that a representative who could not get his name in the paper could not be of much account in Washington. It took 1,400 ballots to beat him when he came up for renomination, but they did it all right."—Washington Cor. New York Herald.

Cheap Living In Mexico.

"Mexican laboring men," says a man who has been visiting in Mexico, "work for 12 cents a day. This may seem incredible, but it is a fact. You see more copper cents in that country and more are used, perhaps, than in any country on the globe. It is not uncommon to see a Mexican woman go to market and buy a cent's worth of wood, a cent's worth of corn or coffee and a stalk of cane. She will make a fire in the center of her adobe house and prepare a meal for the family. They eat cane as we would an apple. The ox cart and wooden plow are still in use. The ox teams are harnessed so the pressure of the load comes upon the head, just in front of the horns, instead of the shoulder and neck."

Captured Big Game.

In one of the St. Louis Sunday schools the classrooms are separated by glass partitions. A St. Louis paper says that during a session of the school one of the teachers was much annoyed by loud talking in an adjoining room.

At last, unable to bear it any longer, he mounted a chair and looked over the partition. Seeing that one boy who was a little taller than the others was talking a great deal, he leaned over, hoisted him over the partition and banged him into a chair in his room, saying, "Now be quiet!"

A quarter of an hour later a small head appeared round the door, and a meek, scared little voice said:

"Please, sir, you've got our teacher."

Cooking Fish.

Boil haddock and codfish six minutes for every pound; bass, salmon and halibut ten to fifteen minutes. A lobster, as a rule, requires half an hour to forty minutes. Large fishes should bake about one hour and small ones twenty to thirty minutes. Broiling requires a quarter to half an hour, according to the size of the fish, very small specimens being finished in five to ten minutes.

The Last Straw.

Mrs. Muggins—My husband is a perfect crank.

Mrs. Buggins—All husbands are, my dear.

Mrs. Muggins—But fancy a man who complains that my mustard plasters are not as strong as those his mother used to make!—Philadelphia Record.

No Women Admitted.

Maiwatchin, on the borders of Russia, is the only city in the world peopled by men only. The Chinese women are not only forbidden to live in this territory, but even to pass the great wall of Kalkan and enter into Mongolia. All the Chinese of this border city are exclusively traders.

Gloomy Even Then.

Hook—Bjones is the most melancholy fellow I know.

Nye—That's right. He proposed to a girl once by asking her how she would like to be his widow.—San Francisco Chronicle.

His Scheme.

Friend—Why do you wear those fearfully old fashioned collars?

Winkers (a man of affairs)—Because when the washerwoman sends them to anybody else they send them back.

A Good Provider.

"Is your husband a good provider?" asked the sympathetic visitor.

"Indeed he is, mum. He got me three new places to wash last week."

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

CHAPTER XIV.

MICHAEL STROGOFF and Nadia had left Semilowskoe about two hours when Michael stopped suddenly.

"Is the road deserted?" he asked.

"Without a soul on it," replied Nadia.

"Do you not hear some noise behind?"

"Truly."

"If these are the Tartars, we must hide ourselves. Look well."

"Listen, Michael!" replied Nadia, ascending the road, which diverged some paces to the right.

Michael Strogoff stopped an instant alone, stretching his ears to listen.

Nadia returned almost immediately and said:

"It is a vehicle. A young man is leading it."

"He is alone?"

"Alone."

Michael Strogoff hesitated for a moment. Ought he to hide, or ought he, on the contrary, try the chance of finding a place in his vehicle, if not for himself, at least for her? For himself, he would be content to rest his hand on it and would push when needed, for his legs were far from failing him, but he felt that Nadia, dragged on foot since the passage of the Obi—namely, for more that eight days—was at the end of her strength.

He waited. The vehicle arrived soon at the turn of the road.

It was a very dilapidated vehicle, able to hold at most three persons—what is called in that country a kibitka.

The kibitka is usually drawn by three horses, but this one was drawn only by one horse, with long hair and a long tail, but its Mongolian blood affirmed strength and courage.

A young man conducted it, having near him a dog.

Nadia at once saw that this young man was a Russian. He had a sweet and phlegmatic appearance which inspired confidence.

Moreover, he did not appear to be in the least hurry. He walked with a quiet step in order not to overdrive his horse, and to see him one could never have believed that he was following a route which the Tartars might cut off at any moment.

Nadia, holding the hand of Michael Strogoff, stood on one side.

The kibitka stopped, and the driver looked at the young girl, at the same time smiling.

"And where are you going in this fashion?" he asked her as he looked pleasantly round.

At the sound of his voice Michael Strogoff said to himself that he had heard it somewhere, and without doubt it was sufficient to cause him to recognize the driver of the kibitka, for his face at once became serene.

"Well, now, where are you going?" repeated the young man, addressing himself more directly to Michael Strogoff.

"We were going to Irkutsk," answered the latter.

"Oh, my good man, do you not know, then, that there are many, many versts between this and Irkutsk?"

"I know it."

"And you are going on foot?"

"On foot."

"As for you, it's all right, but the miss?"

"She is my sister," said Michael Strogoff, who thought it more prudent to give this name again to Nadia.

"Yes, your sister, my good man. But, believe me, she will never be able to reach Irkutsk."

"Friend," replied Michael Strogoff as he drew near, "the Tartars have robbed us, and I have not a copeck to offer thee, but if you will take my sister near you I will follow the carriage on foot. I will run if it be necessary and will not delay you one hour."

"Brother," cried Nadia, "I do not wish it! I do not wish it! Sir, my brother is blind!"

"Blind!" said the young man in a voice moved with emotion.

"The Tartars have burned out his eyes!" answered Nadia, stretching out her hands as though to implore pity.

"Burned your eyes? Oh, poor, dear man! I am going to Krasnoiarsk. Well, now, why do you not mount with your sister into the kibitka? In sitting a little closer we shall hold each other up. Besides, my dog will not refuse to go on foot. Only I do not go fast in order to spare my horse."

"Friend, what do they call you?" asked Michael Strogoff.

"I am called Nicholas Pigassof."

"It is a name that I shall never forget," answered Michael Strogoff.

"Well, then, mount, my good blind man. Your sister shall be near you at the back of the car; I in front to conduct. There are some good birch bark and some barley straw on the bottom. It's like a nest. Come, Serko, give us room."

The dog jumped off without much asking. It was an animal of the Siberian breed, with a gray hide, medium size, with a good, large and caressing head, and which appeared to be very attached to his master.

Michael Strogoff and Nadia in an instant were installed in the kibitka. Michael Strogoff had stretched out his hands as though to search those of Nicholas Pigassof.

"Is it my hands you wish to press?" said Nicholas. "Here they are, my good man. Shake them as much as you like."

The kibitka was soon in motion. The horse, which Nicholas never struck, ambled along. If Michael Strogoff did not gain much in rapidity, at least new fatigues would be spared to Nadia. And such was the exhaustion of the young girl that, rocked by the monotonous motion of the kibitka, she soon fell into a sleep that resembled an utter prostration. Michael Strogoff and Nicholas made a bed for her on the birch leaves as well as they were able. The compassionate young man was much moved, and if a tear did not escape the eyes of Michael Strogoff in truth it was because the redhot iron had burned them dry.

"She is pretty," said Nicholas.

"Yes," answered Michael Strogoff.

"These darlings would be strong, for they are courageous, but they are really only weak. Do you come a great distance?"

"From a great distance."

"Poor young folks! It must have hurt you much when they burned your eyes."

"Very much," said Michael Strogoff, turning as though he could see Nicholas.

"Did you not cry?"

"Yes."

"I also should have cried. To think that one can never see again those he loves! Anyhow they see you. That is perhaps some consolation."

"Yes, perhaps. Tell me, friend," demanded Michael Strogoff, "have you never seen me anywhere before today?"

"You, my good man? No, never."

"It is because the sound of your voice is not unknown to me."

"Do you see?" said Nicholas, smiling. "He knows the sound of my voice. Perhaps you ask me this to learn whence I come. Oh, I am going to tell you. I am coming from Kalyvan."

"From Kalyvan?" said Michael Strogoff. "Well, then it is there that I met you. You were at the telegraph office?"

"That may be," answered Nicholas. "I lived there. I was employed as telegraph operator."

"And you remained at your post to the last moment?"

"Eh! It is especially at that moment one ought to be there."

"It was the day when an Englishman and a Frenchman, rubles in their hands, disputed the turn at your wicket, and when the Englishman telegraphed the first verses of the Bible?"

"That, my good man, is possible, but I do not remember it."

"What! You do not remember it?"

"I never read the dispatches which I transmit. My duty being to forget them, the shortest way is to be ignorant of them."

This answer was characteristic of Nicholas Pigassof.

However, the kibitka kept on its easy course, which Michael Strogoff would have liked to render more rapid, but Nicholas and his horse were accustomed to a gait from which neither the one nor the other could depart. The horse walked for three hours and then rested for one, and this day and night. During the halts the horse pastured, the travelers of the kibitka ate in company with the faithful Serko. The kibitka was provisioned for at least twenty persons, and Nicholas had generously placed the reserved food at the disposal of his two guests, whom he believed to be brother and sister.

FLORENCE BURNS FREE

No Evidence to Hold Her on Charge of Murder

EXCITING SCENE IN COURT

Men and Women Scrambled to Congratulate the Young Woman—Was Sweetheart of Man Who Was Found Dead Under Queer Circumstances

New York, March 24.—Florence Burns, the 19-year-old girl who for five weeks was in custody under the accusation of having ordered her sweetheart, Walter T. Brooks, in the Glen Island hotel, was discharged Saturday night by Justice Mayer in the court of special sessions.

FLORENCE BURNS.

When the justice, after a long explanation of the law, announced in a few words that the evidence brought out by the prosecution was insufficient to hold the girl for the grand jury, and that he therefore discharged her from custody, men and women hurled themselves over chairs and benches in a mad rush to congratulate the girl.

There were a score or more of policemen in the court room, but they were powerless to restrain the rushing crowd. Justice Mayer pounded on his desk and yelled for order, but his voice was drowned in the hubbub. Half a dozen policemen formed a ring around the girl and did their best to keep hysterical people from knocking her over.

With no gentle hands the policemen shoved back fashionably dressed women who screeched out and tried to touch the girl. Some few succeeded in grabbing her by the hand and shaking it, others were content if they were able only to pat her on the head, or the arm.

In full keeping with her demeanor during the early days of the examination Florence Burns, in a moment of what amounted to a vindication, retained her remarkable composure, and in no manner gave evidence of the pleasure that must have been hers. She turned to her counsel, Foster L. Backus, and thanked him and congratulated him upon the victory he had achieved over the forces of the district attorney's office. She also requested that her thanks be sent to Judge Mayer.

At the hearing Attorney Backus, representing Miss Burns, made his argument, contending there was not an iota of evidence to show that his client was connected with the death of Brooks. Assistant District Attorney Schurman followed in an argument intended to cast suspicion on the girl, holding that there was plenty of circumstantial evidence on which to bring her case to the attention of the grand jury.

Justice Mayer at once gave his decision, in which he reviewed all the evidence and held that nothing had been brought out by the state sufficient for him to hold the girl for trial in the criminal branch of the supreme court.

Walter T. Brooks, who was a young commission merchant in New York, had been paying Miss Burns attention. He was found dead the night of Feb. 4 in a room at the Glen Island hotel. The gas in the room was turned on and there was a bullet hole in the head. The district attorney tried to show that Miss Burns, Brooks' sweetheart, was likely to have killed Brooks because he was trying to cut loose from her. The defense advanced the suicide theory, and for several days Justice Mayer has been weighing the evidence on both sides.

The district attorney can still apply to the grand jury for an indictment, but it is regarded as unlikely, in view of the fact that so able and careful a judge as Mayer has refused to hold her even for a further hearing.

Dike In the Wrong

New York, March 24.—Justice Gaynor of the supreme court has handed down a decision to the effect that Charles Guden is the sheriff of Kings county and declares the action of Colonel Dike and his assistants in breaking into the sheriff's office as unwarranted. Guden was recently removed from office by Governor Odell, who appointed Dike in his place.

Cholera In Philippines

Manila, March 24.—There have been four more cases of cholera here and two more deaths from the plague are reported. The health authorities believe that their rigid precautions have averted an epidemic. Five cases of cholera have been reported from the provinces.

THIS WEEK IN CONGRESS

Army Bill Likely to Cause Lengthy Discussion In the House

Washington, March 24.—The oleomargarine bill will receive the greatest share of the attention of the senate during the present week, but if there should be a time when no one is prepared to speak on it Senator Proctor, who will have charge of it, will give way to the Chinese exclusion bill, which is in the hands of Senator Penrose. Senator Proctor expresses the opinion that the final vote on the bill will not be long postponed, and it is understood that the members of the committee on agriculture who are opposed to the bill will not contend for many days for debate.

There is a bare possibility that the fight over the question of Cuban reciprocity will be transferred to the floor of the house during this week. The probabilities, however, are that the reciprocity resolution introduced by Mr. Payne, after the action of the Republican caucus last week, will not be called up until next week, though upon this point no definite decision has been reached as yet by the leaders. The present program is to take up the army bill after the disposal of the Moss-Rhea contested election case on Tuesday. Several days will be consumed in general debate on this bill, as the Democrats are inclined to use it as a text for speeches in opposition to the policy of the administration in the Philippines. It is a foregone conclusion that Mr. Rhea will be unseated when the vote on his contested election case is taken.

French Minister Asks For Warship

Port-au-Prince, Hayti, March 24.—Leon Gabriel, who claimed to be a citizen of France and who was executed Saturday, after having fired a shot from a revolver at Chief of Police Cameau, was formerly an aide de camp of ex-President Legitime. Upon this fact the Haytian government bases the claim that Gabriel was a Haytian. The French minister here maintains that Gabriel was a citizen of France and as a result of the execution has requested that a French man-of-war be sent here.

Redmond's Promise

Chicago, March 24.—Messrs. Redmond and Devlin, Irish members of parliament, before an audience of 10,000 persons here last night, made an appeal for the rights of Ireland and spoke in praise of the Boers in their struggle against the British. Said Mr. Redmond: "If we cannot in the English parliament win home rule, I promise you we will destroy the parliament of England; if we cannot govern ourselves we can take good care not to allow them to govern themselves."

Figuring on Cuban Transfer

Washington, March 24.—Matters incident to the transition of Cuba from American to Cuban control formed the subject of a conference of several hours' duration at the White House last night. Those present included the president, Secretary Root, Postmaster General Payne and Governor General Wood. General Wood's visit here will be very short and officials desire to learns everything possible about the condition of affairs while he is in Washington.

"Respected Citizen" Goes Wrong

Pittsburg, March 24.—As he was walking out of a church yesterday at Wilkinsburg, Lewis Strayer, an insurance agent, was arrested on charge of forgery and using the mails for fraudulent purposes. He confessed to having forged at least one check and the detectives think he is one of the leaders of a gang who have flooded this city and New York with bogus checks. Strayer has been a respected citizen of Wilkinsburg.

Serious Wreck In Virginia

Charlottesville, Va., March 24.—A north-bound passenger train was wrecked by a landslide at Covesville yesterday. The engine was ditched and six coaches completely destroyed by fire. A Pullman porter and a tramp were killed, the fireman fatally burned and 10 members of the train crew or railway postoffice injured. No passengers were hurt.

Burning Steamer Identified

Charleston, March 24.—The unknown steamer reported afire by the crew of the Oregon Inlet lifesaving station in North Carolina has been identified as the oil steamer Major Barrett, bound from Sabine Pass, Tex., to New York. It is believed some passing vessel rescued the crew of the fire-stricken ship.

Wilcox Convicted of Murder

Elizabeth, N. C., March 24.—James Wilcox was Saturday night found guilty of the murder of Nellie Cropsey. After having been out 30 hours, the jury brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree. The prisoner heard the verdict without apparent emotion.

Sought Freedom and Met Death

Kosciusko, Miss., March 24.—Five county convicts made an attempt last night to burn their way out of prison by burning the stockade house in which they were confined. All were cremated.

FAULTS IN ARMY BILL

Receive Severe Criticism From General Miles

SCHEME IS REVOLUTIONARY

And Casts to the Winds the Lessons of Experience and Abandons Tried Methods—Door Thrown Wide Open For Future Autocrat or Despot

Washington, March 25.—The statement of General Miles before the senate committee on military affairs, as it will appear in the official records, was made public last night. The features which caused something of a sensation when published the day the statement was made do not appear, as the report of the proceedings was submitted to General Miles with permission to strike out such portions as ought not to be published.

The main facts of the general's opposition to the war department staff bill were given at the time of the hearing. Some of the features of the statement, however, not reported at the time, are of interest. Concerning the inspector general's department he said:

"In the bill under consideration it is proposed to abolish entirely the corps of inspectors, who have been most instrumental in keeping the army up to its high character and efficiency and in discovering defalcations, inefficiency and maladministration, and, on the other hand, in encouraging and reporting meritorous conduct, efficiency and ability in all the different commands and departments of the service."

Speaking of the general efficiency of pay, quartermaster's and commissary departments he said: "The three departments mentioned have rendered most efficient service in the great Civil war, the wars on the frontier, the Spanish-American war, and in the Philippines and China. The maladministration in the commissary department that occasioned so much suffering in 1898 was not the fault of the system, but of those responsible for its administration, and since it was exposed and corrected I am not aware that a single case has been reported where a soldier has not received his daily food and his pay when due from the commissary and pay departments, respectively, and these have been promptly transported to him through the efficient management of the quartermaster's department."

Further along General Miles said of the bill: "It is centralization of the most pronounced type, augments the power of the staff, and in effect removes it further from touch with the fighting force of the army. The scheme is revolutionary, casts to the winds the lessons of experience and abandons methods which successfully carried us through the most memorable war epochs of our history. The proposed plan is but an effort to adopt and foster in a republican form of government such as ours a system peculiarly adapted to monarchies having immense standing armies. It would seem to Germanize and Russianize the small army of the United States."

General Miles said that before the Spanish war he called on President McKinley and when the president said he supposed the army was ready he (General Miles) replied: "The army, as far as the personnel is concerned, is ready for any service, but there is much to be done in the way of equipment and the defense of the coast, which ought to be supplied at the other end of the Capitol."

The president, he added, consulted members of congress and the $50,000,000 defense fund was voted.

In addition to that portion of the statement heretofore published showing how the president could by promotions make a captain chief-of-staff with grade of lieutenant general, General Miles said:

"It seems to me you are throwing the door wide open for a future autocrat or a military despot. It is not, in my judgment, in accordance with the principle and theory of Democratic government, and for the best interests of the army, which has existed more than a hundred years and fulfilled all your requirements, to adopt such a scheme."

In Congress

Washington, March 25.—Consideration was begun by the senate yesterday of what is popularly known as the oleomargarine bill. The measure places a tax of 10 cents a pound on oleomargarine colored in imitation of butter and reduces the present tax of 2 cents a pound on oleomargarine to 1-4 cent a pound in its uncolored form. Mr. Proctor made the opening statement in support of the measure.

Mr. Boreing (Ky.) injected an attack on the Goebel election case from the third Kentucky district, which again occupied the attention of the house yesterday, but Mr. Rhea declined to be drawn into an extended debate on an issue not directly involved in the case. He charged Mr. Boreing with ignorance of the law of his own state. Mr. Rhea made a strong presentation of his side of the case, but had not concluded when the house adjourned.

Duty on West Indian Sugar

Washington, March 25.—The secretary of the treasury has decided that if sugar is shipped from the Danish West Indies to the United States prior to the ratification of the treaty ceding the islands to the United States and deposited in bonded warehouses, it can be withdrawn for consumption only upon the payment of duty.

INQUEST POSTPONED

Coroner Will Not Investigate Death of Walter Brooks Until April 2

New York, March 25.—Coroner Brown announces that the inquest to determine the cause of death of Walter Brooks has been postponed to April 2. Brooks was found unconscious in a room in the Glen Island hotel on Feb. 14, with a bullet wound in his head, and he died the following day in a hospital without having regained consciousness.

Florence Burns, who had been the young man's sweetheart, was arrested and was a prisoner for four weeks. She was discharged from custody last Saturday evening by Justice Mayer, who held that the evidence against her was not sufficient to warrant her detention. It is not known whether Miss Burns will be called upon to testify at the coroner's inquest.

District Attorney Jerome says that he will not present the case to the grand jury unless he obtains more evidence.

Anthracite Miners' Strike Threatened

Shamokin, Pa., March 25.—Unless the efforts of the Civic Federation are effective with the coal operators, it is more than likely that a repetition of the struggle of 1900 will occur in the anthracite region. In that year 140,000 employes of the anthracite mines were out on strike for six weeks. The convention yesterday of districts Nos. 1, 7 and 9, United Mine Workers of America, comprising the entire anthracite field, made a provisional strike declaration, leaving the date to be decided by the executive boards of the three districts.

Mail Went Up In Flames

Washington, March 25.—Only two dozen pieces of mail were saved from over two tons of postal matter carried on the train wrecked and burned near Charlottesville, Va., Sunday. This is the official report of the wreck made to the postal department after an investigation of the facts. The immense mass of mail carried was destined for this city and eastern and northern points.

Will Fight the Merger

Minneapolis, March 25.—W. B. Stratton, attorney general of the state of Washington, will bring suit in the United States supreme court against the Northern Securities company to prevent the merger. As all the corporations party to the suit are outside of Washington, the question of jurisdiction, which caused Minnesota's petition to be denied, will be avoided.

Postal Thieves Sentenced

Havana, March 25.—The trials of the cases arising from the embezzlements of Cuban postal funds have resulted in the following sentences: C. F. W. Neely, 10 years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $56,701; W. H. Reeves, 10 years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $35,516; Estes G Rathbone, 10 years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $36,324.

Laguna Insurgents Surrender

Manila, March 25.—The remnant of the force in Laguna province, Luzon, under the insurgent leader Caballos, has surrendered to Lieutenant Colonel Dougherty. Forty-seven rifles and 18 revolvers were turned in by these insurgents. Caballos, who also surrendered, has ordered the insurgents remaining in Laguna to cease their hostilities.

Harvard's Windfall

St. Louis, March 25.—George Smith, adopted son of James Smith, by his will filed for probate yesterday, left $450,000, the bulk of his estate, to Harvard university. The money is to be used in building three dormitories, one to be called after himself and the other after his adopted parents.

Mob Disposed of Negro

Troy, Ala., March 25.—Bill Zeigler, a negro, was charged with an assault on a white girl. The negro had been bound over to the grand jury. The sheriff started to town with the prisoner, but was overpowered by a mob, and the negro was lynched.

Stronger Forces For Isthmus

Colon, March 25.—The government gunboat General Pinzon arrived here yesterday with 600 troops from the department of Santander. Other battalions will be brought to the isthmus should their presence be required.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

IN FAVOR OF STRIKE

Cotton Spinners and Loomfixers Stand by Lowell Textile Council

Lowell, Mass., March 25.—A general strike of the Textile operatives in Lowell is now unavoidable, except by concessions on the part of the mill agents, and this latter is not expected.

The cotton spinners and the loom fixers met last evening and voted to stand by the demand of the council. The spinners voted to strike at the word of the council and the loom fixers went them one better by instructing their delegates to advocate a general strike at the meeting of the council this evening. The emphatic "no" of the mill agents in their reply to the request of the operatives for a 10 percent advance left the matter to the operatives, and the loom fixers and the spinners have given an answer.

Something must be done in the way of reconciliation and that quickly, or a general strike will prevail within a few days. There are 10 unions represented in the council and the action of the loom fixers and cotton spinners is indicative of the movement of the unions.

Couldn't Reach Agreement

Quincy, Mass., March 25.—A long conference between the quarry owners and the representatives of the Quarrymen's union broke up at an early this morning without any definite result being reached as to the hours of labor for the men. The men demanded eight hours work and nine hours' pay for nine months in the year, and nine hours work during the remaining three months. The two offers were discussed fully, but the owners would not entertain them.

Important Captures

Boston, March 25.—Fred Miller and Frank Myers are under arrest here, and the Boston police believe they have the pincipals in several big burglaries. Both of the prisoners are said to be Sing Sing convicts, and are classed as desperate house-breakers. The burglary which they are charged with having committed occurred on Feb. 8, when the house of George C. Squire was entered and a large quantity of property stolen.

Fund of Nearly $34,000

Boston, March 25.—Money for the families of the brave lifesavers of Monomoy has not ceased to pour in. Messrs. Lee, Higginson & Co., treasurers of the fund, announce that the fund is $20 short of $34,000. In addition to this $385 have been given for the benefit of the living; rewards for the services of the surfman who alone of all the crew survived, and of the fisher captain who saved him.

Attachments Galore

Bridgeport, Conn., March 25.—Another batch of attachments was placed on the plant of the American Ordnance company yesterday. The largest claim put in was by the Massachusetts National bank of Boston, which attaches for $30,000 to satisfy a note of $15,000 given on Jan. 14 of this year. The reorganization of the company is talked of.

Green Goods Men Sentenced

Boston, March 25.—William C. Woodward and Otto Schuelor were before Judge Lowell yesterday on 11 indictments charging them with using the mail in pursuance of a scheme to defraud. Woodward was sentenced to state prison for five years, and Schuelor to jail for nine months. Both operated the so-called "green-goods" game.

Kearns Wants His Job Back

Somersworth, N. H., March 25.—A writ of quo warranto was served on City Clerk Remick last evening on behalf of Mark A. Kearns, who last week was removed from office of clerk by the city council, citing him to appear at a hearing in the superior court and show by what warrant he exercises the duties of clerk.

Three Years For Killing Wife

Boston, March 25.—Shuffling feebly between the court officers, Stephen Hennessey, 70 years old, entered the superior court yesterday for killing his wife some time ago. Judge Stevens gave a sentence of three years in the house of correction. The old man did not appear to understand what had been done.

Prince Didn't Forget Police

Washington, March 25.—Richard Sylvester, chief of police, has received a silver cigarette holder from Prince Henry of Prusia in recognition of attentions extended to him by the police department during his visits to Washington.

ALL ARE FOR SYNDICATES

Places No Reliance Upon What "Self-Seeking Politicians and Self-Exploiting Soldiers" Tell of Conditions In the Philippine Islands

Washington, March 25.—About 150 guests were present last night at the biennial banquet of the Virginia Democratic association at the Metropolitan hotel. They included Democrats of national prominence and most of the political leaders and Democratic members of congress from the Old Dominion. Colonel Henry Watterson of Kentucky was the principal speaker. He urged on Democrats a general union of forces in opposition to imperialism in all forms. He said in part:

"We are Democrats. We love our country. Our hearts beat true to its institutions. We would rescue the government from the hands of those who are converting it into a government of the trusts, for the trusts, and by the trusts, and restore it to the hands of those who will have some regard for the rights of the people.

"Once again in the White House we have the man on horseback. Affecting the simplicity of the cowboy, he conceals beneath the self-confidence and queer manners of the broncho-buster the sentiments and ambitions, if not the talents, of a Diaz. To him, a little thing like treating an admiral of the navy as if he were a baby in arms is merely an undress affair. To him the reprimanding of the lieutenant general of the army becomes an amusing horse play. A bill of army reorganization is urged upon congress, which, if it becomes a law, will make the power of the president absolute. Because the lieutenant general expresses an opinion adverse to this bill, it is proposed to retire him.

"Look at the Republicans in congress. The trail of the trademark is over them all. Everything for the syndicates. Nothing for the people. And, not content with their arbitrary power in the White House and their mercenary power in congress the leaders of his party would rip open Pandora's box to filch thence the black, piratical flag of negro domination—the equally disreputable and bloody shirt of sectional agitation—and, in order to make sure of the next house, they are proposing to bring forward another force bill to smite the south, to blight the north and to convert a land teeming with love and peace into a land reeking with hate and strife. Such is the banquet to which the exit of McKinley, the statesman, and the advent of Roosevelt, the rough rider, has invited us.

"I believe in the expanding greatness and glory of my country. I never see the flag floating above the dome of yonder Capitol that my heart does not throb with the thought that I am an American citizen. God bless the flag and God bless the boys that fight beneath it.

"I want to know what is going on across the Pacific. I want other witnesses than self-seeking politicians and self-exploiting soldiers to come here and tell me. I refuse to hold my tongue. If I am told by a whipper-snapper in shoulder-straps that, unless I do, I am a traitor to my country, my reply to him shall be a slap in the face.

"There will be but one test of a Democrat in 1904—toe the line, saying to arbitrary power and absolutism, thou shalt go no further; we too, are in the expansion business; but our expansion is for the religion of the constitution no less than for the religion of Christ. Our expansion means peace, not war; the honor, not the degradation of the flag; and just as surely as Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence—to resist despotism—shall we make a new Fourth of July in resisting this unrighteous scheme to abolish the constitution and Mexicanize the government."

Looking Into Horse Trades

Washington, March 25.—Sir Richard Stewart of the British army arrived in this city yesterday. He is the personal representative of Great Britain and will remain in the United States for several months, making inquiries into the supply of horses for use in the South African war.

New Orleans, March 25.—The British steamer Hydaspes, which cleared from this port yesterday for Cape Town, carries 1010 horses for the use of the British army in South Africa.

Grecian Market Within Reach

Washington, March 25.—"The American exporter should not rest under the impression that Germany or any other country can drive the United States out of the markets of Greece," reports United States Consul McGinley at Athens. He says that the United States is close behind Germany in the Grecian markets, and could outstrip the empire with well directed efforts.

Alleged Liabilities of $3,000,000

New York, March 25.—A petition was filed here by the Bank of New Brunswick, St. Johns; the First National bank of Ottawa, Ills., and the National bank of Helena, Mont., asking that the Crude Rubber company be declared an involuntary bankrupt. The petition asserts that the company has liabilities of $3,000,000 and that it has committed various acts of bankruptcy.

Good Afternoon.

Sometimes Sunday work fails, as was the case last Sunday when a yachtsman gave the day to sand papering and finishing a mast, to find when he had finished, that he had been working upon another fellow's mast. Perhaps, however, he was doing unto others as he would that others should do unto him.

An anonymous communication has been received relative to the proposed building ordinance, probably from a builder. He should have sent his name, or what is better, have signed his name for publication. The uncertainty over the passage of the ordinance is probably holding up building which is usually active in the spring of the year.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Western capitalists are said to be preparing for a rush to the Philippines, where there are great opportunities for American miners and farmers. The mineral wealth of the islands has never been exploited, but enough is known to encourage the adventurous and enterprising to seek fortune in the earth and in the wonderful timber product. Wherever there is a suspicion of gold, there the miner is found and the rush to the Klondike may be duplicated by the emigration to the Philippines. The forests of the archipelago possess the finest woods in the world and to cut and market them will mean fortunes to those who engage in the business. The land laws of the United States it is expected by the California capitalists who are interested in the matter, will ultimately be applied to the islands and thousands of acres now idle will be occupied by American farmers and miners. This will open the Philippines to commerce and the developed resources of the islands will add wealth and comfort to the people. —Lynn Item.

☞Mr. Faxon, the well known liquor fighter of Quincy, has decided to retire from the field in which he has fought so many battles, leaving the duty of keeping up the warfare to Eva M. Brown, who, for 23 years has been his secretary, and is perfectly familiar with all the details of the campaign. Mr. Faxon gives declining health and advancing age as his reason for laying down his arms, or rather passing them over to younger and abler hands. Mr. Faxon is in his 79th year, and for 30 years has been engaged in a contest with the violators of the liquor laws. Miss Brown has been an efficient helper, and for several years has borne the chief burden of the Faxon campaigns. Mr. Faxon has been quite a factor in the politics of the Commonwealth, and in this department of his activity Miss Brown cannot hope to maintain his prestige. He has done a great service to his native town of Quincy, and to the Commonwealth, even though it was in a manner peculiar to himself, and by methods that were quite original.—Lynn Item.

The Mayor gave notice that Joseph Silber had been convicted of receiving stolen property and asked that his license be revoked, which was done.

LESS ENGINEERS.

The Mayor suggested a change in the Fire Department ordinance as the charter had been amended. He recommended that there should be three assistant engineers at $150 per year each, instead of six assistant engineers at $100.

Laid on the table until later, when Councilman Elcock made an amendment conforming with the Mayor's suggestion. Referred to joint Committee of Fire Department and Ordinance.

TRANSFER.

The Overseer of the Poor in a communication stated that his department had paid a claim of the town of Weymouth of $25 for relief of Sarah A. Cain, which should have been charged to soldiers' relief of 1901.

Laid on the table until later when Councilman Craig offered an order transferring $25 from soldiers' relief of 1901 to the Poor department.

The Overseer of the Poor also in a communication said a claim for $60 for relief of Sarah A. Cain had been presented by the town of Weymouth. Laid on the table until later when an order was passed authorizing the City Clerk to charge the bill to the appropriation for soldiers' relief of 1901.

PETITIONS.

Several petitions for minor licenses were received and referred.

A petition was received that Federal avenue be accepted as a public way. To Committee on Streets.

Addie W. Dornan petitioned for an apportionment of her sidewalk assessment. Order adopted.

The New England Telephone Company petitioned for a location for one pole on Washington street.

The Old Colony Street railway company petitioned for the location of one pole on Washington street, and one pole on South street. To Committee on Streets.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Streets reported an amendment to the order granting a location for poles to the New England Telphone Co., on School and Putnam streets The amendment provided that permission to cut trees is obtained from abutters was adoped. Rules suspended and order passed.

HOUGHS NECK FIRE STATION.

The order for $4,000 for land and a fire station at Houghs Neck was reported correctly engrossed.

Councilman Fallon asked if plans and specifications were present.

They were given him by the President who immediately put the question. The order was passed, Councilman Fallon voting No.

ANNUAL APPRORIATIONS.

The annual appropriation order for current expenses of the city for the year 1902 was passed practically as per estimates of Mayor Bryant, providing $309,038. within the $12 limit; $124,171.84 additional for maturing debt and interest; $39,286.13 to be paid from water rates for maintenance and interest on water debt; and $26,632.75 to be paid from sewer assessments for sewer debt, interest and maintenance; grand total of $499,132.72.

The vote on passage was 18 to 1 as follows:

Yeas—Adams, Craig, Diack, Elcock, Faxon, Freeman, Gassett, Hadlock, Hughes, Langelier, Newcomb, Nichols, Nckerson, Piper, Polk, Stewart, Thompson, Whiton—18.

Nays—Fallon—1.

Not Voting—President Alden, Bass and Meyer.

Absent—Smith.

Councilman Bass wished to ask some questions but was ruled out of order and refused to vote, and Councilman Meyer did not vote because he did not know what the question was.

STREET WATERING.

Councilman Newcomb offered an order for $6,600 for street watering. To Committee on Streets.

Upon motion of Councilman Freeman it was voted when the Council adjourn it be until next Monday.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Councilman Adams offered an order appropriating $50 for the observance of Memorial Day by John A. Boyd Camp of Spanish War Veterans. To Finance Committee.

Adjourned 8.10.

Trap Shooting.

At the weekly shoot of the Wollaston Trap club Saturday, some good scores were made. The only perfect records were by Prescott at unknown angles and Barry at doubles. Barry led in five events, Thomas in three, Prescott and Elwell in one each, and there were two ties for first place. The scores out of a possible 10 in the twelve events were:

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

The last Tuesday of March.

Washington court is being resurfaced.

The first cellar in Hayward's grove is now going in.

There will be an Easter vesper service on Sunday at the First church.

The pleasant weather coupled with wind has resulted in making the streets very dusty.

Pastors and choristers are requested to forward Easter programs to reach the Daily Ledger Friday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor of River street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, born Saturday.

Mr. Nay of Howard avenue has taken his naptha launch to South Yarmouth where he is staying for a few weeks.

Miss Blanch Bristol of Uxbridge, who has been visiting Mrs. George Hill of Walker street, has returned to her home.

The flag on the High School building was at half mast Monday out of respect to Samuel B. Turner, who was the janitor of that building.

A suit brought by Charles M. Bryant against the town of Weymouth is in the trial list in the Norfolk Superior court this week.

While exercising on a trapeese Monday afternoon, Master Chester Greenard of 417 Hancock street, fell and fractured his collar bone.

Rev. and Mrs. Guy W. McCreery will be tendered a reception next Thursday evening by the people of the Atlantic Methodist church.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Kincaide are now at their attractive home on Whitney road. Mrs. Kincaide's health has been completely restored by the change, which is good news to their friends.

Miss Sarah Arnold, dean of Simmons college, Boston, will speak at the Women's Alliance of Wollaston, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Rice will sing. As there are many other Alliances invited to be present the meeting takes the name "Neighborhood meeting."

Mrs. John Litchfield's historical paper has received merited praise, and she has been invited to give it in neighboring towns along the South Shore. Mrs. Litchfield, who lives in Wollaston is a sister of Mr. Joseph Morse of Goffe street, and both her parents were teachers so she has inherited a double share of scholarly qualities.

The Smart Set whist club met with Miss Gertrude Warren of Billings street, Monday evening. The favors for the choice of partners were toy bares, an animal appropriate to the month of March. Prizes were taken by Miss Evelyn Bassett, Miss Annie Hall and Miss Emma Curtin. Each young woman found her place at the table by seeking a slip of paper having an introduction to her name. The dining room was prettily decorated in purple and white strings of paper arranged to form a canopy over the table. A great deal of fun was provoked by endeavors to answer conundrum, the replies to which could be found on the face of a cent. The answers were irrelevant in the extreme. The next meeting of the club will be with Miss Curtin on April ninth.

W. Y. C. Social.

The first of a series of monthly entertainments of Wollaston Yacht club went off very smoothly Monday evening. The Wollaston orchestra was in its best form and rendered several selections. Master John Merrill and Miss Edith Chapman and Roy Givens gave piano solos. Miss Fannie Beckwith who always pleases her audience found little effort in doing so several times. Messrs. Ernest and John Merrill also rendered skillfully two selections on violin and piano. Dr. Merrill who is always ludicrous in his readings, was greatly appreciated, as was shown by hearty applause he received.

Toward the latter part of the program Commodore A. L. Baker spoke to those present in a welcoming manner and advised all who desired to invest a few dollars to join. The benefits and privileges received are worth something.

The evening was in charge of Dr. Merrill.

AT WORK AGAIN

Coal Firms and Their Men Come to Terms.

No Settlement of the Quarry Strike.

Conference Held and Others May Follow.

The strike of the coal handlers was declared off Monday and the men returned to work this morning. As stated in Monday's Ledger a second conference was held that morning between the drivers and Messrs. Patch and Sheppard at which a general discussion of the situation took place. Monday afternoon the men held a meeting and decided to accept the proposition made by the dealers and return to work in the morning.

The terms of settlement are: That drivers of single teams shall receive $11.50 per week, drivers of double teams $12.50 and drivers of three horse teams $13.50 and that helpers on barges shall receive twenty cents per hour.

All of the men of Messrs. Patch returned to work this morning, and all of Messrs. Sheppards' men but two returned to work.

Quarryman's Conference.

Another conference between the quarry owners and the quarrymen was held Monday evening. The increase of ten per cent. in wages as offered, was acceptable.

The only change in the last proposition by the owners which the men desired, was that nine hours should constitute a days' work for three months and eight hours for the balance of the year.

The proposition made by the quarry-owners was nine hours for six months of the year and eight hours for the balance of the year with an increase of ten per cent.

The conference lasted until nearly midnight without the two committees coming to any agreement.

When at last an adjournment was made the quarry owners renewed their proposition of a ten per cent. increase in wages and of nine hours for six months and eight hours for the balance of the year.

Again Rejected.

A meeting of the Quarrymen's Union was held this morning to hear the report of its committee on the conference with the Quarry Owners committee Monday evening.

The committee reported that the Quarry Owners had refused the men's proposition for a nine hour day for three months of the year and eight hours for the balance of the year.

After hearing the report the Union voted to take no further action, and to ask for no further conference.

One of the Union men, when seen this noon, said that many of the men were at work on the water trenches and elsewhere and that probably no further action would be taken. The men, he said, did not care for the increase of pay as they received all they wanted in that line. The only thing needed to make their happiness complete was work for eight hours a day only.

Five-Master in Port.

The new five-masted schooner Prescott Palmer, Capt. Carlisle, arrived in Boston Monday from Baltimore, on her maiden trip and dropped anchor in the upper harbor, off Long wharf. She is the largest of the 20 five-masters afloat, and cost $110,000 her general dimensions being: Length 288 feet, breadth 46 feet 2 inches and depth of hold 27 feet 2 inches. The handsome vessel attracted considerable attention as she lay at anchor in the harbor. She was profusely decorated with flags in honor of her initial visit to her home port.

Funeral of a Veteran.

The funeral of Samuel B. Turner was held Monday afternoon from his late residence on Quincy avenue and was largely attended. Among those present were Paul Revere Post, 88, G. A. R. and Merrymount lodge A. O. U. W., also a delegation from the 56th regiment association. The services were conducted by Rev. Edwin N. Hardy of Bethany church, assisted by Rev. Merrill C. Ward of the Universalist church. The remains were escorted to Mt. Wollaston by Paul Revere Post and Merrymount lodge. The bearers were Past Commanders W. H. Warner and Francis P. Loud of Paul Revere Post and George C. Ela and George W. Walsh of Merrymount lodge. At the grave the burial service of the Grand Army was performed by Paul Revere Post. There were many beautiful flowers.

Bouquet of lilies from Mrs. Lyons and family.

Flat bouquet from Paul Revere W. R. C.

Thirty Cousins.

One of the jolliest family gatherings was that held at Mrs. George Weston's Newport avenue, Friday afternoon and evening, March 21. Mrs. Weston and her sister, Mrs. Chandler Smith entertained their relatives in honor of Miss Mitchell who has been spending some months in the East and presently returns to her home in Kansas. The thirty cousins who were present succeeded in entertaining themselves socially, and as many among them are musicians they had a rare treat together with a delicious lunch which was served by the hostess.

Morning Blaze at Braintree.

A fire broke out a little before ten o'clock this forenoon in the attic of the building on Crescent avenue owned by Mrs. Angelini of the Leslie House, and occupied by the families of Mr. Thistle and Mr. Burke. The inmates were busily engaged in their morning work when they were informed that the house was on fire.

The fire was confined to the attic and roof where it originated, presumably from a defective chimney which throughout the blaze ejected smoke, notwithstanding there were no wood fires in the stoves. In less than an hour the flames were subdued.

Carpenters to Vote.

The Carpenters union will vote tonight on the agreement of the master builders who voted to establish an eight-hour day April 1 and pay $2.50 per day maximum.

Mr. Brooks has made designs of Dr. Sheehan, Mayor Quincy, and others, and has taken a place in the front ranks of designers and artists.

—It seems a somewhat surprising statement to make that eggs, condensed milk, olive oil, and vinegar are all used in the binding of books. Yet such is the case. The white of egg is used for "sizing," to cause the delicate ornamental gold-leaf to adhere to the leather. To make the "sizing" perform its adhesive work even more delicately, a little milk is added; and, to help further in the important work of adhesion a coating of olive oil or diluted vinegar is sometimes applied to the leather Some wise old book binders use the light froth of ale as a coating over a binding of silk. The froth held the gold-leaf with perfect success, and did not stain the silk. Many of the old expert bookbinders have little secret methods of their own by which to produce peculiarly fine results, and these secrets they guard as jealously as the housewife does her favorite family recipes.

Letter of Resignation.

The letter of resignation of Rev. C. H. Porter, Jr., as pastor of the Channing Memorial church at Newport, R. I., read Sunday, is given in full below:

To the Corporation of the Channing Memorial church:

My Dear People: The withdrawal of a minister from his church is usually occasioned by one or two reasons: either the call to a new and larger field or else the insuperably unfortunate relations between pastor and people. I have neither sought nor received an invitation to another pastorate; nor have I found a lack of co-operation which would induce me to sever my relations with you at this time. But another consideration, entirely personal in its character, has persuaded me that it is my duty to tender you the resignation of my pastorate.

"Experience sometimes discovers to a man that he seems temperamentally incapable of carrying out the work of his chosen profession to his own satisfaction and to that also of his patrons. If the fact is evidence only of a passing mood his discouragement may be soon dispelled. If however it is a matter of repeated experience it calls for thoughtful consideration. Such consideration has long been forced upon me. In some duties of my profession I have always felt readily at home; in others, I have proved very incapable: yet the ministery, of all professions, demands a man's complete enlistment. The question of withdrawal has thus confronted me and it has been no easy matter for me to see my way. I have stood between long habit and most precious association on the one hand, and very practical difficulties of taste and talent on the other. But after long and careful reflection, I have decided to withdraw from the active ministry.

"This conclusion, therefore, makes my immediate withdrawal also from your church a matter of justice to you as well as of necessity to myself.

"I cannot sever my relations with Channing Memorial church without recalling the unanimity of your invitation two years ago, the cordiality of your reception to me, and the interest and sympathy which have helped me in my pastorate. For them all, I thank you, and the members of the congregation whom you represent.

"My service has been very small; but I can say that, whether from the pulpit, or in the house of mourning, or at the study class, my abiding purpose has been to say the word which might bring light. May God prosper you under a new guidance in the future. May unity of spirit and comradship in work make your church life worthy its honorable traditions. I leave with you my cordial and earnest good wishes for every one whom my pastorate has given me the privilege to know."

PEACE OVERTURES

Can Only Be Concluded With Consent of the Burghers

The Hague, March 25.—Regarding the fears expressed in the British press that the Boer generals would not be inclined to recognize the authority of the civil government of the South African republics in case the latter decided to open peace negotiations, well-informed persons here declare that such apprehension is unfounded. They point out that the Boer civil and military authorities have always worked in perfect harmony and that Mr. Schalk-Burger and the government could not have proceeded to the Orange River Colony, via Middleburg and Pretoria, without at least the consent of General Botha. In conclusion, it is said that the final decision as to whether serious peace overtures shall be made rests entirely in the hands of the burghers, who will have to decide upon it at a public meeting. Mr. Kruger has not yet received any telegraphic advices from South Africa, nor has the Transvaal legation. But they undoubtedly will receive advices in the event of the leaders finding a workable basis for peace terms.

Smallpox In Vermont Village

Waterbury, Vt., March 25.—After exposing fully 100 persons in this village to smallpox, William Greno, 25 years old, was found to be suffering from that disease and has been removed to an isolated house, together with his family, seven in all. Three other families have been quarantined.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER XI—CONTINUED.

On the 22d of August the kibitka reached the town of Atchinsk, which was 380 versts from Tomsk. A hundred and twenty versts still separated it from Krasnoiarsk. No incident had marked this journey. During the six days they had been together Nicholas, Michael Strogoff and Nadia had remained just the same, the one in his unalterable calmness, the other two anxious and looking forward to the moment when their companion would separate from them.

On the evening of the 25th of August the kibitka was only half a verst from Krasnoiarsk. One could see on the right and left the numerous wooden crosses which are erected along the road at the approaches to the town. It was 7 o'clock at night.

The kibitka had stopped.

"Where are we, sister?" asked Michael Strogoff.

"A little over a half verst from the first houses," answered Nadia.

"Has the town, then, gone to sleep? No noise strikes upon my ear."

Ten minutes afterward the kibitka entered the principal street.

Krasnoiarsk was deserted! There was not any longer an Athenian in this "Athens of the North," as it is called by Mme. de Bourboulon. Not one of those equipages, so splendidly rigged out, rattled along the handsome wide streets. Not a foot passenger trod the sidewalks that skirted those magnificent houses of wood, palatial in their grandeur!

Not a living soul remained in Krasnoiarsk.

Michael Strogoff, Nadia and Nicholas had not to search long for a place in which to rest. The first house of which they tried the door was empty, as were all the rest. They found nothing there but a heap of leaves. For want of something better, the horse had to be content with this meager food. As for the provisions of the kibitka, they were not exhausted, and each one took his share. Then, after having knelt before a modest picture of the Panaghia that was hanging on the wall and which the last flame of a lamp still lit up, Nicholas and the young girl fell asleep, while Michael Strogoff remained awake, his anxiety driving away all sleep.

The next day, 26th of August, before daybreak the kibitka was traversing the park of birch trees to reach the banks of the Yenisei, which was crossed by the little party on an improvised raft.

Michael Strogoff could at length believe that the route was free as far as Irkutsk. He had outstripped the Tartars, and when the soldiers of the emir should arrive at Krasnoiarsk they would only find an abandoned town there and no means of immediate communication between the two banks of the Yenisei; hence a delay of some days until a bridge of boats, difficult to construct, should open a passage to them.

For the first time since the unlucky meeting with Ivan Ogareff at Omsk the courier of the czar felt himself less uneasy and could hope that no new obstacle would arise to the accomplishment of his plans.

The kibitka, after having proceeded about fifteen versts toward the southeast, came to and retook the long highroad across the steppe.

On the 28th of August the travelers had passed the town of Balaisk, which was eighty versts from Krasnoiarsk, and by the 29th that of Ribinsk, forty versts from Balaisk.

The next day, after traveling more than thirty-five versts, they arrived at Kamsk, a more considerable town, watered by the river of the same name, a small affluent of the Yenisei, which descends from the mountains of Sayansk.

On going out from Kamsk Michael informed Nadia and Nicholas that they would find only one little town of some importance, Nijni Oudinsk, before Irkutsk. Nicholas answered that he knew that there was a telegraphic station in that town. Therefore if Nijni Oudinsk had been abandoned like Kamsk he would certainly be obliged to seek for some occupation in the capital of eastern Siberia.

From Kamsk to the neighboring town was very long, about a hundred and thirty versts.

After having crossed the little river of Birlousa the kibitka reached Biriousinsk on the morning of the 4th of September. There, very fortunately, Nicholas, who saw his provisions becoming exhausted, found in an abandoned bakehouse a dozen cakes, prepared with mutton fat, and a large supply of boiled rice.

After a reasonable halt they continued their journey once more on the afternoon of the 8th of September. The distance to Irkutsk was not more than 500 versts. Nothing in their rear signaled the advance guard of the Tartars. Michael Strogoff had therefore settled down to think that his journey would not again be interrupted and that in eight days or in ten at the most he would be in the presence of the grand duke.

"Ah!" said Nicholas.

"What is the matter, friend?" asked Michael Strogoff eagerly, as a blind man whom the least noise held on the watch.

"Did you not see?" said Nicholas, whose smiling face suddenly became cloudy.

Then he added:

"Ah, no, you could not see, and it is happy for you, good father!"

"But I have seen nothing," said Nadia.

"So much the better! So much the better! But I—I have seen!"

"What was it, then?" asked Michael Strogoff.

"A hare that came across our path!" answered Nicholas.

In Russia when a hare crosses the path of a traveler popular belief looks upon it as a sign of approaching evil.

Nicholas, superstitious as are the greater part of the Russians, had stopped the kibitka.

Michael Strogoff understood the hesitation of his companion, although he did not share his credulity regarding hares crossing the path, and he wished to reassure him.

"We have nothing to fear, friend," he said to him.

"Nothing for you nor for her, I know, good father," answered Nicholas, "but for me!"

And, continuing, said he:

"It is my destiny."

And he again put his horse to the trot.

Meanwhile, in spite of the sad prognostications, the day passed by without any accident.

Next day, Sept. 9, at noon the kibitka halted at the town of Alsalevsk, as deserted as was the surrounding country.

There on the threshold of a house Nadia found two of those knives with long, sharp blades used by Siberian hunters. She gave one of them to Michael Strogoff, who hid it under his coat, and she kept the other for herself. The kibitka was not more than sixty-five versts from Nijni Oudinsk.

Nicholas during the last two days had not been able to regain his usual good humor. The evil omen had affected him more than one could have believed, and he who up to that time had never remained an hour without talking had now long spells of silence, from which even Nadia could with difficulty withdraw him.

In spite of all his somewhat fatalistic resignation he would not believe himself safe except within the walls of Irkutsk. Many Russians would have thought like Nicholas, and more than one, pulling the bridle of his horse, would have turned back after seeing a hare cross their path.

The next day, toward 4 o'clock in the afternoon, Nicholas descried on the horizon the high belfries of the churches of Nijni Oudinsk. They were crowned with thick columns of vapor which could not be clouds.

Nicholas and Nadia looked and communicated to Michael Strogoff the result of their observations. They must decide their course of action at once. If the town had been abandoned, they could pass through it without any risk, but if by a movement that they could not explain the Tartars already occupied it they must turn it at any price.

"Let us advance prudently," said Michael Strogoff, "but let us advance!"

Another verst was made.

He was about to propose to Nicholas to leave the route and in case of necessity only to regain it after having turned Nijni Oudinsk, when the sound of a gun was heard on the right. A ball hissed, and the horse in the kibitka, struck in the head, fell dead.

At the same instant, a dozen horsemen threw themselves on the road, and the kibitka was surrounded. Michael Strogoff, Nadia and Nicholas, without having had time to recover themselves, were prisoners and being led rapidly toward Nijni Oudinsk.

The next day, 11th of September, the detachment passed through the town of Chibarliuskoe.

At that time an incident occurred which was to have very serious consequences.

The night had come. The Tartar horsemen, having had a halt, were more or less drunk. They were about to continue their journey.

Nadia, who up to that time, as though by a miracle, had been respected by those soldiers, was insulted by one of them.

Michael Strogoff had been able to see neither the insult nor the insulting person, but Nicholas had seen for him.

Then quietly, without having reflected, without perhaps having any consciousness of his action, Nicholas made straight for the soldier, and before the latter could make any movement to stop him, snatching a pistol from the pommel of his saddle, he discharged it full at his breast.

The officer who had command of the detachment ran up immediately at the sound of the pistol.

The horsemen were about to cut Nicholas in pieces, but at a sign from the officer they bound him fast with cords, they flung him across a horse, and the detachment set off at a gallop.

The cord which tied Michael Strogoff, gnawed by him, broke at an unexpected dash of the horse and its rider, half drunk, carried away in a quick run, did not even perceive it.

Michael Strogoff and Nadia found themselves alone on the road.

Stock Worth $50,000 a Share

New York, March 25.—Peter F. McLaurin of Mount Vernon yesterday obtained a verdict for $50,000 against the Cuba company. The corporation has a capital of $8,000000. McLaurin's story was that the company had engaged him to further its business in Cuba and for his services he was to receive $8000 a year and one share of stock. When he had finished his work the company paid him what salary was due, but did not heed his demand for the share of stock. To save the appearance in court of the various stockholders in the company it was admitted by them that the share of stock in dispute was worth $50,000.

Corporations' Plea Overruled

Denver, March 25—Judge Mullins decided yesterday that the agreements which railroad companies and the Pullman company exact of their employes discharging the companies from liability for damage in case of injuries resulting from accident are illegal and void. The decision was given in the case of a Pullman conductor who was injured in a collision and who sued two railroad companies for $15,000 damages. The corporations pleaded the contract made by plaintiff with the Pullman company as a bar to the suit, and the court overruled the plea.

Principal Refuses to Resign

Brazil, Ind., March 25.—The demand made by the school board for the resignation of Principal Muncie of the city school, because of the charge made by a pupil that he kissed her, has precipitated a legal fight between the board and the principal. Muncie was forced to quit school yesterday and the pupils struck in sympathy with him. Muncie positively declines to resign. He has a wife and six children, is an influential church member and has always borne a good reputation. Public sentiment is divided.

New Point In the Maine Claims

Washington, March 25.—Amended petitions were filed yesterday before the Spanish treaty claims commission, in behalf of the sailors killed by the explosion of the Maine. They base the claims this time on the ground that the United States demanded indemnity from Spain for the injuries caused by the Maine explosion and surrendered the claims with others in return for the cession of territory. It is claimed that the United States, therefore, are trustees for those injured in the Maine explosion.

Alleged Confession of an Anarchist

Baraboo, Wis., March 25.—Joseph Steinman, who was taken to Waupun under arrest on a charge of burglary, confessed to Sheriff Stackhouse that he was an anarchist and was present at the lodge meeting when Czolgosz was selected to assassinate President McKinley and that he tied the handkerchief over the hand of Czolgosz just before the shooting. He further said that a well known woman was one of the principal instigators of the crime.

Bad For Sealers

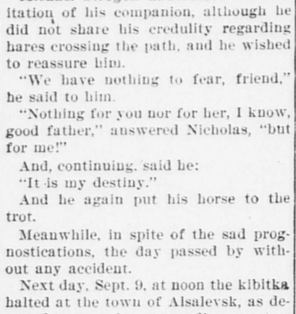

St. Johns, March 25.—The gloomy outlook of the seal fishery is confirmed. The scattered condition of the ice floes and the soft, foggy weather operate against the efforts of the sealers to secure good catches. It is feared the present season will be like that of 1893, when only 128,000 seals were taken. This number amounts to one-third the usual catch.

A Week's Suspension

London, March 25.—The motion of A. J. Balfour to limit the suspension of John Dillon to one week was adopted by the house of commons yesterday. Dillon was suspended March 20 for calling Mr. Chamberlain a "d——d liar" and refusing to withdraw his statement.

Fears For the Orozimbo

Nantucket, Mass., March 25.—Captain Coffin of the Coskaty lifesaving station yesterday picked up the quarter board of the schooner Orozimbo of Calais, Me. Fear is entertained here that the craft was wrecked.

Physicians are calling attention to the fact that influenza or grip has come to stay. In the larger cities there has been a marked increase in diseases affecting the organs of respiration, which increase is attributed to the prevalence of influenza. Persons who are recovering from grip or influenza are in a weak condition and peculiarly liable to pulmonary disease.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures coughs, bronchitis, lung "trouble" and other diseases of the organs of respiration. It is the best tonic medicine for those whose strength and vitality have been exhausted by an attack of grip. It purifies the blood, cleansing it of the poisonous accumulations which breed and feed disease. It gives increased activity to the blood-making glands, and so increases the supply of pure blood, rich with the red corpuscles of health.

"A word for your 'Golden Medical Discovery.'" writes Mrs. E. A. Bender, of Keene, Coshocton Co., Ohio. "We have been using it as a family medicine for more than four years. As a cough remedy and blood-purifier there is nothing better, and after having the grip Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is just the right medicine for a complete bracing up."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood, and lungs.

The sluggish liver is made active by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

THE RECIPROCITY PLAN

Favored by President In Dealing With Cuba

A TALK WITH OPPONENTS

That Conflicting Interests May Be Harmonized—Hopes That Unanimity of Action May Be Reached In Legislation For the Benefit of Cuba

Washington, March 25.—A conference was held at the White House yesterday afternoon between the president and seven of the Republican members of the house of representatives who have been foremost in opposing the plan of Cuban reciprocity urged by the ways and means committee and understood to have the support of the administration. The members who called were Representatives Tawney and Morris (Minn.), Dick (O.), Smith (Mich), Minor (Wis.), Metcalf (Cal.) and Dayton (W. Va).

The call was at the request of the president, who desired an exchange of views to the end that harmonious action might be secured in such steps as are taken in behalf of Cuba. As General Wood has arrived here from Cuba, and as several members of the cabinet were at the White House while the congressmen were there, a report gained circulation that Secretary Root and General Wood were present during the conference. This, however, was not the case, as the president and the congressmen remained alone in the cabinet room for the hour and a half that they were together.

The talk took a wide range, covering the conditions in Cuba, what should be done to meet these conditions, and also the question of harmonizing conflicting interests so that there might be unanimity of action on the part of the Republicans in congress.

It was stated afterwards by those who had participated in the conference that it was of the most agreeable and pleasant character, and that there was not the remotest suggestion on the part of the chief executive which could be construed as seeking to urge them to yield their personal conviction. On the contrary, it was stated, the president listened to the recital of difficulties which had been encountered by those who opposed the reciprocity plan and also heard from them the various plans by which they hoped to reach an agreement.

The callers were frank to concede that they found the president desirous of extending effective relief to Cuba by the reciprocity plan. In this connection, it was stated, the president drew attention to the fact that the Sibley amendment, limiting the reciprocity period to Dec. 1, 1903, gave the Payne bill a rather one-sided aspect, as it asked Cuba to adopt our naturalization and immigration laws and give us tariff concessions limited to about a year and a half. Some of the congressmen present were inclined to admit that we were asking a good deal from Cuba in return for the little we would grant to her.

The interchange of views became quite general, there being nothing in the way of definite propositions one way or the other, but merely an agreeable expression of opinion as to what was the best to be done under all the circumstances of the situation.

In the course of this general talk, the suggestion was made that if the Payne bill had been modified so as to take off the differential or refined sugar some of the grounds of opposition might have been removed. However, there was no request, so far as can be learned, that the bill be amended in this particular at the present stage. The plan of rebate which was urged at one time, also came in for discussion and explanation.

At the conclusion of the conference the general understanding was reached that any statements made to the public would be to the general effect that no conclusions were reached, and that the conference was confined to a general interchange of views. It is understood that the president will see some of the members of the ways and means committee today, thus familiarizing himself with both sides of the issue which has recently arisen in the house. He hopes that this general interchange with the leaders from both sides may bring about unanimity of action in whatever is done in behalf of Cuba.

Otis Retires From Army

Washington, March 25.—A vacancy in the list of major generals occurs today by the retirement of Major General Otis. The second vacancy will occur July 21 next by the statutory retirement of Major General Brooke. General Wade stands at the head of the list of brigadier generals and may be promoted to one of the prospective vacancies.

Mysterious Double Tragedy

Newark, N. J., March 25.—Lilian Wilson, an unmarried woman about 50 years old, shot and killed Robert S. Hutchinson, about 35 years old, yesterday, and then drank two bottles of carbolic acid. She died while being taken to a hospital. Hutchinson was supposed to be Miss Wilson's nephew. No cause is known for the murder and suicide.

MILK PRODUCERS WON

In Their Conflict With Contractors Over Prices

RAISE OF 2 2-3 CENTS A CAN

Over Prices Being Paid at Present, While Other Concessions For Which They Were Contending Are Granted —Railroad Traffic Rates a Factor

Boston, March 26.—The directors of the New England Milk Producers' union are feeling highly elated over the outcome of their long conference with the Boston milk contractors' committee over the price to be paid for milk during the six months beginning April 1, for by the agreement finally reached the producers will receive an advance over present prices of about 2 2-3 cents a can, and they have been conceded about everything they asked for. The prices agreed upon are as follows: For April, July, August and September, 36 cents a can, and for May and June 35 cents, with an allowance of 2 cents a can for carrying the surplus, the surplus to be the same in all zones.

The prices quoted to farmers are to be net, based on the above prices, and not subject to surplus. It was decided that there shall be only one form of contract; that the grading shall be at the discretion of each contractor; that either method of even production that has been offered at these March meetings may be adopted by the contractors at their discretion.

Until yesterday the contractors had refused to pay more than 33 cents net a can, while the producers claimed that their demand of 34 cents net was justified by the increased cost of grain. Had the controversy been confined to matters pertaining to the cost of production there is a probability that a satisfactory agreement would not have been reached so quickly, but the fact that the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad company had filed with the legislature a tariff for individual shippers of from one to 1000 cans of milk to the Boston market, thus falling into line with the Boston and Maine, served, it is believed, as a warning to the contractors that unless concessions were made, the producers might before long take the business into their own hands.

It was pointed out also that Boston and Albany's tariff rate from Barre Plains to Boston is fixed at 6 cents a can, while the contractors have been charging 9.

President Ward of the Producers' union, who has been the leading figure in the struggle to secure increased prices, but who has been unable to attend recent meetings on account of illness, was present at the conference yesterday.

Correspondents See War Clouds

Berlin, March 26.—Copious dispatches received from New York and Washington and published here describe France and Russia as meditating war upon Great Britain and Japan over China, and as seeking assurances from Germany of that country's neutrality. The foreign office repudiates this story and avers that Russia and France have not made any such inquiries here.

Seven Men Killed by Cave-In

Cleveland, March 26.—As the result of a cave-in of a huge bank of earth at the Main street plant of the Cleveland Gaslight and Coke company yesterday, seven Italian laborers are dead. The men were working close to a bank of clay when it suddenly gave way without the slightest warning, burying them beneath the mass of earth.

Polite Burglars Found Guilty

Jersey City, March 26.—Thomas F. Croughan, Louis Croughan and William Cady, known as "the polite burglars of Jersey City," were convicted before Judge Blair yesterday. Sentence was deferred. Their methods were to enter houses and, while holding their revolvers to the heads of their victims, apologize for the intrusion.

Lowther's Little Joke

London, March 26.—James Lowther, former chief secretary for Ireland, caused amusement in the house of commons yesterday, by presenting petitions from Liverpool and Cardiff, containing 35,000 signatures, praying parliament to impose duties on foreign goods.

Cleveland's Easter Vacation

Princeton, N. J., March 26.—Ex-President Cleveland, accompanied by Professor John H. Finley and Dr. J. O. Bryant of New York, leave today on an Easter pleasure trip to Florida. They will be gone a week or ten days.

Dragged to Death

Denver, March 26.—Zeno Edman, a jockey, 19 years old, was killed at Overland Park yesterday, being thrown by a horse which he was exercising and dragged more than half a mile.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Blondin Pleads Not Guilty to Indictment Charging Murder of Wife

Cambridge, Mass., March 26.—To a long indictment, charging him with the murder of his wife, nearly a year ago, Joseph Winfred Blondin, in the superior court here, pleaded not guilty, and was immediately committed to jail without bail. Although he listened attentively to the reading of the indictment, he utterly failed to comprehend its contents, and its purport had to be translated and explained to him by his counsel.

When he did understand its meaning Blondin replied without hesitation, in broken English, "no guilty." There was little emotion either in his face or voice, although his piercing eyes and hawk-like look seemed to flash defiance at the court.

No date was set for the trial, as at present the state officers seem to be in a quandary as to just where the murder occurred. The headless body of Mrs. Blondin was found in Chelmsford, a Middlesex county town, and the indictment came from the grand jury of that county.

The state, however, claims to have evidence that the body was shipped to Chelmsford from Green street, Boston, which leads the officers to believe that the deed may have been committed in Boston, which would bring it before a Suffolk county jury.

As to the date, there appears to be little chance of the trial taking place before fall. The indictment is in four counts, charging murder by stabbing, choking, kicking, and by means unknown. It took the clerk nearly 10 minutes to read it, and all the while Blondin stood with upraised hand evidently trying to fathom the meaning of the various legal phrases, which were somewhat obscure to even an ordinary mind.

Carpet Company Wins

Clinton, Mass., March 26.—The selectmen have been notified by the gas and electric light commissioners that the decree granting the Bigelow Carpet company the right to lay conduits across certain streets has been confirmed. Litigation over the matter a year ago caused the arrest and imprisonment of the agent of the Bigelow company for contempt of court. The Clinton Gas Light company objected to the carpet company laying its own conduits, on the ground that its rights were being infringed upon. There is no appeal from the decision of the state board.

Chair Factory Burned

Gardner, Mass., March 26.—The main building of the extensive chair manufactory of John A. Dunn, located in the business section of the town, was burned early this morning, causing a loss of nearly $75,000. The building was 3½ stories and gave employment to about 500 hands who will be temporarily thrown out of work. The fire started shortly after midnight, resulting from the burning out of a chimney which set fire to the dryhouse.

Teacher Sues School Principal

South Norwalk, Conn., March 26.—Action, said to be the outcome of an anonymous letter scandal which has stirred the village of Rowayton for months, was taken yesterday, when John W. McClellan, principal of the South Five-Mile River school, was sued by a teacher of the school, Elizabeth A. Ervin. Miss Ervin claims damages of $5000. McClellan is charged with slander and libelous statements regarding Miss Ervin.

Brewery Strike Almost Certain

Boston, March 26.—Unless the Master Brewers make a decided change in their attitude it is evident that nothing can prevent the 1500 men, comprising the membership of the Brewery Workers' union, from going on strike on April 1. The Master Brewers absolutely refused to grant the demands of the employes, and there seems no likelihood of their receding from their position.

New Move In Toppan Case

Boston, March 26.—The Journal says that the efforts of friends of Jane Toppan to prove she is insane, and therefore not responsible for the murders which have been charged against her, have resulted in the appointment of a commission to examine her mental condition. The commission made its first examination last Thursday.

Sympathetic Strike Threatened

Providence, March 26.—A committee of weavers employed at the Saranac mills of the American Woollen company in Waterford notified the management yesterday that the weavers would strike if the two loom system was not abolished in the mills at Olneyville.

Freight Smashup In Maine

Auburn, Me., March 26.—A freight train on the Maine Central railroad broke in two near the station here about midnight. Three cars were demolished and the passenger station badly smashed. Nobody was hurt. The damage is estimated at $5000.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

TO WITHDRAW FROM CUBA.

Independence of the Island to Date from May 20---Interview with President-Elect Palma.

Washington, March 26.—Secretary Root yesterday afternoon made public his order to General Wood, directing him to turn over the control and government of Cuba to its people on May 20 next. The order requires the Cuban government to assume all treaty obligations.

Besides the final selection of May 20 as Cuban independence day, two other important conclusions were reached. The first was that General Wood immediately upon his return to Cuba should issue a call convening the first Cuban congress in session on May 10, in order that the body might employ the 10 days following that date in supplying any legislation necessary to the assumption of full powers in the island. The other conclusion was that there should be no half-way evacuation of the island; the present disposition is to move the entire United States contingent, civil and military, away from the island, not even leaving a corporal's guard of United States soldiers in any of the camps. This, however, does not apply to the coast defenses at several points in the island. These will be garrisoned by United States troops.

There is no likelihood whatever of a special message from the president on the Cuban situation. The advice of the cabinet is strongly against such a course now, on the ground that the president's position and wishes are already known and that there is still a hope of working out as good results without a message as could be hoped for with one.

The latest turn given to the negotiations between the administration and the "insurgents" in the house is the consideration of serious reduction in the differential duties on refined sugars or their total abolition; the purpose of this plan is to put the sugar trust on the same footing as the beet-sugar contingent and thus do away with the argument raised in the "insurgent" camp that the proposed reciprocity scheme meant added profit for the trust and damage to the growers.

It is said that the element opposing the ways and means committee is now expecting to make their first contest in the committee when Chairman Payne seeks to report the bill. The committee consists of 17 members and according to a poll made by the opposition element only eight Republicans, or one short of the necessary number, will vote to report the bill in its present form.

Two reports set in circulation yesterday are denied on the highest authority; one is that Palma has threatened to decline the presidency of the Cuban republic unless the sugar question can be settled to suit him; the other is that General Wood has prophesied a popular revolution in Cuba unless the reciprocity program goes through.

Faith In Cuba's Future

Washington, March 26.—President-elect Palma of Cuba, having finished his conferences with President Roosevelt and other officials on matters connected with the transfer of the island from American to Cuban control, left the city at midnight for his home in New York state, where he will remain until the last of April. General Palma said he realized the magnitude of the work on which he was about to enter and its attendant responsibilities, but was confident that the future of Cuba was assured and that the island would have a successful career.

"The ceremonies incident to my inauguration," he said, "will be in keeping with the requirements of the occasion. They will take place in the palace. Closely following the induction of the new government will be the appointment of a minister to represent it at Washington. As soon as this has been done and a representative appointed from the United States to Cuba, steps will be taken for the drafting of a treaty between the two governments. This will include provision for a naval station, probably at Guantanamo, and the establishment of coaling stations at points to be mutually agreed upon.

"The United States artillerymen are to be kept at the batteries with the consent of the Cuban government and until that government is ready to replace them with a force of its own men.

"Of course should the remote possibility occur of an attack upon Cuba by a foreign foe demonstrate the necessity of the assistance of artillerymen in the coast batteries, they no doubt will be available for that purpose, but such a contingency is not likely."

General Palma in closing paid this tribute to the United States government: "The government of the United States has shown a most beautiful example of good faith in dealing with a weak government which it undertook to rescue from its oppression. It has demonstrated its generosity and patriotism, and by the shedding of its own blood has helped Cuba to break the chain which united it with Spain. The people of the United States have remembered their own declaration of Independence and have fulfilled a duty to mankind."

Sealing Schooners Wrecked

Halifax, March 26.—Two sealing schooners were wrecked yesterday at Fox river, on the north side of Prince Edward Island. The names of the schooners are not given.

Labor and Capital Represented

Sydney, N. S. W., March 26.—A compulsory industrial arbitration court has been established here. The membership includes representatives of employers and employes.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The body of an unknown man was found in the harbor at Bridgeport, Conn. The man was apparently about 48 years old, 5 feet, 4 inches tall and weighed 180 pounds.

The protected cruiser Minneapolis is to be fitted up at the League island yard for temporary service as a receiving ship, relieving the old Richmond, which will be towed to the Norfolk yard.

Roberta M. Wright, daughter of the mayor of Denver, is to act as sponsor for the cruiser Denver when she is launched.

Dr. M. E. Phillips, chancellor of the Kansas Wesleyan university, has resigned, to take the position of superintendent of the Y. M. C. A. department at Yale university.

Public bequests aggregating $900,000 and private bequests to the amount of $600,000 give an idea of the contents of the will of Robert C. Billings, offered for probate at Boston. The estate is inventoried at $2,355,804.95.

Public Hearing.

Good Afternoon.

When one glances over the civil service list of eligible candidates for pernament policemen and at the same time realizes that only a small portion is certified to the Mayor from which to make selections, one sees but little chance of securing an improvement of the police force of the city. It is one of many cases where civil service does injury to public service. There are a few men on the list who would make desirable officers, but they are not all at the top and may never be reached. It would be much better for the city if there was no list at all, but the Mayor allowed his choice from the whole city. The Chief of Police should be able at all times to recommend desirable men.

Public hearings are advertised today to be held by the City Council committee on Streets on Friday evening. It will be noticed that there are five petitions one from each ward, to be considered, viz: extension of Maple place, widening of Howard street Faxon Park road, Smith street, Hamilton street and extension of Newbury avenue. Perhaps these have been selected from the large number of petitions as being the most urgent in each ward, and favorable reports may be made if there appears to be any urgent demand for them, and the finances of the city will admit. When there are so many demands for money however, each petition should stand for its individual merits. It is not imperative that one ward should get an improvement just because another ward does. The fairer division would be upon taxes paid.

Ward One not only pays one-third of the total but it is the business centre and should receive more attention than it does. The extension of Maple place is desirable, and so is the widening of Cottage avenue and concrete sidewalks on Hancock street between Chestnut and Elm streets; on Washington street between Temple and Revere road; on Revere road; on Elm street; on Coddington street, on Granite street, west from Whitwell street, etc.

The Dowse bill which has passed the Massachusetts House will be a good thing if enacted for the local stores, as is designed to stop misrepresentations by Boston stores which tempt people to the big city. Fire, smoke water and bankrupt sales are not usually what they are claimed to be. It is difficult for reliable merchants to do business against such alluring misrepresentations. The bill provides:

Any person, firm, corporation or association, or any employe thereof, who, in a newspaper, circular or other publication published in this state, knowingly makes or disseminates any statement or assertion of fact concerning the quantity, the quality, the value, the method of production or manufacture, or the reason for the price of his or their merchandise, or concerning the manner or source of purchase of such merchandise, or the possession of rewards, prizes or distinctions conferred on account of such merchandise or concerning the motive or purpose of a sale, which statement or assertion is intended to give the appearance of an offer advantageous to the purchaser and which is untrue or calculated to mislead, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable to a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100 for each offence.

Drift of Opinion.

☞We ought to be grateful, probably that Miss Brown, who succeeds Henry H. Faxon in his temperance campaign does not believe in horse whipping public officials to make them enforce prohibition laws.—Record.

☞A man told us the other day that we did not publish all the things that happened. We should say we don't. In the first place we have others who depend on us for a living. If we published all that happened, we would soon be with the angels. In order to please the people we must print only the nice things about them and leave the rest to the gossips. Yes, it is a fact we don't print all the news. If we did, wouldn't it make spicy reading? But this would be for one week only. The next week you would read our obituary, and there would be another editor in heaven—Mattoon, Ill. Journal.

☞In the case of the death of Mrs. French, in Boston, the Boston police officials are quoted as saying that since the medical examiner has decided that the woman died merely as the result of an accident the police regard the report as final, and will do nothing about investigating the case further. In other words then, in Boston the police with all their fine system, do not feel that they can get any more evidence than can be obtained by a medical examiner acting alone and largely on theory. This is a somewhat surprising confession for police officials to make.—Brockton Enterprise.

Prompt Payment.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen, the oldest of the fraternal organizations, has always had the reputation of paying their death claims promptly, and in the case of their late Brother, Samuel B. Turner, who passed away on Friday of last week, and was buried in Mt. Wollaston cemetery on Monday afternoon, they certainly have not lost any of that reputation, as Mrs. Turner, the widow, was paid $2000.00 last night by the officers of the local lodge here.

The order has over 430,000 members and has paid out over $115,000,000 to widows and orphans in this country during its existence.

Mr. Turner joined the lodge here as a charter member in 1891 and had paid into the treasury $168.68.

A HALF HOLIDAY.

School Committee Not Unanimous on May Day.

The regular monthly meeting of the School committee was held Tuesday evening. Messrs. Smith, Hallowell, Record, Churchill and Miss Adams were present.

In the absence of chairman Porter, Dr. Hallowell was elected chairman pro tem.

A request was received from the Quincy Home Science Association that the school children be given a half holiday on the day of the annual May festival under the auspices of the association.

Miss Adams objected. She saw no good reason for closing the schools. It was a bad precedent. Could not see why one school should close to assist in raising funds for another.

There were nearly five thousand pupils in the public schools and Music hall at best would not accommodate over one thouand leaving the balance to be turned into the streets.

Dr. Hallowell spoke of the good work that the Home Science Association was doing. Last year they were able to maintain a Sloyd summer school and this year it was hoped to maintain two.

Upon motion of Dr. Record it was voted to close the schools as requested.

Miss Adams voted in the negative.

Notice was given of the death of Samuel B. Turner janitor of the High school. No action was taken on filling the vacancy.

The sub-committee appointed to examine the plans of the proposed new school at Quincy Point reported that they had approved the plans.

The board then went into executive session with Architect Wright and examined the plans.

The financial statement to date showed these expenditures:

The Twenty-First Exhibition.

At the age of "twenty-one" the youth of the race pass into the domain of manhood; and thereafter take their places with mature men everywhere. In this year of our Lord 1902, the Twenty-First Exhibition of the old Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association takes place. It will indeed exemplify the change from old time methods, inventions and devices, and enter the realm of mature manhood, with up-to-date exhibits; in this, the one hundred and eigth year of its existence.

Sixty-five years ago it held its first Exhibition of Science, Art and Industry in the city of Boston. Nearly twenty years earlier it had given prizes for mechanical excellence; but not until 1837, thirty-two years after its organization, did it hold a regular Exhibition; gathering many hundreds of exhibits from all over New England, covering nearly every branch of productive industry;—with boards of judges upon whose awards medals and diplomas were first given. Since that time at intervals of about three years, it has repeated its labor and efforts to encourage and stimulate new inventions—improve old processes—and thus advance the general prosperity and welfare of the people.

And these great Exhibitions, with their manifold lessons in skill, in design and in workmanship, covering the whole range of materials used in all of the many fields of human comfort or necessity—whether in the dwelling, warehouse, church, school, public or private institution—these are to be repeated this year on a new and improved plan, which, with their long experience, is likely to prove uncommonly attractive and useful.

On the 22d day of September next, the doors of the huge "Mechanics Building," so well known at this time as the great meeting place of everything of magnitude in Boston, in the form of political or other large gatherings, besides numerous Fairs and Shows in variety quite confusing—will open to receive the influx of the mulitudes who will go there to be entertained, instructed and amused.

At this early day it would not be possible to descend to particulars, which, if told, might be forgotten before the day fixed for the opening. It is enough to know that the management of this Association, numbering some of the leading mechanics and business men of Boston in their ranks, are deeply interested in planning and carrying out the work to be performed in so many directions within the next seven months before their big engines will turn the ponderous wheels to set this huge hive of busy bees in motion. Meanwhile our readers will not forget the "good time coming" and be prepared for the final announcement.

NEW POLICEMEN.

Four May Be Appointed This Week by Mayor.

Must Select from Civil Service List.

Eight Names Have Been Certified by the Commission.

Under a recent amendment to the ordinance governing the Police department the permanent force was increased from ten to fourteen men. This means that four new men must be appointed, and probably Mayor Bryant will make the appointments this week.

The Mayor has made requisition on the Civil Service Commission and they have certified to him eight names from which he will make his selection.

There are now thirty-four names on the eligible list. Of this number one is not now residing in Quincy. Of the others two have at one time been dismissed from the permanent force, and one has been dismissed from the special force.

Of the names now on the eligible list, nearly all have this year been appointed as special policemen.

Another civil service examination for policemen will be held in May. The names of the men on the eligible list are as folows:

Jeremiah Hinchon,
William S. Lyons,
John H. Newcomb,

COAL MEN OUT.

J. F. Sheppard & Sons' Men Have a New Grievance.

The coal handlers employed by J. F. Sheppard & Sons at Quincy, went out again on a strike this morning. The trouble was over the discharge of one man who, the union say, was dismissed to make room for the non-union man employed by the firm last week. Mr. Sheppard says that a short time ago his bookkeeper hired a young man to help out for a short time about the wharf. They now had no further use for him and yesterday he was discharged. Upon that the men went out.

EXPERTS ON TOBACCO.

Before Awarding Big Contract Naval Board Asks For Assistance.

There was a call for volunteers among the veteran "tars" of the receiving ship Columbia at the New York navy yard the other day to which every man of them responded. This was the call:

"Five experienced men are wanted to chew thirty-one different kinds of the best chewing tobacco. Who will volunteer?"

Five of the oldest and most expert smokers and chewers of tobacco were selected to decide upon the brand of tobacco which shall be awarded an order for 200,000 pounds for chewing and smoking purposes for the sailormen during the next year.

The officers commissioned to make the selection were willing to risk ruining their taste for perfectos for months to come to settle the merits of the tobacco for smoking, but not one of them had chewed since he was a small boy, and they called for help, since the navy plug must be suitable for both purposes.

Strength in his tobacco is one thing the sailorman demands, and this board felt it was not equal to the emergency of deciding strength tests in two different lines. It was accordingly suggested that as the tobacco was to be chewed by the men themselves the best thing would be to get a detachment of jackies to do the chewing and to rely upon their seasoned taste and mature judgment.

So when the five bluejackets from the Columbia arrived they found the members of the board with pipes at forced draft. Upon the table were the thirty-one samples of tobacco, each submitted by a bidder.

The tars were each given a piece of plug and ordered to fall to. They proceeded with deliberation and solemnity to test the taste and flavor of the plug. It was serious business, and they declined to be hurried. When one of the officers told them to hasten, a veteran gunner's mate replied:

"Aye, aye, sir; but I don't risk me reputation on one chaw, not by no means."

His mates seemed to think as he did, so they were allowed to chew away at leisure. Finally they reported, after testing four of the samples.

OLD HAND AT GAME.

George Adams Held for Grand Jury for Breaking and Entering.

George Adams, the man arrested in Chelsea, Tuesday, for the Weymouth police, by whom he is wanted for alleged breaking and entering and larceny, was arraigned in the Quincy court this morning for breaking and entering the shoe manufactory of Edwin Clapp at Weymouth, March 19, and the larceny of 300 pair of leather soles valued at $200.

Adams pleaded not guilty and waived examination in this court and was held in $3,000 for the grand jury.

The Weymouth police have other cases of burglary charged up against Adams, but these complaints will not be pressed against him until he comes before the grand jury.

Adams has a bad record. He has already served sentences of three and one-half years and twelve years for burglary, and on the latter sentence he was released from States Prison last October. Should he be convicted on the present charges he would come under the habitual criminal act, and stand a chance of receiving a twenty-five year sentence.

BALFOUR AND BULLER

Engage In Word Duel Over Certain Doings During South African War

London, March 26.—Acrimonious correspondence between A. J. Balfour and General Buller has been made public. Mr. Balfour contended that General Buller was in chief command at the battle of Spion Kop, while General Buller denied it. To his contention Mr. Balfour added: "There is no reason why all the Spion Kop dispatches should not be published." To this General Buller rejoined that he hoped the dispatches would be published without manipulation.

Yesterday Mr. Balfour replied to General Buller. He protested against the latter's insinuation and declared that the only manipulation which had been exercised with regard to General Buller's dispatches was the excision of a single sentence, criticising Sir Charles Warren. The omissions from Lord Roberts' dispatches relating to operations in Natal were made, said Mr. Balfour, "solely for the purpose of, if possible, sparing your feelings and maintaining your military reputation."

Four Thousand Looked On

Lajunta, Col., March 26.—W. H. Wallace, a negro sleeping car porter, was hanged to an electric light pole here last night by a mob of 4000 persons who had been hunting for him all day. After the hanging the body of the negro was riddled with bullets. Wallace had been kept out of town by Sheriff Farr in an attempt to save him from the mob. The prisoner made no resistance to the lynching and died protesting his innocence of criminal assault.

New Complaints Against Bank Men

Detroit, March 26.—New warrants were issued yesterday for the arrest of Frank C. Andrews, vice president of the wrecked City Savings bank, and Henry R. Andrews, cashier of the bank. Two complaints were made, one complaint charging them jointly with the wilful misappropriation of funds of City Savings bank, while another charges Cashier Andrews with misappropriation and F. C. Andrews with aiding and abetting.

Old Firm Forced to the Wall

New York, March 26.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday against Otto G. Mayer & Co. of this city. The firm is one of the oldest in the city in the line of shipping and commission. The Times quotes the attorney for the petitioning creditors as saying that the liabilities are about $600,000, with assets of probably $300,000. The business was established in 1835.

GLEE CLUB CONCERT.

Edward Hewitson Associates Assisted by Reader and Soloist.

Those who attended the concert given by the Edward Hewitson Association at the Stone temple last night were fully repaid. With one exception it was a great success.

The club had with them one who is well known in this vicinity and who always delights her audience. Twice Miss Beckwith was encored after reciting "The Flight of Jean Valjean," "Fly Song" and "Small Boy."

Master Carl Fowler of Wollaston, who sings in the church of the Advent, Boston, gave two soprano solos so sweetly that he was obliged to respond to an encore. "Beyond the Hills," "A Dream of Paradise" and "Mission of a Rose" were his selections.

The program also included violin and mandolin numbers, a violin duet, and a trio for violin, cello and piano. The last two were exceptionally praiseworthy, as the selections were very difficult, yet played in such good time. The trio consisted of Messrs. Oliver Greene, Henry Greene and Chester Tenney.

"Slumber Song," the violin duet, pleased the audience as much as any other number on the program. Mr. George L. Anderson and Mr. Ray F. Weston were first violins and Mr. Wallace C. Bennett and Oliver Greene second violins, with Mr. Frederick Mitchell, accompanist.

Mr. C. C. Dow also did himself justice on the mandolin, Mr. Jack E. Simmons, accompanying.

The club under leadership of Mr. H. Y. Follett, sang: "The heavens are declaring," Beethoven; "Davy Jones," Molloy; "Tinker song," DeKoven; "To thee, O country," "Good night," Gatty.

China's Latest Rebellion

Pekin, March 26.—As a result of the rebellion in the southern part of Ho-Nan province, and the murder there of 14 converts, an edict has been issued ordering the magistrate of Pi-Yan to be degraded and the magistrate of Yung-Po to be punished. The rebels are ordered to be beheaded. One priest is reported to be missing.

An Election Law Killed

Columbus, O., March 26.—The Garfield law, which aimed to prevent corrupt practices at elections, was wiped off the statutes yesterday by the senate passing the bill for its repeal. The chief argument against it was that it was ineffective and that it placed a premium on perjury.

Each Will Hoe Its Own Row

Topeka, Kas., March 26.—The Populist state central committee last night issued a call for a state convention, to be held June 24. The plan for fusion of the Democratic and Populist parties has been declared off, and both parties will nominate a ticket.

Three Men Killed In Explosion

Dubois, Pa., March 26.—Three men were killed and several injured by an explosion at the Punxsutawney powder mill yesterday. The force of the explosion broke windows in business blocks a mile and a half distant. The head of one of the victims was found lodged in a tree 500 feet from the wrecked building.

Wild Throw Cost a Life

Clinton, Ia., March 26.—While practicing athletics here yesterday Tim Clark made a wild throw in putting the shot and the 12-pound ball struck Hugh Callahan, 8 years old, in the head, death resulting a few minutes later. The boy's skull was fractured.

Got Three Years Each

Boston, March 26.—Walter E. Nourse, John Peterson and Henry A. White, implicated in recent thefts from the Boston and Maine railroad and from seven firms, were sentenced yesterday to the house of correction for three years each.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER XV.

MICHAEL STROGOFF and Nadia were once more free, as they had been during the journey from Perm to the banks of the Irtish. But how changed were the circumstances of the journey! Then a comfortable vehicle, teams often renewed, well provided post horses, secured for them a quick journey. Now they went on foot, with an impossibility of procuring for themselves any means of locomotion, without resources, not knowing even how to procure the least wants of life, and they had still to make 400 versts! And, moreover, Michael Strogoff now only saw through the eyes of Nadia.

As for the friend whom chance had given them, they had just lost him under the most affecting circumstances.

It was 10 o'clock at night. For the last three hours and a half the sun had disappeared below the horizon. There was not a house, not a hut, in sight. The last Tartars were lost in the distance. Michael Strogoff and Nadia were indeed alone.

"To what place shall I lead you, Michael?"

"To Irkutsk," he answered.

"By the highroad?"

"Yes, Nadia."

Nadia took the hand of Michael Strogoff, and they once more set out on their journey.

Next morning, Sept. 12, twenty versts farther, at the town of Toulounovskoe, both halted for a short time. The town was burned down and was deserted.

During that day they had to pass the little stream of the Oka, but it was fordable, and that passage offered no difficulty.

But, contrary to what Michael Strogoff had perhaps hoped, there was not any longer a single beast of burden in the country. Every horse, every camel, had been either killed or taken away. It was therefore on foot they must cross this never ending steppe.

And thus they walked on for three days.

Several times Nadia was obliged to stop. Michael Strogoff then took her in his arms, and for the moment, not having to think of Nadia's fatigue, while carrying her he marched more quickly and with his untiring pace.

On the 18th of September, at 10 o'clock at night, both reached at length Kimilteiskoe. From the top of a hill Nadia perceived a line a little less dark on the horizon. It was the Dinka.

Suddenly they stopped, as if their feet had stepped into some crevice in the ground.

A dog's bark was heard across the steppe.

"Do you hear?" said Nadia.

Then came a lamentable cry, a cry of despair, like the last appeal of a human being who is about to die.

"Nicholas! Nicholas!" cried the young girl, urged on by some evil foreboding.

Michael Strogoff, who listened, hung down his head.

"Come, Michael, come!" said Nadia.

And she who just before could scarcely drag herself along suddenly recovered her strength under the sway of violent excitement.

"Have we left the road?" said Michael Strogoff, feeling that he was treading no longer the dusty road, but the open grass field.

"Yes; it is necessary!" answered Nadia. "It is from over there on the right that the cry came!"

Some minutes afterward the two were only half a verst from the river.

A second bark was heard, and, although more feeble, it was certainly nearer.

Nadia stopped.

"Yes," said Michael, "it is Serko who is barking. He has followed his master."

"Nicholas!" cried the young girl.

Her call remained unanswered. Only some birds of prey rose up and disappeared amid the high clouds of heaven.

Michael Strogoff listened. Nadia looked at the plain, lit up with flashes of lightning in rapid succession, but she saw nothing.

And yet a voice came again, which this time murmured in a plaintive tone, "Michael!"

Then a dog, all bleeding, came bounding up to Nadia. It was Serko.

Nicholas could not be far away. He alone could murmur that name of Michael. Where was he? Nadia had not even the strength to call out to him.

Michael Strogoff, lying on the ground, searched with his hand.

Suddenly Serko gave a fresh bark and rushed toward a gigantic bird, which was clawing the ground.

It was a vulture. When Serko precipitated himself upon it, it rose up; but, returning to the charge, it struck the dog.

He again renewed the attack, but he received a blow on the head from that terrible beak, and this time Serko fell back dead on the ground.

At the same time a cry of horror escaped from Nadia.

"There, there!" said she.

A head rose just above the ground! It would have struck against their feet had it not been for the intense brightness that the heavens cast upon the steppe.

Nadia fell on her knees near that head.

Nicholas, buried up to the neck, according to the atrocious customs of the Tartars, had been abandoned on the steppe to there die of hunger and thirst and perhaps to be torn into pieces by the fangs of wolves or the beaks of birds of prey. A most horrible punishment for the victim thus imprisoned in the earth, who presses the earth without being able to cast it off, having his arms tied and fastened to his body like those of a corpse in a coffin! The victim, living in this clay mold, which he is unable to break, can do nothing but implore death, which is too slow in coming!

It was there the Tartars had interred their prisoner for three days. For three days Nicholas had been waiting for succor, which had come at last too late.

The vultures had perceived that head exposed to the sun's rays, and for some hours the dog defended his master against these ferocious birds.

Michael Strogoff dug the earth with his claspknife to release it from that imprisoned body.

The eyes of Nicholas, closed until then, once more opened themselves.

He recognized Michael and Nadia. Then he murmured:

"Adieu, friends. I am happy to have seen you once more. Pray for me."

And these words were the last.

Michael Strogoff continued to dig the soil, which, being strongly trodden down, had the hardness of a rock, and at length he succeeded in drawing from it the body of the unfortunate man. He listened if his heart still beat. It beat no more!

He wished then to bury it, that it might not remain exposed on the steppe, and that hole in which Nicholas had been buried alive he enlarged and deepened in such a manner as to be able to lay him there when dead. The faithful Serko was placed near his master.

At that moment a great noise was heard on the road about half a verst away.

Michael Strogoff listened.

By the noise he knew at once that a detachment of cavalry was advancing toward the Dinka.

"Nadia, Nadia!" said he in a low voice.

At his voice Nadia, who had remained in prayer, rose up.

"You see them! You see them!" he said to her.

"The Tartars!" she murmured.

It was indeed the advance guard of the emir which was defiling quickly on the road to Irkutsk.

"They shall not prevent me from interring him," said Michael Strogoff.

Soon Nicholas' body, with his hands joined on his breast, was laid in the tomb. Michael Strogoff and Nadia, kneeling down, prayed the last time for that poor being, good and inoffensive, who through devotedness to them had lost his life.

Long Ride Ahead of Them

Buffalo, March 26.—Deputy United States Marshal Strum left Buffalo today with 25 Chinamen who have been sentenced to deportation to their native land. The celestials will be taken to Boston, thence by boat to New Orleans and by rail to San Francisco.

Auto Scorchers Arrested

Washington, March 26.—Representatives O. H. P. Belmont and Jacob Ruppert were arrested last evening for running an automobile beyond the lawful speed limit. They were taken to the station house, but later were released.

SCHOOL GIRLS.

School girls are proverbially pretty. Fact is, it's a pretty age—that time in a girl's life when she has all the beauties of womanhood without the later lines of care and worry.

But here and there even among school girls appear pale drawn faces—a dullness and lack of freshness which tells a plain story of thin blood.

Now this is not right. But Scott's Emulsion can make it right. Scott's Emulsion is what these pale girls need. Scott's Emulsion brings back the beauty to their faces because it is blood food.

PLAN STRONG CONTEST

Democrats Eager For Posession of the House

STRATEGIC ADVANTAGES

Expected to Be Gained by Republicans on Account of New Apportionment, Which Will Offset Possible Losses of Solid Delegations

Washington, March 26.—The visit here of Lewis Nixon, the newly appointed leader of Tammany Hall, is believed to have some bearing upon the proposed organization of the Democratic congressional committee for the coming campaign. That committee, by managing the contest, will relieve the Democrats of disposing of the vexed question of Chairman Jones' leadership. This congressional committee will be controlled, according to present plans, by Ben Cable of Illinois, formerly a representative; by Griggs of Georgia, now a member of the house, and Nixon of New York.

The nominal assignment of the positions of the three is less important than the fact that they represent the three sections on which the party must rely for strength, the south, New York city and the west. The three should make a strong team, and, according to all accounts, the Democrats will offer a stouter fight than in many years. They are eager to get possession of the house which they have not carried since 1892, as a preliminary to the presidential battle of 1904, which they hope to make a real contest.

While the Democrats are "claiming" success, as is usual at this stage of the campaign, and not a few timid Republicans are taking the same view of the outcome, the Republicans now possess certain strategic advantages that should not be overlooked. The house of representatives elected next November will be chosen on the new apportionment that has been made in almost every northern state by a Republican legislature. Ten years ago, in the early 90's, these apportionments were often made by Democratic legislatures, and in many cases the lines then drawn have not been changed.

Another tactical advantage comes from the fact that the census of 1900 showed a greater increase of population in the north than in the south, and so there are more districts in what is usually Republican territory. This advantage, to be sure, is offset somewhat by the greater growth of the cities as against the country districts. Illinois affords a good illustration of the effect of the changes resulting from the new census; it now contains 22 districts; it will have 25 under the new apportionment. Today the delegation from that state stands 11 to 11, a surprisingly weak Republican representation for a state which gave that party on the general ticket in the last election a majority of 94,000. It is said the new apportionment would return a number of Republican congressmen, even if the state ticket were defeated by 40,000. The present expectation is that the Republicans will have 20 and the Democrats five members of the new delegation. This substantial gain would offset some possible losses in states where the delegations are now solidly Republican.

In Congress

Washington, March 26.—The house yesterday unseated Mr. Rhea (Ky.), a Democrat, and seated in his place Mr. Moss, who was formerly a Democrat but who, according to his brief, is in accord with the Republican party on the dominant issues. The Republican majority in the house is 43. While only two Republicans voted for Rhea, enough Republicans remained away or declined to vote to reduce the majority to 10.

A sharp attack on the pending oleomargarine bill was made in the senate yesterday by Mr. Money, who denounced the measure as "unconstitutional, immoral, dishonest and unjust." He declared that if it could be voted on by a secret ballot it would not receive a dozen votes in the senate.

Absolute Bar Against Chinese

Washington, March 26.—The house committee on foreign affairs yesterday completed consideration of the Chinese exclusion bill and by a practically unanimous vote ordered it favorably reported to the house. The exclusion of Chinese laborers is made complete, both as to the mainland territory of the United States and all insular possessions, including the Philippines and Hawaii.

Promotion Coming to Coghlan

Washington, March 26.—President Roosevelt will grant to Captain Coghlan of "Hoch der Kaiser" fame a pardon and remit a part of the sentence imposed upon him by a naval court which tried him for writing an abusive letter to a navy department clerk. The effect of this action will be to cause Captain Coghlan's promotion next month to the grade of rear admiral.

Otis' Services Appreciated

Washington, March 26.—Major General Elwell S. Otis closed his active career in the army yesterday by reason of age and will go into retirement. The war department has paid an unusual tribute to General Otis in issuing a general order reciting the distinguished services of the officer, not only through the Civil war, but in his management at Manila.

OUTLOOK IS FOR STRIKE

Seems as Though It Can Hardly Be Avoided at Lowell

Lowell, Mass., March 26.—Five unions affiliated with the Textile council held special meetings last night to act upon the strike question and only two definitely decided their attitude. The others will send delegates to the meeting of the council tonight with instructions to use their own discretion.

The unions that voted to strike are the weavers' and beamers.' Those which decided to declare themselves at the meeting of the central body are the carders, nappers and knitters. Special delegates were named by the three latter bodies and it is understood that their action will be influenced by the will of the majority.

The outlook now is that a strike is inevitable, although there is some sentiment favoring the postponement of an ultimatum until a proposition is first made to the mill agents for a conference. The state board of arbitration has not yet been appealed to by either party, but it is believed that it may be called upon to intercede if the mill officials acquiesce.

Pool Operators Gathered In

New York, March 26.—Anthony Comstock, assisted by five policemen, made a raid last evening on a pool room on Nassau street. There were 69 men in the place and the players made desperate attempts to escape from the rooms. The men were hemmed in, however, and kept in confinement until five men wanted by Comstock were placed under arrest. A large quantity of pool room paraphernalia was captured and on the man said to be the cashier there was found $1338. The pool room was in full blast, the raiders said, when the raid was made.

Bad Youngster Disposed Of

Philadelphia, March 26.—Joseph Currier, aged 15, was yesterday sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment for murder. Currier, during a dispute with a boy about his own age, shot his opponent dead. Two years ago Currier, with a number of companions, filled a boy with air with the aid of a high pressure air pump, causing the boy's death. He was acquitted of that crime on the jury's belief that the death was in the nature of an accident.

Long Journey Completed

San Diego, Cal., March 26.—The battleship Wisconsin arrived yesterday from the south. Since leaving Puget sound on Oct. 14 she has steamed 20,200 miles, touching at Honolulu, the Samoan islands, Acapulco, Valparaiso and Callao. Admiral Casey is on board and good health is reported among the officers and crew. The Wisconsin is here under waiting orders.

Specimen of German "Wit"

Berlin, March 26.—Simplicissimus, an illustrated journal, appeared yesterday with a drawing representing Alice Roosevelt at sea in an open boat, an immense fat hog in one end of the boat and Miss Roosevelt standing in the other holding a pig wrapped in the Stars and Stripes. This drawing is inscribed: "We received your prince, you must admit our hogs."

Lynched by "Unknown Parties"

Washington, N. C., March 26.—The body of James Walker, the negro who poisoned the family of David T. Taylor, was found dangling from a limb of a tree just outside of the town limits of Washington yesterday. The coroner's jury brought in a verdict that the negro came to his death by lynching at the hands of unknown parties.

Convicted Men May Appeal

Washington, March 26.—Official advices received by the postoffice department from Havana indicate that Rathbone, Neely and Reeves will appeal from their sentences to the supreme court of Cuba, and that the basis for the appeal will be points of law and procedure. The findings of fact made by the court are not reviewable.

Rhodes Is Failing

Cape Town, March 26.—Cecil Rhodes experienced a bad heart attack yesterday evening, from which he did not rally as he has done from previous attacks of this nature. After midnight he was weaker than at any time during his illness. His friends entertain little hope for his recovery.

He Fell From Grace

Sault Ste Marie, Mich., March 26.—A body found floating in the river here was yesterday identified as that of J. V. M. King, a former Episcopalian minister, who was deposed from the ministry because of his dissipation. It is thought that he became despondent and committed suicide.

Reported Arrest of Tsilka

London, March 26.—It is reported from Salonika, says the correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, that the Turkish authorities have arrested Pastor Tsilka, husband of Mme. Tsilka, on suspicion of complicity in the abduction of Miss Stone.

Innovation In Postal Methods

Washington, March 26.—A general order has been issued to railway mail clerks announcing that a system of registered mail pouches, to be made up by postal clerks, will be inaugurated on April 1.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Thursday, March 27.
Sun rises—5:37; sets—6:04.
Moon rises—9:47 p. m.
High water—1:15 a. m.; 1:45 p. m.

A high area is moving in from the Pacific coast. Temperatures have risen generally from the Mississippi valley eastward except in the Atlantic coast states. The weather will continue generally fair in New England. On the coast the winds will be fresh north to east.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

BY Virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Mabel Ramsdell and John B. F. Ramsdell, her husband, to the Quincy Savings Bank, dated Nov. 9, 1900, and recorded in Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 887, fol. 211, will be sold at public auction for breach of the conditions of said mortgage, on the premises hereinafter described, on WEDNESDAY, the Sixteenth day of April, at two o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular, the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, and therein described substantially as follows:

A certain lot of land containing about 9,002 square feet, with the buildings thereon, situated in that part of said Quincy, called Atlantic, and bounded as follows, viz: Beginning at a point three hundred eighty and 55-100 feet westerly from Squantum street; thence running northerly one hundred twenty and 52-100 feet; thence turning and running westerly seventy-five feet to lot No. 6 on a "plan of house lots at Atlantic Station, North Quincy," drawn by L. Briggs & Co., dated April, 1871, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds; thence southerly and bounded westerly on said lot No. 6, one hundred twenty and 60-100 feet to Billings street; thence easterly on said Billings street, seventy-five feet to the point of beginning.

This property will be sold subject to all unpaid taxes, tax titles and assessments.

Terms, $200 cash at sale, balance cash in ten days from said sale on delivery of deed.

PATRICK FOUND GUILTY

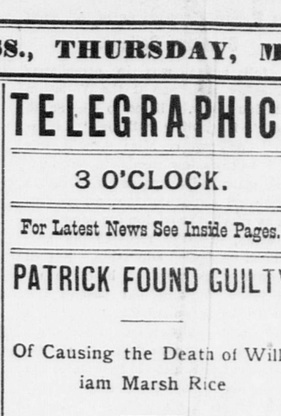

Of Causing the Death of William Marsh Rice

CONSPIRED WITH A VALET

To Obtain Possession of Estate Valued at $7,000,000 and Was Responsible For Administration of Chloroform Which Caused Rice's Death

New York, March 27.—Albert T. Patrick, lawyer, was last evening convicted of the murder of Sept. 23, 1900, of the aged millionaire recluse, William Marsh Rice. The penalty under the statute is death in the electric chair.

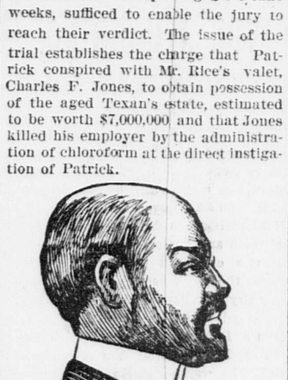

A scant three hours of deliberation, at the close of a trial prolonged for nine weeks, sufficed to enable the jury to reach their verdict. The issue of the trial establishes the charge that Patrick conspired with Mr. Rice's valet, Charles F. Jones, to obtain possession of the aged Texan's estate, estimated to be worth $7,000,000 and that Jones killed his employer by the administration of chloroform at the direct instigation of Patrick.

ALBERT T. PATRICK.

At the close of Recorder Goff's charge, which consumed the morning session of the court, the jury retired. This was at 1:50 p. m. At 5:55 they notified the officer in charge that they were ready to return to court, rather more than an hour of the intervening time having been devoted to luncheon. In anticipation of a painful scene of excitement in the event of a verdict of guilty, the unusual step was taken of ordering all women to leave the court room. Among them were the prisoner's two sisters and Mrs. Francis, with whom he boarded.

With grave faces the jury filed into their places and some minutes of painful tension elapsed while messengers were scurrying in quest of the counsel who had departed, looking for no verdict for many hours.

WILLIAM MARSH RICE.

Calm and suave as ever, and with confidence apparently quite unshaken, the prisoner was escorted into the court room. He took his stand facing the jury with head erect and hands loosely clasped behind his back.

At the word "guilty," pronounced by Foreman Machell in a tone low but distinct enough to be heard throughout the court, not the slightest change passed across Patrick's imperturbable visage, and he remained standing in an almost listless attitude while the customary poll of the jury was being taken. His aged father, Captain Patrick, sitting almost at his side and straining to catch the word of the foreman, started for an instant as its import reached him, and then recovered bravely and sat calmly awaiting the further proceedings.

A smile of triumph lit up the face of Assistant District Attorney Osborne, who hastened from the court immediately after Recorder Goff had, at the request of the prisoner's counsel, fixed on a week from Monday as the day on which to pronounce sentence.

The verdict was known almost immediately in the corridor where the women relatives and friends of the prisoner were waiting and a scene of distressing excitement ensued. Screaming hysterically, the prisoner's eldest sister ran about the corridor, begging piteously to be allowed to see her brother. Mrs. Francis fainted and on recovering, broke from the attendants and rushed into the court room, from which Patrick had just been removed, where she again fell in a swoon. Both women were removed to an ante-room and were sent home in a carriage.

None of the purors could be induced to reveal how the verdict had been reached, an agreement having been made to tell nothing.

Bad Season For Lumber

Waterville, Me., March 27.—The best informed of the lumber operators of the Kennebec waters agree that from 25 to 30 percent of the lumber cut on the Kennebec and its tributaries during the past winter will not reach the landings and consequently will not be available to the mills. There is but one foot of snow in the Dead River valley and frequent rains will be necessary to ensure the success of the drives.

Testimony at Variance

Skowhegan, Me., March 27.—The case of Alexander Terrio, convicted of the murder of Matthias Pare, will be taken to the law court on an appeal. The ground is the variance of expert testimony, it being pointed out that the microscopic examinations by Professor Knight of the University of Maine, in behalf of Terrio, differ from those testified to by Dr. Whittier, the expert for the state.

Princeton Debaters Beat Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., March 27.—Princeton won the eighth annual debate against Harvard last night on the question: "Resolved, That Mayor Low should strictly enforce the excise laws in New York city." The decision of the judges was unanimous and they were out only two minutes.

A Minister's Sudden Death

Fitchburg, Mass., March 27.—Rev. Charles E. Sumner of Spencer was found dead in his room at Hotel Cushing yesterday, death resulting from natural causes. Mr. Sumner, who was 64 years of age, had no regular pastorate, and was travelling in the interests of a New York publishing house.

No More Boxing at Bath

Bath, Me., March 27.—No more licenses for boxing exhibitions in this city will be granted by Mayor Hyde. He says he does not think any exhibitions have been against the state statutes, but he is satisfied that the best public sentiment is against this form of athletics given in public.

Inquest on White's Death

Woonsocket, R. I., March 27.—The inquest to determine the responsibility for the death of Simon White, Jr., who was killed at Pascoag last Saturday, began yesterday in the Harrisville court. Eight witnesses were examined, and it is understood that their testimony was conflicting.

Postoffice Cleaned Out

Newport, Me., March 27.—Burglars blew open the safe in the Newport postoffice, wrecked the interior of the office and escaped with $100 in money and an equal amount in stamps, leaving no clew.

Newspaper Man For Governor

Washington, March 27.—One of the first acts by the president consequent on the expected ratification of the treaty for the acquisition of the Danish West Indies now pending before the senate will be the appointment of a governor for the islands. The president is said to favor Jacob Riis, the newspaper writer of New York, for the office.

Chief of Police Fired

Port Au Prince, Hayti, March 27.—Chief of Police Cameau, who was responsible for the execution of Leon Gabriel, the French citizen who fired a revolver at him March 22, has been dismissed by request of the French government. It is now generally believed that the incident is closed.

An Alleged Boy Murderer

Washington, March 27.—Hezekiah Coates, colored, is on trial here for the murder of Carrie Corbin, also colored. The defendant is 12 years of age and his alleged victim was 8 years of age at the time of the tragedy last December.

Miss Stone Leaves Salonica

Salonica, March 27.—Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, has started for London. Thence she will sail for America.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Friday, March 28.
Sun rises—5:35; sets—6:05.
Moon rises—10:41 p. m.
High water—2 a. m.; 2:15 p. m.

Temperatures are much higher in the lake region and generally lower in the south. At Flagstaff, Ariz., yesterday morning, a minimum temperature of 8 degrees below zero was recorded. There will be showers in western New England; elsewhere the weather will be generally fair. On the coast the winds will be fresh south.

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. Among the tens of thousands who have used it for the grip, not one case has ever been reported that did not recover. For sale by all druggists.

THE DIAMOND KING DEAD.

Cecil Rhodes the Empire Builder in South Africa -- Staunch Friend of England.

Cape Town, March 27.—Cecil Rhodes died at 5:57 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was conscious until 5:55, when he muttered a few words and sank quickly. The immediate cause of his death was two successive attacks of heart failure.

At his bedside were Dr. Jameson, Dr. J. W. Smartt, Colonel Elmhurst Rhodes, director of signalling of the South Africa field force, and Mr. Walton, a member of the assembly of Port Elizabeth.

Mr. Rhodes last words were the names of his brother and some of the others present, which were meant to be good-byes. The only person who attended him during his illness and who was not present at his death bed was Dr. Stevenson.

It has not yet been determined where he will be buried. It was the wish of Mr. Rhodes to be interred at Matopo Hills, Rhodesia.

CECIL RHODES.

Cecil John Rhodes—diamond-king, empire-builder, "colossus"—will be counted one of the commanding figures of his time, one of the great of any time, and yet his share of life was less than 50 years. Greatness breeds envy, and envy enmity. Of enemies he had plenty, and of one thing his friends will own him avaricious. That one thing was power. Fabulously rich, he amassed more money as he strove for his first shillings, because wealth is power. Such an ambition often takes the form of exalted patriotism. Sweeping his hand across the map of Africa, Rhodes said: "That is my dream, that all red." And that so great a part of Africa today floats the flag of England is in no small measure his work.

New York, March 27.—John Hays Hammond, who was for many years and up to the time of the death of Cecil Rhodes intimately associated with him in the development of South Africa, has this to say of Mr. Rhodes:

"Cecil Rhodes leaves no posterity, but leaves his name on the map of Africa, sponsor for a commonwealth nearly as large as our western states. Had he lived he would have devoted the remaining years of his life and would have spent every dollar of his fortune in equipping that commonwealth. It is a good life's work to reclaim a vast region, occupied for centuries by predatory blacks, to give to that country a social and political system, railways, telegraphs, towns, and to run up there the flag of one's nation.

"Unfortunately Cecil Rhodes' character has been misunderstood in America. Judged by American standards, Rhodes was truly a great man. He was not only a great empire builder, but also a captain of industry, in which capacity he commands a higher regard among Americans than among other peoples. He is often represented as a shifty, unscrupulous financier, in league with capitalists to coax the Transvaal into a hopeless war in order to steal the mines of the country. He is also often represented as giving his entire life to the amassing of large wealth. The truth is that Rhodes cared little for money beyond the power it gave him to assist in the development of South Africa. From a most intimate connection with him in his business enterprises I am able to state that his methods of finance were not only scrupulously honorable but were characterized by unusual liberality. He was known to South Africans as a man of unbounded generosity.

"Cecil Rhodes will be greatly missed in South Africa. Until the unfortunate Jameeson raid, for which he received far more blame than he deserved, as history will prove, he was very popular with the Dutch of South Africa. They found in him always a sympathetic friend, ready to give them a helping hand financially and to assist in the development of any projects advantageous to the farming class. Within a very short time there would have been a revulsion of feeling, and, strange as it may sound today, Rhodes would have been able to re-establish his influence with the Dutch. He would have been quick to take advantage of the situation and would have passed into history as the great pacificator of South Africa. This estimate of Rhodes is shared even today by many of the progressive Dutchmen in the country."

A Two-Year Agreement

Good Afternoon.

The publication of the eligible list of candidates for police appointment was an eye opener to many.

Ward Two will fare well in the street watering order if South and Howard streets and a part of Quincy avenue are added to the list of streets heretofore watered.

The Senate has engrossed the bill granting the county tax levy for Norfolk county. How many know anything about it? Whether the amount is larger or smaller?

A convict on parole in Minnesota has been pronounced legally dead and cannot enter into a marriage contract. There is some advantage to be derived from this condition, as it is also held that dead men pay no bills.

The bill for the suppression of train robbers prompted Representative Kahn of California to say in its defense that we are inclined to say hard words about Turkish brigands while our train robbers are infinitely worse and more numerous. It is said that Prince Henry had a real fear of attack from these "gentlemen of the road" during his sojourn in the United States.

The Luce primary election bill in the Legislature, which seems to be favored by the politicians and to have the endorsement of the Boston Post, may well be viewed with suspicion. It may be a good thing for Boston, but the unfortunate part of it all is, that Quincy is a part of a Boston Congressional district. The bill seems to be designed largely to prevent repeating, but we do not recall a single case of that in Quincy. Pure politics in Quincy demands more that only Republicans shall vote in Republican caucuses, and only Democrats in Democratic caucuses, or else there shall be no caucuses at all. Some system of party registration seems to be necessary. The movement to abolish conventions in making nominations is a good one, and the Luce bill is to be endorsed to that extent.

Mayor Bryant lays himself open to some criticism when he appoints men as constables who have not been residents of the city one week. Not because they are to resist labor organizations, but because the positions are important ones, and should not be granted to everyone, especially strangers. Law and order should be enforced, but not by persons who may know nothing about the laws. The character of every man appointed as constable or police officer should be known, and should be satisfactory. Further, upon the advice of the present City Solicitor, the appointment of constables have this year been submitted to the City Council for approval. There is something wrong, too, when the Chief of Police of a city does not know who the constables of a city are.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Rev. Dr. Prescott of Boston is quoted as discussing the "club danger" for women and asking what has become of the old fashioned housewife. The chances are that she is dead, killed by the drudgery of the kitchen, and the theory that all work and no play fits into a woman's life better than it does into that of a man.—Haverhill Gazette

WORKED HALF DAY

Non-Union Men Protected by Constables.

Boarding Place Stormed in Evening.

Another Conference for Settlement to be Held.

The first attempt to operate the quarries with non-union men was made Wednesday by the Quincy Granite Quarries Co. At one time it looked as though something serious might follow this attempt, but fortunately the day terminated without bloodshed.

The men who were put to work on the quarries are tall rugged looking fellows, and evidently came from Maine and New Hampshire They are twenty-five in number and succeeded Wednesday in getting out considerable stock at the O. T. Rogers quarry which was shipped out of town.

The men arrived Tuesday afternoon, and that evening Manager Morgan appeared at City Hall with four of them and asked Mayor Bryant to appoint them as constables to protect the company's property. This was done and Wednesday the men went to work.

During the morning they were approached by pickets of the Quarrymen's Union, who informed them that there was labor trouble in Quincy. The strike breakers replied that they knew it. They opened their coats, and displaying constables badges ordered the strikers to keep away.

Later in the afternoon the strike committee visited the police station and inquired of Chief Hayden if these men had been appointed officers. Chief Hayden replied that he did not know but they could find out by applying at City Hall.

Down they came and soon learned from the City Clerk that the men were constables. The committee then waited about City Hall until Mayor Bryant arrived at 4.20. The Mayor informed them that he appointed the constables at the request of the manager of the quarries and supposed they were citizens. He further said that he would refer the matter to the City Solicitor, and if the appointments were illegal they would be revoked.

The twenty-five men who were at work Wednesday were quartered in the store house in the rear of the O. T. Rogers quarry, and at night there was a scene of excitement which at one time looked as though it might result in a riot. A gang of several hundred, mostly boys, had gathered about the house late in the afternoon, and by their shouts and stones tried to make it unpleasant for the men.

Some of the stones went through the windows, but the men wisely held their peace and did not venture forth.

Later a number of the striking quarry men charged the crowd and drove them away.

In the early evening the quarry owners applied to the police for protection, and an officer was sent up. The night passed without further trouble.

It was reported that seventy-five new strike breakers were due to arrive in Quincy on Saturday, but this morning it looks as though further trouble might be averted.

Late Wednesday evening word was received by Manager Morgan that the Quarrymen's Union were to hold another meeting Friday evening, and make another attempt to settle the strike peacefully.

Upon being thus informed Mr. Morgan decided that as there was a possibility of a settlement he would make no further attempts to operate his quarries.

The twenty-five strike breakers, therefore, will be given a holiday and no more work will be attempted until after Friday. Should this effort to settle the strike be without result, the quarries will be operated in earnest by non-union men, and the hundred or more men who are held in waiting will be rushed into Quincy.

Agreement at Milford.

The granite cutters' union of Milford, Mass., at a special meeting Wednesday evening accepted the compromise offer of the Bay State Pink Granite company, and there will be no strike next Tuesday.

The union presented a demand three months ago to all the granite manufacturers in this town, calling for an eight-hour workday with a uniform rate of wages of $3 per day. This was to go into effect next Tuesday.

The Bay State's offer is satisfactory to the union. Norcross Bros. and several minor granite manufacturers have not yet come to any settlement with the union.

TALK ON EDUCATION.

Miss Sarah Arnold Tells of New Simmons College.

A full house was in attendance Wednesday afternoon at the Wollaston Unitarian vestry, to listen to Miss Sarah Arnold's interesting talk on "Education." Afterwards Miss Arnold was asked to say a few words in reference to the plans and purposes of Simmons College. She spoke of the new institution as making provision for scholastic education, scientific research and professional or applied education. Not all the four years were to be taken up with technical work, but part of the time to be given to the laying of a broad and substantial intellectual foundation. She also spoke of the establishment of household economics and preparation in medicine and courses for the function of nursing. In conclusion she said "We shall not only give a collegiate course but hope to attract college women who desire to give a year or more in the special studies which we offer."

Mrs. George B. Rice entertained the audience with several vocal selections. Amongst the number was "My Sweetest Girl," composed by her daughter, Mrs. Harry Porter. A duet of folk songs was sung by Mrs. Frank Page and Mrs. Rice. The singers were greeted with many encores.

About 80 persons were present, many coming from Neponset, Quincy and elsewhere. Tea was served from a very dainty table under the direction of Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. Brigham and Mrs. Sherman, with assistants.

GIVEN A HEARING.

Mayor Hears the Charges Against Two Policemen.

Officers Frank J. Daveron and Carl Nicol, against whom charges of neglect of duty were made by Chief Hayden, were given a hearing before Mayor Bryant Wednesday evening.

The hearing was held in the Assessors' room and was private. Each witness was examined separately, those besides the witnesses present being Mayor Bryant, City Solicitor Blackmur, Chief Hayden and the accused.

Officer Daveron was the first to be given a hearing, and the witnesses against him were Chief Hayden, Officer Hanson, Officer Barry and Special-Officer Sandberg.

The latter testified of the unsuccessful attempt Chief Hayden and he had made one night in May last year to find Officer Daveron.

Officer Hanson testified to the manner in which the duty calls came in at the station, and Chief Hayden and Officer Barry as to what they knew of Daveron's actions during the past few months.

When the case of Officer Nicol was called he owned up to having been intoxicated on the night he neglected to ring in his duty calls.

The hearings opened promptly at 7.30 and was finished inside of two hours.

Mayor Bryant will give his decision later.

Coal Men Still Out.

Superintendent at Shipyard Surprised

On Tenth Anniversary of His Marriage.

Presents Too Numerous to Mention and a Turkey Supper.

The new residence of Mr. and Mrs. Hynes, Broadway, City Point, was resplendent with light on Saturday evening and was taxed to its utmost to accommodate the many friends and well wishers who had gathered to celebrate the tenth anniversary of their marriage.

The first contingent arrived early from South Quincy on a special car, and like all the McGregors, brought their music along. They were followed soon after by friends from the Fore River ship yard where Mr. Hynes is at present foreman of the hull department.

Order was secured and maintained throughout the evening by Mr. Alfred Ingham, while the dancing was conducted under the able prompting of Mr. Thos. Raleigh.

Mr. A. G. McDonnell in behalf of the clansmen presented Mr. and Mrs. Hynes with a parlor lounge, while Mr. Gibb, superintendent of the Fore River Ship Co., in behalf of the employes, tendered presents too numerous to mention.

The evening was spent in dancing, reading and singing, the songs of Master John Findlay, the boy soprano, being in great demand; also the auld Scotch songs of Mr. Hynes. Although Mr. Hynes has been but a short time in Quincy, coming from Bath, Me., to assume his present duties, he declares that the Quincy people remind him of the immortal words of Burns, "that man to man the wardle o'er, shall brothers be for all that." Praise is due Mrs. Hynes, assisted by Mrs. McDonnell, for the turkey supper served and as Carter well said, "Man, its jist grand."

How Did He Get In?

About 3 o'clock this morning Officer Goodhue had his attention attracted by a noise in the Tirrell block on Hancock street, which is undergoing repairs. The officer forced an entrance and found a man named Michael Scolling who was drunk. How the man gained an entrance to the building is somewhat of a mystery. No windows were open or could be opened, and the only way the officer could get in was qy forcing off the boarding in front.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

LINEMEN ARRESTED.

A Fruitful Tree Found by Officer Murray.

Officer Murray arrested two electric light linemen this morning for climbing a tree in front of the residence of Dr. Hallowell by the use of spurs. He arrested one of the linemen whom he found in the tree and carried him to the station. Upon his return he found a second man in the tree who also had on spurs. This man was also arrested and locked up. It is understood that the men were warned that they must not use spurs in dimbing trees but use a short ladder. This warning these men disregarded.

The abuse of trees along the sidewalks has become a great nuisance, and handsome trees are ruined by these unscrupulous men. The tree in front of Dr. Hallowell's is badly cut by the spurs which has left great holes in it.

Not only are trees abused in this way but the sidewalk along the east side of Hancock street from City Square to the Woodward Institute is covered with small pieces of broken limbs and with pieces of broken glass insulators.

FIERY FRED FUNSTON

Pays His Respects to Eastern Newspapers In a Characteristic Manner

Topeka, March 27.—General Frederick Funston was in this city yesterday on his way to California. General Funston delivered himself of a scathing denunciation of the eastern newspapers which criticised his speech before the Lotos Club in New York. He said:

"I have been nagged by that class of papers until I am tired. Editorially, they wilfully misinterpret my remarks, and I am glad to express my independence of their opinions and their talk and that of their kind about my using dishonorable and unfair means in the capture of Aguinaldo; also that I violated the articles of war. They know a great deal more about the articles of golf than they do about the articles of war. Everything is permissible in a campaign, except the use of poison or the violation of the flag of truce.

"As a matter of fact only four of my men on the expedition were dressed in the insurgent uniform. The others were dressed as Filipino peasants. President Roosevelt approved heartily of my remarks before the Lotos club banquet and was very anxious to have me go to Boston on the invitation of Senator Lodge and make the same speech there, but my orders were such that it was impossible for me to go."

In Congress

Washington, March 27.—Throughout yesterday's session of the senate the oleomargarine bill was under discussion. The principal speech of the day was delivered by Mr. Dolliver, who scathingly denounced the oleomargarine industry, declaring that it had put itself in partnership with lawlessness and false pretences. Mr. Dolliver concluded his speech with a glowing eulogy of farm life and of the American farmer.

General debate on the military appropriation bill was concluded yesterday in the house. Mr. Burleson (Tex.) renewed the attack on Secretary Hay on account of the allegations regarding the Boer relief funds subscribed in Illinois. Mr. Hitt (Ills.) replied, saying the secretary had done all there was possible. Several other brief speeches were made.

UNDERGROUND RIVER

SUBTERRANEAN STREAM SAID TO RUN UNDER NEW ENGLAND STATES.

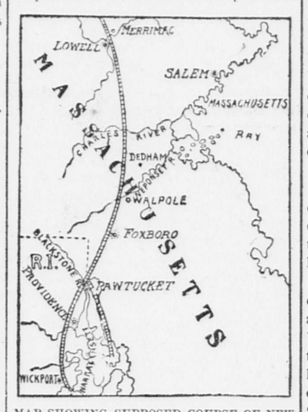

According to Theory of Professor Denton, the Mad Torrent Rushes Far Under the Earth From New Hampshire to Rhode Island.

[Special Correspondence.]

DEDHAM, Mass., March 18.—A lawsuit recently argued here before the Norfolk superior court of Massachusetts has revived interest in the theory that the people of the New England states are living on a crust of earth from 80 to 120 feet in thickness, beneath which there is a rushing torrent of water that makes its way from the White mountains in New Hampshire to Narragansett bay.

The case in which talk of the underground river theory was brought up was that of Hollingsworth & Vose against the Foxboro Water Supply district. The plaintiffs claimed that the town of Foxboro had been taking water from a privilege that belonged to them. Foxboro denied the allegation.

An effort was made to prove that Foxboro was taking its water from the Neponset river, of which the plaintiffs have full control. It is said that peppermint was poured upon the surface of the Neponset in order to establish the case, it being contended that if the water showed any signs of the essence when drawn from faucets in different places it would prove conclusively that it was being taken from the Neponset river. No trace was found of peppermint, however.

Of course the Foxboro district people were delighted with the result of the test, but another experiment was made. It is said that a mammoth steam pump was erected near one of the wells from which the Foxboro district obtains water, and the pump was put to a severe test, pumping thousands of gallons of water every hour. Notwithstanding this, Foxboro got its usual supply of water with the same heavy pressure.

The belief in the underground river story owes its being to one Professor Denton, who used to deliver popular lectures throughout New England, his favorite theme being geology. Denton was a clever man who had evidently studied his subject earnestly. He was a convincing speaker. He could hold the attention of his hearers to the close of the lecture, and in any town where he had once appeared he always found it easy to secure a re-engagement. He had a number of startling theories to expound, one of which related to a vast subterranean stream rising among the White mountains and flowing southward.

Denton traced the course of this river from near the New Hampshire line down through the state of Massachusetts to the Rhode Island border, where, he declared, the stream separated, forming a Y, one branch of which passed down the eastern side of the Providence river and the other to the west of it. His underground river crossed, he thought, though deep underneath it, the Blackstone at Pawtucket Falls, one of its branches running beneath the Seekonk river to an embouchure into the bay, the other arm proceeding down the western shore, crossing under the Pawtucket and two or three other smaller streams and finally emptying into Narragansett bay near Wickford.

This theory led the marvelous torrent underneath the town of Foxboro, where, Denton claimed, it comes closest to the surface, in fact where it finds an outlet in Witch pond. This idea is substantiated by men in Foxboro who have tried to find the bottom of Witch pond. They have never succeeded, but startling tales are told of mysterious roarings below the surface. These roarings or explosions of gases are followed by great commotions on the pond's surface. During these unheavals report has it that lily pads as large as a man's thigh have been thrown upon the shores. In the icy waters of the pond lurk mammoth pickerel.

The Hollingswoth & Vose case has been hanging fire for years. At the recent trial in Dedham Professor N. S. Shaler of Harvard, who is accounted one of the highest geological experts in the United States, gave it as his opinion that there were various strata carrying water in the region in dispute, and Professor Niles of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, also famed as an expert in matters geological, claimed there was a vast hydrographic basin underlying that section and resting upon the bedrock in which the water courses from which the town's supply was drawn are located and in which the quantity of water is practically inexhaustible. The evidence was deemed conclusive by the jury, and the finding was in favor of the town on the three questions of fact advanced in the case.

FREDERICK ROCKWOOD.

THE LUCE BILL.

The Committee of Legislature to Report in Favor.

Quincy and Milton of the Tenth Congressional district, and Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop of the Ninth Congressional district, will have to make new caucus regulations if the proposed Luce bill is adopted.

The Post says: The committee on election laws has agreed to the Luce primary election bill, and as soon as a new draft can be made the House and Senate will be asked to enact legislation compelling Boston to adopt primaries for congressional, senatorial and representative nominations. The referendum will be recommended.

The principal feature of the primary law, says the Post, is that the voter casts his vote for the candidate and not for delegates. The system for primaries calls for voting by precincts. Voters, Republican and Democrats, will use the same polls on the same day. The plan makes double caucus voting impossible. It reduces the chance for repeating and other methods of caucus fraud to the minimum. The election commissioners will supervise the voting. The primary officers will be divided between the parties. The reason long offered by men who decline to attend caucuses, that a long wait, crowding and disturbances makes caucus voting disagreable, will be done away with.

Political leaders of the city, adds the Post, appear to be in favor of the change. Opinions among the members of the House and Senate points toward the ready acceptance of the proposed legislation.

Some surprise is manifested in the decision to leave the county, councillor and State conventions as they are. The committee feared that other sections of the State would not accept the legislation as willingly as Boston is expected to. To do away with the State, councillor, and county conventions in Boston and allow the other sections of the State to follow the old system would bring confusion, the members thought.

As Boston now has the three congressional districts almost entirely within the city's confines, and also the senatorial districts, little confusion is expected. The Representative nominations are an easy matter.

Quarry Accident.

HANNA IN 1904.

Ohio Senator Denies Presidential Bee Has Nested In His Bonnet.

A half page picture of Senator Hanna, labeled "The Man of the Hour," appeared in one of the Washington papers recently, with a laudatory notice, writes a regular correspondent of the New York Press. This advertisement was taken by many as an announcement of Hanna's candidacy for 1904, but the senator angrily denies any knowledge of the publication or its purposes.

"I saw the picture in the paper," said Hanna, "but I paid no particular attention to it. The paper was lying on a member's desk, and I did not think it worth while to pick it up. I supposed it was some advertisement, and, while I did not like that use of my picture, I have grown so indifferent to likenesses and caricatures that I did not examine the paper closely. I do not know where the picture came from or the object in publishing it at this time.

"Now, it is rather significant," added Senator Hanna, "that there are some men who insist that I have prospects for 1904. I have asked these men to stop this kind of talk, but they persist in warning me that if I do this or that thing I am hurting my chances for the presidency. For instance, there is 'Scotty' (meaning Senator Scott of West Virginia), who has told me within a day or two that if I did not let up in advocating reciprocity for Cuba as a McKinley administration obligation I would ruin myself politically. My reply to that was that if 'Scotty' did not stop warning me about my political future I would come out for absolute free trade, and then there would be no mistake about my finish.

"I want to stop this candidacy business and the mention of my name at this time, when we have more important things to think about. I am more deeply concerned in the passage of the ship subsidy bill, which I expect to go through the senate by a party vote. That will make it a party measure and ought to insure its passage by the house. When the subsidy bill is a law or even before that time, my next care will be for canal legislation. It is not true that I am opposed to any canal bill. I favor the Spooner amendment, leaving the question in the hands of the president, and hope that the Panama canal route will be selected. It is the most feasible route, no matter what Senator Morgan says, and I intend to give a presentation of arguments on the Panama side that I hope will be convincing, although I would prefer the Darien."

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use or these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

"And now," said Michael, throwing back the earth, "the wolves of the steppe shall not devour him."

Then his hand stretched in menace toward the troop of horsemen which was passing.

"On our journey, Nadia!" said he.

Michael Strogoff could no longer follow the highroad, now occupied by the Tartars. He must throw himself across the steppe and turn Irkutsk. In doing this they would have to cross the Dinka and thus would be relieved from one great anxiety.

Nadia could no longer drag herself along, but she could see for him. He took her in his arms and struck into the southwest of the province.

There remained for them to travel more than 200 versts. How could it be done? How could food be found on the journey?

By what superhuman energy would they succeed in passing the first slopes of the Sayensk mountains? Neither Nadia nor he could tell.

And yet twelve days after, at 6 o'clock in the evening, an immense sheet of water rolled at the feet of Michael Strogoff.

It was Lake Baikal.

Lake Baikal is situated at a height of 1,700 feet above the level of the sea. Its length it about 900 versts, its breadth about a hundred. Its depth is unknown. Mme. de Bourboulon tells us that the sailors say that it wishes to be called "Mrs. Sea." If one calls it "Mr. Lake," it at once is in a rage. Anyhow, according to a Russian legend, a Russian is never drowned there.

This immense basin of fresh water, fed by more than 300 rivers, is embosomed in a magnificent circle of volcanic mountains. It has no other outlet but the Angara, which, after having passed Irkutsk, throws itself into the Yenisei a little above the town of Yeniseisk.

The first days of October had come. The sun now sank below the horizon at 5 o'clock, and the long nights allowed the temperature to fall to zero in the thermometers. The first snow, which was to remain until summer, already whitened the neighboring heights. During the Siberian winter this interior sea, with its ice several feet thick, is dotted with trains of couriers and caravans.

It was at the southwest point of the lake that Michael Strogoff had just arrived, carrying Nadia, whose whole life, so to speak, was concentrated in her eyes. What could they both expect in this wild part of the province but to die there of want and destitution? And yet how many still remained to be made of those 6,000 versts that the courier of the czar should attain his end? Only sixty versts along the shore of the lake as far as the mouth of the river Angara, and eighty versts from the mouth of the Angara to Irkutsk—in all a hundred and forty versts, say a three days' journey for a strong and vigorous man even on foot.

Nadia first perceived this group when Michael Strogoff, carrying her in his arms, came out from the defile of the mountains.

"Stop!" she cried. "The Tartars! The Tartars!"

The young girl feared for an instant that it was nothing else than a detachment of Tartars sent to scour the shores of Lake Baikal, in which case flight would be cut off for both.

But Nadia was soon reassured on this head.

"They are Russians!" she cried.

And after this last effort her eyelids closed, and her head fell down on the breast of Michael Strogoff.

But they had been perceived, and some of those Russians, running up to them, led the blind man and the young girl to the border of a little beach to which was moored a raft.

The raft was about to depart.

These Russians were fugitives of various conditions whom a common interest had gathered together on this point of the Baikal.

Driven back by the Tartar scouts, they sought to take refuge in Irkutsk, and, not being able to reach that place by land, since the invaders had taken up position on both banks of the Angara, they hoped to gain it by descending the river which runs through the town.

The fugitives had their raft fully prepared for the voyage, and had Michael Strogoff been even a few hours later he would have found the place deserted.

Now, he was welcomed and bidden to go upon the raft at once, as its slow motion rendered it advisable to lose no time in setting out.

Their project made the heart of Michael Strogoff leap for joy. He could now play his last chance. But he had the strength to dissemble, wishing to preserve more strictly than ever his incognita.

The plan of the fugitives was very simple. A current of the Baikal skirts the higher shore of the lake as far as the mouth of the Angara. It is this current which they counted upon making use of to early reach the outlet of Baikal. From this point to Irkutsk the rapid waters of the river would draw them along at a speed of ten or twelve versts the hour. In a day and a half they ought to be in sight of the town.

Every means for embarking was wanting at that place.

They had to supply this want. A raft, or, rather, a float of wood, like those which generally float on the Siberian rivers had been constructed.

A forest of pine, which towered along the shore, had furnished the floating material. The trunks, lashed together with willow branches, formed a platform on which a hundred persons would have easily found room.

It was on this raft that Michael Strogoff and Nadia were carried. The young girl was once more herself. They gave to her some nourishment, as also to her companion. Then, lying down on a bed of leaves, she immediately fell into a sound sleep.

To those who interrogated him Michael Strogoff said nothing concerning the events which had occurred at Tomsk. He gave himself out as an inhabitant of Krasnoiarsk who had not been able to reach Irkutsk before the troops of the emir had arrived on the left bank of the Dinka, and he added that very likely the main body of the Tartars had taken up their position before the capital of Siberia. Even among friends it was almost as important to preserve secrecy as to his mission as if among enemies.

One never knows what ears are listening when the tongue speaks. The friend of today may be the foe of tomorrow, and even the firm friend, if indiscreet, is more to be dreaded than the known enemy.

There was not, therefore, an instant to lose. Besides, the frost became more and more keen. The temperature during the night fell far below zero. Some pieces of ice had already formed on the surface of the Baikal. If the raft could easily make its way on the lake, it would not be the same between the banks of the Angara in case those pieces of ice should come to impede its course.

Therefore for all these reasons it was necessary that the fugitives should start without delay.

At 8 o'clock at night the moorings were unfastened, and under the action of the current the raft followed the lake shore.

Long poles, handled by robust mujiks, sufficed to guide it. An old sailor of the Baikal had taken command of the raft. He was a man of sixty, all tanned with the breezes of the lake. A white and very thick beard descended on his breast. He had on his head a fur hat. Of a grave and austere appearance, his wide and long riding coat, drawn tight at the belt, hanging down to his heels, this silent old man, sitting at the stern, commanded by gesture and did not speak ten words in ten hours.

Besides, the whole management consisted in keeping the raft in the current which ran along the shore, without allowing it to go far out into the deep water.

Although the journey was not without danger, the voyagers might reasonably hope to safely accomplish it.

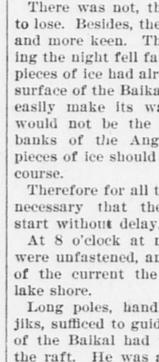

At any rate they had become accustomed to both hardship and danger. No fate could be worse than the one that awaited them if they remained.

So despite the past and present they were many hopeful, almost happy hearts on board that rude craft that floated along so lazily.

(To be continued.)

IT MUST COME.

As inevitable as the changing seasons of the year is the change which comes to every woman. And just as one anticipates the changes of other seasons it is wise to anticipate this change of season and prepare for it. In this way the discomforts and disasters suffered by many women at the period of change can be avoided or overcome.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a medicine for every season of woman's life, will entirely meet the needs of women at this period of change. It cures the physical ills and relieves the mental anxiety and depression usually associated with this critical period. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite and induces refreshing sleep.

J. S. Carlisle, Esq., of Manchester, Coffee Co., Tenn., writes: "I have been using your medicines for the last sixteen or eighteen years in my Poor-house. I am superintendent of the Coffee County Poor-house and Asylum combined. Your 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' are the best medicines for the diseases for which they are recommended, that I ever used. They saved my wife's life at the time of 'change of life.' I have been recommending your medicine to many afflicted women and have also guaranteed that if it did not cure I would pay back the money spent for it. I have told our druggist that if the people came back and said Doctor Pierce's medicines did not give satisfaction, to give them back their money and charge it to me. I have not once been called upon to refund. I have never found anything to equal the 'Favorite Prescription' for diseases of women."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper covered book, or 31 stamps for the cloth bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

DETERMINED TO STRIKE

Lowell Operatives Insist Upon Ten Percent Advance

TO GO OUT NEXT MONDAY

Unless Mill Men Yield In the Meantime—Efforts to Delay Action For Another Week Unanimously Rejected by the Textile Council

Lowell, Mass., March 27.—The 56 delegates to the meeting of the Textile Council last evening voted to go out on strike next Monday morning unless the mill authorities in the meantime concede to the operatives' demand for a 10 percent raise in wages.

The delegates present represented nine unions and the determination to stand by the demand for the 10 percent increase was unflinching.

The details of the conference between President Rafferty and Secretary Ashton of the Textile Council, Joseph Conrey of the Trades and Labor Council and Agents Nourse and Southwick of the Lawrence and Massachusetts corporations respectively at Mayor Dimon's house were given, but it did not effect the feeling of the meeting. The personal appeal of Mayor Dimon was duly introduced, but it did not serve to change the sentiment of the delegates.

The petition signed by about 150 prominent business men, beseeching the Textile Council and members of the subordinate unions to delay action until the good office of a committee is tried, was the only expression offered that in any way induced the delegates to reconsider their determination to strike.

The consideration of the committee prolonged the meeting for an hour, and when the motion to go out on strike March 31 was made delegates friendly to the petition offered an amendment that action be delayed until April 7. The amendment was defeated and the original motion to go out on Monday morning was unanimously voted.

President Rafferty announced that he and other officers had been interviewed by the state board of arbitration, but his relation of the interview had no effect except to bring about the appointment of a committee, such committee to hold itself in readiness for any conference that may be requested by the mill authorities. The meeting lasted from 8 o'clock till midnight.

President Rafferty said that the expressions by the speakers were cool, but determined. He hoped that the mill agents will see their way clear to allow the 10 percent raise before the mills close at noon Saturday.

Business men who have interviewed the mill agents say that if the strike goes into effect the prospects are that every mill will be closed indefinitely. No effort will be made to keep them running by the employment of non-union help, and so the absence of this usually troublesome feature will reduce the prospects of disorder to a minimum.

Will Soon Be Ex-Governor

Washington, March 27.—General Wood left here last night on his last visit to Havana in the capacity of military governor of Cuba. General Wood said he expected to depart by boat from the city of Havana at 12 o'clock on May 20, after the new government had been installed and the Cuban flag saluted. At the same time 1200 American troops would vacate the island by way of Havana and 400 would go from Santiago.

Delarey Slipped Away

London, March 27.—Reports of the result of the combined movement of British columns against General Delarey have enabled Lord Kitchener to announce the capture of about 135 prisoners, three 15-pounders, two pompoms and quantities of stock, wagons, etc. General Delarey appeared to have successfully evaded Lord Kitchener's cordon.

Old Sores Not Forgotten

Newburg, N. Y., March 27.—For striking Judge Sherwood of Fishkill yesterday, Levi Hancock was sent to jail for three months. The two were at odds politically 15 years ago and this was their first meeting since that time. Hancock was first fined $15, but upon making a sneering remark the sentence was changed to three months.

Ailment May Have Been Misjudged

Berlin, March 27.—Much anxiety is expressed over the illness of Waldemar, eldest son of Prince Henry, whose condition is becoming more discouraging. It is feared that the youth's real ailment was misjudged from the start, and several physicians are now in attendance at the sanitarium in which Waldemar is confined.

He Faded Away

New York, March 27.—Otto Meurer, superintendent of Trinity cemetery, died yesterday from starvation. An injury to the jaw bone caused lockjaw and for seven weeks he had been kept alive by liquid foods. He was a robust man when in good condition, but had wasted away until he weighed only 75 pounds.

To Increase Engineer Force

Washington, March 27.—On the recommendation of General Chaffee, the secretary of war has directed that the engineer battalion in the Philippines be recruited to its full war strength of 160 men to a company. The present strength of these companies is 104 men.

NORIEL RUN DOWN

One of the Men Captured With Him Believed to Be Malvar

Manila, March 27.—Noriel, the only insurgent general, with the exception of Malvar, still in the field, has been captured by Lieutenant Frank E. Bamford of the Twenty-eighth infantry.

A major, a captain, a lieutenant and five men who were acting as a bodyguard to Noriel were captured with him. They have been all held as prisoners of war. There is some reason to believe that one member of this bodyguard is General Malvar in disguise. Lieutenant Bamford is certain that if this general is not one of the captured party that he is in the immediate neighborhood of the scene of Noriel's capture.

Noriel has been one of the recognized leaders of the insurrection since 1899. He was captured on his way to the coast while endeavoring to escape. He says that the few remaining leaders are fleeing, as they do not command enough men to warrant surrenders commensurate with their rank.

What Roberts Fondly Hoped

London, March 27.—At the conclusion of a biography of Lord Roberts, written by Mr. Cobban, which has just been published, the reply of Lord Roberts to Lord Lansdowne when the latter requested him to take the supreme command against the Boers, is given in the following words: "For 19 years I have led an abstemious life in the hope of this day." Commenting on this answer Mr. Cobban says Lord Roberts foresaw that the issue must ultimately be fought out between Briton and Boer.

Planning Trip to Philippines

Washington, March 27.—The minority members of the senate committee on the Philippines are considering the advisability of presenting to the full committee a proposition for a visit to the Philippine islands during the next vacation for the purpose of investigating conditions there and of taking the testimony of leading Filipinos. The matter probably will be brought to the attention of the committee at an early date.

Shortage In Gold Supply

London, March 27.—At a meeting here yesterday of the shareholders of the Bank of Africa, the chairman said it was calculated that, owing to the closing of the South African mines during the last 2½ years, the world's gold supply was short to the extent of 40,000,000. He thought it surprising that such a serious diminution should not have been more acutely felt.

A Wonderful Nugget

Guthrie, O. T., March 27.—Great excitement has been caused at Lawton by the unearthing by miners in the Wichita mountains of an 85-pound nugget, 83 percent pure gold. It was found in Devil's canyon, the location of one of the ancient Spanish mines, where many crucibles have been unearthed recently.

Taft Will Soon Be Out

Cincinnati, March 27.—Governor Taft of the Philippines has now been two weeks in a hospital here, recovering from a surgical operation supplementary to the one he underwent at Manila. His general condition is excellent, and he will be able to leave the hospital in 10 days or two weeks.

To Ward Off Cholera

Washington, March 27.—The navy department has given Rear Admiral Wildes, ranking admiral in the Philippines, authority to take such steps as may be necessary to prevent the spread of the cholera epidemic which prevails at Manila to the officers and men of the naval establishment at Cavite.

Injunction Against Strikers

Norfolk, March 27.—An injunction has been signed by Judge Hanckle restraining 18 named employes of the Norfolk Railway and Light company and all other parties interested from interfering in any manner with the company. The Central Labor union may lift the boycott.

Exceeded Contract Requirements

Washington, March 27.—The navy department has received the report of the official trial of the torpedo boat Bagley off Port Royal, S. C. The little boat made a most excellent showing, exceeding at several stages of the trial her contract speed of 26 knots an hour.

Prince Won't Visit Us

Berlin, March 27.—The Berliner Tageblatt says it understands that no visit to the United States by Prince Adelbert, the third son of Emperor William, has been contemplated.

Lack of Faith In Promises

Kingston, Ja., March 27.—There is considerable agitation throughout the island, owing to increased taxation, notwithstanding the recent government promise of early relief.

Lowell Mills Will Not Yield to Demands of Operatives

SERIOUS BLOW TO THE CITY

Strike of Magnitude Proposed Would Involve Abont Seventeen Thousand Employes—Agents Prefer Shutdown to Granting an Advance

Lowell, Mass., March 28.—The mill agents held a conference yesterday afternoon at which they discussed the action of the Textile Council on Wednesday evening. One of the agents said: "We discussed the action of the council, but there was really nothing accomplished. We will not make any concessions and the mills will close at noon on Saturday. There seems to be a determination on the part of a certain few to make trouble. They are not open to conviction or to reason."

Another agent said that quite a percentage of his operatives will be let go tonight. "We are not commencing on any new orders," he said, "and as soon as the old orders for whatever work they have on hand is completed, we will let them go."

The agents claim not to have received any official notification from the Textile Council relative to the action of that body on Wednesday evening. "We know from the papers that they voted to strike," said an agent, "but we have not received any official notification from the council."

The determined vote taken by the operatives to inaugurate the strike, and their apparent readiness to disregard all efforts to prevent a contest, are not reassuring to those who have been trying to obtain peace.

It is conceded that a strike of the magnitude proposed will be a serious blow to the city: It will involve seven factories, and will cut off wages aggregating about $140,000 a week.

The employes are divided among about 7000 males and 10,000 females. There are in the Lowell cotton mills 22,818 looms and 838,136 spindles, all of which would be idle if the strike is put into effect as threatened.

It has been asserted by the agents that they would prefer to shut down altogether, and it has also been asserted that in the event of a protracted shutdown they would sell their raw cotton for what they could get. They are firm in their assertion that the raise asked cannot possibly be given, and say that the closing of the mills would not be a hardship, at least, as compared with the advance asked.

The most important developments in the strike situation yesterday were the discharge of the night force of carders of the Massachusetts corporation and the discharge of spinners and other operatives in the different mills who had completed their orders or whatever work they were engaged in.

Miners' Strike Postponed

New York, March 28.—Mine workers and mine owners of the anthracite fields debated their differences for four hours yesterday in a conference arranged by the conciliation committee of the National Civic Federation, but the meeting was without result except that the workers agreed not to strike on April 1 as they had decided to do at the Shamokin convention. There is to be further friendly discussion between the two interests.

Conference Without Effect

Woonsocket, R. I., March 28.—By a vote of 117 to 90 the weavers in the Saranac mills of the American Woollen company at Blackstone voted to strike, and they immediately left their looms. A conference yesterday with Superintendent Merrill on the two-loom question was without effect, unless the strike may be called such. The ballot was taken in the mill, printed ballots being used. All the weavers went out.

Sympathetic Strike at Fitchburg

Fitchburg, Mass., March 28.—The weavers of the Beoli and Fitchburg worsted mills, the local plants of the American Woollen company, last night voted to strike in sympathy with the strike at Olneyville. The vote to strike was not unanimous, but it was carried by a fair majority, and all the weavers stood by it and quit work today. The officials of the mills are greatly surprised at the action of the operatives.

Objected to Negro Motorman

Jackson, Miss., March 28.—All the motormen and conductors in the employ of the Jackson Street Railway company went on strike yesterday because the manager of the system sent a negro out as motorman on an extra car. The negro was discharged an hour later and the men returned to work.

Voluntary Advance In Wages

Pittsburg, March 28.—The stationary engineers of the American Steel Hoop company were notified yesterday of a voluntary advance of 10 percent in wages and a bonus on the tonnage, to go into effect at once.

JONES MAY GO FREE

As a Reward For His Testimony Leading to Conviction of Patrick

New York, March 28.—District Attorney Jerome was asked yesterday what he intended to do with Charles F. Jones, who was Rice's clerk and attendant, and who testified that he killed Rice at Patrick's request. Mr. Jerome replied:

"It is frequently necessary to allow men manifestly guilty to go free. In this case we never could have got a conviction without Jones' testimony and in such cases it is often well to grant the witness immunity. I cannot say definitely just what this office will do; but, as I said, Jones testimony convicted Patrick, and it might be very inexpedient to prosecute him. In some cases, unless there was just such testimony as the valet gave, we could not bring to justice the really guilty persons."

Where Britishers Are Shy

London, March 28.—In an editorial this morning on the "American invasion" and the shrinkage in British investments in the United States The Daily News says: "It is a matter of serious import that, while we are wasting our wealth, energies and manhood in the South African desert, the Americans are steadily securing control of our industries. It is time the nation aroused itself to a sense of the gravity of its position."

Vicksburg Cut Off

Vicksburg, Miss., March 28.—Nearly eight inches of rainfall in the past 24 hours have almost isolated Vicksburg. Not a train on the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley road has entered or left the city since Wednesday, when one mail train left for New Orleans. This train succeeded in getting only as far as Port Gibson, 25 miles south, where it is still held, the tracks south of that point for two miles being washed away.

Danger In Shipping's Path

St. Johns, March 28.—The sealing steamer Leopard has just arrived here and reports terrible weather along the coast. Vessels from Europe with cargoes of salt report vast ice floes off Virgin Rock and the Grand Banks, directly in the track of Atlantic shipping. This is regarded as confirmation of the belief that the steamer Huronian was lost there.

Emperor Washes Feet

Vienna, March 28.—Emperor Francis Joseph yesterday performed at the Hofburg the traditional ceremony of washing the feet of 12 aged men, after which his majesty hung bags of money on the necks of the participants, whose aggregate age was 1070 years. The ages of 12 women recipients of the imperial maundy gifts aggregated 1182 years.

Russia Will Hold Manchuria

London, March 28.—In a dispatch from Moscow, the correspondent of The Daily Graphic gives an interview with a Russian staff officer who has returned from Amur, Siberia. The correspondent quotes this officer as saying that the Anglo-Japanese alliance has sealed the political destiny of Manchuria which, says the officer, will never pass out of Russia's possession.

Miners Will Be Out of Work

Massillon, O., March 28.—The Massillon Coal Mining company, the combine which recently obtained control of practically all the Massillon district mines, has announced that five of the mines are to be shut down on April 1. The shutdown is one of the first measures of economizing by the trust.

WAS CONGRESS BRIBED?

A Grave Charge That Half a Million Was Paid to Consummate Sale of Danish West Indies.

Washington, March 28.—At the session of the house yesterday Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, ordered as a matter of privilege a resolution for the appointment of a committee of seven to investigate the charges said to have been made by Dr. Walter Christmas, a semi-official representative of the government of Denmark, in a secret report to his government, in which it was made to appear that he was to receive $500,000 of the purchase money for the sale of the Danish West Indies for bribing newspapers and members of congress. The resolution was very long and detailed and its reading created great excitement on both sides of the house.

The Republican leaders hurriedly consulted during the reading of the resolution, and when the reading had been concluded, Mr. Payne, the majority leader, immediately made the point of order that the matter presented was not privileged. The basis of the resolution, Mr. Payne said, contemptously, was based upon an alleged secret report to the Danish government. Instantly Mr. Richardson met this with the statement that he had a copy of the secret report to the Danish government.

"When did the gentleman obtain access to the secret archives of the Danish government?" interposed Mr. Payne, sarcastically.

"I have never been to Denmark," retorted Mr. Richardson, "but the gentleman knows there are other ways of obtaining authentic government documents. I have the evidence here. This is a grave charge. I do not bring it here for the purpose of making political capital. Here is a charge that $500,000 was paid for the express purpose of bribing the American congress, yet the gentleman from New York seeks to interpose technical objection."

Speaker Henderson at this point called attention to the fact that the language of the resolution charged that newspapers and members of congress had been bribed. "Members of congress," he said, "did not necessarily include members of the house. If members of the senate, that body must be the custodian of its own morals." He thought if the resolution was to be privileged it should specifically include members of the house.

"I am prepared to say," replied Mr. Richardson, "that these charges do include members of the house and will amend the resolution to that extent." Speaker Henderson thereupon ruled that the matter presented was privileged.

"The gentleman having vouched for the authenticity of the charges," continued the speaker, "the chair holds that the matter is one of privilege and recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee."

By this time the interest in the house was intense. Almost every seat was occupied, and the members listened eagerly as Mr. Richardson proceeded to present his case. First, he read extracts from the press at Copenhagen.

These were followed by an affidavit from Neils Gron concerning his dealings with certain people here, but they were not particularly sensational. He proceeded to read Mr. Christmas' account of his interview with the prime minister of Denmark, in which he was said to have told the minister of the necessity for the use of money to bring the negotiations for the sale of the islands to a successful termination. He told of his acquaintance with Abner McKinley, President McKinley's brother, and his law partner, Colonel Brown, two men whom Mr. Christmas described as "having the entry to the White House and being familiar with the ways of American politics and what members of congress would have to be paid to accomplish the results desired."

The report then described how Mr. Christmas had enlisted not only President McKinley's brother and his partner, but two press associations, one in New York and one in Washington, and a prominent banking house in New York in the sale of the islands.

Mr. Richardson said that he did not charge that any senator or member of congress had been bribed. He had simply presented the allegations of this agent that money had to be used for bribing congressmen. The charges had been published in this country and abroad, he said, with the allegation that conditions in the United States were "simply horrible." He therefore proposed this inquiry so that each member could disclaim the charges so far as it affects him. Mr. Richardson said there was one unpardonable feature to the affair, in that the state department must have known of these charges and had not brought them to the attention of the senate prior to the ratification of the Danish treaty.

The house unanimously adopted the Richardson resolution, and Speaker Henderson appointed Representatives Dalzell, Hitt, Cousins, McCall, Richardson, Dinsmore and Cowherd as an investigation committee.

Schools of More Importance

New York, March 28.—Mayor Low yesterday sent to Governor Odell his veto of the bill authorizing municipal club houses for boys, declaring it would compel the city to spend $50,000 in trying an experiment that might or might not succeed. He also deemed it injurious for the city to make such an expenditure, when more school buildings were so badly needed.

Wound Up by Killing Herself

New York, March 28.—Mrs. Annie Isaacs committed suicide in a police station yesterday by drinking carbolic acid. The woman had been arrested after making an attempt to kill her husband by firing seven shots at him. She used two revolvers. She also fired a shot at the policeman who arrested her. Jealously is said to have caused the shooting.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Saturday, March 29.
Sun rises—5:34; sets—6:06.
Moon rises—11:32 p. m.
High water—2:45 a. m.; 3 p. m.

The pressure is low over the entire country between the two great mountain ranges. In the south portion of the middle gulf states the rainfall has been excessive, 7.40 inches having fallen at Vicksburg. The rivers of Alabama are rising rapidly. The southwest storm will probably move northeastward, extending Friday night and Saturday into New England. On the coast the winds will be fresh and probably brisk south.

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. Among the tens of thousands who have used it for the grip, not one case has ever been reported that did not recover. For sale by all druggists.

Drift of Opinion.

☞From our respectable lives of comfortable religion we look with scorn upon certain fanatics who, upholding peculiar ideas, are barred from our fellowship, and suffer the reproach of men. Their ideas may be distorted, but their self-denial and willing sacrifice of all that men hold dear, is heroic. No man is ridiculous who risks life or reputation for principle. —From sermon of Rev. Dr. Roderick Terry, at the South Reformed Church, New York, March 16.

☞The efforts of the Boston Elevated road to completely stamp out the spitting habit on its cars deserve the hearty approbation of every man, woman or child who values cleanliness above filth, and health above disease. We say habit advisedly, for every man or woman who has travelled has had occasiod to note the vast difference in the appearance of cars since the law has been invoked. To put cuspidores or any substitute for them into cars would only be a bid for a return to a filthy and disgusting practice and create a new source of nuisance to those patrons who would continually be stumbling over such uncalled for obstructions.—Waltham Free Press.

☞There are relatively few Boers left, and with peace declared, there would be such a movement of British subjects to the mines and fields of South Africa that the former owners of the land would be outnumbered and outvoted. It would then be an easy matter to transform the land into a crown colony, with the consent of the people. We see no hope for the Boers. They are bound to be overcome by the ballot, if not by the bullet, but it would be easier and cheaper to give them an honorable peace until such time as they shall cease to be the governing factor in their own land than to continue the very costly war operations that have so far utterly failed to subdue them.—Philadelphia Ledger.

☞The lower branch of the general court has passed a bill imposing a penalty upon the local tradesman who misrepresents his wares in an advertisment. If the bill should become a law, the marked-up "mark-down" sales would have to be abandoned, fire, smoke and water sales could no longer be padded out with fresh invoices, bargains would have to be deprived of half of the lustre which the skilful advertiser gives them, and retail trade would lose half of its enchantment for salesman and customer. What pleasure would there be left in the bargain sale for the average woman if goods were advertised for just what they were, and there was no opportunity left for her to use her knowledge and judgment in determining the valuable from the valueless and getting a good bargain? The fact is that the American shopper, if he or she does not like to be humbugged actually, as the showman declared, does enjoy the challenge of the humbug and the opportunity it gives the buyer to boast of ability to discover and capture a bargain.—Haverhill Gazette.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

A CHALLENGE.

To Be Issued to the Manchester Yacht Club.

The Quincy Cup Must Come Back.

Ex-Commodore H. M. Faxon Probably Building a Flyer.

An important meeting of the executive committee of the Quincy Yacht club was held Thursday evening. When it adjourned a challenge had been drawn up—which was forwarded to the Manchester Yacht club today—for a series of races under the provision of deed of gift and declaration of trust of the Quincy Yacht club challenge cup.

The cup will be raced for by ex-Commodore Henry M. Faxon who has been appointed as a representative of the Quincy club to meet a representative of the Manchester club to make the preliminary arrangements for a series of races.

The races will have to be sailed in Manchester waters the dates upon which they will be raced to be arranged by mutual agreement.

It has been reported for some weeks past that Mr. Faxon is building a boat to try and bring the cup back to Quincy, but he will not affirm or deny the report, but as the Hostess which defended the cup for two years is advertised for sale it looks as though a new boat was probable.

The first races for the challenge cup were sailed in 1898 when the cup was successfully defended by the Recruit.

The following year the freak Hostess was brought out and was again successful in defending the cup.

In 1900 several freak boats challenged for the cup, among them being the Lookout of Manchester, which was an enlarged Hostess. To her the Hostess surrendered, and the cup went to Manchester.

Last year was an off year, and there were no races for the cup. The Quincy club now think that Manchester has held the cup long eno ugh and will try and bring it back to Quincy.

PROSPEROUS YEAR.

The Quincy Point Church Free from Debt and Encouraged.

The annual parish meeting of the Washington Street Congregational society was held on Wednesday evening, t he 26th inst.

This was preceded by a supper served at 6.30 o'clock, prepared by the Ladies' Aid society. The supper was excellent, and a goodly number sat down to the tables, which were most attractive in appearance.

The parish meeting was called to order by the clerk, Mr. C. Webster Newcomb. The warrant was read, and Deacon T. H. Newcomb was elected moderator.

The official reports for the year 1901—02 were satisfactory and that of the treasurer Herbert D. Adams, was received with great manifestation of pleasure. One year ago the outlook for the society was dark. The book showed a debt, which seemed heavy. Wednesday night the society was practically out of debt, and this proved a cause for rejoicing. Thanks are due to several sources for this pleasant state of affairs, and to none more than to the Ladies' Aid society, which contributed more than $600 to the resources of the society, during the past twelve months. All glory to the Ladies' Aid society, the members of which have worked so hard, and so willingly.

The parish officers chosen for the ensuing year were as follows:

Clerk,—E. H. Bushnell, M. D.
Treasurer,—Mr. H. D. Adams.
Auditor—Mr. T. H. Newcomb.
Prudential Committee — Mr. T. B. Pollard, Mr. H. D. Adams, Deacon C. H. Sherburne.
Music Committee, —Mr. George A. Sidelinger, Mr. T. B. Pollard, Mrs. R. H. Newcomb.

Mr. C. Webster Newcomb felt that he had won glory enough as clerk during the past three years, and refused to serve again.

Mr. Marcus E. Wight, who had been chairman of the music committee for several years, would not have his name used again. He has also resigned his position as chorister, which he has filled so acceptably for a number of years, and will serve in that capacity, but one more Sabbath.

Mr. Wight has been connected with the choir as member and chorister for a period of eighteen years—and in spite of the limited amount of money which the society has spent for music he has been able to make this portion of the Sunday services enjoyable to all. Thanks are due him for the time he has devoted to the music and the interest he has taken in its preparation.

It is hoped that in view of the great enterprise, the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. that a sufficient number of people may swell the membership of the church to make it a power in the community and one of the strongest in the city. T. B. Pollard.

A special meeting of the Shool Committee was called Thursday evening to further examination the plans for the proposed school building at Quincy Point, and to take action on the rules and regulations of the Committee.

Several of the new cars of the Old Colony street railway have arrived and one of them is already in service on the Brockton route. The cars are extra large and are provided with vestibules. They also have illuminated signs on front giving their destination.

New Clothing Store.

The new clothing store of the F. D. Fellows Co. opened for business today in the Adams building, and the freshness of the goods is evidence that they are newly made. The proprietor assures us that all the clothing was made this spring, including dress suits and business suits for gentlemen, nobby top coats, rain coats, for young men, pretty blouse suits for boys, hats in all styles, stylish neckwear, etc. A pretty window display is made. Many palms and Easter lilies from Patterson's greenhouses add their attractions. The store has been brightened considerably, and is light and attractive.

At Work Again.

The striking coal handlers at J. F. Sheppard & Sons Quincy yards, returned to work Thursday afternoon. That is, all but five. These five, it is said, the strikers' committee were unable to notify. They however, reported for work this morning but were told their services were not needed.

Fatal Accident.

Domanico Riccio, an Italian employed by the National Construction Co. on the section of the Metropolitan sewer on Upland road, was struck in the head by a travelling derrick at 5.30 Thursday afternoon and knocked in the treuch. He was removed to the City Hospital where it was learned he had sustained three fractures of the skull. He died at 2.30 this morning. Riccio lived at 50 South Walnut street and has three children in Italy.

Explanation.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

In your paper of March 26, about the strike at Sheppard's, I saw an item that said I was hired to do odd jobs around the wharf. I wish to state that the stableman came after me to drive a team and that is all the kind of work I have done for the Sheppard firm. Tuesday morning the bookkeeper told me that there was no work that day, but did not tell me I was discharged. Hoping this may find room in your paper, I remain, yours etc.,

Herbert F. Caldwell.

Tree Climbers Fined.

Andrew McDonnell and James Connolly the two linemen arrested by Officer Murray Thursday for climbing trees with spurs, were fined $3 each for the offense in court this morning. In addition to this it cost the men $2 each to get bailed out of the station. This with their counsel fee will cost them enough so that they and others will think twice before they climb trees with spurs in the future.

Smallpox In Dowie Headquarters

Chicago, March 28.—Discovery of a case of smallpox in the building occupied by John A. Dowie as a college, chapel, hotel and publication office of Leaves of Healing, resulted in 173 Dowieites being quarantined there yesterday. Even if no new cases of the disease shall develop these followers of Dowie and nearly a score of servants employed in the place will not be allowed to leave it for 20 days.

May Cost State $45,000

Frankfort, Ky., March 28.—Suit has been filed by Captain Cochran for a mandamus to compel the governor and adjutant general to approve a claim of $7000 for service of the Mason county company of the State Guards in guarding state officials during the political trouble of 1900. If this claim shall be upheld by the courts, the state will have to pay the soldiers camped here at that time about $45,000.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Property of John Masson & Co., the polishers, will be sold by the receiver, tomorrow.

—If a girl has a handsome set of teeth she never worries about her mouth being big.

MAY BE SETTLED.

Proposition Expected from the Quarrymen Tonight.

The strike situation in the quarry district remains unchanged although there is a prospect of a settlement this week.

A representative of the State Board of Arbitration visited Quincy on Thursday night and held a conference with the quarrymen. What transpired at this conference is not known other than, he was informed that the union would hold a meeting tonight, at which it is possible that another conference between the two committees will be arranged.

The State Board had also planned to come to Quincy this afternoon for a conference with the quarry owners. This morning they sent word that as a result of Thursday night's meeting they would postpone their visit until after the meeting of the Union.

The report of what transpired at Thursday morning's meeting of the quarrymen at which five of the non-union men were present, as published in the Boston papers is denied by the non-union men.

Thursday, Chief Hayden detailed special officers for duty at the house where the non-union men are quartered, and they are on duty night and day to prevent any possible trouble.

Considerable comment has been made over the appointment of five of the non-union men as constables by Mayor Bryant and the legality of their appointment has been questioned.

City Solicitor Blackmur, however has ruled that the appointment was legal. He says that the men came to Quincy to work and reside, and as, their intentions were to become residents their appointment was legal.

CITY BREVITIES.

Showers are predicted.

Wanted—a pleasant Easter.

A complete illustrated story in the Ledger tomorrow.

Rev. Frank Pratt entertained his Sunday school class Thursday afternoon.

The mortgagee's sale of apartment house on Revere road to have taken place Thursday was postponed one week.

On Thursday evening at the "Greenleaf Whist Club," the first prize was awarded to Miss R. E. Bowley of Provincetown.

The foundation for the new street railway car barn on the east side of Hancock street near Merrymount park is about completed.

Charles H. Johnson will be one of the speakers at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Truant Officers' association at Fitchburg on Tuesday, April 8.

It is said that the new registry for Norfolk county, as planned, is too expensive and cannot be built within the appropriation authorized. Changes will be made.

Mrs. Mary W. Finney and Miss Susan D. Richmond of Middleboro are guests of Mrs. Howard G. Hinkley of Standish avenue, who gave a reception to Mrs. Finney, Thursday evening, the occasion being her sixtieth birthday.

Representative McKnight voted on Thursday against the MacCartney bill to provide for the ownership and operation of street railways by the state or cities. Representative Badger was not recorded. There were 61 votes in favor of the bill to 98 opposed.

The case of Charles M. Bryant vs. Inhabitants of Weymouth was reached Thursday in the Norfolk Superior court and the jury has taken a view of the premises. It is an action for the assessment of damages arising from changes of grade of Washington stret at Weymouth.

Mrs. Harry E. Winslow entertained the Entre Nous whist club, Wednesday afternoon, at her home on Edwards street. After the play a dainty lunch was served. Prizes for best scores were taken by Mrs. A. F. Pratt of East Weymouth and Mrs. George F. Spooner of Quincy while the consolation went to Mrs. Shirley Nutting.

Judge Henry C. Mulligan of Natick has been engaged to deliver the address at the High school graduation exercises in June. Judge Mulligan is a graduate of one of the early classes at Adams Academy, and was valedictorian of his class at Harvard. He has been a member of the school committee of Natick for eighteen years, seventeen of which he has been chairman.

Detained.

The police were asked by telephone shortly before noon today to take charge of a young man who was acting in a strange manner at Squantum. Inspector McKay went down and brought him to the police station. The man, who is evidently demented, is Martin Ford, of 139 Grove street, Waltham. He is being held awaiting the arrival of the Waltham police who have been notified.

THE MAKING OF A FAIR.

Work Progressing on the Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

[Special Correspondence.]

ST. LOUIS, March 17.—If Uncle Sam's exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase exposition is not the most complete and elaborate that he has ever shown, it will be no fault of the national commission, of which former Senator Thomas H. Carter of Montana is chairman. The commission is already bestirring itself vigorously to the end that the government display may be fully commensurate with the greatness of the nation. The suggestion recently made that a part of the government exhibit be distributed among the classified exhibits does not meet the approval of either the government board or the national commission. They insist that all government exhibits shall be retained in the government building, as the proposed distribution would detract from the impressiveness of the display as a whole.

Governor Taft of the Philippine commission has informed Chairman Carter that the Philippines exhibit will be second only to that of the United States government itself, that the appropriation of $250,000 already made for the purpose will be increased if necessary, that an exclusive building will be erected for the exhibit and that as soon as his other duties at Washington will permit he will take up the matter with the government board and the national commission and will probably visit St. Louis to confer with the exposition authorities and secure the requisite space.

John Mellowes of Porto Rico's board of education writes enthusiastically from Mayaguez, one of the principal cities of the interesting island: "I can assure you that Mayaguez will be the foremost to contribute of her best to guarantee the successful carrying on of the exposition. The insular legislature has appropriated $30,000 for the purpose of displaying the products of this island at this the greatest exposition on record. The island of Porto Rico intends to take a prominent part in it. We are fully alive to the importance of the event, and commissions are being formed all over the island to send a creditable exhibit."

The National Education association asks congress for an appropriation of $25,000 for a national educational exhibit at the St. Louis world's fair and will appear before the house committee on industrial arts and exposition to press the matter. It is no more than was appropriated to enable the association to prepare a government educational exhibit at the Columbian exposition.

Professor F. H. H. Roberts of the University of Wyoming, who is in charge of the preparation of Wyoming's educational exhibit at the world's fair, says they will be the most complete educational display ever undertaken by a western state.

The Mexican Herald of recent date reports that Senator Carlos Rivas, Ignacio L. de la Barra, Judge Jesus F. Uriarto and Nicholas Ramirez de Arellano have been appointed a world's fair committee for the federal district of Mexico. The Herald says: "That Mexico is fully determined to be well represented at the St. Louis exposition is proved by the earnestness and earliness with which preparations have been commenced. This applies to the country at large."

SENATOR THOMAS H. CARTER.
[Chairman of the national commission for the Louisiana Purchase exposition.]

The contract for the textiles building has been awarded by the grounds and buildings committee of the exposition to Dunnavant & Estel of Omaha for $319,399, the work to be finished by Oct. 15, 1902, under a penalty of $500 for each day of delay. The building is to be 600 by 525 feet and the area covered by the roof 246,000 square feet.

The exposition authorities are giving appreciative consideration to the suggestions they are receiving from the aero clubs and aeronautic experts in regard to the aeronautic contests at the world's fair. One of the recent communications received was from Major F. C. Trollope of the London Aero club. He thinks there will be "an enormous amount of entries of air vehicles of all sizes, shapes, weights, carrying capacity and lifting power."

The Travelers' Protective association will pay the compliment to the Louisiana Purchase exposition of erecting the first building ever constructed for the use of a traveling men's organization at a world's fair. It is estimated that the cost and maintenance of the building will be about $100,000.

Two more of the big exhibit buildings, the varied industries building and the textiles palace, the aggregate cost of which is $1,000,000, are under contract to be completed before the 1st day of October, 1902. Subcontracts on these buildings are being let by the principal contractors, and the contractors for the excavations and foundations are already at work.

"A HIGH OLD TIME."
—New York Journal.

FUNSTON'S METHODS

By Which Aguinaldo Was Captured Sharply Criticised In the Senate

Washington, March 28.—In the senate yesterday Mr. Patterson called attention to an Associated Press dispatch from Topeka, published yesterday, in which General Funston was quoted as criticising some eastern newspapers because of their comment upon his recent speech before the Lotos club, in New York. He said that he would not notice the statement but for the fact that Funston called to his aid the president and the chairman of the senate committee on Philippines, representing them as endorsing his speech.

Mr. Patterson said it was evident that Funston's speech was to be used for campaign purposes and he thought, therefore, that two things ought to be brought calmly and dispassionately to the attention of the country—first, Funston's own statement of the character of Aguinaldo made in a magazine article last October, and second, the rules of civilized warfare regarding deception of the enemy.

Mr. Patterson then read at length the provisions of warfare relating to spies and the use of deception, and read extensively from Funston's magazine article, his point being that Funston had violated the articles of warfare in deceiving the Filipinos at the time he captured Aguinaldo, despite his statement now that he had not done so.

In conclusion, Mr. Patterson said that all authorities upon international law and the articles of civilized warfare declared that the use of the enemy's uniform was not warranted and that a man in an enemy's uniform who killed another man was guilty of assassination and outside the pale of protection.

The remainder of the day was taken up with discussion of the oleomargarine bill.

Frauds Want Sentences Modified

Muncie, Ind., March 28.—Friends of Charles N. W. Neely say that an appeal may be made to the federal government, which will be called upon to ask the government of Cuba to modify the severity of his sentence. It is felt that if the United States government could be induced to make a request of this kind the Cubans could do little but comply. All the convicted men have powerful friends at home who are to be used in the appeal to the United States to intervene. Absolute pardon probably will not be asked.

A GREAT SURPRISE

Is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER XVI.

NO special incident marked this journey on the lake. Nadia had remained in a profound stupor.

Sleep had only overpowered Michael Strogoff at long intervals, and still his thoughts were ever watching over her.

At daybreak the raft, retarded by a somewhat strong breeze which was blowing against the action of the current, was still forty versts from the mouth of the Angara. Most likely they would not be able to reach it before 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

This was not an inconvenience; rather the contrary, for the fugitives would then descend the river during the night, and the darkness would favor their arrival at Irkutsk.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the mouth of the Angara was signaled by the old mariner between the high granite rocks of the coast. One could perceive on the right bank the little port of Livenitchnaia, its church, its few houses built on the steep.

But there was a grave circumstance. The first floating ice that had come from the east was already forming between the banks of the Angara and hence descending toward Irkutsk.

However, their number could not as yet be great enough to obstruct the river nor the cold severe enough to unite them into one mass.

The raft arrived at the little port and stopped there for a short time. The old mariner had decided to put into port for an hour in order to make some indispensable repairs. The trunks, having become loose, threatened to separate from one another, and it was of great importance to rebind them more firmly together that they might resist the current of the Angara, which is very rapid.

The old sailor did not, therefore, expect any more fugitives at the port of Livenitchnaia, and yet at the moment the raft was leaving the shore two men, coming out of a deserted house, ran with great haste to the bank.

Nadia, sitting at the back part of the raft, looked at them in a listless manner.

A cry was about to escape her. She seized the hand of Michael Strogoff, who at that moment raised his head.

"What is the matter with you, Nadia?" he asked.

"Our two fellow travelers, Michael—that Frenchman and that Englishman whom we met in the defiles of the Ural mountains."

"Yes."

Michael Strogoff shuddered, for the strict incognito from which he did not wish to depart was in danger of being unveiled.

And in reality it was not any longer Nicholas Korpanoff whom Alcide Jolivet and Harry Blount were about to see in him now, but the true Michael Strogoff, the courier of the czar. The journalists had already met him twice since their separation at the posthouse of Ichim—the first time at the camp of Zabedeiro, when he cut with the blow of the knout the face of Ivan Ogareff, the second time at Tomsk, when he was condemned by the emir. They knew therefore what to think of him and his true position as courier of the czar.

Michael Strogoff quickly took up his part.

"Nadia," said he, "when that Frenchman and Englishman shall come on board beg them to come up to me."

They were indeed Harry Blount and Alcide Jolivet, whom not chance, but the force of events, had conducted to the port of Livenitchnaia, just as they had led Michael Strogoff.

The reader knows that after having been present at the triumphal entry of the Tartars into Tomsk they had gone away before the savage execution which terminated the feast. They had no doubt but their old fellow traveler had been put to death, and they were quite unaware that he had been only made blind by order of the emir.

Then, having procured horses, they had abandoned Tomsk that very night, with the fixed intention of dating henceforth their articles from Russian camps of eastern Siberia.

Alcide Jolivet and Harry Blount set out for Irkutsk by forced marches. They had great hopes of outstripping Feofar-Khan, and most certainly they would have done so had not a third column unexpectedly made its appearance, having come from the southern provinces of the Yenisei. Like Michael Strogoff, they were cut off before having even reached the Dinka. Hence they were again compelled to go down as far as Lake Baikal.

When they arrived at Livenitchnaia, the port was already deserted. On any other side it was impossible for them to enter Irkutsk, which was invested by the Tartar armies.

They had been there for three days, and very much embarrassed, when the raft arrived.

The design of the fugitives was communicated to them. There was certainly some chance of their being able to pass during the night and penetrate into Irkutsk. They therefore resolved to make the attempt.

Alcide Jolivet at once placed himself in communication with the old mariner and asked passage for his companion and himself, offering to pay the fare he fixed, whatever it might be.

"Here one does not pay anything," gravely answered the old mariner. "One risks his life; that is all."

The two journalists embarked, and Nadia saw them take their place in the fore part of the raft.

Harry Blount was always the cold Englishman who had scarcely addressed a word to her during the whole journey across the Ural mountains. Alcide Jolivet seemed a little more grave than usual, and one would acknowledge that his gravity was justified by that of the circumstances.

Alcide Jolivet was then installed on the fore part of the raft, when he felt a hand rest on his arm. He turned round and recognized Nadia, the sister of him who was no longer Nicholas Korpanoff, but Michael Strogoff, courier of the czar. A cry of surprise was about to escape him when he saw the young girl place her finger on her lips.

"Come," said Nadia to him.

And, assuming an air of indifference, Alcide Jolivet, making a sign to Harry Blount to accompany him, followed her.

But if the surprise of the journalists was great at meeting Nadia on that raft it was without limits when they perceived Michael Strogoff, whom they could not believe to be still alive. Michael Strogoff had not moved at their approach.

Alcide Jolivet had turned himself toward the young girl.

"Gentlemen, he does not see you," said the young girl. "The Tartars have burned out his eyes! My poor brother is blind!"

A deep feeling of pity was pictured on the face of Alcide Jolivet and his companion.

An instant afterward both of them, seated near Michael Strogoff, warmly shook his hands and waited for him to speak.

Nothing For the Press

Kansas City, Kan., March 28.—The trial of Rev. Granville Lowther, on a charge of heresy, was begun here yesterday before 11 Kansas Methodist ministers. Bishop Mallalieu of Boston, who presided, stated that as the newspapers were after the sensational features, the trial would be held in secret. He warned those concerned that not a word should be be said outside for the press.

Important, If True

Paris, March 28.—The Figaro this morning says it has strong reason to believe that an interview is about to take place between Lord Rosebery, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Duke of Devonshire and other Liberal leaders who are now in Paris, and Dr. Leyds, the European representative of the Transvaal. The Figaro says Dr. Leyds reached Paris from Brussels last night.

Convicted of Bribery

St. Louis, March 28.—Emil A. Meysenburg, a member of the house of delegates, was convicted of bribery in connection with the surburban street railway franchise extension last night, after a trial lasting four days, and his punishment fixed at three years in the penitentiary.

Conviction Under Pure Liquor Law

Duluth, March 28.—The Minnesota dairy and food department has scored its first conviction under the pure liquor law. Henry Savage has been convicted of selling impure whiskey, and 40 other prosecutions are pending, awaiting the decision in the Savage case.

RETALIATORY MEASURE

Which Will Prove a Strong Dose For Germans

BORAX-TREATED ARTICLES

Will Be Excluded From Our Imports, Which Will Put Up Bars Against the Chief Products of the Kaiser's Domain to a Great Extent

Washington, March 28.—While no policy has been defined as to the course this government will pursue in meeting the new exclusion law of the Germans, all the measures that appear to be praticable probably will be adopted. The matter so far is only in the preliminary stage, but yesterday it progressed so far that facts and figures bearing on the trade and the articles of import from Germany which may be available for imposition of similar restrictions are now ready for submission to the president and his advisors.

The department of agriculture has been gathering these facts, and a list of articles found to be treated with borax or other preservatives against which has been laid the charge that they are injurious, has been completed, and the question of policy will be given serious consideration very shortly.

The articles that first will be considered along this line are sausages, wines, beers and delicatessen. A large percent of these, among other things, have been found to contain preservatives such as might cause them to be barred on the same theory as that adopted by the Germans. The United States has been excluding for some time artices containing salicylic acid and another acid clearly proved to be injurious, but the enforcement of these conclusions undoubtedly will be made even more rigorous. The German view of the deleteriousness of borax will be accepted and used for meeting their exclusions, and other regulations in all probability will be adopted barring stuffs treated with other preservatives.

Whatever restrictions on articles are decided upon, it is likely that Germany will be not specifically referred to, though the articles selected will be such as affect mostly the imports from Germany.

Payne Proposition Wins

Washington, March 28.—Representative Babcock of the ways and means committee called at the White House yesterday in response to a request from the president. It was discovered that the committee stands 8 to 8, as between the Payne and Tawney Cuban reciprocity propositions, and that Mr. Babcock, who has been absent on account of illness, held the deciding vote. After the interview it was stated that Mr. Babcock would vote for the Payne proposition.

Chairman Babcock to Resign

Washington, March 28.—Chairman Babcock, of the Republican congressional committee, yesterday informed President Roosevelt that owing to ill health he desired to relinquish the chmairmanship of the committee and that he would be glad if the pres'dent would suggest some one to take his place.

The Venezuelan Revolution

Willemstad, March 28.—The Venezuelan government has received a report to the effect that General Varela has defeated the revolutionists under Montilla in the state of Coro, who have been trying to effect a junction with General Riera and his forces. General Riera is also said to have suffered heavy losses at the hands of the government forces.

More Insurgents to Surrender

Manila, March 28.—General Guevarra, who succeeded General Lukban as insurgent leader in Samar, has signified his intention of surrendering to the American authorities. It has been arranged between General Smith and Guevarra that the latter with the force under his command will surrender April 15.

Preaches to Fellow Prisoners

Ardmore, I. T., March 28.—Rev. E. Lamar, the Holiness preacher, who shot and killed Colvin VanWinkle in front of his church at Cumberland Sunday night, has been placed in jail here to await the action of the grand jury. He refuses to make a statement and spends his time preaching to his fellow prisoners.

Journeying Toward London

Vienna, March 28.—Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, passed through Vienna last night on her way to London. Miss Stone appeared to have recovered from the effect of her captivity better than was expected by those who saw her at the time of her release.

No Americans Stricken

Manila, March 28.—It is believed that the cholera here has abated. The cases recorded yesterday are of a milder form, and Americans here have ceased to be alarmed concerning the outbreak. The disease has been entirely confined to natives and Chinamen.

Methuen's Guns With Delarey

Pretoria, March 28.—The four guns taken by the Boers when General Methuen was captured are still in General Delarey's hands. Those recaptured by Colonel Kekewich are the guns lost at the time of the Von Donop disaster.

MAY ORDER A STRIKE

Rhode Island Manufacturers Have Ignored Request of Spinners

Pawtucket, R. I., March 28.—The quarterly meeting of the Rhode Island Mule Spinners' union, held here last night, was of more than usual interest, in that a readjustment and increase of wages was the chief topic discussed. There was an attendance of over 300, composed of representatives from every branch in the state. At a meeting held a week ago it was decided to request the various mill owners that wages be advanced 10 percent, that a reply be sent them by last night, and that the said increase go into effect on March 31.

The majority of the manufacturers did not reply and such answers as were in hand contained no definite assurances of the desired concessions.

Since nothing definite could be done it was decided to hold a special general meeting Sunday afternoon, when a strike may be ordered if the request for the desired increase is not granted.

Whale Sunk Whaler

New Bedford, Mass., March 28.—News was received here yesterday by the agents of whaling bark Kathleen that she had been sunk at sea by a whale. Captain Jenkins cables from Pernambuco, Brazil, that three of the four boats have arrived at that place. The missing boat contains nine men. The captain's wife and all the officers were among those who got to land safely. The Kathleen was valued at $12,000. She sailed from this port on a whaling voyage last October.

Will Be Greatly Missed

Boston, March 28.—The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions yesterday received a cablegram announcing the death of Rev. Edward Chester M. D., at Dindigul, India. Dr. Chester was born in New York city in 1828. He had been a missionary of the American board in India since 1858. Dr. Chester was prominent in municipal affairs at Dingigul for a generation, his advice being constantly sought by the mayor and his council.

Coroner's Action Didn't Suit

Providence, March 28.—An unlooked for incident occurred yesterday in the Simon White inquest, which began Wednesday at Burrillville, when Coroner Grabger was deposed by order of the town council and Dr. H. J. Bruce elected to succeed him. The methods employed by the coroner in his conduct of the inquest were displeasing to the town council. The inquest was then begun anew and testimony of much importance was adduced.

Grand Jury May Investigate

Portland, Me., March 28.—It is said that every person who was present at an interview between the liquor dealers and Sheriff Pearson, Tuesday, will be summoned before the grand jury, that statements about bribery of liquor deputies may be cleared up. "I have confidence in my deputies," the sheriff says, "but if there is one of them who has received money or gifts of any sort from a rumseller, he shall be punished."

Patrolman Over Half a Century

Boston, March 28.—Patrolman John M. Penniman, who is the oldest police officer in point of service in the city, if not in the country, was today retired from service at his own request and pensioned at the rate of $600 per year. Mr. Penniman was born in Moultonboro, N. H., in 1822, and in 1847 was appointed to the old Boston night watch, having served on the police force continually since until today.

Plum Long Overlooked

Hartford, March 28.—Politicians of this state have just discovered that for 20 years the office of state inspector of gas meters has been unfilled. The law authorizing the governor to make such an appointment was passed in 1883, but not a governor since that year seemed to be aware that he had such a political plum to give. The discovery was made by Hartford's city attorney.

Stone Was on the Track

Northampton, Mass., March 28.—By the derailment of a train, consisting of an engine and one car, near Haydenville yesterday, caused by a stone on the track, Conductor Chandler, Michael Mansfield and a travelling sales man, together with Engineer Watson and Fireman Waltermeyer, were more or less injured, though none fatally.

Free Transfer Bill a Law

Providence, March 28.—The street railroad free transfer bill, which has been an important factor in municipal politics for some months, yesterday passed the lower branch of the general assembly, thereby becoming a law. There has been a great deal of opposition to the passage of the bill.

Running With Half a Force

Laconia, N. H., March 28.—The strike among the knitters in the hosiery mill of Tilton & Co. in this city is still on, the operatives declining to resume work at the old wage rate of 4½ cents a dozen, the demand being 5 cents a dozen. The plant is running about one-half its capacity.

Barge Sunk Off Newport

Newport, R. I., March 28.—Barge Venney, coal laden, from New York for New Bedford, broke away from tug Joseph Stickney yesterday when near Castle Hill, and foundered in 15 fathoms of water. Her crew of three were rescued with some difficulty.

For Abolition of Death Penalty

Boston, March 28.—The joint committee on judiciary reported the Howland bill for the abolition of the death penalty to the legislature yesterday. The committee consists of 16 members and seven of them appeared as dissenters.

The Social Realm.

Beneath a dull and threatening sky
With March winds coldly sweeping by,
I sought the fragrant buds so dear,
First offering of the vernal year.
O Easter skies be bright and fair!
Lilies your perfumed incense bear,
Swing bells, and chimes exultant ring!
Ye choirs, your glorious anthems sing.
And when life's pain and grief are o'er,
When sin's dark shadows fall no more,
May we eternal praises sing
To Christ, our risen Lord and King.
—Emily A. Brownell.

The engagement is announced of Miss Bessie Carter of South street, and Rev. Leon H. Austin, pastor of the Congregational church, Quincy Point.

* * *

Miss Carrie E. Small of Merrymount road will be the hostess at the meeting of the Friday club next week and Mrs. George W. Morton will have charge of the literary program. English inventions, discoveries and industries at the close of the 18th century will make up a most solid program.

* * *

The Eliot club met at Mrs. Charles Seavey's home, Thursday afternoon. The subject was "Original Magazines", and the entertainment concluded with a play given by Mr. and Mrs. Seavey and Mrs. Nickerson.

* * *

The Junior Friday club will be entertained on Monday afternoon at the home of its president, Miss Edith Randall, of Coddington boulevard. The literary program will be under the direction of Mrs. Arthur W. Hall.

* * *

Mr. Thomas Feary of Spear street is in California.

* * *

The Society editor does not care to insert anything of an adevrtising nature in the social realm column preferring to keep it strictly for social happenings. Anything stating hours, price, etc., of entertainments or mercantile anouncements will not be inserted at any price. Other items of an advertising nature will be charged twenty-five cents, a line seven ordinary words the average for a line.

* * *

One of the most important of the recent engagements, says the New York Journal, is that of Miss Lillian Vennard Lichtenhein to Mr. H. Rutherford Gabay. Miss Lichtenhein is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Edward Lichtenhein of 255 West One Hundred and Thirty-first street. She is an exceptionally talented young woman and a great favorite in the smart set of the West Side. Mr. Gabay, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gabay, is a graduate of Cornell University, and a member of the New York Athletic Club. No date has been set as yet for the wedding. Miss Lichtenhein is a niece of Mrs. Charles A. Winslow and has made many friends while visiting in Quincy.

Miss Emily F. Baxter of East Milton is spending a few days at Littleton, Mass.

* * *

Mrs. Timothy Reed of Adams street, who has been ill for several weeks is much better and hopes soon to be about as usual.

Col. Edward Anderson was the guest Monday night of Dr. and Mrs. Horace M. Willard at the Quincy Mansion school and spoke in Livermore hall on his war experience, to a large audience of teachers, students and friends. Col. Anderson was as bright and entertaining as usual and captivated all his hearers.

Mrs. W. T. Babcock finds time to do considerable literary work. In the last two numbers of the Boston Budget she has two interesting articles one "A Visit to the Boston Art club's galleries" and the other "Seen in Germany" which are very interesting reading. Mrs. Babcock is to also review the next exhibit of the Art club in April as her criticisms were most pleasing to the club.

* * *

April third marks the eightieth milestone in the life of Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D. D, well known and beloved by many and the day will be observed fittingly not only by the parishioners of the South Congregational church of Boston, but by citizens of every sect and creed. Exercises are to be held at Symhony hall. Among organizations cooperating will be: The American Unitarian society, Loyal Legion, Harvard and Dartmouth colleges, Boston Latin school, Massachusetts Historical society, Hampton Normal school, Tuskegee Institute, Chamber of Commerce, the Bostonian society, Twentieth Century club, Sons of the American Revolution, Hale club, Merchants' club, American Antiquarian society, Lend-a-Hand society and the newspapers.

* * *

Mrs. Francis T. Mackedon has been the guest this week of her sisters, in Holbrook.

* * *

A subcription tea and musicale in aid of the Floating hospital has been arranged for early April at Whitney hall, Brookline. Among those to assist are Mrs. George B. Rice and her daughter Mrs. Harry Whitcomb Porter.

* * *

Although the next meeting of the Tawasentha club falls on Tuesday evening April 1st, the meeting will not be a frivolous one and the study of English history A. D. 1830 to 1837, will be continued under the direction of Mrs. Ezekiel C. Sargent, Mrs. Arthur W. Ryder and Mr. Charles W. Miller. Sir Robert Peel and Thackery will also be subject of papers.

* * *

Mrs. C. W. Moore and her niece, Miss Alta Rowe will spend Easter with C. W. Moore of East Pepperell, Mass.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Fryer of 16 Edson street arrived home yesterday after a delightful trip to Buffalo and Niagara.

* * *

The farce "Ici on parle Francais" as presented at Quincy Music hall next week Friday night under the management of Mr. Emery L. Crane will be exceedingly funny. In the cast are: Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Mrs. A. F. Schenkelberger, Miss Georgiana Lane, Miss Burgess, Mr. Edward Angier, Mr. James F. Harlow and Mr. Crane, all well known and always good. In the vaudeville which follows are: Mrs. Henry M. Faxon, Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Miss Rhines, Master Findlay, Mr. Angier, Mr. Crane and a chorus of sixteen ladies.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Adams who have been spending the winter in Washington have returned to the presidential mansion on Adams street.

* * *

Miss Bertha Beal spent her vacation with her grandmother, Mrs. Frances Jermyn of Hingham.

* * *

The Parliamentary Practice club of the Monday club of Weymouth will meet in the Fogg library next Tuesday afternoon.

* * *

Many councils of the Knights of Columbus in different parts of the State announce balls for Easter Monday night but few will excel in brilliancy the annual party of Quincy Council to be held in Music hall on that date. Concert from 8 to 9, and dancing from 9 until 3. Late cars will be run on all routes.

A SLIDING SCALE.

To Be Submitted by Quarrymen's Union to Quarry Owners.

A Proposition Which Should be Accepted and Bring Quarry Strike to an End.

Will Give an Eight Hour Day in 1905--To Work Nine Hours for Five Months This Year,

The Quincy Quarrymen's Union held a largely attended meeting last night, and as a result the indications are that the strike will be declared off and the men return to work next Monday.

The meeting was held to consider a proposition for settlement which had been submitted by a disinterested party who is supposed to have been Mr. Barry of the State Board of Arbitration.

The proposition, which was accepted by the quarrymen, and which will be submitted to the quarry owners sometime today, is to continue in force for three years. The proposition is on a basis of an eight-hour day with nine hours pay. The quarrymen agree to work nine hours for five months this year, nine hours for four months in 1903 and nine hours for two months in 1904 and eight hours for the balance of each of these years with nine hours pay for the whole year.

Also that as soon as Barre concedes an eight-hour day throughout the year Quincy shall do the same. The quarry owners committee when seen this morning refused to say what action they would be likely to take, but as the proposition is very much like that made by the quarry owners, it is believed the proposition will be accepted. Should it be accepted work will be resumed in all of the quarries Monday morning.

NOT ENCOURACING AT BARRE.

The Quarry Owners Say Demands of Quarrymen's Union Is Out of the Question.

[Special to the Daily Ledger.]

Barre, Vt., March 29—The quarry owners of Barre and vicinity held a meeting last evening and further considered the impending strike. They would like to avert it, if possible, but as one of the manufacturers stated, the association simply cannot grant the demands of the union. An eight-hour day means more than an increase of wages. It means a great loss in production. Probably three times as much work can be done in two hours as one hour, and if the proportion holds good the public can well understand the position of those who work quarries.

The Husk OF..... Affluence

... By ...
HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1901, by Charles W. Hooke

THERE was a bustling crowd of young people at the gate, and Ellsworth, with his ticket in his hand, stepped aside to wait till the way should be clearer. Immediately he became aware of a tall girl in a long, dark blue coat of a very rich fabric. The garment was lined throughout with ermine, as Ellsworth presently perceived, and the gown beneath it was a wonder, both for value and beauty.

The girl was more than pretty, with golden hair and bright blue eyes, and her aspect was modest as the violet's, but she was certainly overdressed, considering that she was attending an ordinary theatrical performance. It was a relief, however, to observe that she displayed no jewels.

It may have required ten seconds for Ellsworth to take note of so much as has been described. Then his attention was diverted to the young lady's escort, who seemed to have been separated from her for a moment by the press and now came hastily forward. He was a gentleman upward of fifty years old, slenderly made and with an air of feeble protest against things in general. This aspect of gentle dissatisfaction, dwelling in the plaintive wrinkles of his fine old face and in the weak droop of his gray mustache, was his most notable characteristic, if one might judge upon the first glance.

She was certainly overdressed.

He was in evening dress and wore a somewhat unique outer garment in the form of an opera cloak lined with Persian lamb of an exceptionally rich quality. Even the conventional evening clothes beneath the cloak revealed indefinably an excessive fastidiousness.

"I wonder who these people can be," said Ellsworth to himself as he followed them into the theater.

They were not within his view during the performance except when he closed his eyes. At such times he could see the girl's face quite plainly; indeed, with a trifling effort he could summon up the two figures just as they had appeared in the bright light of the foyer.

Ellsworth was a young man of good social position and wide acquaintance, and he had a knack of remembering names and faces. He said to himself that he ought to have seen those people somewhere, unless they were strangers in the city, and they had not the air of strangers. Altogether his curiosity was considerably excited.

When the play was done, he went to the side entrance, where he paused under the portico. Greatly to his surprise, he found that a heavy rain was falling, though the early evening had been beautifully clear. There were not half a dozen umbrellas among the audience, and the advance guard stood shivering at the doors like bathers on the edge of a chilly stream.

He beckoned to a cabman.

Ellsworth beckoned to a cabman, and just at that moment the old gentleman in the opera cloak came timidly forward. Evidently he had not seen Ellsworth's gesture, for he met the dripping cabby at the edge of the portico and straightway began to negotiate with him. The first few words were not audible to Ellsworth, but he presently heard the cabby say, "Two dollars," in a tone of firm decision.

The old gentleman was fumbling in his pockets, addressing the jehu meanwhile with soft persuasion, but the answer was still, "Two dollars." At this juncture the young lady, who had been standing just behind Ellsworth, stepped forward and said: "It doesn't matter at all. We can take a car just as well."

Ellsworth viewed this scene with amazement. There was not the slightest suggestion of the "shabby genteel" about these people. Their apparel was not only elegant and costly, but it was obviously new. Ellsworth would have taken his oath that every visible thing they wore was of the current season's making, and $3,000 would not have paid the bill. The miraculous little hat on the young lady's head must have cost a hundred and fifty, and it wouldn't be worth 9 cents if she should walk to the street car with it through such a rain. Yet these two had not a couple of dollars between them, and, not only that, but they hadn't it at home, or they would certainly take the cab, for, of course, the driver would not expect his pay till he had earned it.

"We can take a car."

"I beg you to pardon me for observing that you are in a difficulty," said Ellsworth, advancing, hat in hand. "It would gratify me very much, sir, if you would permit me to be of service. Such things are very annoying and may happen to any one, of course. A trifling sum — er — er — at your convenience. You'll find my address on the card. I trust you will get home safely. Now, please don't hesitate, or the cabman will get away"—

He thrust a twenty dollar bill, which happened to be the first bit of scrip that he could find, with his card, into the old gentleman's hand and turned back toward the theater.

"No, no, we can't let you do this," cried the young lady, detaining him with a hand upon his arm. "Father, you must return the money."

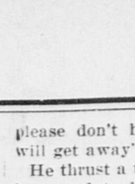

"Father" had stood like one in a trance, staring at the yellow back of the bill as if it exercised a hypnotic influence. Indeed, the strange notion came into Ellsworth's head that the gentleman looked as if he had not seen so much money as that in some time.

"Really, sir, you are very kind," he said in a weak voice, "but my daughter seems to think"—

He paused and looked helplessly at the girl.

"I think," said she, "that we had better ride up in a car. It is really very kind of you, Mr."—she took the card from her father's hand and glanced at it—"Mr. Ellsworth, but we ought not to accept your courtesy."

"Why, you can't go out into this deluge!" cried Ellsworth, aghast. "It will spoil all your pretty clothes and"—

"Permit me."

She interrupted him with the dearest little laugh.

"These things are of no account," she said. "It's a pleasure to ruin clothes; it makes room for others. But what am I saying? It must sound absurd to you when you know that father and I haven't $2 in the world."

"Elinor!" exclaimed the old gentleman mildly.

"Well, it's true," said she, "though I suppose I oughtn't to have mentioned it."

Ellsworth was a young man familiar with the ways of the world and of a ready perception, but he could not see an inch into this mystery. He could not remember to have had any experience which fitted him to understand a case of this kind. Evidently this strange couple's wardrobe was miraculously replenished, while their purse remained empty; yet it could not be a matter of simple extravagance, for the young lady spoke of clothes, and one might almost say that she wore them, as if they were the weariness and the bane of her existence.

"I fear that your father will take cold," said Ellsworth.

It was his last hazard, and a shrewd one. The young lady was certainly disturbed.

"We can't let you do this."

"It occurs to me," continued the young man, pressing his advantage hastily, "that I was about to take a cab myself and that I might set you down wherever you wish to go if you will forgive my intrusion in the meanwhile."

"This is perfectly dreadful!" said Elinor, but Ellsworth had taken the ascendency, and he was the sort of man that never stops when the luck is going his way.

In an incredibly short time Elinor and her father were seated in a cab, while Ellsworth paused a moment, waiting for the word that he should pass to the driver. It cost the old gentleman a considerable effort to give the address, but he did so at last, and it was far from a fashionable street that he named. Ellsworth repeated it to the coachman and then jumped into the cab.

There was a brief but somewhat painful silence in the vehicle, and then the young lady said, "Father, we have not yet told Mr. Ellsworth who we are."

"True, true," said the old gentleman, as if arousing himself from a dream. "I—I fear that I have not a card." And he made a weak pretense of searching for one.

"We can't afford cards," said the girl, laughing, "or at least we have to be sparing of them. My father is Mr. Chester Lyman, and I—well, of course, I'm his daughter. You have heard him call me Elinor."

"I am greatly pleased and highly honored," said Ellsworth, "by your kind consideration of my bungling and ridiculous efforts to serve you. I never possessed the smallest grain of tact from the day I was born, and it is very nice of you to overlook my lack of it."

"I have not a card."

"We are the heirs under the famous Lyman will," said the old gentleman, as if he were talking to himself. "Absurd and monstrous! There was never anything else like it."

"It was father's aunt, Betsy Lyman, who left the money," said Elinor. "She was the dearest old lady—ninety-eight when she died, three years ago—but so eccentric and so dreadfully precise! Her money was in stocks and bonds, and she intended that we should get about half of it, the other half going to various charitable institutions."

"She had a singular idea that I was not possessed of good judgment in money matters," said Mr. Lyman, continuing the story, "and so she put my share and my daughter's in trust with a crabbed old rascal of a lawyer. Moreover, she set apart certain incomes for certain uses—100 shares of stock to pay household expenses, 75 shares for 'travel in foreign lands,' 10 shares for 'contributions to home missions,' etc.

"Among the bequests were 10,000 shares of a wildcat mining stock called the Star and Crown, which Aunt Betsy set apart to yield us an income 'for the purchase of suitable raiment and for no other purpose.' She never failed to add that phrase to all her bequests."

"And there was a suit against the estate," said Elinor, "and another lawyer—not our trustee, but a man even more hateful—got all our stocks and bonds except the mining shares. He thought they weren't worth taking, I guess. What do they pay now, father?"

"About $20,000 a year," responded Mr. Lyman, with a groan. "At the time when the will was drawn the stock had paid one small dividend, and it never paid another till just after we were robbed in that suit. Twenty thousand for clothes 'and for no other purpose!' If we should pay car fare out of that money, Mr. Ellsworth, we should cease to be heirs, and the income would go to St. Agatha's Home For Old Folks in Steuben, Me. Aunt Betsy was born in Steuben."

"Father's a clerk in a bank."

"We have all kinds of fun trying to get along," said the girl. "Father's a clerk in a bank on the meanest little salary, but people think he must be the president of it. He makes the real president look like Lazarus, for father knows how to wear clothes. Oh, the lilies of the field are not arrayed like us!"

"Upon my word," said Ellsworth, "this is the most remarkable thing I ever heard of, and the most exasperating. Yet there must be some way out of it. Why don't you sell the clothes to your friends?"

"The will provides," said Mr. Lyman, "that all our clothes must go to the Steuben home when we cease to require them. That's the wording of the document."

"Fancy one of the old ladies wearing this coat!"

"Fancy one of the old ladies wearing this coat!" said Elinor. "I shall send it up there in a week or two."

"We can't sell them, and we can't even pawn them," continued the old gentleman, "and we are living, my dear sir, on the top floor of a flathouse in the most magnificent squalor ever seen on this continent."

"And we're terribly in debt," said the girl, with a laugh, "because everybody trusts us, just as you were going to do. So there's a frank statement of our troubles, which I think was due you under the circumstances. And now let's talk about something else."

"I can't," said Ellsworth. "This is too interesting. It's like a riddle, you know. And, upon my word," he added, with sudden animation, "I believe I have the answer. You and I, Mr. Lyman, must go into the business."

"Into the business?"

"Millinery, furs and ladies' wraps. Your daughter spends $20,000 a year in our place. Fifty per cent of it is profit. The concern pays you a salary of $10,000 a year—because, of course, I can't touch that money—and there you are! You get just as much for the $20,000 as you're getting now, and you have a good income besides. As for me, I'll take it out of the other customers."

The matter was considered.

"Marvelous!" cried Mr. Lyman. "Marvelous business acumen! But I have no capital."

"I'll furnish that," said Ellsworth.

"It is kind of you to say so, and I think the plan should have the most careful consideration."

"You can consider it while I'm making a Welsh rabbit," said Elinor as the carriage came to a halt, "if Mr. Ellsworth doesn't mind walking up four flights of stairs."

So the matter was considered, and the Welsh rabbit was made, and there have been many other conferences and rabbits since then, with the result that a partnership is now a practical certainty. It will, however, be matrimonial rather than commercial.

Stream of Life.

Life bears us on like the current of a mighty river. Our boat at first glides down the narrow channel, through the playful murmurings of the little brook and the windings of its grassy borders. The trees shed their blossoms over our young heads; the flowers on the brink seem to offer themselves to our young hands; we are happy in hope, and we grasp eagerly at the beauties around us, but the stream hurries on, and still our hands are empty. Our course in youth and manhood is along a wider and deeper flood, amid objects more striking and magnificent. We are animated by the moving pictures of enjoyment and industry passing before us; we are excited by some short lived disappointment. But our energy and our depression are both in vain. The stream bears us on, and our joys and griefs are alike left behind us.

We may be shipwrecked—we cannot be delayed; whether rough or smooth, the river hastens to its home till the roar of the ocean is in our ears and the tossing of the waves is beneath our feet, and the land lessens from our eyes, and the floods are lifted up around us, and we take our leave of earth and its inhabitants until of our further voyage there is no witness save the infinite and eternal.

The Buzzing In a Piano.

Nine times out of ten the buzzing or singing noises that are so frequently heard are outside of the piano. It may be the mica in the stove, or a hanging lamp near by, or an easel on the piano, or a score of other things whose keynotes vibrate in sympathy with the tones of the instrument. In the horizontal piano small articles, such as pins, beads, etc., frequently find their way into the sounding board and cause great annoyance.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For Week Beginning March 30—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—The risen life; Christ's, ours.—Luke xxiv, 1-12; Col. iii, 1-10. (An Easter service.)

The most inspiring anthem throughout the Christian world today is that one which declares, "The Lord is risen!" The Christian world rejoices today in the crowning fact of its history—the resurrection of Jesus Christ. For if Christ be not risen from the dead, then is our faith in Him in vain and our hopes in Him will perish. "But now is Christ risen from the dead and hath become the first fruits of them that slept." Halleluiah!

Death could not keep his prey;
Angels rolled the stone away.

And Christ came forth to live a risen life.

1. Christ's risen life is a historical fact. The record of Luke xxiv, 1-12, is a historical record. It is not the recitation of a myth or of a deception. The enemies of Christ in their supreme cautiousness made any trickery impossible and thus added to the proofs of this historic certainty. The friends of Christ in their dense ignorance of the true meaning of His prophecies combined their testimony with that of his enemies in that they did not expect his resurrection and were surprised beyond measure when it actually came to pass. Thus friend and foe contribute their part to the establishment of the certainty of the most stupendous and important fact in the world's history.

2. Christ's risen life is a testimony to the genuineness of the Christian religion. Christianity stands or falls with the resurrection of Christ. This historic fact being established beyond all doubt, Christianity stands firm and established with it.

3. Christ's risen life is a guarantee that we shall rise again. "But now is Christ risen from the dead and hath become the first fruits of them that slept." Christ rose as the first fruits, which are always a guarantee of the fruition of that which is still in the ungrown state. The first ripened sheaf is proof positive that the rest of the grain will ripen. So the resurrection of Christ is an actual demonstration of the doctrine of the resurrection of all men.

4. Christ's risen life is the comfort, hope and inspiration of His people in all ages and under all climes.

But in Christ we also arose; in Him we died, were buried and rose again. What should our risen life be? It should be Christ centered and heaven centered instead of being self centered and world centered. "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above and not on things on the earth, for ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory. Mortify, therefore, your members which are upon the earth." Risen in Christ, let us live the risen life that He lived.

BIBLE READINGS.

Job xix, 25, 26; Ps. xvii, 15; Dan. xii, 1-3; Matt. xxii, 31, 32; Luke xiv, 1-14; John v, 28, 29; Acts xxvi, 8-23; Rom. vi, 1-11; I Cor. xv, 12-20; I Pet. i, 1-9; I John iii, 1-3.

To Honor Work.

To honor work is the first lesson that should be breathed by our young people. It should be the atmosphere of our schoolhouses. Some one said of one of our universities: "The campus is a great workshop. It backs the mediæval and the classical. Every one seems to be about to swing an ax or hold a plow. I feel here that labor is the chief end of man. I look at my hands and say: 'These are links with the divine. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.' To do, to make, to create, to use tools, this is manhood." Neither laziness nor idleness is natural to the majority of the people. On the contrary, activity is thoroughly human. But we have not educated the hand heretofore except for the amenities and the culture of life. We have gloved them where we should have uncovered them for honest toil and for the glory of tool using. The honor of humanity, the key of progress, has been along the line of invention."—Christian Register.

Healing, Not Wounding.

The stinging tongue, the cut into the old wound, the unlovely criticism, the acid in the life, have no place in one who is "rooted and grounded in love." It is argued that we must fight the evil and oppose the wrong and check the dangerous tendencies. So we must, but no man burns his house down to get rid of the hornets' nest within it, and there is no necessity to cut off an arm because there is a wound on a finger. The Christian's business is to heal, not to amputate; to smother out the tendencies in others to sting, not set them on fire. Truth does not get exalted by flinging it at people; it gets exalted whenever it gets really expressed in a man's life and shines out through him. Christ conquers His enemies by loving them. It is a good method to try.—American Friend.

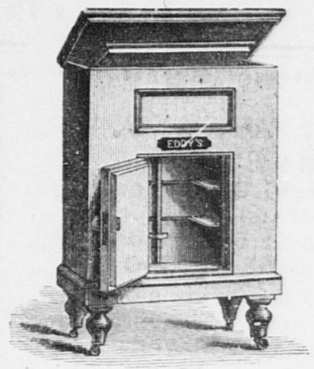

Covetousness.

Covetousness is always looking over neighboring fences and wishing both fence and neighbor were gone. Covetousness is selfishness full grown into greediness. It is the swinish trait in fallen human nature. Its peculiar peril is the premium put upon the power of accumulation both by the world and by the church.—Christian Intelligencer.

Not Sufficient to be a Good Man.

If you are to be of any real account in this world, you must belong to the kind with a name. It won't do to be simply a so called good man. You must have a name, and that name must be "Christian."—Episcopal Recorder.

LOWELL'S BAROMETER

Labor Leader Says Fall River Should Be Followed

OWNERS THINK OTHERWISE

Operatives at New Bedford Granted an Advance of Ten Percent In Wages, to Take Effect April 7—Strike of American Woolen Employes Spreads

Lowell, Mass., March 29.—William Rafferty, president of the Textile Council, has given out a statement in which he says:

"Our demand for an increase of 10 percent in wages was based on the action of the Fall River men, who granted their employes such an increase. Our people feel that if the manufacturers of Fall River can afford to pay it the mill owners of Lowell can. Fall River is our barometer. For years it has been the rule here to rise and fall in our wage scale with Fall River.

"Does anybody for a moment imagine that if Fall River operatives had suffered a cutdown of 10 percent we wouldn't have been out a like amount? We have always accepted corresponding reductions with Fall River, so why shouldn't we get the benefit of a rise in wages?

"Personally, I didn't favor striking as soon as it was voted to do so, but being in the minority when the votes were counted I accepted the inevitable and have been doing the best I know how in furtherance of the strike plan. I am not in favor of a strike unless all other means of coming to an agreement has been exhausted.

"Many of our members contend that if the mill agents persist and refuse to make concession it will be a lockout rather than a strike, as the mill men said in their letter to the Textile Council that they would rather shut down the mills than accede to the demands of the operatives. There appears to be ample evidence in every mill that the agents are getting ready to shut down.

"We are willing to meet the mill men, but unless they will agree to discuss the various questions at issue with our representatives, instead of confiding themselves to explaining why they cannot grant our demands, I don't see as much good will come of it.

"A strike to the mill hands means much suffering but there has never yet been a struggle for human rights and trades unionism that did not carry with it its sorrows—sufferings, if not horrors—but the fight must be made that the laborer may be worthy of his hire. Still there is consolation, if any is needed, that we will not be alone in our troubles. The entire business community is beginning to realize that throwing 17,000 operatives out of work, and the withdrawal of $135,000 weekly from the circulating medium of the city is serious business."

W. S. Southworth, agent of the Massachusetts mills and secretary of the Agents' association, in his statement says: "The mill owners do not want to see a strike, but unless the operatives assume a different position than they have at their meetings, it looks as if there would be one. Every employer of labor whom I know much prefer to say 'yes' rather than 'no' to a petition for an increase in wages, but, as was asserted in our original statement, the granting of an increase at this time is out of the question.

"The situation in Lowell differs from that of Fall River much as does the north pole from the equator. Fall River, owing to its large output of fine goods, is in a position to practically control the market. If the Fall River manufacturers add 10 percent to the wages of their employes they add it to the selling price of the goods and get it back from the consumer. Lowell, making mostly a coarser grade of goods, is in competition with all New England and the south and some of our corporations are fighting for their very existence. Some of them find it necessary to pass dividends.

"Many of our Lowell mills are from 60 to 80 years old. We are in competition with the new and up-to-date mills of Fall River, New Bedford, Rhode Island and the south. Expenditure must be made to keep up to date, otherwise the owners might just as well turn the keys in the doors."

TEN PERCENT INCREASE

New Bedford Manufactarers Yield to Demand of Textile Council

New Bedford, Mass., March 29.—The mill operatives in this city have been granted an advance of 10 percent in wages, the advance to take effect April 7. This was the result of the conference yesterday afternoon between the Manufacturers' association and 10 members of the New Bedford Textile council, which had made a demand for a 10 percent advance in wages.

The conference was entirely harmonious and every mill in the city was represented. At the outset the manufacturers made a statement, saying the mills of this city, and of the northern states generally, are paying on as high a plane as at any time during the last 20 years, and, they believe, as ever before. They also claimed the individual earnings are higher than ever before in this city.

In conclusion the mill men said: "As regards the cloth mills, we feel, as the 10 percent advance has been given in our neighboring city, a like advance should be given here, as has been our custom, although the conditions of margin do not warrant such advance with the contracts on which we are employed, and which, in most cases, continue for several months. We have called you here, and given you our views, with the idea of arriving at a proper date for the advance to go into effect."

After a full discussion it was mutually agreed between the manufacturers and members of the Textile council that the advance shall go in to effect April 7.

ABOUT 3700 STRIKERS

More Employes of the American Woolen Company Quit Work

Boston, March 29.—The strike at certain of the mills of the American Woolen company, which has been in progress for weeks, was extended to two additional mills of the company in Massachusetts yesterday. The weavres at the Beoli mills and Fitchburg worsted mills, more than 400 in all, left their looms. The weavers were influenced to some extent in taking the action they did, by the strike of the weavers at the Saranac mills of the American company in Blackstone. The further extension of the difficulties swells the ranks of the strikers to an estimated total of about 3700 in the company's mills.

In the National and Providence mills, Weybosset and Riverside mills in Olneyville and Manton mills at Manton, R. I., the weavers, loom fixers, burlers and other floor hands have been out for a week. The company has had a number of new weavers, not union members, at work. The weavers are also on strike in the company's Anchor mills, Pascoag, R. I.; Puritan mills, Plymouth, Mass.; Saranac mills, Blackstone, Mass.

When the weavers in the Fitchburg and Beoli mills struck yesterday, they were joined by the loom fixers. The origin of the strike was in Olneyville, where there has been pronounced opposition to the system whereby a weaver is required to operate two looms.

May Follow New Bedford

Providence, March 29.—It is believed that the advance given the New Bedford operatives will result in the mills in this state being compelled to do likewise. The mills in New Bedford and those in this state are engaged on practically the same class of goods and produce them under very similar conditions, with the advantages, if any, slightly in favor of the Rhode Island mills. It is difficult to see how the local treasurers can avoid following the example of their New Bedford competitors.

Each Side Claims Victory

Little Rock, March 29.—The most eventful campaign in Arkansas Democratic annals since 1874 closed last night and today each of the 75 counties is holding a primary election to determine its choice for United States senator and state and county officers. Senator James K. Jones and former Governor Clarke are rival candidates for the United States senate. At the respective headquarters in this city each side claims victory.

A Sweeping Order

Chicago, March 29.—An official letter sent to every Catholic priest in Chicago yesterday by Archbishop Feehan says: "We hereby notify you that the Rev. Jeremiah J. Crowley is in open rebellion to legitimate ecclesiastical authority, therefore any priest of the diocese of Chicago who assists him by moral or financial aid or offers him encouragement of any kind whatsoever is ipso facto suspended."

Postmaster's Neck In Danger

Clayton, N. M., March 29.—An attack on the jail here, for the purpose of lynching Postmaster Guyer, who killed William E. Searles on Wednesday last, is threatened by citizens. Guyer shot Searles in self-defense, the latter having fired the first shot. It is charged that the postmaster had circulated a pamphlet reflecting upon the character of Searles and his wife.

A Nervy Pugilist

Boston, March 29.—Joe Walcott was yesterday matched to fight Fred Russell for a decision at Chicago, April 4. Walcott, who only weighs 140 pounds, is forced to meet a man who weighs 220 pounds and is six feet tall. Russell recently beat Tom Sharkey.

A Denial From Leyds

Paris, March 29.—Dr. Leyds, the European agent of the Transvaal, emphatically denies the report published by The Figaro that he was to have an interview here with Liberal leaders who are now in Paris.

Fishing Pole Transmitted Shock

Gorrie, Ont., March 29.—Henry Sanderson, a contractor, was fishing yesterday when his pole came in contact with an electric light wire and he was instantly killed by the shock.

IN A RUSSIAN CHURCH

EASTER SERVICES AMONG THE CZAR'S SUBJECTS IN PARIS.

Travelers From All Countries Flock to the Greek Church In Paris on Easter Sunday—Vivid Contrasts and Glorious Bass Voices.

[Special Correspondence.]

PARIS, March 5.—A spectacle to the eye at once tawdry and splendid, to the ear wholly entrancing, is afforded by the music and ceremonies at the Russian Greek church in this city on Easter Sunday. Under the Russian calendar Easter comes sixteen days later than among adherents of the Roman and Protestant faiths, so here we have two Easters, the Russian one eclipsing in pomp and splendor the Christian one.

The church itself, with a vast oriental dome overhead, is finished and furnished in a style of almost barbaric splendor to appeal to the eye of those who worship in it, some of whom are at least half barbaric. Hundreds of thousands of rubles have been lavished on the architecture, on the painting and gilding, on the gorgeous, dazzling altar furnishments and images. Yet, like oriental edifices of devotion, there are almost no seats. The congregation, millionaires or beggars, must stand or "flop" upon their knees and mutter prayers, which many, even millionaire men and women, do.

It is the place of contrasts. The two extremes of the peoples of all the Russias come here on Easter Sunday to do penance in a heap for the sins they have committed during the past few months. At Easter all alike must come, pray and look solemn an hour or two, at the close of the magnificent rites be brushed with a palm branch dipped in consecrated water, then up and away again to sin or otherwise perhaps till next Easter.

Here a Russian of commanding stature, possibly the embassador himself, noble featured, immaculately groomed, as royal, as handsome, as intellectual a specimen of humanity as can be found on this earth, stands and mutters devoutly his prayers. Men stand mostly; women kneel, and kneel upon what to western ideas is a very dirty floor.

Not far from the splendid big Russian is mayhap a group of dingy, stupid Tartars, undersized, with slit eyes, snub noses, flat, narrow foreheads and features altogether of a primitive type. They are dirty, heaven save us! How unpleasant to come close to! They are common laborers, stevedores, mayhap, or the lowest order of servants employed in households of members of the Russian nobility, royally rich, who live much of the time in Paris.

Again you may see kneeling upon the soiled floor, with head thrown slightly back as she mumbles her prayers, a Russian lady of great beauty whom perhaps you saw as a contralto star in grand opera the night before. A fur cloak worth half its weight in gold slides back from her shoulders. Her fat hands wear regal gems. But she has hurried from her slumbers to the church without even taking trouble to comb her hair. It is tucked ragged locked under her hat. Her face, sallow and worn, bears little trace of the brilliant makeup it wore last night. The prima donna through all her prayers sees strangers eying her curiously, even recognizing her. She does not like it. With an instant transition from a prayer to a muttered something quite unlike she turns angrily away. She rises, moves to a place where she cannot be seen, again falls upon the floor and begins where she left off the half finished prayer.

The music is wholly vocal—men's voices, no women's. The most wonderful bass voices in all Paris are heard here. One of the things to do for a traveler in the gay city is to be bowled out along the Champs Elysees to hear the bass voices in the Russian church. It is near the Arc de Triomphe.

All the Russias—upper, lower, east, west and middle—are searched to find these deep voices, and when one is discovered be in whose throat it resides, be he noble, Jew or slit eyed Tartar, peasant, saint or brigand, is persuaded to use it in chanting and singing for the Russian church services. Sufficient inducements are offered. His bass voice is more of a qualification for the offices he has to perform than his true piety.

AN EXCITING CHASE

Two Boston Lads Run Down and Arrest an Alleged Thief

Boston, March 29.—Two lads chased a man accused of stealing a pocketbook through crowded streets here at noon yesterday, cornered him and marched him to the nearest police station, where he was placed under arrest, although the alleged stolen property was not found on him. The woman from whom he was alleged to have stolen the pocketbook identified him.

The pursuit race covered several squares, beginning at Winter street, where the purse was stolen. It ended on Province street, a narrow thoroughfare connecting Bromfield and School streets, into which the man had run, apparently intending to dodge into one of the stores having a rear entrance on that street and a front door on Washington street. The lads overtook him, however, and grabbing him, in spite of his protests, dragged him across School street to the Court Square police station.

The man gave the name of John G. Smith and said that he lived in Pawtucket, R. I. He further said that he had been in New York for some weeks, looking for work, and that he arrived in this city early yesterday, expecting to find employment. He said he had considerable money with him while in New York, but arrived in Boston without funds. The police believe that the name given is fictitious.

Joseph Davis and William Fitzgerald, the boys who captured the alleged thief, are aged 15 and 16 years respectively. They were thanked for their work by Police Captain Foster.

Charged With Forgery

Boston, March 29.—As the outcome of a conference between police officials, Lawyer Dunham and the two sons of the late Mrs. Julia P. French, who was recently found dead in her Back Bay residence, Alfred R. Kehew, 35, who lives in Cambridge, was arrested yesterday, charged with forging the name of Mrs. French, in September, 1900, to a certificate of transfer of 100 shares of Massachusetts Central railroad stock valued at $1300. It is intimated that there is considerable back of the arrest of Kehew which does not appear on the surface.

Juror's Hearing Questioned

Boston, March 29.—District Attorney Peters and Messrs. Sisk and Clark, counsel for John C. Best, the convicted murderer, went to Beverly yesterday to confer with Dr. C. W. Haddock about Juror Mears, who at a hearing on a motion for a new trial a few weeks ago, admitted that his hearing was defective. He claimed that he could hear all the evidence in the case, but he had been treated for deafness by Dr. Haddock. The attorneys' future action may be governed largely by what the doctor says about Mears and his hearing.

Big Monomoy Fund

Boston, March 29.—It is now nearly two weeks after the disaster at Monomoy Point, yet the fund for the relief of the families of the dead lifesavers has not ceased to grow. Nearly 8500 have been given since Thursday, making a total of $39,477.74. To this must be added the receipts of the "Cup of Fortune" matinee (about $200), which have not yet been turned in. This makes the fund within about $500 of $40,000, almost twice as much as was raised for the last lifesavers' fund.

Heavy Loss by Fire and Water

Boston, March 29.—A loss of $60,000 resulted from a fire last night that riddled the two upper stories of the five-story building 81 to 93 Franklin street, occupied by Redding, Baird & Co., artists and workers in leaded and stained glass, and caused the thorough wetting down of the two floors beneath, two of which were occupied by the same firm, and the street floor, occupied by Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict, typewriter agents.

Tidy Fortune For a Prisoner

Providence, March 29.—Just as he was preparing to leave the state institution, pardoned of his 20-year sentence for burglary, Richard Kruger, after having served since 1894, finds himself heir to a fortune of $10,000, the legacy left him by the death of relatives in Europe. Kruger is a native of Germany.

End of White Inquest

Woonsocket, R. I., March 29.—The new inquest into the death of Simon White, who was murdered at Pascoag last Saturday, was concluded yesterday. The medical examiner has not yet made his report. During yesterday's session some damaging testimony, alleged to implicate Peter Carr, was given.

Maple Sugar Farmers Happy

Chester, Vt., March 29.—By inquiries made from several of the sugar makers in this vicinity the past week, it is found that the season has been by far the best in many years. The usual average of the yield is about 2½ pounds of sugar to a tree, but this year some of the farmers claim four pounds and over.

Experts Declare Miss Toppan Insane

Boston, March 29.—Dr. H. M. Quinby, Dr. George F. Jelly and Dr. Henry R. Stedman, the insanity experts who have twice examined Jane Toppan, the alleged poisoner of the Davis family of Cataumet, have notified the government that, in their opinion, she is insane.

Instantly Killed

Barre, Vt., March 29.—While walking along the edge of Marr & Gordon's quarry yesterday Caesar Galin, 30 years old, lost his balance and pitched over the bank, falling 70 feet to the solid ledge below. Death was instantaneous.

Good Afternoon.

It is as it should be, that land holders who are greatly benefited by street widenings and extensions should meet the city squarely with a proposition. It matters little how Maple place is extended through the French estate to Hancock street. If in a straight line, however, it would be into Chestnut street rather than City Square. If on the lines of the petition, which require the removal of the store of F. F. Crane, there will be a slight curve, while if the street abuts the Savings Bank lot the curve would not be much greater, certainly not objectionable.

The bank officers are frank to admit that the last location, which would place their building on a corner lot would be of monetary value, and their offer is worthy of consideration. It would give the city one imposing corner, and might lead to the erection in the near future of another large business block on the opposite corner. All the property holders on Maple place could afford to give all the land required, and consider themselves lucky to escape assessments because their land would become available for business purposes and greatly enhanced in value.

The same with Howard street, the widening and rebuilding of the street is primarily of benefit to the Fore River Ship Co., and they should be prepared to make a liberal proposition. Other abutters who benefit should also be willing to give some land. Both the above improvements are pressing compared with the others, and if advantageous offers are made they should not longer be delayed.

The Quarry union is in the field with a new proposition for the settlement of the strike, and one which seems fair and desirable. An eight-hour day is coming, and by the sliding scale proposed will allow business to be adjusted to the new conditions. It is hoped that the men will return to work when the whistles blow Monday morning. Watch the Ledger bulletins this afternoon for acceptance of proposition.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Ontario, Dominion of Canada, has just been passing though a right lively prohibition campaign, and the prohibitionists have come out at the top of the heap, so far as getting the bill through the legislature is concerned. There was a majority of 13 in favor of the measure. There is a referendum clause in the law, however, and the liquor men are depending on the people of the province to come to their support when the election takes place. The law will not become operative until a majority of the voters cast their ballots in favor of it. The fact that the prohibitionists have succeeded in carrying their point in the legislature is, however, very significant. —Pittston Gazette.

Those Constables.

Mayor Bryant has withdrawn his appointment of constables, and they will not go before the City Council for confirmation. The Mayor says he understood they were citizens when he was asked to appoint them.

The Daily Ledger will furnish score cars free for all whist parties advertised in the Daily Ledger and also for private parties where no admission is charged.

STREET HEARINGS

Two Routes for the Maple Place Extension.

Proposition Promised on Howard Street.

Four Other Petitions Considered for Improvements.

The public hearing before the Committee on Streets of the City Council, at City Hall last evening, was not largely attended. Hearings were advertised on six streets, and the total number present, including three members of the committee, was twelve.

It was nearly 8 o'clock before the hearing opened. The first was on extending Maple street through to Chestnut street.

Frank F. Crane, a signer of the petition, said: If the city can afford to build the street, the land and buildings can never be purchased as cheap as now. There was no doubt but what the centre would be much improved. He thought that Mr. Porter, administrator of the French estate, would be willing to do all he could.

John Q. A. Field asked what the land damage was, but no one seemed to know.

Henry H. Faxon said this matter is so important, and the attendance so small, it would seem better to postpone the hearing and give a more extended notice.

Chairman Newcomb said this was not an official hearing; that would come later, but was simply to give the committee points.

John Q. A. Field: The petition gives no data, nor bounds, or how much land is to be taken. He was not appointed by the Savings Bank to appear, but the bank people had talked it over. He believed if the street was curved a little so as to bring it out where Johnson Bros'. market now is, that the bank would be willing to pay quite a sum. Then the damages would be less, as the store could be moved back. The French estate would then be left in one lot and the object accomplished.

Frank F. Crane asked why the French estate would be better with one frontage than two under the proposed plan.

In response to a question by Councilman Piper as to how much the bank would give, Mr. Field replied that he could not say, but perhaps $2,000 or $3,000.

Mr. Faxon thought petitioners should have some plan to present.

Chairman Newcomb said that Mr. Morton, who was to explain, could not be present.

Mr. Faxon said the plan proposed in the petition would be in a more direct line of Granite street.

HOWARD STREET.

The widening of Howard street was the next matter.

The chairman announced that the Fore River Company would have a proposition to make the city after its directors meeting which would be held in a few days.

FAXON PARK ROAD.

Half a dozen South Quincy citizens were present to favor the laying out of this road.

Oscar Frisk thought that the committee knew all about the matter. He considered it absolutely necessary to have the street built. People now going from South Quincy to Quincy Point had to go by Water street which was out of their way. The city agreed when given the land sixteen years ago to build this street and it should. The park was in a beautiful place but there was no way to get to it.

Mr. Costa also spoke in favor of building the street.

SMITH STREET.

No one appeared on this matter and it was passed.

HAMILTON STREET.

Relative to the acceptance of this street, a gentleman whose name could not be learned, said the street was well built upon and was in a fairly good condition and said little to be done if accepted, the object was that it might be cared for by the city. The sidewalk for about 100 feet needs a little fixing, as it is now covered with water after a storm. There were thirteen houses on the street which was 720 feet long.

NEWBURY AVENUE.

Relative to the extension of Newbury avenue, Joseph Fratus said the street was 500 feet long and there were nineteen houses on it, and only one lot not built upon. It was now in poor condition, and in one place there was five feet of water in the spring. There was enough material on the street to grade it. He thought the city should take it in hand.

This closed the hearing.

Quincy Man Burned Out.

Mayor Bryant made a hurried midnight trip to Boston last night. He was notified at 12.20 by telephone that the building of his firm was threatened by fire and at 1.15 he was on the spot. The fire was in the five story stone building at 83-85 Franklin street and was discovered at 11.15. It was the firm of another Quincy man that suffered the most damages. Redding Baird & Co., of which Walter S. Redding is a member, occupied the second floor as manufactures of stained glass windows. They had a $50,000 stock and their loss will be from $40,000 to $45,000; insured.

How did Mayor Bryant make the trip so quick? Why, he ordered a special Old Colony electric which he boarded near Merrymount park at 12.40, and at Neponset chartered another special car.

Eightieth Birthday.

Mr. Lysander B. Nash of Weymouth celebrated on Saturday last, his eightieth birthday at the home of his son Mr. L. W. Nash of Wollaston. One hundred invitations were issued, and from three to six o'clock Mr. Nash assisted by his daughters, Mrs. H. C. Davidson and Mrs. Nash, received the congratulations of many friends.

The house was beautifully decorated, the dining room scheme of pink with asparagus vine festoons and centerpiece of eighty large day-break pinks, making a very pretty picture.

A large birthday cake was surrounded by eighty candles which were lighted late in the afternon. Lemonade was dispensed by Miss Lillian K. Bates and Mrs. Percy L. Davidson.

Friends and relatives were present from Boston, Waltham, Littleton, Weymouth, South Weymouth, North Abington and Wollaston. A number of gifts were received including a purse from Wollaston friends, and various sums from other places.

Mr. Nash was born in West Abington, March 22, 1822 and on Nov. 20, 1842 married Almira C. Mann of Hanover, who died Dec. 29, 1885. The children all of whom are living, are Mrs. Henrietta C. Davidson of Weymouth, Mr. Lysander W. Nash of Wollaston, and Mr. Edmond N. Nash of North Abington.

Settlement at Lowell.

After a conference lasting until 4 o'clock this morning an agreement was reached in the labor trouble at the Lowell mills and the 20,000 operatives will not go out on Monday morning.

—Mr. W. S. Dobson who has been in Quincy this week advertising GRAIN-O and JLLE-O, called at the Ledger office before he left and presented the editor with a package each of lemon, orange, raspberry and strawberry JELL-O. We found that JELL-O is a delicious gelatine dessert preparation, already sweetened and flavored, and prepared for the table by simply pouring boiling water over it. We should think it would be very nice to add figs, nuts, sliced bananas, oranges or other fresh or candied fruits. As our grocers sell it at ten cents a package, we think it might be found a great luxury.

—The New York Assembly has passed the Bradley bill appropriating $100,000 for the erection of a monument to the memory of the late President McKinley at Buffalo.

Iron Gives Strength

No let-up of work, no freedom from household cares, close confinement in ill-ventilated rooms, offices and stores have made many women pale, tired and wornout, just as too much study and too little outdoor exercise have made many school children spindling and delicate. They have weakened the nerves, impaired digestion, upset nutrition, so that the blood has become watery and thin,—a result plainly seen in the colorless lips, cheeks and ears.

Too much responsibility, anxiety and worry have, in the same way, broken down the health of many busy men.

Now, what is needed by all these sufferers is iron, a natural constituent of healthy, strong and ruddy blood, as combined in the new iron tonic, Peptiron, which strengthens and colors the blood, nourishes and steadies the nerves, cures paleness, weakness, nervousness, dyspepsia and sleeplessness.

Peptiron combines iron in the best and most approved form with other great tonics and nutrients. Does not injure the teeth nor cause constipation.

Peptiron is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50c. or $1 per box. By C. I. HOOD CO., proprietors Hood's Sarsaparilla, Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.

APRIL SHOWERS.

In Advance of the Season Like Daily Ledger News.

Nuggets of News Fall in All Parts of City.

Valuable Finds for Readers of "the Only" Daily.

Miss Mary Colligan of Hunt street is quite ill.

The rain today may mean a pleasant day for Sunday.

H. L. Kincaide & Co. have a window full of unusually pretty mattings.

There were indications of clearing weather when the Daily Ledger went to press.

L. M. Pratt & Son have a most attractive window display of Easter novelties.

The street railway will probably commence work early in April double tracking Hancock street.

The Weymouth Gazette hears that North Weymouth will have a steamboat line to Boston after May 15.

It is a saying that northeasters are never indebted to southwesters so it is possible that March may go out like a lion.

South Shore Commandery, K. T., will attend Easter services at the Universalist church at Weymouth Sunday morning.

A son and daughter were born on March 20th to Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Vose formerly of Wollaston, now of Hudson, Mass.,

A. A. Murphy, master painter, has voluntarily informed his men that after April 1 their hours of labor shall be eight hours a day with the same pay as at present.

The Quincy stores never looked more festive than they have this week with their Easter decorations. Nearly every store in town has made a specialty of window decorations.

The Whitney road tennis courts are being put in shape for playing. The one on the east side of Woodward avenue has been raised a foot or more and will not be as damp as last season.

Many novelties are in preparation for the annual sale at the Parish house of Christ church, April 16 and 17. A pleasing program will be offered each evening, including music and stereopticon views.

Mary, the six year old daughter of Salvatore Paupira of 16 Water street who was severely burned about the face and body, Wednesday, while playing about a bonfire near her home, died Friday from her burns.

The Fragment society will meet in the Unitarian chapel on Thursday afternoon, April third, at two o'clock. The supper committee for April 9, will meet in the chapel on Wednesday afternoon April second at three o'clock.

Henry Glidden, Jr., of Quincy Point, who has for some time been employed by Pitts, Kimball & Co., of Boston, severed his connection with that firm two weeks ago to accept a position with W. L. Douglas of Brockton, as traveling salesman. Mr. Glidden has gone to the western states for several months, traveling in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and a number of other states.

Next Wednesday evening John Hancock lodge, I. O. O. F., will work the initiatory degree at its lodge room. John Hancock Lodge is at present in a most flourishing condition, having added four members this term and has two more applications awaiting action. All members of the order are cordially invited to meet with John Hancock lodge at any and all times.

Now that the fence has blown down between the library grounds and the Hospital property on Coddington boulevard again is heard expressed the wish that the grounds of the library might be extended and a walk made from Coddington boulevard. The removal of the Joseph T. French buildings will be a great improvement.

The Fore River Ship and Engine Co. have just received a consignment of teak lumber from the Guam, West Indies. This is the first full cargo of such lumber ever purchased by any one firm in this country. This lumber is to be used for the backing of armour plate, outside finish for keels, etc., and is very expensive, ranging in prices from 17 to 20 cents per foot board measure in the log, which gives one some idea of the enormous cost of a full cargo.

Good Templars Anniversary.

Merrymount lodge No. 55, I. O. G. T., celebrated their eighth anniversary Thursday evening. Large delegations were present from Brockton, Hingham, and Weymouth.

The Grand lodge was represented, by Bro. Hathaway the grand treasurer; the District lodge by P. G. D. C. T. George Lee and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Raymond of East Weymouth. Bro. Charles Hobart in behalf of Merrymount welcomed the guests. Bro. Lee's remarks were very interesting, as he spoke on the subject, why we should be good templars. Bro. Hathaway followed in his usual witty way.

The piano solo by Miss McConarty was especially fine. Short speeches by the Chief Templar of the visiting lodges followed. Mrs. Henry Raymond gave an outline of her work among the children and congratulated Merrymount on the work that had been done in the past. The singing by Brother May and also by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond were enjoyed by all. A collation of ice cream and cake was served.

Mr. H. H. Faxon very kindly donated the cream. The rest of the evening was spent in a social good time.

A Card.

Perhaps It's Worms

The worried mother often wonders what ails a child who is cross and languid. She generally treats it for everything but the most probable cause—worms. Over 75 per cent. of the ailments of children can be traced directly or indirectly to worms. You can see the result in the languid looks, irritable disposition, restless sleep, variable appetite. What the child needs is

True's PIN WORM Elixir

If worms are present, they will be expelled. If there are no worms, it will act as a tonic—clean out the stomach and bowels through its gentle laxative properties. Given at regular intervals it will guard against worms. It has been in use over 50 years. It is purely vegetable. Harmless under any conditions for children or adults.

ALL SOULS' CHURCH.

Easter Sunday evening the first of the series of evening services will be held. The preacher will be the Rev. Samuel A. Eliot, D. D., president of the American Unitarian Association. Mr. Eliot is the son of President Eliot of Harvard and was formerly settled in New York. These services, announcement of which is made in another part of this paper will be entirely undenominational in character, the preachers include representatives from the Universalist, Unitarian and Orthodox Congregational ministery. Their purpose is the deepening and broadening of the religious life. The music will be the very best attainable and everyone is most cordially welcome.

The Sunday school will hold a special Easter concert next Sunday at the close of the morning service. The Sunday school library has had an addition of about twenty-five volumes purchased from a part of the collection of last Sunday.

Bird Club.

On Monday afternoon the Braintree Bird Club entered upon the fourth year of its existence with renewed ardor. The first meeting of the season which was with Mrs. E. L. Emerson was devoted chiefly to reorganization and a brief resume of the past year's work, at the conclusion of which Miss Keith read an appropriate selection. The following officers were elected: Pres. Miss S. Emma Keith: Vice-Pres. Miss Thomas; Secretary, Mrs. Herman Roberts; Executive Committee, Mrs. Wallace Wilson, Miss Marion Rogers; Entertainment Committee, Miss Holbrook.

During the course of the Spring meetings the habits and localities of the birds will be investigated, occasional field study and it is to be hoped a lecture or two will vary the regime of former seasons. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Herman Roberts of Oak street, Monday, April 1st at 4 o'clock, to which all bird lovers are cordially invited.

CITY BREVITIES.

Mrs. James Ago of Glover avenue has been quite ill the past week.

Miss Frances Bellows of Squantum street is ill with diphtheria.

The annual parish meeting of the Universalist society will be held Thursday evening, April 3.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Mutual Fre Insurance Company will be held on Wednesday next, at 3 o'clock, at the Company's office.

The grounds at the Thomas Crane public library have been raked and the grass rolled ready for mowing and already begins to look green and attractive.

Weymouth has combined the offices of superintendent of streets and superintendent of water works, and it is understood that several Quincy men are applicants for the place.

Parents obliged to leave home a day, week or longer may place their children at the Brackett Homestead School, where they will be in charge of an experienced kindergartener or teacher.

This week's number of The Outlook editorially as tribute to the late C. Francis W. Parker, in a lengthy article telling his life work and of the appreciation of his worth as an educator by almost every leading educator in the country.

—Harold Wellington escaped what might have proved a serious accident on Sunday last. He had driven to Quincy in company with his father and mother, and while waiting on the street for Mr. Wellington, who was calling at a house there, an automobile was seen approaching. Fearing the horse might become frightened Mrs. Wellington got out of the carriage and had no sooner done so than he started dashing wildly along, breaking the shafts and whiffletree and dragging Harold quite a distance. He however, held him as long as possible receiving no serious injuries, but many bad bruises, especially about his face and head. His limbs also were very stiff and sore, but he is to be congratulated on his narrow escape.—Weymouth Gazette.

—A man told us the other day that we did not publish all the things that happened. We should say we don't! In the first place we have others who depend on us for a living. If we published all that happened we would soon be with the angels. In order to please the people we must print only the nice things about them and leave the rest to the gossips. Yes, it is a fact we don't print all the news. If we did, wouldn't it make spicy reading? But this would be for one week only. The next week you would read our obituary, and there would be another editor in heaven.—Matoon (Ill.) Journal.

THAYER SCHEDULE.

Capt. Emerson to Have a Strong Team This Year.

Base ball at Thayer academy began on Tuesday, March 25, when Capt. Emerson called out all candidates for the team, and a large number responded. Daily practice is being held during the vacation under the direction of Coach McCauliffe of Randolph, who has been connected with all base ball matters there for several years. He is keeping the boys hard at work and will undoubtedly turn out a good team. There are several members of last year's team on the squad, and their experience should help them this year.

Capt. Carleton M. Emerson has played on the team for two years in right field, but will probably play centre field this year, as he is a very fast outfielder. He led the team in batting last year, and is the fastest base-runner on the team.

Morrison appears to be the most promising candidate for catcher, and, although new, will probably make the position.

There is a very interesting contest going on for pitcher, for all three candidates are about equal. Hammond and Dow both have great speed and wire curves, but lack control and judgment. Winslow is exactly the opposite, having a rather slow ball, but being able to put it just where he wants it. He also uses excellent judgment, and as he pitched in some games last year, his experience ought to help him make pitches.

Remick and Reilley will cover their old positions as first and second base respectively, as there are no others in their class.

There are two candidates for short stop, Thayer and Knight. The former played in a few games on last year's team, and went through some experiences which ought to prove valuable to him. But he is still green, and Knight, a Randolph boy, is nearly as good as he.

For third base there are three candidates, Perry, Burton and Winslow, if the latter does not make pitcher. Winslow played this position on last year's team for a time, and ought to make it. Burton handles himself well and takes grounders in good shape, but has still much to learn in the batting line. Perry is new at the game.

For left and right field there are several candidates, the most promising of whom are S. T. Carr, Burton and Arnold. But Dow, P. Hammond, Kingsbury, Sheppard and Thompson are also trying, and will press hard upon them.

Capt. Emerson will play centre field.

Manager Clark has arranged the following schedule:

Business Directory.

We have just received the New England Business Directory and Gazetteer for 1902; a valuable workwithout which no business man's office is complete. It contains the names, business and address of the merchants, manufacturers, and professional men throughout Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Also State and County officers, official census tables, insurance companies, banks, manufacturing companies, expresses, newspapers, academies, street railways, etc. In fact, it is a mammoth encyclopedia of business information, and answers many puzzling questions in an instant. The book contains 2112 pages, and is carefully indexed throughout. It gives all cities, towns, villages, post-offices, etc., in alphabetical lists, by States, and under each town are given all the post-offices located within its limits. The price of the directory is $7.50, and is published by Sampson, Murdock & Co., Boston, Mass.

—It is announced that it takes the constant labor of 60,000 people to make matches for the world, exclusive of the matrimonial kind.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER XVI—CONTINUED.

"Gentlemen," said Michael Strogoff in a low voice, "you must not know who I am nor what I came to do in Siberia. I beg you to respect my secret. Do you promise me?"

"On my honor," answered Alcide Jolivet.

"On my faith as a gentleman," added Harry Blount.

"Very well, gentlemen."

"Can we be of any use to you?" asked Harry Blount. "Would you wish us to help you to accomplish your task?"

"I prefer to act alone," said Michael Strogoff.

"But those scoundrels have burned out your sight," said Alcide Jolivet.

"I have Nadia, and her eyes suffice."

Half an hour later the raft, after having left the little port of Livenitchnaia, was fairly in the river. It was 5 o'clock in the evening. Night was fast coming on. It would be very dark and very cold also, for the temperature was already below zero.

Alcide Jolivet and Harry Blount, although they had promised Michael Strogoff to keep his secret, yet did not leave his side. They spoke in a low voice, and the blind man, putting what he already knew to what they now told him, was enabled to form an exact idea of the state of affairs.

He was certain that the Tartars were actually investing Irkutsk and that the three columns had already formed a junction. One could not therefore doubt that the emir and Ivan Ogareff were before the capital.

But why that haste to arrive there of the courier of the czar, now that the emperor's letter could no longer be remitted by him to the grand duke, and he did not even know its contents? Alcide Jolivet and Harry Blount could no more understand than could Nadia.

Besides, they had not spoken of the past up to the moment when Alcide Jolivet thought it his duty to say to Michael Strogoff:

"We almost owe you some excuses for not having shaken hands with you before our separation at the posthouse of Ichim."

"No; you had a right to believe me a coward."

"Anyhow," added Alcide Jolivet, "you have splendidly whipped that villain, and he will carry the marks of it a long time."

"No, not a long time," simply answered Michael Strogoff.

In half an hour after the departure from Livenitchnaia Alcide Jolivet and Harry Blount had heard all the details of the cruel trials through which Michael Strogoff and his companion had successively passed. They could not but openly admire an energy which the devotedness of the young girl alone had been able to equal. And of Michael Strogoff they had formed the very same opinion which had been so well expressed by the czar at Moscow—"In truth, he is a man!"

At 8 o'clock at night, as the aspect of the sky had forewarned them, an excessive darkness enveloped all the country. The moon, being new, would not rise above the horizon. From the middle of the river the banks were visible. The cliffs at not a great height were blended with those heavy clouds which they displaced with difficulty. At intervals a breeze would come from the east and seem to expire in that narrow valley of the Angara.

The old mariner, lying down on the fore part of the raft near his men, occupied himself altogether in turning aside from the ice blocks, a maneuver which he executed without making any noise.

This drifting of the ice, after all, was a favorable circumstance as long as it did not oppose an insurmountable obstacle in the passage of the raft; for indeed this apparatus alone on the free waters of the river would have run the risk of being perceived even through the thick shade, whereas it was now confounded with these moving masses of all sizes and all shapes, and the din produced by the grating of the blocks drowned all other suspicious noise.

There was a very keen frost. The fugitives suffered dreadfully from it, not having any other shelter but some branches of the birch tree. They pressed close to each other in order to better support the low temperature, which during that night had reached 10 degrees below zero.

Michael Strogoff and Nadia, lying down at the back part of the raft, endured without complaint this additional suffering. For a man who was reckoning soon to attain his end Michael Strogoff seemed singularly calm. Besides, in the most grave situations his energy had never abandoned him. Already he looked forward to the moment when at last it would be permitted him to think of his mother, of Nadia, of himself. He only feared one last and evil chance. It was lest the raft should be absolutely stopped by a barrier of thick ice before having reached Irkutsk. He did not think of anything but that, being, moreover, decided if it were necessary to attempt some supreme act of daring.

Nadia, refreshed by some hours of repose, had recovered that physical energy which misery had sometimes been able to subdue without ever having shaken her moral energy. She was thinking also that in case Michael Strogoff should make a new effort to attain his end she must be there to guide him. But at the time that she was approaching Irkutsk the image of her father was pictured more vividly in her mind. She saw him in the invested town, far from those he cherished, but—for she did not doubt it—struggling against the invaders with all the dash of his patriotism. Before many hours, if heaven should at length favor them, she would be in his arms, reciting to him the last words of her mother, and nothing should again separate them.

The raft still moved on, unperceived, amid the mass of floating ice.

Up to this time no Tartar detachment had been signaled on the high banks of the Angara, and this indicated that the raft had not as yet come on a line with their outposts.

Meanwhile it was necessary to maneuver with more care in the midst of the ice, which was fast closing.

The old mariner rose up, and the mujiks took up again their boathooks. All had as much as they could do, and the management of the raft became more and more difficult, for the bed of the river was becoming obstructed.

Alcide Jolivet had followed him.

Both listened to what the old sailor and his men were saying.

"Guard there on the right!"

"Look! The blocks of ice are thickening on the left!"

"Keep it off! Keep it off with your boathook!"

"Before an hour we shall be stopped!"

"If God wills it!" replied the old sailor. "Against his will nothing can be done."

"You hear them?" said Alcide Jolivet.

"Yes," replied Michael Strogoff, "but God is with us."

Meantime the situation became more and more serious. If the raft once ceased to make headway, the fugitives would not only never reach Irkutsk, but they would be obliged to abandon their floating apparatus, which, crushed by the ice blocks, would not be long in sinking under the waters. The willow bindings were already breaking, the fir trunks, violently separated, were becoming entangled under the hard crust, and soon the unfortunate people would have no other refuge than the ice itself. Then, when daylight should come, they would be perceived by the Tartars and massacred without pity.

Michael Strogoff returned to the back part of the raft, where Nadia was waiting for him. He approached the young girl, he took her hand and put to her that invariable question. "Nadia, are you ready?" to which she answered as usual:

"I am ready."

For some versts more the raft continued to make its way through the floating ice. If the Angara should be choked up with ice, it would form a barrier, and consequently it would be impossible to follow the current. Already the passage down the river was slower. At every instant there were collisions, or time was lost by having to make long turnings. Here they must escape landing on the ice; there they must take a narrow pass between it—in fine, many anxious drawbacks.

And now only a few hours of the night remained. If the fugitives did not reach Irkutsk before 5 o'clock in the morning, they must give up all hope of ever entering there.

At length, at half past 1, in spite of all their united efforts, the raft struck against a thick barrier and stopped altogether. The ice which was floating down the river cast itself upon it and forced it against the obstacle and held it motionless as if it had been driven upon a reef.

At this place the Angara becomes narrowed to not more than half its normal breadth; hence the accumulation of ice blocks, which were by little and little piled one upon another under the action of the double pressure, which was considerable, and of the cold, whose intensity was redoubling. At 500 paces down the river again became wide, and ice blocks, detaching themselves by little and little from the lower edge of that field, continued to float down to Irkutsk; hence it is probable that without that narrowing of the banks the barrier would not have been formed, and the raft could have continued to descend the current. But the evil was irreparable, and the fugitives had to give up all hope of reaching the end of their journey. If they had had at their disposal the tools which the whalers usually employ to open out canals across the icefields, if they had been able to cut this field as far as the place where the river became wider, perhaps the time would not have been wanting, but not a single saw, not a pickax, nothing with which to cut the crust, which the extreme cold had rendered as hard as granite.

What should they do?

A GREAT SURPRISE

Is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. Would you believe that it is sold on its merits and any druggist is authorized by the proprietor of this wonderful remedy to give you a sample bottle free? It never fails to cure acute or chronic coughs. All druggists sell Kemp's Balsam. Price 25c. and 50c.

At that moment rifle shots were heard on the right bank of the Angara. A shower of bullets was directed upon the raft. Had the unhappy men been perceived? Evidently, for other detonations resounded on the left bank. The fugitives, caught between two fires, became a target for the Tartar marksmen. Some were wounded by these balls, although in the midst of the great darkness they only fell by chance.

"Come, Nadia," whispered Michael Strogoff in the ear of the young girl.

Without making any observation, ready for everything, Nadia took the hand of Michael Strogoff.

"I am thinking of crossing the barrier," he said to her in a low voice. "Guide me, but let no one see us leave the raft."

Nadia obeyed. Michael Strogoff and she glided quickly over the surface of the icefield in a silence that was broken here and there by the firing.

Nadia crept on in front of Michael Strogoff. The balls fell around them like a shower of hailstones and crashed upon the ice. The surface of the field, rugged and with sharp edges, made their hands bleed, but still they kept advancing.

Ten minutes afterward the lower border of the barrier was reached. There the waters of the Angara again became free. A few large blocks of ice, becoming by degrees detached from the field and floating with the current, descended toward the town.

Nadia understood what Michael Strogoff wished to attempt. She saw one of those blocks of ice that was only held by a narrow tongue.

"Come," said Nadia.

And both lay down on this morsel of ice, which a slight rocking loosened from the barrier.

The block began to make its way down the river. The river itself became wider, and the route was free.

Michael Strogoff and Nadia could hear the firing of guns, the cries of distress, the shouts of the Tartars that made themselves heard up the river. Then little by little those cries of deep anguish and of ferocious joy were lost in the distance.

"Oh, those poor companions!" whispered Nadia.

For half an hour the current quickly carried along the block of ice which was bearing Michael Strogoff and Nadia. At every moment they feared that they might sink under the water. Being caught in the stream, it followed the middle of the river, and it would not be necessary to give it an oblique direction until there was question of making for the quays of Irkutsk.

Michael Strogoff, with his teeth set and his ears ready to catch the least sound, did not utter a single word. Never was he so near attaining his end. He felt that he was about to succeed.

Toward 2 o'clock in the morning a double row of lights lit up the somber horizon on the two banks of the Angara.

On the right was the glare from the lights of Irkutsk, on the left the fires of the Tartar camp.

Michael Strogoff was not more than half a verst from the city.

"At last!" whispered he.

But suddenly Nadia gave a cry.

At that cry Michael Strogoff rose up from the block, which became very unsteady. His hand stretched out toward the head of the Angara. His face, all lit up with the reflections of blue lights, became terrible to look at, and then, as though his eyes had been reopened to the light, he cried:

"Ah, God himself is against us!"

(To be continued.)

Discovered.

A story is told of a little girl who asked one morning at the breakfast table, "Mamma, is hash animal or vegetable?"

"Animal, my dear," replied mamma.

"Then," cried the little one triumphantly, holding up a tiny bone, "here's the hash's tooth!"

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. Far sale by all druggists.

OPPONENTS OF EVANS

Succeed In Getting Him Out of Pension Office

IS BUT A HOLLOW VICTORY

President Makes It Plain That He Approves Course of Commissioner and Will Transfer Him to a Much Higher Office as a Fitting Reward

Washington, March 29.—Commissioner of Pensions Evans has placed his resignation in the hands of the president. It will not take effect until some important position in the diplomatic service is found for him. It is stated that the policy of Commissioner Evans will be continued by his successor.

The following letter from Mr. Evans, together with an appended statement, was made public at the White House last night:

"For some time I have been considering the question of resigning. It will soon be five years since I assumed the duties of this office, and I now have the honor of tendering you my resignation as commissioner of pensions, and will thank you to accept the same at as early a date as may suit your convenience."

The statement appended to the letter is as follows:

"Mr. Evans some months ago verbally expressed his desire to resign and finally put it in writing on March 15. The president, however, has told him that he will have to remain as commissioner, in the first place until his successor has been determined upon, and in the second place until there is some position to tender him which the president will regard as a promotion and as a fitting reward for his excellent services in the department."

While the opponents of Evans have carried their point of getting him out of the pension office, his prospective retirement is but a hollow victory for the pension attorneys and their supporters in the G. A. R., who have for the last few years been waging such bitter war upon his administration of the office, an administration which has materially reduced the opportunities of unscrupulous pension "sharks" to ply their trade on the old approved principles. Commissioner Evans and the president are in thorough accord as to his retirement. The commissioner said that he would have to resign some time in the perfectly natural course of events and as the war against him became extremely embarrassing to the president, he might as well relieve President Roosevelt now as later. To await until the agitation ends, the commissioner said, would be useless, as it never would end, and he was tired of it.

Medals For Monomoy Heroes

Washington, March 29.—The secretary of the treasury has awarded a gold lifesaving medal to Elmer Mayo for his heroic services in rescuing Seth L. Ellis, at the recent Monomoy, Mass., disaster, in which the entire lifesaving crew of the Monomoy station, with one exception, were lost. The secretary also awarded a gold medal to Seth Ellis, the survivor of the crew.

Griggs Heads Committee

Washington, March 29.—Representative James M. Griggs of Georgia was unanimously chosen chairman of the Democratic congressional committee at a meeting held last night. A committee was appointed to perfect a plan of organization for the ensuing congressional campaign and select the remaining officers of the committee.

Big Day on Pensions

Washington, March 29.—The house spent yesterday passing private pension bills. In all 215 were passed. With one exception this is the record for the number of such bills passed at a single session.

Revenue Officers' Find

New York, March 29.—United States revenue agents yesterday raided an alleged illicit still at 441 Pleasant avenue and arrested Barney Ftevack, 28 years old, employed in the place. The proprietor was absent. The officers confiscated 75 gallons of whiskey, 60 barrels of mash, 110 pounds of sugar, 200 pounds of yeast and a horse and wagon. The alleged still was said to have a capacity of 300 gallons a day.

Death of Senator Warren's Wife

Huntington, Mass., March 29.—Mrs. Helen M. Warren, wife of Francis E. Warren, United States senator from Wyoming, died last night at the home of H. E. Stanton. She was Mrs. Stanton's sister and had been spending the past year in the hills of Massachusetts is quest of health. Senator Warren and her two children were at her bedside.

Fine Without Imprisonment

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 29.—Henry A. Taylor, the young eastern capitalist, convicted of conspiracy to bribe in connection with a proposition to saddle upon this city a $4,000,000 water supply contract, was yesterday fined $2000, without imprisonment. Taylor paid the fine and was discharged from custody.

Crazy Man's Sentence Commuted

Albany, March 29.—Governor Odell has commuted to imprisonment for life the sentence imposed upon John Schmidt, who was convicted in June, 1899, for murder in the first degree. Schmidt for a long time has been hopelessly insane.

The powder puff may help to hide the ravages of time but it avails little to hide the ravages of disease. When the face is disfigured by eruptions, the treatment must go below the surface to the blood which is corrupt and impure.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures disfiguring eruptions which are caused by impure blood. It cures scrofulous sores, erysipelas, boils, pimples, eczema, salt-rheum and other eruptive diseases which impure blood breeds and feeds.

"I was troubled with eczema from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet," writes Miss Ella Quick, of Cass City, Tuscola Co., Mich. "Could not walk at times nor wear my own clothes. Thought there was no help for me—at least the doctor said there was none. I went to visit friends at Christmas time and there heard of the good that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery had done for them, and was advised to try it at once. For fear that I might neglect it, my friend sent to the village and got a bottle and made me promise that I would take it. I had been getting worse all the time. I took thirteen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and ten vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and used 'All-Healing Salve,' which made a complete cure. It was slow, but sure. I was taking the medicine about eight months.

"I would say to all who read this, try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery before wasting time and money."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; you lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cleanse the clogged system from accumulated impurities.

The powder puff may help to hide the ravages of time but it avails little to hide the ravages of disease. When the face is disfigured by eruptions, the treatment must go below the surface to the blood which is corrupt and impure.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures disfiguring eruptions which are caused by impure blood. It cures scrofulous sores, erysipelas, boils, pimples, eczema, salt-rheum and other eruptive diseases which impure blood breeds and feeds.

"I was troubled with eczema from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet," writes Miss Ella Quick, of Cass City, Tuscola Co., Mich. "Could not walk at times nor wear my shoes. Thought there was no help for me—at least the doctor said there was none. I went to see friends at Christmas time and there heard of the good that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery had done for them, and was advised to try it at once. For fear that I might neglect it my friend sent to the village and got a bottle and made me promise that I would take it. I had been getting worse all the time. I took thirteen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and ten vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and used 'All-Healing Salve,' which made a complete cure. It was slow, but sure. I was taking the medicine about eight months.

"I would say to all who read this: try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery before wasting time and money."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; you lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cleanse the clogged system from accumulated impurities.

Stories Told IN Washington

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Except when some question of special importance is up for consideration interest in the proceedings of congress, even among the members themselves, lags, and the work goes on frequently with barely a quorum in either chamber. This is particularly true of the senate side of the capitol. The other day Senator Scott of West Virginia was the only senator in the chamber when President Pro Tem. Frye rapped for order at noon. Mr. Frye cast his eyes over the vacant seats for a moment, and then, looking at Senator Scott, said gravely:

"THE SENATOR WILL PLEASE BE IN ORDER."

"The senator from West Virginia will please be in order."

The blind chaplain offered prayer, the two senators rising and standing with bowed heads. Just as the prayer was concluded Senator Deboe of Kentucky appeared and walked over and congratulated Senator Scott on his promptness. In a few moments half a dozen other senators straggled in, and the business of the day was begun, though it was some little time before a quorum was present.

In addition to the performance of his duties in congress Senator McComas of Maryland lectures before the Law school of Georgetown university. Sometimes the senator while delivering a lecture is overcome by an impulse to tell of his personal experiences, which are generally entirely foreign to the subject matter, though by no means uninteresting. The other night he happened to remark that the world was a very small place after all, illustrating his assertion by a series of incidents.

Senator McComas Tells His Experiences

"I was over in London last summer," said the senator, "and was passing along the Strand, when I saw coming toward me a familiar figure. Who should it turn out to be but old Bill Smith, my boyhood playmate at Columbus, O. I had not seen him for twenty-five years.

"I went to Paris. Passing along the boulevard, I saw a stranger approach. Who should it turn out to be but old Bill Smith.

"I returned to this country. A month later I went out to the Yellowstone park. I was going down a trail, when I saw a man coming toward me. He looked familiar, and again it turned out to be Bill Smith."

Just then one of the students in the back of the hall called out in clear and penetrating tones:

"Why didn't you pay the man?"

The class yelled, and the dignified senator was quite unable to repress a smile.

The forty-eight new Republican members of the house, who have discovered what an inconsiderable figure they cut in the general scheme of national legislation, had a dinner the other evening and amid much merriment organized the Tantalus club. Over the coffee and cigars they discussed the following proposed resolutions:

Legislation by Congressional Colts

H. R. 1001.—To make the state of Iowa an independent republic, with authority to create enough other offices to go round.

H. R. 306.—To authorize the member of congress from Delaware to cast two votes for that state in the senate, adequate protection to be furnished said member while so doing.

H. R. 666.—To provide a system of irrigation for the state of Maine.

H. R. 4-11-44.—To extend the civil service law over the United States senate and provide that hereafter all United States senators shall be selected by the civil service commission upon competitive examination, and to provide further that no member of the house shall be permitted to in any way influence said selection beyond certifying to the good character and "peaceful disposition" of the applicant.

H. R. 415,677.—To establish a permanent bureau for cutting the hair of Indian tribes under treaty, football players not under treaty and piano players accredited to this country.

The congressional "colts" are wise in not taking their helplessness seriously. It is the experience of all new congressmen, and they must patiently wait for recognition until they get seasoned.

Representative Wilson of Brooklyn, N. Y., who is a graduate physician, has lately been doing quite a rushing business. Smallpox was almost epidemic in the city, and everybody was getting vaccinated. Dr. Wilson performed the operation for a few congressional friends. Representative Landis of Indiana was taken into a committee room to be vaccinated. His sleeve was rolled up, the vaccine point was all ready, and Dr. Wilson was about to begin the work.

Wilson Does a Rushing Business

"Stop!" suddenly exclaimed Landis. "You are sure there is no Democratic virus on that point?"

"I am," replied Dr. Wilson, "but when this vaccine gets in its work you'll think every Republican in your district has turned Democrat. This vaccine is famous for its 'taking' qualities."

Representative Wilson is rather stout and has been reducing his weight, being already perceptibly thinner.

"How are you doing it, doctor?" asked Representative Shattuc of Ohio, who weighs more than 200 pounds.

"Riding in the trailers on the electric cars," replied Mr. Wilson. "They sway so much that a person gets about the same exercise as he would riding horseback."

The house now revels in embossed stationery. It was not ever thus, but a new era has been ushered in. The stationery room at the south end of the capitol now furnishes the members with paper and envelopes whereon the name of the committee and the frank of the member are written in raised letters red or blue, to suit.

House Innovation In Stationery

Representative Roberts of Massachusetts is credited with the authorship of the innovation. For years and years senators have been allowed to use embossed stationery, but until not very long ago that privilege, as far as representatives were concerned, has been confined chiefly to the speaker. Proceeding on the theory that what was good enough for senators was none too good for representatives, Mr. Roberts made a requisition for embossed stationery. The chief clerk of the house refused it on the ground that members were not privileged to have it.

"But why not?" asked Mr. Roberts.

Then the house officials began to inquire "Why not?" and the question was pressed to its legitimate conclusion, with the result that members of the popular branch of congress are now on an equal footing in the matter of stationery with their distinguished compatriots at the other end of the capitol.

A mild sensation was created at the time of the heavy snow recently by House Librarian John J. Boobar who walked from his residence to the capitol on snowshoes. While pedestrians waded and slid and plunged about Mr. Boobar swiftly glided over the delicate crust of the snow and unstrapped his webbed feet at the house entrance while the other fellows were yet blocks away.

Snowshoeing at the National Capital

The spectacle of a man on snowshoes was a decided novelty in Washington. But it is nothing new to Mr Boobar, who hails from Duluth, Minn. He was followed into the capitol by quite a crowd of the curious and was finally cornered in the chief clerk's office, where he was compelled to give a dissertation on his particular snowshoes and snowshoeing in general.

The snowshoes worn by Mr. Boobar were something like five feet in length by a foot in width and at first glance might be mistaken for a couple of tennis rackets. From Mr. Boobar's description of the method of locomotion via snowshoes it is easily apparent that the novice should get his experience after dark. The initial performances involve so much side stepping, with direful and headlong results, that the crowd of curious ones whom Mr. Boobar was heroically endeavoring to enlighten unanimously voted to stand by their arctics.

At Mr. Boobar's home on the frozen shores of Lake Superior the snowshoe and the "skee" are as common as rubbers in Washington.

THE CHRISTMAS STORY

Regarded at Washington as Utterly Absurd

MYSTERY WHY IT STARTED

Author May Be Trying to Get Money Out of Danish Government or May Have Been Imposed Upon by Lobbyists—Some Queer Extracts

Washington, March 29.—The committee appointed to investigate the allegations of Mr. Christmas in regard to the Danish islands transfer have as yet formed no decision as to course of procedure. They generally regret that any such investigation has been ordered; they cannot sent to Denmark for persons and papers, nor is it likely that Christmas himself would accept an invitation to come over here. Judge Ray, chairman of the judiciary committee, suggests that the members of the house, waiving their privilege, might pass in order before the committee and answer questions as to their relation to the alleged transactions.

No more absurd charges on their face were ever presented to a congressional committee for investigation, and the motive of the Democratic leader in setting it on foot still remains a mystery. Neils Gron, who came here some weeks ago with the story, succeeded in attracting little attention. He has been a somewhat familiar figure here, as in Boston. Most newspaper bureaus declined to touch his copy, but finally a paper ventured to give three columns to the mysterious story. This served as a basis for Richardson's allegation that the charges ought to be investigated.

To one who has waded through the Christmas charges, as printed in the congressional record, either of two explanations seem plausible:

Christmas may be trying to get money out of the Danish government, and so is putting up a story of the difficulties of Washington procedure, or he may have himself been imposed upon by American lobbyists, who painted for him a startling picture of the method of getting anything through congress. The charges, whatever their impulse, lack common sense. Not a single member of the house or senate is mentioned in them as having received a penny from him. The house obviously has nothing to do with the ratification of treaties. Its majority vote on appropriations to carry a treaty into effect is always secured easily. This treaty encountered no opposition. There was no need of bribing anybody to get it through, even were such methods in vogue here.

As a picture of Washington life from the pen of a Dane, who was either trying to impose on others, or had been imposed upon himself, the Christmas report is fairly readable. Of H. H. Rogers it says: "He is about 60, extremely wealthy, but in spite of his $50,000,000, exceedingly desirous of making money. He is the most active member of the Standard Oil company. When I left he said: 'Mr. Christmas, I don't know if we can come to an agreement or not; but mind you, this land business will never pass through congress without my consent. I am able to swing 26 votes in the senate.'"

Of Mr. Lodge it says: "He is the most respected member of the senate, and of all the political persons I have met in America, is the only one that cannot be bribed. It was he who discovered that Rogers was at work, agitating among his 26 senators, whose votes he thought to be able to control."

A queer streak is suggested by this paragraph: "I had become a suspicious person and blackened, and soon my stay in Washington had become impossible for myself as well as for my wife. Both Mr. Hay and Senator Lodge advised me to take my departure, and I decided to do that and to live in New York, from where I could easily run over to Washington when my presence should be necessary."

Not Recognized by Denmark

Copenhagen, March 29.—The Christmas scandal is not discussed here nor are the facts in the case published in Copenhagen, although a full account of Congressman Richardson's statements in congress was telegraphed to the semi-official news agency in this city. Denmark, however, has heard from both Captain Walter Christmas and Niels Gron, who also has claimed to have acted as a Danish agent in negotiating the sale of the Danish West Indies. Each claimed a commission, but the government has refused to recognize either of them, declaring that neither was ever connected with the negotiations in the slightest degree. A newspaper referred to the controversy during the latter part of February, but it did not take Gron or Christmas seriously. Gron started for America soon afterwards.

Lawyer Patrick to Wed

New York, March 29.—The announcement that Albert T. Patrick, the lawyer convicted of the murder of William M. Rice, is engaged to be married to Mrs. Adelaide M. Francis, at whose house Patrick boarded prior to his arrest, is not denied by either of the principals, and the engagement is generally accepted as a fact.

Financier Kills Himself

New Brunswick, N. J., March 29.—While temporarily insane from overwork John Wyckoff, treasurer of the New Brunswick Trust company, yesterday committed suicide by shooting.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Labor Controversies Have Affected Industrial Activity but Little

New York, March 29.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Favorable weather greatly facilitated Easter retail trade, the volume of transactions in all lines of wearing apparel being of exceptional magnitude. Activity was by no means restricted to these special lines, however, the general distribution of merchandise exceeding that of previous seasons, with prices well maintained.

An undeniable indication of expansion in the nation's business is the increase of 4.6 percent over last year's in railway earnings for March, while compared with 1900 the gain amounts to 14.4 percent.

Industrial activity has suffered no diminution, the Civic Federation adjusting some labor controversies, while others are in a fair way to reach peaceful termination. Textile mills at the east are still the centre of strife, all cotton spinners demanding an advance similar to the one granted by Fall River manufacturers, although conditions are very different.

Demands for an eight-hour day after May 1 by the blast furnace men was the most disturbing feature in the iron and steel industry, and this is not causing much alarm, as an agreement will probably be reached during the intervening month. Production is now beyond all previous records.

A severe reaction occurred in cotton, due entirely to the excessive speculative purchases which made the market top-heavy. Vigorous operations for the short account precipitated liquidation and forced prices downward sharply.

Liabilities of commercial failures during the first three weeks of March aggregate $6,110,458, of which $2,794,105 were in manufacturing, $2,555,933 in trading, and $760,420 in other commercial lines.

Grimm Won't Be Executed

St. Petersburg, March 29.—Colonel Grimm, the officer who is charged with revealing Russian military secrets to Germany, has been brought here and placed in close confinement. In Russia the betrayal of military secrets is not a capital offense, unless this betrayal be made to a power with which Russia is at war. About 60 arrests have been made in connection with the alleged betrayal of military secrets by Colonel Grimm.

Was a Slave to Morphine

Philadelphia, March 29.—Dr. Orin S. Sargent, said to have been one of the most prominent and wealthy of the younger physicians of Boston until two years ago, died here yesterday from the effects of morphine. Dr. Sargent came here two years ago and engaged quarters in a cheap lodging house. He was addicted to the excessive use of morphine and early yesterday was found unconscious on the street.

Was an Ardent Imperialist

London, March 29.—The Daily Mail the bulk of his fortune, outside of some asserts that the late Cecil Rhodes left personal and family bequests, to the promotion of his vast imperial plan of education. This project embraces every land where the union jack flies. The purpose is the intellectual betterment of the British race throughout the world and the fostering of the imperial sentiment.

Suffocated In His Bunk

Boston, March 29.—The fumes of a mixture of sulphur, pepper and molasses, which was being burned on the fishing schooner Mary A. Whalen, for the purpose of driving out the rats with which the vessel was infested, suffocated John Burns, a sailor of the schooner. Burns was thought to have been at his home in this city until his body was found in his bunk.

Counterfeits of Rare Coins

Lima, O., March 29.—A stranger giving his name as H. B. Smith tried to sell two silver dollars of the famous 1804 issue for a small pittance here yesterday. They are worth $2000 each and his generous offer aroused suspicion. The dollars are pronounced counterfeits. Smith was arrested.

Three Killed In Collision

Joliet, Ills., March 29.—Three dead and six injured is the result of a collision near Sag Bridge on the Joliet and Chicago electric railroad yesterday. Some of the injured are in a serious condition and there may be more fatalities. The collision occurred in a dense fog.

Skirmish on Bulgarian Frontier

Sofia, March 29.—One hundred and fifty Turkish troops attacked a Bulgarian post near Saratach yesterday. One Bulgarian was killed and several were wounded. The Bulgarian garrison is being reinforced by two companies of soldiers.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, March 30.
Sun rises—5:32; sets—6:07.
Moon's first quarter—5:13 p. m.
High water—3:30 a. m.; 3:47 p. m.

The storm noted Thursday night over Texas has moved rapidly northeastward to central Indiana with greatly increased intensity, causing general rains east of the Mississippi river except in southern New England. There is another storm of almost equal intensity central over Manitoba that has thus far caused light rains and snows in the Dakotas and Montana. Temperatures have changed but little east of the Mississippi river. The excessive rains in the southern states will cause a further rise of the rivers in Alabama. On Sunday generally fair weather is indicated, except probably in northern New England. It will be colder. On the coast the winds will be brisk to high south to southwest. Storm warnings are displayed from Eastport to Mobile.

Mabel E. Mellen of South Braintree left town Wednesday for Portsmouth N. H., where she will spend a week with friends.

Quincy is exceedingly fortunate in its head master at the high school for it is seldom a teacher takes the interest in his school that Mr. Harper does. All this vacation he has given up to visiting other high schools and it is safe to predict that if any of them excel the Quincy high in any way it will not be for long for Mr. Harper's aim is to make his school the best in the state.

* * *

Mrs. E. Victor Bigelow of Lowell was in town a few days this week.

* * *

The committee appointed to secure a portrait of Dr. William Gallagher, former principal of Williston Seminary, has secured from the alumni and others a sum sufficient for this work. Dr. Gallagher's portrait is being painted by J. Harvey Young of Boston.—Boston Transcript.

* * *

The superintendent and teachers of the First Unitarian church entertained the parents and friends of the Sunday school, in the chapel on Thursday evening. Interesting talks were given by Rev. J. H. Applebee and Miss Maud L. Parker. In the parlor Miss Jane Reed and Miss Patty Faxon presided at a daintily spread table and served chocolate. A large bouquet of pinks ornamented the table. The teachers were in light gowns and entered heartily into the social part of the evening.

How to Cure the Grip.

Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed and a quick recovery is sure to follow. That remedy counteracts any tendency of the grip to result in pneumonia, which is really the only serious danger. Among the tens of thousands who have used it for the grip, not one case has ever been reported that did not recover. For sale by all druggists.

BRAINTREE.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Pierson are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a ten and one half pound boy last Saturday.

Gustauis White lost his case at Dedham this week against N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. It was an action of tort to recover damages for the destruction of wood by fire alleged to have been communicated by a locomotive. Herbert White on a similar case got a verdict of $120.

On Tuesday evening the members of the Jonas Perkins and Penniman School association held a public meeting in Cochato hall to listen to a lecture upon the "Relation of Art to Good Citizenship," by Mr. Walter Sargent, State Supervisor of Drawing.

Charles S. Hanna of Lisle street is to move to Quincy the early part of the week.

Charles B. Edwards arrived home Wednesday night from a brief trip to Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Thomas Penniman has been visiting relatives in Quincy the past week.

Conductor McManus and motorman Wilde were in charge of the new vestibule car, number 585, on its first trip of duty last Tuesday.

Mr. T. W. Greenough of Braintree has a protege who he is willing to back against Robert Gardner of South Braintree in a 100 yard sprint race, for any amount of money.

The fire department was called to Monatiquot Heights Thursday afternoon by an alarm from box 145. A fire in the woods was making swift progress assisted by a strong southerly wind. About fifty acres were burned over but not much damage done. Efficient work of the fire department kept the fire from entering valuable woodland.

It has been ascertained that Rev. C. F. H. Crathern will not attend the coronation. On the contrary, he will tour the Continent conducting a party of seven ladies. They will go directly to Naples and stop in England on the return trip. It is understood that Mr. Crathern is expecting to enjoy a Sabbath's calm during his absence.

Miss Helen Summers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Summers of East Braintree, who was so sweet and dainty as Vivian in the operetta, The Brownie Ball given in the Jonas Perkins school hall, East Braintree, in January, is to take the same part at Quincy where the operetta is to be given for the benefit of the Boston Floating hospital. Those attending the rehearsals at Quincy are much taken with little Miss Summers.

At a meeting of the I. O. O. F., M. U., Tuesday evening, it was voted to change the name of the new lodge from McKinley to Fore River. Dr. C. M. Marstin was elected Doctor of the lodge. It was voted to hold a public meeting in Washington hall, Weymouth, next Tuesday evening at eight o'clock. Mr. H. J. Wentzell G. M. and Deputies will be present and speak upon the rules of the order and the good work the order is doing for the sick, distressed, widows and orphans.

The Senior class of the High school gave an entertainment in Monatiquot hall Tuesday evening, last, which was well worth attending. It was a reading by Charles Townsend Copeland, Instructor in English at Harvard College. Mr. Severance, Principal of the High school, presented Mr. Copeland, in a few well chosen words, to the audience. Kipling was the subject chosen for the evening, the selections were happily made, and for more than an hour Mr. Copeland delighted his hearers. He possesses a pleasing voice and delivered himself with great force and expression. Among the good things which he offered were Mandalay, Tommy Atkins, Truce of the Bear, Bell Buoy, Danny Deever, That Day, Shuteye Sentry, Bobs, Gentlemen Rankers, and Fuzzy-Wuzzy.

The committee in charge of the "Old Maids Convention," feel that great credit is due Mrs. Lewis Small and Miss Elena Shaw, who in the production last Wednesday evening, assumed the part of President and Treasurer respectively. They did so upon two days notice only, making it possible to present the play and scoring a distinct success for themselves.

The Easter concert to be given by the Sunday school of the First Congregational church, will be held at seven o'clock Sunday evening in the vestry. Dr. Norris of the Little Wanderers' Home will be present with a choir of children from the home. He will make a short appeal for the home, and there will be an interesting program for the children of the Sunday school. All are welcome.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

Ben Hur will begin the third week of its prosperous return engagement at the Colonial theatre next Monday night. This play is by far the greatest production of a dramatic order on the stage today. Look at it from any point of view—as a serious drama, gorgeous spectacle, mechanicle exhibit of the best modern stage craft, are an example of the best composition in Greek and Oriental music it is distinctive and distinguished. Klaw & Erlanger are to be commended especially for their admirable enterprise in staging Ben Hur. They not only have given a gorgeous frame to the acting episodes of the novel, but they have provided an Oriental richness for every detail, which is in the atmosphere of time and place and lends powerfully to the enjoyment of the performance. Beside a sufficient acting cast, there is a fine chorus of singers and a large number of graceful dancers, both of which are blended artistically and convincingly in the pictorial scenes representing the Grove of Daphne, the Fountain of Castalia, and the thrilling episode of Mount Olivet. The music is of singularly fine quality and was written especially to fit the scenes and incidents and atmosphere of the play. It is the work of Prof. Edgar Stillman Kelley, who is looked upon as an authority in this country on Greek and Oriental music. "Ben Hur" has played to larger receipts and to more people than any theatrical production either here or abroad. It has been on the stage but little more than two years which were exhausted in runs in six cities, and it is a fact worth remembering that the last week in each of these cities was among the biggest of the engagement.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Another evidence of the enterprise of the Castle Square Theatre management is shown in the announcement of the attraction at this popular play house for the coming week. The dramatic version of Stanley J. Weyman's "Under the Red Robe," made by the English playwright, Edward Rose, has been secured and will have its first performance at the Castle Square on Monday next. This play has had but one previous production in Boston, at the Hollis street theatre, and it proved one of the most successful plays of the day. The thrilling scenes of Weyman's famous novel offer opportunities for dramatic treatment that have been fully improved and the story of the days of Richelieu is quite as fascinating in its stage version as in book form. Some beautiful scenic and costume effects will be shown in this production. The usual distribution of boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Holiday week for the children is always borne in mind by the management at Keith's Boston theatre, and some special attraction is invariably added to the bill for the pleasure of the little ones. For the week of March 31 there comes the best troupe of trained dogs ever imported to America, Gohlman's, and the most charming sketch for children ever written, "The Holly Tree Inn," which was acted here two years ago and scored a tremendous hit. Two of the best juvenile actors in America will appear in the piece. Other entertainers in the same bill will be: Clarice Vance, the far-famed Southern singer, whose specialty is the warbling of "coon" ballads; Al. Lawrence; Adele Purvis Onri, who gives a skirt dance on a revolving globe, with beautiful color and light effects; Tom Nawn the Irish character actor, will be held over for a second week, playing another of his entertaining comedies, this being announced as postively his last appearance in this country for several years, as he has engagements in Australia and Europe that he is obliged to fulfil.

TODAY'S COURT.

Henry Blanchard was fined $2 for cruelty to animals at Weymouth.

Martin Ford was fined $3 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Henry Claymam was fined $10 for collecting junk without a license in Quincy.

HER LAWYERS TALK

Believe Mrs. French's Death Was by Design

DEFRAUDED OF MUCH MONEY

A Series of Forgeries Which Mrs French Was About to Disclose May Prove the Motive For Murder—But One Arrest So Far In the Case

Boston, March 31.—There is a belief on the part of those who were at work attempting to unravel the strange case of Mrs. Julia B. French, the rich woman who was found dead on top of an elevator in her house, 10 Newbury street, that the case will have still stranger developments. Some basis for the belief that Mrs. French may have been murdered is had from the words credited to Alfred R. Kehew, who is under arrest on the charge of forging the name of Mrs. French to a certificate of transfer of stock. Kehew said: "The police are investigating the murder of Mrs. French. They told me so in Chief Watts' office Friday night."

A persistent search for the $15,000 which Mrs. French is said to have surely received on the day before her death from the disposal of real estate has not been rewarded by any find, and the same result has followed the hunt for a will. It is positively asserted now that Mrs. French drew up three months ago, a testamentary paper providing for the distribution of her property.

The arrest of Kehew on the charge of committing forgery in September, 1900, has brought to light the contention by Harry J. Jaquith, whom Mrs. French frequenty consulted on legal matters, that just before her death Mrs. French was about to disclose a series of forgeries by which she was defrauded of much money.

Lawyer Dunham, who did some work for Mrs. French, says that he thinks that the death of Mrs. French and the case in general is a great deal deeper than most people imagine. He still refuses to accept wholly the accident theory as explaining the cause of Mrs. French's death.

Gotham Increases In Size

Albany, N. Y., March 31.—The quarterly bulletin of the state department of labor shows that in New York city the number of buildings completed was 4027 in fourth quarter of 1901, as compared with 3270 in the corresponding period of 1900, and the estimated cost of buildings for which plans were approved in the last quarter of 1901, was thirty-one million dollars as compared with twenty-two million dollars in 1900.

Immigration at the port of New York has been increasing rapidly. The number of arrivals in the fourth quarter of 1901 was 93,628 as compared with 74,432 one year ago and 83,265 in the preceding quarter of 1901. The people from southern Italy retained the lead by contributing 26 percent of the immigration, the Hebrews following with 11 percent, the Germans with 10 percent and the Poles with 9 percent, whose proportional increase since 1900 was larger than that of any other nationality.

Car Jumped Rails

Lawrence, Mass., March 31.—On a bridge between this city and Reading a trolley car jumped the track Saturday night, injuring the motorman and two passengers and severely shaking up the remaining 40 passengers. It is believed none of the injuries are serious.

An Eminent Jurist Dead

Whitehall, N. Y., March 31.—Joseph Potter, L.L. D., ex-justice of the New York supreme court, and a member of the second division of the court of appeals, died here today after an illness of 10 days.

Sultan's Brother Dead

London, March 31.—A report has reached here from Constantinople, according to the Vienna correspondent of The Daily Mail, that Mohammed Reichad, the sultan's brother and his presumptive successor, is dead. The report says foul play is suspected.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Tuesday, April 1.

Sun rises—5:28; sets—6:09.
High water—5 a. m.; 5:30 p. m.

New England fair, colder Monday in south, probably showers in north portion; Tuesday fair, variable winds, mostly fresh to brisk south to west. On account of the prevailing high pressure over the entire west, the weather will be generally fair over all districts for the next two days except that snow flurries are probable along the east lower lakes and showers in northern New England. On the New England coast the winds will be variable though mostly south, becoming fresh to brisk. Steamers which depart for European ports will have fresh to brisk winds, mostly south to west and generally fair weather to the Grand Banks.

THE INDIAN A WRECK

Struck the Ledge at Cuttyhunk Upon Which the Dewey Stranded

Woods Hole, Mass., March 31.—The iron steamer Indian, Philadelphia for Boston, was yesterday discovered ashore on the famous Sow and Pigs ledge off Cuttyhunk island at the western entrance of Vineyard sound and is likely to become a total wreck. Owing to a heavy sea, the lifesavers were unable to reach her until afternoon, when they took off her four passengers, one of them a woman and landed them at Cuttyhunk.

The names of the men are: Charles Wilson of 170 North Washington street, West Newton, Mass.; W. G. French, 13 Alveston street, Boston; and Joseph L. Cebal of Philadelphia. The woman's name has not been ascertained.

The scene of the wreck is not far from that of the steamer Fairfax in November, 1898, and about three quarters of a mile to the westward of where the Admiral Dewey went ashore the following spring. The Fairfax was a total loss but the Dewey was saved.

Should the weather continue moderate the Indian, after her cargo has been lightered or thrown overboard, may be hauled off. The Admiral Dewey went ashore on Cuttyhunk island itself, but the bottom there is more or less sandy, so that she was floated in about a week, after almost her entire cargo of oranges and bananas had been thrown into the sound.

The Merchants and Miners steamer Fairfax was not so fortunate. She went onto the same ledge on which the Indian now rests, and never came off, her passengers and crew being taken ashore by the Cuttyhunk lifesavers.

Great Britain's Prosperity

London, March 31.—The papers this morning publish editorials on the satisfactory condition of the finances of Great Britain as revealed by the revenue returns. They generally congratulate the country that, in spite of the war, the prosperity of trade continues. This prosperity, the newspapers declare, is proved by the large increase in revenue from the income tax. It is estimated that the budget deficit will reach £27,000,000 and that the success of the previous experiments will induce Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, the chancellor of the exchequer, further to widen the basis of taxation.

The Daily Telegraph thinks the war has had the affect of awakening the energy of the whole empire and that it may prove to be the salvation of Great Britain's business position in the world.

A Wakefield Memorial

Wakefield, Mass., March 31.—A Memorial parish house, the gift of Mrs. James C. Pearson, to Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal church, in memory of her husband, was dedicated here Sunday. Mr. Pearson, while resident here, was well known in the financial circles of New York and Boston. From humble beginning he acquired a great fortune in a few years, from an invention in the manufacture of nails. He died suddenly in Jan. 1901, and a contest over an insurance policy of $240,000, which he had taken out a few days before his death was decided adversely to the executrix by the United States circuit court last Friday.

Excise Arrests In New York

New York, March 31.—There were 62 arrests throughout greater New York Sunday for alleged violations of the excise law, as against 28 for the preceding Sunday. This, according to police records, is the highest number of excise arrests made on any Sunday since the in-coming of the present administration. The record heretofore was on Jan. 26, when 42 arrests were made.

There was no concerted effort on the part of the authorities to enforce the Sunday law as regards liquor selling.

Holyhook's Bows Stove In

London, March 31.—The steamer Holyrood, Captain Renton from Portland, Me., March 15, for London, has sunk after colliding March 27 with the Leyland line steamer Bernard Hall, Captain Cassentine, from Liverpool March 26 for Barbadoes, Trinidad and Galveston. The crew of the Holyrood numbering 28 men, boarded the Bernard Hall, which has arrived at Queenstown, with her bow stove in.

Six Inspectors Have a Holiday

New York, March 31.—Owing to the action of Immigration Commissioner Fitchie in giving the six immigration inspectors on Ellis Island a holiday on Easter Sunday, nearly 1000 immigrants were detained aboard the American liner St. Paul and the Cunarder Umbria which came into port. The detained passengers were landed this morning.

Will Preach Independently

Arkansas City, Kan., March 31.—Rev. G. Lowther, who was found guilty of heresy by the southwest Kansas Methodist conference, says he will start out with a tent and preach the gospel as he sees fit. He announces as part of his plan ultimately to enter another denomination, in which he can preach in accordance with his belief.

LOWELL'S MILLS RUN

Citizen's Will Ask That Increase Be Granted

AGENTS GIVE LITTLE HOPE

The Textile Council Will Elect New Officers Who May Inaugurate a New Policy, Meantime Business Interests Will Work For an Adjustment

Lowell, Mass., March 31.—The strike of 16,000 cotton mill operatives in seven of the largest mill plants here, which the Textile Council on Thursday ordered to go into effect at bell time this morning, has been declared off. That this was actually accomplished was not known until Saturday night, for the first impression was that the trouble had simply been averted for a week.

The Textile Council meeting was a lively one, for there appeared to be some opposition to endorsing the action of the delegates. When the matter was put to vote, however, that action was endorsed unanimously, and this was immediately followed by a notice that the mills would start up on Monday as usual.

After the meeting President Rafferty said that a compromise offer of 5 percent made to the mill agents at the meeting of the citizens' committee had been rejected and that it was only after a long deliberation that it was voted to declare the strike off.

The statement of President Rafferty was somewhat of a surprise, as the understanding all day was that the strike had merely been averted. It appears, however, that the Textile Council will elect new officers on next Wednesday evening and that there is some question as to whether the action of the present council will be binding on the new body.

The mill agents' side of the matter is believed to be contained in a statement issued by the citizens' committee of conference at city hall to correct misstatements being circulated to deceive the public, which says:

"The citizens' committee state explicity to the representatives of the labor unions that no advance in wages could be expected and that the unions should not proceed upon the assumption that any increase whatever will be made. At the conclusion of the conference and upon the announcement of the representatives of the labor unions that they would declare the strike off, the members of the committee assured them that they would exert their influence to secure an increase in wages at the earliest opportunity, and this was the only assurance that was given on the subject."

This statement of the committee coincides with the notice of the agents which read as follows: "On assurance of the committee of citizens that representatives of the Textile Council have agreed to declare off the strike for an advance of wages, these mills will be started again next week as rapidly as it can be arranged to do so."

There is more or less dissatisfaction in the several unions because New Bedford and Rhode Island operatives will receive the increase, but this is not likely to prove strong enough to overturn the declaration that the strike is off. There may be friction at some of the mills is some of the trades.

The news that there would be no strike was one of the most welcome messages which came to business men and citizens alike in the history of the city. It is impossible to describe the great burden which has been lifted from the shoulders of every person who has the city's welfare at heart.

In Maine There Is No Grievance

North Vassalboro, Me., March 31.—There has been an unsuccessful attemps on the part of the delegates from Rhode Island to organize the weavers of the American Woolen company mills in this village. Only such of the local operatives who have come here from other cities and states are members of the Weavers' union and these are in the minority. Last evening the local weavers held an informal meeting at the home of one of their number and discussed the published statement of the weaver committee of Rhode Island which statement was in effect that the next move will be to strike at the American company's mills here and at Skowhegan. It is understood here that a union has been formed among the weavers at Skowhegan but no such union has been formed here. The American company's mill at Fairfield is the nearest mill outside of this village and word has been received from there that the weavers have decided not to join any union or to take any part in the strike. Local weavers say they have no grievance.

Spinner's Demands

Pawtucket, R. I., March 31.—A special meeting of the Rhode Island Mule Spinners' association, was held in this city yesterday which resulted in a demand on all yarn and thread manufacturers of the state for an increase of wages amounting to 10 percent. The manufacturers are given until Saturday afternoon next at 5 o'clock to make reply, at which time a special meeting of the association will be held. It was also voted to request an increase of wages from the Lawton Spinning company of Woonsocket, this demand unless complied with to be given consideration at the same meeting.

Rhode Island Increase

Providence, March 31.—That they have entered upon a new season of prosperity with the Easter tide was the conviction of nearly every cotton mill operative in this state when the announcement was made by all the large Rhode Island corporations that beginning April 8 wages would be advanced 10 percent. The notices were posted by the Lippitts, the Stoddards and Robert Knight in the mills of their vast systems, and the increase will ultimately affect 30,000 hands in this state, eastern Connecticut, and Massachusetts. A number of the small concerns have already followed suit, and it is expected that this week every individual manufacturer in Rhode Island will post notices of the increase.

The decision among the mill owners to make the advance general was in line with the action taken by the New Bedford, Mass., mills. Conditions for the manufacture of cotton goods at New Bedford are practically equal with those existing in this state, and the wage scale adopted there is usually looked upon here as adequate.

The first mill in this state to raise wages was the Nanquit of Bristol, owned by the Richmond Manufacturing company, which followed Fall River 10 days ago. The action of this concern greatly encouraged the operatives in other mills and the agitation for a general increase steadily progressed. Much difficulty has undoubtedly been averted by this timely announcement for in many departments of the various mills there has been much unrest and plans were already on foot urged by the vigorous attitude of the mule spinners, for concerted action at an early date.

A PENNSYLVANIA CYCLONE

Roof Blown From a Knoxville Church Injuring Worshipers

Pittsburg, Pa., March 31.—One of the fiercest wind storms ever known in this section struck the city Sunday just before noon and did almost incalculable damage to property and injured many people some of whom may die. Scores of houses were unroofed, many trees were blown down, mill stacks toppled over, telegraph and telephone wires generally disabled. The most serious accident reported was the unroofing of the Knoxville Presbyterian church, in Knoxville. The church at the time was filled with an Easter congregation numbering about 600 persons. While the minister was in the midst of his sermon, a strong gust of wind blew over the large chimney and lifted a portion of the roof of the building. The bricks from the chimney crashed through the roof and carried a huge piece of the hardwood ceiling, measuring about 40 by 20 feet down upon the worshippers in the pews. An indescribable panic ensued and a frantic rush was made for the doors and windows. The excitement was soon quieted and the work of rescue began. At least 40 persons were caught by the wreckage and more or less hurt and five may not recover.

Jones and Laughlins had 14 of their furnace stacks blown down, necessitating the shutting down of a portion of their plant for weeks. Reports from nearby towns are slow coming in, probably on account of the crippled condition of the wires. It is feared that much damage has been done in those places.

The Easter services at the United Presbyterian church at Jamestown were abruptly terminated this noon by the cyclone which crushed the south end of the edifice and buried the pastor, Rev. J. M. Jamison, beneath the debris. It was found his jaw was broken and one temporal bone crushed. He is not expected to live.

As Rev. J. W. English, pastor of the Robinson Run United Presbyterian church, near McDonald, was raising his arms to pronounce the benediction, lightning struck the church spire and it toppled upon the roof, crusaing it and injuring a number of worshipers, two of whom will die.

The spire and part of the roof of the United Presbyterian church at McDonald was torn off and the building considerably damaged, but no one was injured.

The Noblestown Presbyterian church was also unroofed, but the congregation escaped injury.

The storm, which swept down upon the city very suddenly, came through the Ohio valley and passed on eastward. It lasted only about 30 minutes and for only five minutes was the velocity unusually high. In that short time practically all of the damage done was accomplished.

General Chaffee Will Tour Samar

Manila, March 31.—Rufino, who spent $30,000 in his efforts to incite rebellion in the Province of Misamis, Island of Mindanao, now declares he is tired of rebellion and has offered to surrender, with 75 rifles, to the native constabulary.

General Chaffee will leave Manila April 10 on a tour of inspection to the island of Samar. He will visit every port in the island and will witness the surrender there April 15, of the insurgent general Guevarra. After this surrender the American garrisons in Samar will be largely reduced.

Good Afternoon

Mayor Bryant is reported by Practical Politics as saying that Quincy has no real candidate for Congressional honors who can hold the votes from that section. Isn't that really an unkind thing for a mayor to say of his city! Perhaps the friends of Mr. Bryant may ask him to enter the field.

The proposed caucus reform bill provides for the direct nomination of all candidates in cities. At present Councilmen from ward are nominated in the caucuses, but if the new act passes, the Mayoralty candidates, Councilmen at large, and School Committee at large will be nominated in caucuses; also Representatives to the General Court from cities. The change is desirable.

No fairer Easter Sunday ever dawned in this bleak corner of our planet than yesterday. The wind shifted from fresh northwest to almost south, but did not linger at the east. In early morning young men with generally a fresh flower in their coats walked the streets. Later the cars received their measure of people going away for the day. At church time the church goers made a big procession and in the afternoon the tide of travel was even greater. In sheltered places a summer heat prevailed, the skies were clear and it seems as if animate and inanimate nature responded to the call of spring.

There may be those who will criticise a settlement of the Quarrymen's strike on a Sunday, but we trust they are few. An interruption of business which directly affected the families of so many granite workers, and threatened the merchants of the city, and the prosperity of the city at large, demanded attention when the time was ripe, and yesterday was that date. It was a work for harmony and peace, and that success crowned the efforts exerted during the last few days is the occasion for general thanksgiving. Mr. Anderson, a quarry manager, enlightens Ledger readers as to whom the credit of the settlement is due, and is a pleasure to see that Quincy has wide-awake merchants who are ready to act as mediators even though they may make enemies. In this case they have made friends instead of enemies, as they sized-up the situation correctly at the start, and did their work quietly and in the right way. Thanks are due L. M. Pratt and D. E. Wadsworth.

Business for City Council.

Six jurors will be drawn at the adjourned meeting of the City Council tonight.

The joint committee on Fire Department and Ordinances will report on the communication of the Mayor relative to amending the ordinance concerning the Fire Department.

The Committee on Streets will report on the street watering order, and an order granting the street railway a location for one pole at the corner of South and Washington streets.

Reports may also be expected from the Finance committee on some of the matters before them.

AN AGREEMENT.

Eight-Hour Day in the Quincy Granite Quarries.

Men to Work Overtime in Rush Season.

Future Differences to be Submitted to Arbitration.

It will be good news to Quincy people generally to know that the strike among the granite quarrymen, which has been in progress a month, and which threatened to throw four thousand men out of employment, has been settled, and that the men will return to work on Tuesday morning.

The strike was settled upon practically the same terms as published in Saturday's Ledger with some additional sections which will, it is hoped, prevent for all time, any further labor trouble among the quarrymen.

In the final settlement of the trouble too much credit can not be given to Dexter E. Wadsworth and Lester M. Pratt, two of Quincy's prominent business men. They interested themselves in the movement several days ago. They labored earnestly with both sides, and the sliding agreement was suggested by them and not by the State Board of Arbitration, as intimated.

It was the following letter written on a letter head of L. M. Pratt & Co., which led up to the settlement.

Quincy, March 27, 1902.

John Boutin, Esq., Secretary Quarrymen's Strike Committee:

Dear Sir—We wish to ask through you a favor from your committee. The business of Quincy is beginning to feel very badly the results of the strike, and we believe, after interviewing some members of your committee and some of the Manufacturers' Committee, that a settlement can be brought about.

The opinion of ourselves is, that if the proposition herewith enclosed (which we think is fair to all) could be favorably endorsed by the Quarrymen's Union, it would be accepted by the Manufacturers, and work could be resumed at once.

Trusting you will favorably consider this, and use your influence to further the same, we are

Yours very truly,

D. E. WADSWORTH,
L. M. PRATT.

Mr. Boutin and his committee deserve credit for the work they did in favor of the proposition forwarded with the above letter, which is sections 1, 2 and 3 below and which was published in Saturday's Ledger.

Friday night the Quarryman's Union at its meeting agreed to the proposition as a basis for settlement.

Saturday evening the quarry owners held a meeting and agreed to do the same.

All that then remained was for the two committees to get together and complete the terms.

An effort was made to get the two committees together late Saturday evening but it was found impossible owing to the absence out of town of some the committee of the union. Then it was that a joint meeting was arranged for Sunday afternoon.

Perhaps the fact that it was Easter Sunday had something to do with it, for the meeting was harmonious both sides showing a readiness to end the war.

The conference adjourned shortly after 4 o'clock the settlement having been reached. It was found impracticable to renew work Monday, so that Tues-April 1, was fixed as the day.

The agreement follows:

The agreement in full is as follows:

Section 1.—The committee of the Granite Manufacturers' Association and the Quarrymen's union do establish that eight hours shall constitute a day's work beginning April 1, 1902, with the present nine hours' pay.

Section 2.—And they agree that should the business demand it, at the request of the manufacturers, the quarrymen will work one hour overtime each day during the months of April, May, June, September and October in 1902. That they will work the same overtime during the months of April, May, June and September in 1903. That they will work the same overtime during the months of April and May in 1904. Said overtime to be paid for at the regular rate per hour.

Section 3.—It is further agreed that an eight hour day throughout the year, with the present nine hours' pay, shall be established as soon as Barre, Vt., grants it.

Section 4. It is further agreed that weekly payments of wages shall be made.

Section 5. It is further agreed that there shall be no discrimination on account of participation in the late strike.

Section 6. Any differences which shall arise under this bill shall be referred to arbitration, the Union to choose one man, the quarry owners to choose another, the two so appointed to choose a third. If any change is desired by either party, three months' notice shall be given and no cessation of work shall take place, while the above board is considering the case under arbitration.

RATIFIED.

A largely attended meeting of the Quarrymen's Union was held this morning at Farnums hall, West Quincy. The meeting voted unanimously to accept the proposition for a settlement as agreed upon by the two committees on Sunday. The meeting also instructed its committee to sign the agreement for the Union.

A joint meeting of the two committees was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock, at which time the bill, as printed above was signed.

TO ENLARGE QUARRIES.

The question has been asked, what is to become, of the twenty-five men who came from Maine and New Hampshire last week to take the strikers places. From a reliable source it is learned that they will probably join the Quarrymen's Union and that they will remain in Quincy and become citizens as the quarry owners have agreed to enlarge the scope of their business so as to find places for them.

THANKS ARE DUE.

To D. E. Wadsworth and L. M Pratt for Settlement of Strike.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

A settlement of the quarrymen's strike having finally been effected, it seems a matter of simple justice that due credit should be given to those whose efforts as mediator have resulted so happily for all concerned.

The thanks of the community are due to Dr. James Todd, to members of the Master-Builders' Association and to members of the Central Labor Union of Quincy for public-spirited tenders of their services as mediators. Upon Messrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth and Lester M. Pratt, however, devolved the hard and usually thankless and unappreciated task of actual mediation and conciliation in this affair.

I trust that the interested parties as well as business men of Quincy and citizens in general will show their gratitude for the successful work of these gentlemen in some more appreciative way than by mere empty thanks.

Yours truly.

L. S. Anderson.

Important Contract.

Now that the quarry strike has been settled there is a good prospect of the whole or a part of the contract to furnish thousands of tons of granite to be used by the Metropolitan sewer at Nut Island. Had the strike not been settled, Cape Ann would probably have received the whole contract. It is understood that Cape Ann was ten per cent lower than Quincy on the bid, but that Quincy would have been given the contract at the former's figures but for the strike in the quarry district prevented there accepting it as it could not be determined upon what terms a settlement would be made. Now that the strike has been settled Quincy will probably receive a part of the contract.

Smallpox.

Quincy has a case of smallpox. The victim is Mrs. Ann Mann who resides on Blake street in the rear of 644 Hancock street. Mrs. Mann goes out washing and probably contracted the disease in this way. She had never been vaccinated. She was removed to the detention hospital Sunday.

Fire at Hingham.

The main mill of the Alvan Streeter Manufacturing Company's bucket factory at South Hingham was totally destroyed by fire early Sunday afternoon, entailing a loss of over $11,000.

EASTER SEASON.

Large Congregations in All Quincy Churches.

Pretty Decorations and Beautiful Music.

Easter Sermons, Carol Services and Sunday School Concerts.

Easter rivals Christmas as a church day, and large congregations cheered pastors and choirs at the numerous services yesterday, many attending churches of different denominations.

CHRIST CHURCH.

A very brilliant program was given at the Easter services at Christ church. Four services were held all of which were very largely attended, especially those at 10.30 and in the afternoon. The decorations at the church were very beautiful and were largely about the altar. At the baptismal service Saturday seven were baptised.

FIRST CHURCH.

There was a large attendance at First church Easter morning, the shut ins of the winter, those who do not go regularly, the little tots who have not been church goers, the regular attendants with addition of strangers filled all the pews. At the base of the pulpit was a stately row of callas and below them a row of purple, yellow and white tulips and Easter lilies, which made a beautiful back ground for the communion table with its snowy cloth and silver.

Mr. Butler's sermon was appropriate to the day and it was hopeful and inspiring. The music was by the regular church quartette and it was usual of a high order.

After the communion service an Easter carol service was held by the Sunday school.

At the four o'clock vesper service the body of the church and galleries were filled with people. The singing by the double quartette was fine. Mr. Butler gave a short talk on Life and the story of the Resurrection and the Springtime. This was the last vesper service for the season.

BETHANY CHURCH.

There was an overflow at the Easter services at Bethany church making it necessary to gallery. On the wall at the rear of the pulpit was the motto "Christ is risen" and in front of the desk was a large cross, palms and Easter lillies. "Victory" was the pastors theme, and the regular quartette rendered beautiful anthems and solos.

The Easter concert at 7.30 P. M. was largely attended and of interest.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

There was a large attendance at the Universalist church yesterday. The platform and desk were covered with beautiful plants and flowers, nearly hiding the pastor from his flock.

Rev. Mr. Ward had a very appropriate and interesting discourse, appropriate to Easter. Before the sermon five were taken into church—three ladies and two gentleman—who were baptised by the pastor. The music was enjoyed by all especially the solo by J. E. Greene.

At 7 o'clock a concert was given by the members of the Sunday school. The recitations by the little tots were pleasing to all as was also the music by the older members of the Sunday school.

AT QUINCY POINT.

The Easter concert, last evening at the Washington street Congregational church was enjoyed by an audience that packed the church to the doors. The children, as always, did their part well. The music was appropriate and a concert added greatly to its effectiveness. The flowers used in decorating were beautiful and greatly admired. In fact it is the verdict of all who attended the morning and evening services that we have never had a more enjoyable or helpful Easter time.

AT WOLLASTON.

The regular Easter concerts of the Unitarian, Baptist, Congregational and Episcopal Sunday schools were held Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and the Methodist at 6 o'clock. At all the concerts the churches were well filled and the exercises consisted primarily of recitations, readings and carol singing by the Sunday schools. At the Baptist, the concert was united with the regular vesper service. Mr. Boyd, the tenor, was unable to sing, being taken ill suddenly. Mr. A. D. Albee, superintendent of Sunday school filled his place very successfully, and also directed the Sunday school in its carol singing. Miss Adelaide Thomas and Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith conducted music on violin and organ. Every one was delighted with Miss Somerville, the new soprano. The other services of the day were appropriate to Easter, and largely atttended. The sermons were upon Easter themes.

AT WEST QUINCY

Much credit is due to the Willing Helpers Society of the West Quincy M. E. church who so prettily decorated the church for the Easter services. There was a profusion of potted plants and cut flowers, conspicuous among which were numerous Easter lilies. Decorations of purple and white also added to the pleasing effect.

Hewitson Sociable.

A pleasant evening was spent Saturday by the Edward Hewitson associates at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waterhouse, Wollaston. It was one of the largest of any of its meetings, and as fully enjoyed as any.

The committee—consisting of Messrs. Kenneth Lewis, Henry Hewitt and Robert Sibley succeeded in arranging an entertaining program.

After a short business meeting, in which an amendment was made to the constitution and various committees were appointed, President Barbour gave the evening in charge of Kenneth Lewis.

Mrs. Saxe delighted all with her rendering of two solos. Mr. Keyes, who delivered the address to the boys, gave an interesting talk on his visit to London. The boys showed their appreciation by close attention.

Mrs. Cornish afterwards gave a reading in her usual attractive manner. This was illustrated with crayon by Mr. Arthur Sprague who is exceedingly skilful in this art which he proved by his different representations.

Besides this program games, as is customary, were enjoyed. Light refreshments were served later in the evening by the host and hostess. After a vote of thanks had been extended to Mr. and Mrs. Waterhouse the club adjourned.

Co. K Spanish Veterans.

The men who went out with Co. K 5 Mass. regt. in the Spanish war, held their third annual reunion Saturday evening at the Castle Square hotel, Boston. Frank P. Pierce acted as toastmaster and remarks were made by most of those present. Capt. P. J. C. Nelson, who came home with the company as its captain, was given a royal reception.

Among those present were: Capt. Maurice A. Colbert, Capt. John R. McGrath, Sergt. Frank P. Pierce, Sergt. Henry J. Mathews, Corp. Charles W. Deslauries, Thomas F. Martell, Sergt. Herbert F. Barrett, Corp. Leon W. Delano, Capt. O. J. C. Neilson, Eugene R. Lord, Herbert F. Tucker, Corp. Theodore Hermanson, Sergt. George A. Wardwell, bugler Richard F. Piper, Capt. Charles F. Spear, Sergt. Studley, Nicholas Colberg, Corp. Harry A. Bailey, Thomas C. Brown, David G. Smith, Joseph Ross and Frank Morales.

Birthday Party.

Miss Beatrice Badger of Crescent street, West Quincy, entertained her many friends on Friday afternoon, March 28, the occasion being her sixth birthday. A very enjoyable afternoon was spent by the mothers as well as the children A dainty lunch was served. The table was prettily decorated with cut flowers and at either end was placed a candelabrum. Before partaking of the refreshments, the shades were drawn and the candles lighted, which added greatly to the artistic effect. As a souvenir of the happy occasion, a pink and a pretty May basket in the form of a chrysanthemum or rose, which was filled with candy representing tiny Easter eggs very appropriate to the Eastertide season were given to each one. Needless to add Miss Beatrice was the recipient of many kind remembrances.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale by all druggists.

SEVEN ROOM COTTAGE.

Bright Little House That Can Be Built For $1,200.

A house that is well lighted is a house that appeals to most people, and in the case of the dwelling for which designs are here shown there can be no gainsaying the fact that the rooms have plenty of light and, what is equally important, air. The house is supposed to face a little west of south, giving a bright and cheerful dining room, a kitchen that has the sunshine every morning in the year, but is protected from the fierce rays of the afternoon sun, and two back chambers up stairs with a southern exposure.

On the ground floor is a large hall, with a very pretty staircase leading to the upper story. All the rooms can be entered from this hall and are also connected with one another. The parlor, to the left of the hall, extends out even with the porch and is lighted by a large double window in front and a small window opening on the porch. The dining room is directly in the rear of the parlor, and the two rooms are joined by a folding door. The dining room has also doors to the hall, kitchen and pantry and is lighted by a large window in the rear. The kitchen is to the right of the dining room and is provided with all the usual furnishings. A stair runs from the front of the kitchen to the cellar.

FRONT ELEVATION.

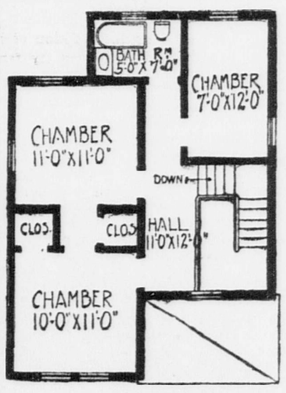

The bathroom on the second floor is supposed to have opeawork plumbing. The cellar has two entrances, one from the yard, and is fitted with two bins for coal, etc. It should have a three inch concrete floor. The house is built to be heated by a hot air furnace.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN.

The foundation walls are built of hard burned brick twelve inches thick up to sills, with twelve inch concrete footings. The frame is of well seasoned spruce or hemlock sheathed with seven-eighths of an inch thick surface hemlock boards nailed to every bearing and covered with building paper. The side walls should be covered with white pine clapboards laid five inches to the weather. All outside trimmings are of white pine.

The interior woodwork of the house is also of white pine, with molded base and trims throughout, and a three foot wainscoting in the kitchen. The doors are of white pine, one and a half inches thick, except all closet doors, which are one and a quarter inches thick, and folding doors, one and three-quarter inches. The treads of the stairs are one and one-eighth inches thick and the risers seven-eighths of an inch. The walls should be given two coats of plaster, with a hard white finish, and should be water colored.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

Dimensions.—Front, 24 feet; side, 32 feet. Height of stories: Cellar, 6 feet 6 inches; first, 10 feet; second, 9 feet. Cost to build, $1,200.

Carpets of Peat.

One of the most curious fibers that have been used for weaving carpets is peat. Zschorner of Vienna, after much experimenting, succeeded in producing some novel results. At the exhibition in Vienna one of the buildings was completely furnished from top to bottom with the products of peat.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER XVII.

IRKUTSK, capital of eastern Siberia, has in ordinary times a population of 30,000 souls. A high hill of solid rock, skirting the right bank of the Angara, serves as a splendid position for its churches, crowned by a high cathedral, and for its houses, built in picturesque disorder along its slopes.

Seen from a certain distance, from the top of the mountain which runs along the great Siberian route at a distance of some twenty versts, with its domes and belfries, its graceful spires, like those of minarets, its spiral domes, it has a somewhat oriental appearance. But that oriental appearance vanishes from the eyes of the traveler from the moment he enters the town. The town, half Byzantine, half Chinese, becomes at once European by its macadamized streets, bordered with sidewalks, with their rows of gigantic birch trees, by its brick and wooden houses, some of which have several stories, by its many splendid equipages—in fine, by the whole body of its inhabitants being very advanced in the progress of civilization, and to which the latest fashions of Paris are not at all strangers.

At that epoch Irkutsk, refuge for the Siberians of the province, was crowded. It abounded in resources of every kind. Irkutsk is the emporium for all that countless merchandise which is exchanged between China, central Asia and Europe. They did not fear to draw there, the peasants from the valley of the Angara, the Mongols-Khalkas, people from Toungouze and Bouret, and to allow the wilderness to stretch out between the invaders and the town.

Irkutsk is the residence of the governor general of eastern Siberia. Under him is a civil governor, in whose hands is concentrated the administration of the province, a head of the police, who has a great deal to do in a town where exiles abound, and lastly a mayor, one of the leading merchants, an important personage by his immense fortune and by the influence which he has over his fellow citizens.

The garrison of Irkutsk was then composed of a regiment of foot Cossacks, which numbered about 2,000 men, a body of foot gendarmes, who wore the helmet and blue uniforms striped with silver.

Besides, it is known that on account of particular circumstances the brother of the czar had been shut up in the town since the commencement of the invasion.

That situation must be given in detail.

It was a journey of political importance that had led the grand duke into those distant provinces of eastern Asia.

The grand duke, after having visited the principal cities of Siberia, traveling in military rather than princely style, without any retinue, escorted by a detachment of Cossacks, had gone even as far as the countries beyond the Balkan mountains. Nicholaevsk, the last Russian town which is situated on the shores of the sea of Okhotsk, had been honored by his visit.

Having reached the boundaries of the immense Muscovite empire, the grand duke was returning to Irkutsk, from whence he would soon return to Europe, when the news reached him of that invasion, which was as sudden as it was menacing. He hastened to reenter the capital, but when he arrived there communication with Russia had been cut off. He still received a few telgrams from St. Petersburg and Moscow. He could even answer them. Afterward the wire was cut under the circumstances already known to the reader.

The grand duke could do nothing but organize resistance, a thing which he did with that firmness and coolness of which he had given under other circumstances incontestable proofs.

News of the taking of Ichim, of Omsk, of Tomsk, came successively to Irkutsk. They could not count on being soon relieved, but they must prevent at all price the occupation of the capital of Siberia. The few troops scattered over the province of Amur and those in the government of Irkutsk could not arrive in sufficient numbers to arrest the Tartar columns. Besides, since Irkutsk could not possibly escape being invested, it was of the utmost importance to put the town in a position to sustain a siege of some length.

Those works were begun on the day on which Tomsk fell into the hands of the Tartars. At the same time as that last news the grand duke learned that the emir of Bokhara and the allied khans were directing the movement in person, but what he did not know was that the lieutenant of those barbarous chiefs was Ivan Ogareff, a Russian officer whom he himself had cashiered.

From the first, as has been seen, the inhabitants of the province of Irkutsk had been ordered to abandon the towns and villages. Those who did not seek refuge in the capital were compelled to retire beyond Lake Baikal, to where the invasion would not likely extend its ravages. The crops of corn and forage were requisitioned for the town, and that last rampart of Russian power in the extreme east was prepared to resist for some time.

Irkutsk, founded in 1611, is situated at the confluence of the Irkut and the Angara, on the right bank of the river. Two wooden bridges, built on piles and so arranged as to open the whole width of the river for the necessities of navigation, joined the town with its outskirts which extended along the left bank. The outskirts were abandoned, the bridges destroyed. The passage of the Angara, which was very wide at that place, would not have been possible under the fire of the besieged. But the river could be crossed either above or below the town, and as a consequence Irkutsk was in danger of being attacked on the east side, which no rampart protected.

It was, then, in works of fortification that the hands were first employed. They worked day and night. The grand duke found a spirited population in supplying that need, and afterward he found them most brave in its defense. Soldiers, merchants, exiles, peasants, all devoted themselves to the common safety. Eight days before the Tartars had appeared on the Angara ramparts of earth had been raised. A moat, flooded with the waters of the Angara, had been dug between the inner and outer wall of the fortification. The city could no longer be taken by a sudden assault. It must be invested and besieged.

The third Tartar column—that which had ascended the valley of the Yenisei—appeared in sight of Irkutsk on the 24th of September. It immediately occupied the abandoned outskirts, of which the very houses had been destroyed in order not to impede the action of the archduke's artillery, which was unfortunately very insufficient.

The Tartars organized themselves while waiting the arrival of the two other columns which were commanded by the emir and his allies.

The junction of these divers corps took place on the 25th of September at the camp of Angara, and all the army, except the garrisons left in the principal conquered towns, was concentrated under the orders of Feofar-Khan.

The passage of the Angara having been regarded by Ivan Ogareff as impracticable before Irkutsk, a strong body of troops crossed at some versts down the river on some bridges of boats which had been established for that purpose. The grand duke did not attempt to oppose that passage. He could only have harassed them without preventing it, not having any field-pieces at his disposal, and this is the reason he remained cooped up in Irkutsk.

Ivan Ogareff, a clever engineer, was certainly able to direct the operations of a regular siege, but he had not the material to carry forward his operations quickly. So he had hoped to surprise Irkutsk, the end of all his efforts.

One can see that things had turned out otherwise than he had reckoned. On the one hand, the march of the Tartar army delayed by the battle of Tomsk; on the other, the rapidity with which the works of defense had been carried on by the grand duke. For these two reasons his projects had failed. He found himself therefore under the necessity of carrying on a regular siege.

Meanwhile by his advice the emir attempted twice to take the town at the price of a great sacrifice of men. He threw the soldiers against the earthworks which seemed to present some weak points, but the two assaults were repelled with the greatest courage. The grand duke and his officers did not spare themselves on that occasion. They led the civil population to the ramparts. Civilians and mujiks did their duty remarkably well. At the second assault the Tartars had succeeded in forcing one of the gates of the town. A fight took place at the beginning of the principal street, the Bolchaia, which is two versts in length and terminates at the banks of the Angara. But the Cossacks, the gendarmes and the citizens opposed to them a strong resistance, and the Tartars had to return to their positions.

Ivan Ogareff thought then of trying to win by treachery what force could not give him. His project, it is known, was to make his way alone into the town and present himself before the grand duke with some plausible tale to win his confidence and when the moment came to deliver one of the gates to the besiegers; afterward, that done, to glut his vengeance on the brother of the czar.

CHINESE EXCLUSION

Present Law Likely to Remain Unmodified

GARFIELD ACCEPTS OFFICE

Oleomargarine Legislation of a Drastic Nature Expected at the Hands of Congress—Various Other Measures of Importance to Be Considered

Washington, March 31.—The friends of the oleomargarine bill hope to secure a vote upon that measure tomorrow and as soon as it shall be disposed of, the Chinese exclusion bill will be called up. According to the present understanding Senator Mitchell of Oregon, who was largely instrumental in framing the exclusion bill, will make the first presentation of its merits to the senate. He will be followed by other supporters of the bill and it is the hope of Senator Penrose, who has charge of the measure, that the senate will be able to conclude its consideration within 10 days after it is taken up. There is no pronounced opposition to the bill as a whole, bbut an eort will be made to amend it in some particulars.

There are still several speeches to be made on the oleomargarine bill, but it is the general understanding that the discussion will be concluded during the first half of the week if not by Tuesday in time to allow a vote on that date. It is expected that the Indian appropriation and the river and harbor bill will be reported during the week. Both are subject to immediate consideration, even to the extent of displacing other bills, but it is not believed that either of them will be used to deprive the Chinese bill of its chance for consideration.

The Philippine government bill also will be reported, but its consideration by the senate necessarily will be postponed for some weeks.

The house during the coming week will be largely occupied by the sundry civil appropriation bill, which will be called up today. Such time as remains will be devoted to the consideration of the senate bill to promote the efficiency of the revenue cutter service and the Chinese exclusion bill, both of which are special orders, but they do not interfere with revenue or appropriation bills. It is the intention of the leaders not to bring forward the Cuban reciprocity bill until next week.

Washington, March 31.—James R. Garfield, a son of the late President Garfield, has accepted the position of civil service commissioner tendered him about 10 days ago by President Roosevelt. He takes the place to be vacated on the first of April by Mr. J. A. Rodenberg. Mr. Garfield is a comparatively young man and is engaged in the practice of law with his brother, Harry A. Garfield, in Cleveland. He is a notable figure in Ohio political circles and has served as state senator from his district. He was the author of what was known as the Garfield election law of Ohio which required all nominees for elective offices to file with the secretary of state a sworn statement of the expenses incurred by them during the campaign. The law, however, was subsequently repealed. Mr. Garfield is a resident of Mentor, a suburb of Cleveland.

Mining Concessions In China

Pekin, March 31.—The government has decided upon mining regulations, under the terms of which concessions may be granted to foreigners in any part of China, but these royalties are regarded as altogether prohibitive.

CHAIRMAN JONES DEFEATED

Ex-Governor Clarke Will Probably Succeed Him In the Senate

Little Rock, Ark., March 31.—Indications reflected by additional returns from a majority of the counties, point to a victory for ex-Governor James P. Clarke for United States senator over Senator James E. Jones, though his majority on joint ballot will probably not exceed 12. Complete returns are not yet in and in several of the large counties the vote is so close that the official count is awaited.

Senator Jones will not concede Clarke's success. At Clarke's headquarters it is declared that the contest is settled in Clarke's favor, the only question being as to the size of his majority. There are about 10 counties from which news has not been received, owing to the absence of wire connection.

At Senator Jones' headquarters, it is said he is satisfied with the reports received. Instead of conceding his defeat, as has been widely circulated, he feels that the situation has materially improved. Representatives of Mr. Jones announce that they have received definite information from 43 counties, 27 of them which have been carried by him. Of the remaining counties in the state they expect Senator Jones to carry at least 20, thus incurring him between 85 and 90 on joint ballot, 67 being necessary for a choice.

The Pretoria Afire

New York, March 31.—The steamer Pretoria of the Quebec line returned to this port last night with fire in her forward hold. Her passengers came in a short time previously in the steamer Noordland of the American line, having been transferred at sea. The Pretoria is anchored at quarantine and fire boats from the city were dispatched there as soon as the news of the fire was received.

The Pretoria left this port Saturday afternoon bound for Hamilton, Bermuda, with Captain McKenzie in command. At midnight, when 100 miles south of Sandy Hook, smoke was seen coming from the forward hold. The fire could not be exactly located. The engines were stopped and Captain McKenzie got everything ready for any emergency which might arise. The lifeboats were put in condition for hasty lowering and were stocked with provisions. Upon opening the hatches it was found a shipment of hay in the front compartment was ablaze. It was burning fiercely. To make the danger worse, the next compartment was stored with petroleum.

Captain McKenzie decided to remove his passengers, who had manifested perfect composure during the trying ordeal, to the Noordland and the transfer was safely accomplished.

Boers Talk of Peace

London, March 31.—Nothing definite has transpired concerning the peace negotiations in South Africa. Messrs. Wessels and Wolmarans, the Boer delegates who were recently in the United States, have been interviewed since they returned to France and then expressed their hope that a satisfactory compromise would follow Mr. Schalk-Burger's mission.

Mr. Wessels is credited with declaring that Mr. Kruger would approve any terms of peace arrived at in South Africa.

The Hague correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says in a dispatch that he believes Dr. Kuypers, the Dutch premier, who started last Thursday on a visit to Belgium and Germany, goes to those countries in the interests of peace.

Dr English's Wonderful Vitality

Newark, N. J., March 31.—Dr. Thomas Dunn English still hangs on to life with a tenacity that is surprising to his physicians and family. He has been unable to take any nourishment for the past 72 hours and two physicians have been at his side almost constantly. At last reports the doctors believe there will be no sudden collapse, but that the aged poet will die in his sleep.

A Cincinnati Theatre Burns

Cincinnati, O., March 31.—The Pike building in which the Pike Opera house is located, was partially destroyed by fire Saturday. The audience retired in good order, but some women fainted after reaching the street. About 2000 people were witnessing the performance of Sag Harbor when the fire was discovered.
